

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

THE LAWYERS REPORTS
ANNOTATED

BOOK XXXIV.

ALL CURRENT CASES OF GENERAL VALUE AND IMPORTANCE WITH FULL ANNOTATION
BURDETT A. RICH, EDITOR, HENRY
P. FARNHAM, ASSISTANT

1896.

EXTRA ANNOTATED EDITION

WITH L. R. A. CASES AND AUTHORITIES.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

THE LAWYERS' CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY.

1905.

122096

JUL 29 1942

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year eighteen hundred ninety seven, by
THE LAWYERS' CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO.,
In the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year nineteen hundred five, by
THE LAWYERS' CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO.,
In the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

SUPPLEMENTAL TABLE

OF ALL

CASES REPORTED IN LAWYERS' REPORTS, ANNOTATED, BOOK 34,

NOT OFFICIALLY REPORTED WHEN THIS BOOK WENT TO PRESS.

(To be "tipped in" in front of regular table, used as a book mark or as data for marking each case. Like tables will be furnished for subsequent volumes as fast as possible.)

Abbott v. Doane (163 Mass. 433) -	33	Farmers' Mut. Ins. Asso. v. Burch (47 S. C. 463) -	806
Adams v. New Jersey Steamboat Co. (151 N. Y. 163) -	682	Frame v. Sliter (29 Or. 121) -	690
American Appl. Co. v. Carson (99 Ky. 441) -	301	Fuchs v. St. Louis (133 Mo. 168) -	118
Anniston Transfer Co. v. Gurley (107 Ala. 600) -	137	Fuller v. Kane (110 Mich. 549) -	303
Bagley v. Columbus S. R. Co. (98 Ga. 626) -	286	Gleaves v. Terry (93 Va. 491) -	144
Eates v. Cullum (177 Pa. 633) -	440	Grand Island & N. W. R. Co. v. Baker (Wyo.) No Off. Rep. -	835
Belknap v. Louisville (99 Ky. 474) -	256	Greene v. Greene (49 Neb. 546) -	110
Bennett v. Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. (177 Pa. 233) -	595	Hall v. Manson (99 Iowa, 698) -	207
Breidenthal v. Edwards (67 Kan. 332) -	146	Hanna v. Young (84 Md. 179) -	55
Bridal Veil Lumbering Co. v. Johnson (30 Or. 205) -	369	Harrisburg, C. & C. Turnpk. Rd. Co. v. Harrisburg & M. Electric R. Co. (177 Pa. 585) -	439
Briggs v. Russellville (99 Ky. 515) -	193	Harrisburg Nat. Bank v. Bradshaw (178 Pa. 180) -	597
Bronson's Estate, Re (150 N. Y. 1) -	238	Hartwell v. Tefft (19 R. I. 644) -	500
Brown v. Pettit (178 Pa. 17) -	723	Hastings v. Foxworthy (45 Neb. 676) -	321
Bruner v. First Nat. Bank (97 Tenn. 540) -	532	Hay v. Peterson (Wyo.) No Off. Rep. -	581
Buchannan v. Supreme Conclave I. O. of H. (178 Pa. 465) -	436	Heller v. Royal Ins. Co. (177 Pa. 262) -	600
Burnett v. Maloney (97 Tenn. 697) -	541	Hendry v. Benlisa (37 Fla. 609) -	283
Carey v. Hulett (66 Minn. 327) -	384	Hines v. Willcox (96 Tenn. 148) -	824
Carr v. State (106 Ala. 35) -	631	Holleman v. Harvard (119 N. C. 150) -	803
Central Trust Co. v. Whitely (43 U. S. App. 643, 22 C. C. A. 67, 76 Fed. Rep. 74) -	303	Hopper v. Arkansas City (40 U. S. App. 257, 22 C. C. A. 171, 76 Fed. Rep. 271) -	518
Chattanooga Electric R. Cd. v. Johnson (97 Tenn. 667) -	442	Houdayer's Estate, Re (150 N. Y. 37) -	235
Cheever v. Pittsburg, C. & L. E. R. Co. (150 N. Y. 59) -	69	Howard v. United States (43 U. S. App. 986, 21 C. C. A. 586, 75 Fed. Rep. 986) -	509
Clark v. Stanwood (166 Mass. 379) -	378	Hulett's Estate, Re (66 Minn. 327) -	384
Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Moneyhun (146 Ind. 147) -	141	Illinois C. R. Co. v. Ihlenberg (43 U. S. App. 726, 21 C. C. A. 546, 75 Fed. Rep. 873) -	393
Cowan v. Murch (97 Tenn. 590) -	538	Illinois Trust & S. Bank v. Arkansas City (40 U. S. App. 257, 22 C. C. A. 171, 76 Fed. Rep. 271) -	518
Cushing v. Perot (175 Pa. 66) -	737	Jackson v. Jackson (82 Md. 17) -	773
Dantzer v. Indianapolis U. R. Co. (141 Ind. 604) -	769	Jennings v. Brown (114 Cal. 307) -	45
Davidson v. Hannon (67 Conn. 312) -	718	Keystone Lumber Co. v. Kolman (94 Wis. 465) -	821
Debney v. State (45 Neb. 856) -	851	Kingman County Comrs. v. Leonard (57 Kan. 531) -	810
Dennis v. Dennis (68 Conn. 186) -	449	Klein v. Livingston Club (177 Pa. 224) -	94
Doster v. Charlotte Street R. Co. (117 N. C. 651) -	481	Klepper v. Cox (97 Tenn. 534) -	536
Du Bois v. Du Bois City Waterworks Co. (176 Pa. 430) -	92	Kramer v. Old (119 N. C. 1) -	389
Eingartner v. Illinois Steel Co. (94 Wis. 70) -	503	Kujek v. Goldman (150 N. Y. 176) -	156
Everett v. Los Angeles Consol. Electric R. Co. (115 Cal. 105) -	350	Lancey v. King County (15 Wash. 9) -	817
Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. New York & N. R. Co. (150 N. Y. 410) -	76	Landell v. Hamilton (175 Pa. 327) -	227
		Leitzsey v. Columbia Water Power Co. (47 S. C. 464) -	215
		Long v. Harvey (177 Pa. 473) -	169
		Louisville & N. R. Co. v. McElwain (98 Ky. 700) -	788

SUPPLEMENTAL TABLE OF CASES.

Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Lynch (147 Ind. 165) -	293	Russell v. Pacific R. Co. 113 Cal. 258 -	747
Lubrano v. Atlantic Mills (19 R. I. 129) -	797	Russellville v. Beall (99 Ky. 515) -	193
Lund v. Chippewa County (93 Wis. 640) -	131	Ryder v. Kinsey (62 Minn. 85) -	557
McAfee v. Huidekoper (9 App. D. C. 36) -	720	St. Paul v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (63 Minn. 330) -	184
McAnally v. Alabama Insane Hospital (109 Ala. 109) -	223	Sandage v. Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co. (142 Ind. 148) -	303
McConnell v. Lemley (49 La. Ann. 1433) -	609	Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Waller (97 Ga. 164) -	459
McLaughlin v. Louisville Electric Light Co. (100 Ky. 173) -	812	Schweiss v. First Jud. Dist. Ct. (23 Nev. 226) -	602
Marshall v. Franklin F. Ins. Co. (176 Pa. 628) -	159	Shank v. Mohler (93 Iowa, 273) -	161
Marshall v. Sherman (148 N. Y. 9) -	757	Sheffer v. Willoughby (163 Ill. 518) -	464
Memphis Nat. Bank v. Neely (97 Tenn. 120) -	274	Singleton v. State (38 Fla. 297) -	251
Miller, Re (110 Mich. 676) -	398	Smith v. Smith (22 Colo. 480) -	49
Mitchell v. Prange (110 Mich. 78) -	182	Spencer v. Myers (150 N. Y. 269) -	175
Mitchell v. Rochester R. Co. (151 N. Y. 107) -	781	Spitz Bros.' Assignment, Re (8 N. M. 622) -	604
Mohler v. Shank (93 Iowa, 273) -	161	Standard Oil Co. v. Arnestad (6 N. D. 255) -	861
Mullan v. State (114 Cal. 578) -	262	State v. Harrington (68 Vt. 622) -	100
Mutual F. Ins. Co. v. Phoenix Furniture Co. (108 Mich. 170) -	691	State v. Howard (66 Minn. 309) -	178
Myers v. Baltimore County (83 Md. 385) -	309	State v. McCabe (135 Mo. 450) -	127
Neal v. Black (177 Pa. 83) -	707	State v. Nelson (66 Minn. 166) -	318
Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. (93 Va. 749) -	105	State v. Orr (68 Conn. 101) -	279
Northern C. R. Co. v. Harrisburg & M. Electric R. Co. (177 Pa. 142) -	572	State v. Yandle (119 N. C. 874) -	302
Nunamaker v. Columbia Water Power Co. (47 S. C. 485) -	222	State v. Yardley, 95 Tenn. 546 -	656
Oakford v. Nixon (177 Pa. 76) -	575	State v. Zichfeld (23 Nev. 304) -	784
Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Taber (98 Ky. 503) -	685	State, Bateman, v. Bode (55 Ohio St. 224) -	498
Opinion of the Justices (166 Mass. 589) -	58	State, Blydenburgh, v. Burdick (Wyo.) No Off. Rep. -	845
Ottenberg v. Corner (40 U. S. App. 320, 22 C. C. A. 163, 76 Fed. Rep. 263) -	620	State, Childs, v. Copeland (66 Minn. 315) -	777
Parker v. C. Lamb & Sons (99 Iowa, 265) -	704	State, Metcalf, v. Johnson (18 Mont. 548) -	313
P. C. Wiest Co. v. Weeks (177 Pa. 412) -	172	State, Russell, v. Tooker (18 Mont. 540) -	315
Penoyar v. Kelsey (150 N. Y. 77) -	248	State, St. Louis Underground Service Co., v. Murphy (134 Mo. 548) -	369
People, Lynch, v. Budd (114 Cal. 168) -	46	State, Wineman, v. Dahl (6 N. D. 81) -	97
Peterson v. Atlantic City R. Co. 177 Pa. 335 -	593	Stenberg v. Willcox (96 Tenn. 163) -	615
Philadelphia, McCann, v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 177 Pa. 292 -	564	Sterling v. Regents of The University (110 Mich. 369) -	150
Philbrook v. Newman (114 Cal. 635) -	265	Co., v. Murphy (134 Mo. 548) -	369
Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Red- ding (140 Ind. 101) -	767	Third Nat. Bank v. Devine Grocery Co. (97 Tenn. 603) -	445
Post v. Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Asso. (97 Tenn. 408) -	201	Thompson v. Gibbs (97 Tenn. 489) -	548
Potter v. Berry (53 N. J. Eq. 151) -	297	Tillinghast v. Merrill (151 N. Y. 135) -	678
Prine v. Prine (36 Fla. 676) -	87	Tuttle v. National Bank of the Republic (161 Ill. 497) -	750
Rathbone v. Hopper (57 Kan. 240) -	674	Union Bank v. Oxford Comrs. (119 N. C. 214) -	487
Rathbone v. Wirth (150 N. Y. 459) -	408	Van Epps v. Redfield (68 Conn. 39) -	360
Ratliff v. Beale (74 Miss. 247) -	472	Van Steuben v. Central R. Co. (178 Pa. 367) -	577
Reed v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (135 Mo. 661) -	492	Wait v. O'Neil (47 U. S. App. 19, 22 C. C. A. 246, 76 Fed. Rep. 406) -	550
Reelfoot Lake Levee Dist. v. Dawson (97 Tenn. 151) -	725	Warner v. Delbridge & C. Co. (110 Mich. 590) -	701
Reuter v. Lawe (94 Wis. 300) -	733	Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Robinson (97 Tenn. 638) -	431
Rhodes v. United States Nat. Bank (24 U. S. App. 607, 13 C. C. A. 612, 66 Fed. Rep. 512) -	742	Westervelt v. Mohrenstecher (40 U. S. App. 221, 22 C. C. A. 93, 76 Fed. Rep. 118) -	477
Richmond & I. Const. Co. v. Richmond, N. I. & B. R. Co. (31 U. S. App. 704, 15 C. C. A. 289, 68 Fed. Rep. 105) -	625	White v. Meadville (177 Pa. 643) -	567
Robinson v. Superior Rapid Transit R. Co. (94 Wis. 345) -	205	Whitely v. Central Trust Co. (43 U. S. App. 643, 22 C. C. A. 67, 76 Fed. Rep. 74) -	303
Roos v. Hawkeye Ins. Co. (93 Iowa, 222) -	466	Whiting's Estate, Re (150 N. Y. 27) -	232
		Woodland Oil Co. v. Crawford (55 Ohio St. 161) -	62
		Yoch v. Home Mut. Ins. Co. (111 Cal. 503) -	857
		Zeiler v. Central R. Co. (64 Md. 304) -	469

TABLE

OF

CASES REPORTED

IN LAWYERS' REPORTS, ANNOTATED, BOOK XXXIV.

A.

Abbott v. Doane (Mass.)	88
Adams v. New Jersey S. B. Co. (N. Y.)	683
Alabama Insane Hospital, McAnally v. (Ala.)	228
American Accl. Co. v. Carson (Ky.)	801
Anniston Transfer Co. v. Gurley (Ala.)	187
Arkansas City, Hopper v. (C. C. App. 8th C.)	518
Illinois Trust & S. Bank v. (C. C. App. 8th C.)	518
Arnestad, Standard Oil Co. v. (N. D.)	861
Atlantic City R. Co., Peterson v. (Pa.)	598
Atlantic Mills, Lubrano v. (R. I.)	797

B.

Bagley v. Columbus S. R. Co. (Ga.)	286
Baker, Grand Island & N. W. R. Co. v. (Wyo.)	835
Baltimore County Comrs., Myers v. (Md.)	809
Bank, First Nat., of Johnson City, Bruner v. (Tenn.)	532
Harrisburg Nat. v. Bradshaw (Pa.)	597
Illinois Trust & S., v. Arkansas City (C. C. App. 8th C.)	518
Memphis Nat., v. Neely (Tenn.)	274
National, of the Republic, Tuttle v. (Ill.)	750
Third Nat., v. Divine Grocery Co. (Tenn.)	445
Union, of Richmond v. Oxford Comrs. (N. C.)	487
United States Nat., Rhodes v. (C. C. App. 7th C.)	742
Bateman, State, ex rel., v. Bode (Ohio)	498
Bates v. Cullum (Pa.)	440
Beale, Ratliff v. (Miss.)	472
Beall, Russellville v. (Ky.)	193
Belknap v. Louisville (Ky.)	256
Benliss, Hendry v. (Fla.)	283
Bennett v. Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. (Pa.)	595
Berry, Potter v. (N. J. Err. & App.)	297
Black, Neal v. (Pa.)	707
Blydenburgh, State, ex rel., v. Burdick (Wyo.)	845
Bode, State, Bateman v. (Ohio)	498
Bradshaw, Harrisburg Nat. Bank v. (Pa.)	597
Breidenthal v. Edwards (Kan.)	146
Bridal Veil Lumbering Co. v. Johnson (Or.)	868

Briggs v. Russellville (Ky.)	196
Bronson's Estate, Re, (N. Y.)	288
Brown, Jennings v. (Cal.)	45
v. Pettit (Pa.)	728
Bruner v. First Nat. Bank (Tenn.)	532
Buchanan v. Supreme Conclave I. O. of H. (Pa.)	436
Budd, People, Lynch v. (Cal.)	46
Burch, Farmers' Mut. Ins. Asso. v. (S. C.)	806
Burdick, State, Blydenburgh, v. (Wyo.)	845
Burnett v. Maloney (Tenn.)	541

C.

Carey v. Hulett (Minn.)	384
Carr v. State (Ala.)	684
Carson, American Accl. Co. v. (Ky.)	801
Central R. Co., Van Steuben v. (Pa.)	577
Zeller v. (Md.)	469
Central Trust Co., Whitely v. (C. C. App. 8th C.)	808
Charlotte Street R. Co., Doster v. (N. C.)	481
Chattanooga Electric R. Co. v. Johnson (Tenn.)	442
Cheever v. Pittsburg, C. & L. E. R. Co. (N. Y.)	69
Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., St. Paul v. (Minn.)	184
Childs, State, ex rel., v. Copeland (Minn.)	777
Chippewa County, Lund v. (Wis.)	181
Clark v. Stanwood (Mass.)	878
Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Moneyhun (Ind.)	141
Columbia Water Power Co., Lettissey v. (S. C.)	215
Nunamaker v. (S. C.)	222
Columbus S. R. Co., Bagley v. (Ga.)	286
Com., Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. (Va.)	105
Copeland, State, Childs, v. (Minn.)	777
Corner, Ottenberg v. (C. C. App. 8th C.)	620
Cowan v. Murch (Tenn.)	538
Cox, Klepper v. (Tenn.)	536
Crawford, Woodland Oil Co. v. (Ohio)	62
Cullum, Bates v. (Pa.)	440
Cushing v. Perot (Pa.)	787

D.

Dahl, State, Wineman, v. (N. D.)	97
Dantzer v. Indianapolis Union R. Co. (Ind.)	769

Davidson v. Hannon (Conn.)	718	Hendry v. Benlisa (Fla.)	283
Dawson, Reelfoot Lake Levee Dist. v. (Tenn.)	725	Hines v. Willcox (Tenn.)	824
Debney v. State (Neb.)	851	Holleman v. Harward (N. C.)	803
Delbridge & C. Co., Warner v. (Mich.)	701	Home Mut. Ins. Co., Yoch v. (Cal.)	857
Dennis v. Dennis (Conn.)	449	Hopper v. Arkansas City (C. C. App. 8th C.)	518
Divine Grocery Co., Third Nat. Bank v. (Tenn.)	445	Rathbone v. (Kan.)	674
Doane, Abbott v. (Mass.)	88	Houdayer's Estate, Re, (N. Y.)	235
Doster v. Charlotte Street R. Co. (N. C.)	481	Howard, State v. (Minn.)	178
Du Bois v. Du Bois City Waterworks Co. (Pa.)	92	v. United States (C. C. App. 6th C.)	509
Du Bois City Waterworks Co., Du Bois v. (Pa.)	92	Huidekoper, McAfee v. (D. C. App.)	720
		Hulett, Carey v. (Minn.)	884
		Hulett's Estate, Re, (Minn.)	884

E.

Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso., Bennett v. (Pa.)	595
Edwards, Breidenthal v. (Kan.)	146
Eingartner v. Illinois Steel Co. (Wis.)	503
Everett v. Los Angeles Consol. Electric R. Co. (Cal.)	350

F.

Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. New York & N. R. Co. (N. Y.)	76
Farmers' Mut. Ins. Asso. v. Burch (S. C.)	806
First Judicial Dist. Ct., Schweiss v. (Nev.)	603
First Nat. Bank, Bruner v. (Tenn.)	582
Foxworthy, Hastings v. (Neb.)	821
Frame v. Sliter (Or.)	690
Franklin F. Ins. Co., Marshall v. (Pa.)	159
Fuchs v. St. Louis (Mo.)	118
Fuller v. Kane (Mich.)	808

G.

Gibbs, Thompson v. (Tenn.)	548
Gleaves v. Terry (Va.)	144
Goldman, Kujek v. (N. Y.)	156
Grand Island & N. W. R. Co. v. Baker (Wyo.)	835
Greene v. Greene (Neb.)	110
Gurley, Anniston Transfer Co. v. (Ala.)	187

H.

Hall v. Manson (Iowa)	207
Hamilton, Landell v. (Pa.)	227
Hanna v. Young (Md.)	55
Hannon, Davidson v. (Conn.)	718
Harrington, State v. (Vt.)	100
Harrisburg & M. Electric R. Co., Harrisburg, C. & C. Turnp. Road Co. v. (Pa.)	489
Northern C. R. Co. v. (Pa.)	572
Harrisburg, C. & C. Turnp. Road Co. v. Harrisburg & M. Electric R. Co. (Pa.)	439
Harrisburg Nat. Bank v. Bradshaw (Pa.)	597
Hartwell v. Tefft (R. I.)	500
Harvey, Long v. (Pa.)	169
Harward, Holleman v. (N. C.)	808
Hastings v. Foxworthy (Neb.)	821
Hawkeys Ins. Co., Ross v. (Iowa)	466
Hay v. Peterson (Wyo.)	581
Heller v. Royal Ins. Co. (Pa.)	600

34 L. R. A.

I.

Ihlenberg, Illinois C. R. Co. v. (C. C. App. 6th C.)	393
Illinois C. R. Co. v. Ihlenberg (C. C. App. 6th C.)	393
Illinois Steel Co., Eingartner v. (Wis.)	503
Illinois Trust & S. Bank v. Arkansas City (C. C. App. 8th C.)	518
Indianapolis Union R. Co., Dantzer v. (Ind.)	769
Insurance Asso., Farmers' Mut. v. Burch (S. C.)	806
Insurance Co., Franklin F., Marshall v. (Pa.)	159
Hawkeys, Ross v. (Iowa)	466
Home Mut., Goch v. (Cal.)	857
Mutual F. v. Phoenix Furniture Co. (Mich.)	694
Royal, Heller v. (Pa.)	600

J.

Jackson v. Jackson (Md.)	773
Jennings v. Brown (Cal.)	45
Johnson, Bridal Vell Lumbering Co. v. (Or.)	868
Ohattanooga Electric R. Co. v. (Tenn.)	442
State, Metcalf, v. (Mont.)	813

K.

Kane, Fuller v. (Mich.)	808
Kelsey, Penoyar v. (N. Y.)	248
Keystone Lumber Co. v. Kolman (Wis.)	821
King County, Lancey v. (Wash.)	617
Kingman County Comra. v. Leonard (Kan.)	810
Kinsey, Ryder v. (Minn.)	57
Klein v. Livingston Club (Pa.)	94
Klepper v. Cox (Tenn.)	586
Kolman, Keystone Lumber Co. v. (Wis.)	821
Kramer v. Old (N. C.)	839
Krech, Tacoma v. (Wash.)	68
Kujek v. Goldman (N. Y.)	156

L.

Lamb, Parker v. (Iowa)	704
Lancey v. King County (Wash.)	817
Landell v. Hamilton (Pa.)	227
Lawe, Reuter v. (Wis.)	733
Leitzsney v. Columbia Water Power Co. (S. C.)	215

Lemley, McConnell v. (La. Ann.)	609
Leonard, Kingman County Comra. v. (Kan.)	810
Livingston Club, Klein v. (Pa.)	94
Long v. Harvey (Pa.)	169
Los Angeles Consol. Electric R. Co., Everett v. (Cal.)	350
Louisville, Belknap v. (Ky.)	256
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. McElwain (Ky.)	788
Louisville Electric Light Co., McLaughlin v. (Ky.)	819
Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Lynch (Ind.)	293
Lubrano v. Atlantic Mills (R. I.)	797
Lund v. Chippewa County (Wia.)	181
Lynch, Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. (Ind.)	293
People, ex rel., v. Budd (Cal.)	46

M.

McAfee v. Huldekoper (D. C. App.)	730
McAnally v. Alabama Insane Hospital (Ala.)	223
McCabe, State v. (Mo.)	127
McCann, Philadelphia, ex rel., v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. (Pa.)	564
McConnell v. Lemley (La. Ann.)	609
McElwain, Louisville & N. R. Co. v. (Ky.)	788
McLaughlin v. Louisville Electric Light Co. (Ky.)	819
Maloney, Burnett v. (Tenn.)	541
Manson, Hall v. (Iowa)	207
Marshall v. Franklin F. Ins. Co. (Pa.)	159
v. Sherman (N. Y.)	757
Meadville, White v. (Pa.)	567
Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Asso., Post v. (Tenn.)	201
Memphis Nat. Bank v. Neely (Tenn.)	274
Merrill, Tillinghast v. (N. Y.)	678
Metcalf, State, ex rel., v. Johnson (Mont.)	818
Miller, Ba, (Mich.)	398
Mitchell v. Prange (Mich.)	182
v. Rochester R. Co. (N. Y.)	781
Mohler v. Shank (Iowa)	161
Mohrenstecher, Westervelt v. (C. C. App. 8th C.)	477
Moneyhun, Cleveland, (C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. (Ind.)	141
Mullan v. State (Cal.)	263
Murch, Cowan v. (Tenn.)	538
Murphy, State, St. Louis Underground Service Co., v. (Mo.)	360
Mutual F. Ins. Co. v. Phoenix Furniture Co. (Mich.)	694
Myers v. Baltimore County Comra. (Md.)	809
Spencer v. (N. Y.)	175

N.

National Bank of the Republic, Tuttle v. (Ill.)	750
Neal v. Black (Pa.)	707
Neely, Memphis Nat. Bank v. (Tenn.)	274
Nelson, State v. (Minn.)	818
New Jersey S. B. Co., Adams v. (N. Y.)	682
Newman, Philbrook v. (Cal.)	265
New York & N. R. Co., Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. (N. Y.)	76
34 L. R. A.

Nixon, Oakford v. (Pa.)	575
Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. (Va.)	105
Northern C. R. Co. v. Harrisburg & M. Electric R. Co. (Pa.)	572
Nunamaker v. Columbia Water Power Co. (S. C.)	223

O.

Oakford v. Nixon (Pa.)	575
Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Taber (Ky.)	685
Old, Kramer v. (N. C.)	389
O'Neil, Wait v. (C. C. App. 6th C.)	550
Opinion of the Justices (Mass.)	58
Orr, State, v. (Conn.)	279
Ottensberg v. Corner (C. C. App. 8th C.)	620
Oxford Comra., Union Bank v. (N. C.)	487

P.

Pacific R. Co., Russell v. (Cal.)	747
Parker v. Lamb (Iowa)	704
P. C. Wiest Co. v. Weeks (Pa.)	172
Penoyar v. Kelsey (N. Y.)	248
People, ex rel. Lynch, v. Budd (Cal.)	46
Perot, Cushing v. (Pa.)	737
Peterson v. Atlantic City R. Co. (Pa.)	598
Hay v. (Wyo.)	581
Pettit, Brown v. (Pa.)	728
Philadelphia, ex rel. McCann, v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. (Pa.)	564
Philadelphia & R. R. Co., Philadelphia, McCann, v. (Pa.)	564
Philbrook v. Newman (Cal.)	265
Phoenix Furniture Co., Mutual F. Ins. Co. v. (Mich.)	694
Pittsburg, C. & L. E. R. Co., Cheever v. (N. Y.)	69
Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Redding (Ind.)	767
Post v. Mechanics' Bldg. & L. Asso. (Tenn.)	201
Potter v. Berry (N. J. Err. & App.)	297
Prange, Mitchell v. (Mich.)	183
Prine v. Prine (Fla.)	87

R.

Railroad Co., Atlantic City, Peterson v. (Pa.)	598
Central, Van Steuben v. (Pa.)	577
Grand Island & N. W., v. Baker (Wyo.)	685
Illinois C., v. Ihlenberg (C. C. App. 6th C.)	393
Louisville & N., v. McElwain (Ky.)	788
Norfolk & W., v. Com. (Va.)	105
Philadelphia & R., Philadelphia, McCann, v. (Pa.)	564
Pittsburg, C. & L. E., Cheever v. (N. Y.)	69
Pittsburgh, C. & St. L., v. Redding (Ind.)	767
Richmond, N. I. & B., Richmond & I. Constr. Co. v. (C. C. App. 6th C.)	625
Railway Co., Central, Zeller v. (Md.)	469
Charlotte Street, Doster v. (N. C.)	481
Chattanooga Electric, v. Johnson (Tenn.)	443

W.

Wait v. O'Neill (C. C. App. 6th C.)	550
Waller, Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. (Ga.)	459
Warner v. Delbridge & O. Co. (Mich.)	701
Weeks, P. C. Wiest Co. v. (Pa.)	172
Western U. Teleg. Co., Reed v. (Mo.)	493
v. Robinson (Tenn.)	481
Westervelt v. Mohrenstecher (C. C. App. 8th C.)	477
White v. Meadville (Pa.)	567
Whitely v. Central Trust Co. (C. C. App. 6th C.)	308
Whiting's Estate, Re, (N. Y.)	232
Willcox, Hines v. (Tenn.)	824
Stenberg v. (Tenn.)	615
Willoughby, Sheffer v. (Ill.)	464
24 L. R. A.

Wineman, State, ex rel., v. Dahl (N. D.)	97
Wirth, Rathbone v. (N. Y.)	408
Woodland Oil Co. v. Crawford (Ohio)	62

Y.

Yandle, State v. (N. C.)	322
Yardley, State v. (Tenn.)	656
Yoch v. Home Mut. Ins. Co. (Cal.)	857
Young, Hanna v. (Md.)	55

Z.

Zeller's, Central R. Co. (Md.)	489
Zichfeld, State v. (Nev.)	224

CITATIONS

IN OPINIONS OF THE JUDGES CONTAINED IN THIS BOOK.

A.

Abba, Re. 2 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 75.....	301
Abbott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 80 Minn. 482.....	533
Abbott v. Grimes Dry Goods Co. 44 Kan. 418, 732, 740, 744, 755, 757.....	737
Abbott v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 145 Mass. 459.....	630
Abel v. Fitch, 30 Conn. 94.....	633
Accumulator Co. v. Dubuque Street R. Co. 37 U. S. App. 344, 13 C. C. A. 37, 64 Fed. Rep. 70.....	479
Adams v. Washington & G. R. Co. (D. C. App.) 24 Wash. L. Rep. 364.....	732
Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. 25 Iowa, 94.....	343
Adams Exp. Co. v. Milton, 11 Bush, 49.....	631
Adler v. Penton, 36 U. S. 24 How. 407, 18 L. ed. 636.....	34
Adna L. Ins. Co. v. Lyons County, 44 Fed. Rep. 323.....	341
Agawam Bank v. Morris, 4 Cush. 30.....	360-363
Ahern v. Steele, 115 N. Y. 308, 5 L. R. A. 449, 612, 633.....	612, 633
Akrend v. Odiorne, 115 Mass. 231, 19 Am. Rep. 449.....	601, 606
Aiken v. Steiner, 38 Ala. 365.....	606
Akin v. Jones, 33 Tenn. 353, 25 L. R. A. 536, 537, 538.....	536, 537, 538
Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Hawk, 73 Ala. 112, 47 Am. Rep. 403.....	143
Albany County Supers. v. Dorr, 25 Wend. 440.....	631
Albee v. Carpenter, 13 Cush. 332.....	602
Albert v. State, Bryan, 66 Md. 325, 69 Am. Rep. 159.....	613
Albion v. Hetrick, 30 Ind. 545, 48 Am. Rep. 230.....	143
Allegheny County v. Gibson, 95 Pa. 397, 35 Am. Rep. 679.....	474
Allegheny County Commr. v. New York Min. Co. 79 Md. 55.....	313
Allegheny County Home's Case, 77 Pa. 77.....	330
Allen v. Louisiana, 108 U. S. 30, 28 L. ed. 313.....	733
v. Walsh, 25 Minn. 543.....	734
v. Wells, 23 Pick. 450, 38 Am. Dec. 737.....	330
.....	235
.....	210
.....	123
.....	733
.....	303
.....	344
Count, 101.....	579
York Belt.....	73-74
v. 300.....	160
.....	480
.....	563
v. Co. 30.....	730
v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 37 Wis. 321.....	503
Andrews, Ex parte, 13 Cal. 673.....	109
v. Hartford & N. H. R. Co. 34 Conn. 37.....	303
Ann, Tho. 1 Gall. 82.....	733
Antelope, Tho. 23 U. S. 10 Wheat. 65, 3 L. ed. 333.....	333
Appeal Tax Court v. Patterson, 50 Md. 367.....	311
Archer v. Merchants' & Mfrs. Ins. Co. 43 Mo. 434.....	350
Arens v. Weir, 30 Ill. 26.....	740
Arkadelphia Lumber Co. v. Arkadelphia, 35 Ark. 370.....	537
Arlin v. Brown, 44 N. H. 103.....	307
Armstrong v. Brunswick, 79 Mo. 313.....	137
v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 5 Intern. Com. Rep. 247.....	639
Arnold v. Hawkins, 35 Mo. 569.....	343
Arthur v. Broadnax, 3 Ala. 357, 37 Am. Dec. 707.....	225
v. Israel, 15 Colo. 147, 10 L. R. A. 633.....	103
Arts v. Chicago, R. L. & P. R. Co. 44 Iowa, 236.....	311
Ash's Appeal, 30 Pa. 500.....	713
Ashford v. Watkins, 70 Ala. 160.....	237

34 L. R. A.

.....	677
.....	641
.....	713
.....	117
.....	673
.....	337
.....	214
.....	349
.....	635
.....	333
.....	340
.....	4, 413
.....	459
.....	136
.....	740
.....	459
.....	459
.....	255
.....	713
.....	439
.....	221
.....	739
.....	453
.....	330-341
.....	439

.....	332, 334
.....	239
.....	503
.....	10, 335
.....	109
.....	166
.....	733, 734
.....	331-333
.....	330
.....	255
.....	553
.....	556
.....	373, 733
.....	73
.....	413
.....	325
.....	343
.....	433
.....	303
.....	303
.....	73
.....	747, 743
.....	303, 13 L. R. A. 56.....
.....	303, 754, 755
.....	553, 533
.....	631
.....	494
.....	513
.....	501
.....	300-303
.....	417, 439
.....	213
.....	307
.....	333
.....	333
.....	313
.....	767

Callaghan v. Chipman, 89 Mich. 610.	610	Christensen v. Eno, 106 N. Y. 97, 69 Am. Rep.	754, 767
Callahan v. Gilman, 107 N. Y. 300.	300	Christy v. Pridgeon, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 106, 18 L. ed.	624, 616, 606
Callaway v. McMillan, 11 Helak. 557.	557		769
Camden v. Stuart, 164 U. S. 304, 36 L. ed. 595.	595		143, 143
Camden & A. R. Co. v. Hooser, 90 Pa. 499, 44 Am. Rep. 120.	149		671, 671, 650, 648, 67
Camp v. Wood, 76 N. Y. 62, 25 Am. Rep. 353.	618		230, 241, 491, 307, 341
Campbell v. Campbell, 21 Mich. 436.	437		516, 780, 137
v. Holt, 115 U. S. 623, 29 L. ed. 436.	443		235
v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 65 Kan. 586.	586		244, 64, 623, 606, 57, 623
v. Mackay, 1 Myl. & C. 694.	691		527, 529, 531
v. Morris, 3 Harr. & MoH. 385.	406		426
Canada S. R. Co. v. Gebhard, 109 U. S. 537, 27 L. ed. 1034.	700		767
Canajoharie Nat. Bank v. Diebold, 128 N. Y. 202, 10 L. R. A. 676.	72, 74		103, 811, 678
Canal Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 523, 25 L. ed. 397.	398		190
Canfield, Jr., 95 Mich. 644.	404, 405		507
Canning v. Williamstown, 1 Conn. 451.	733		618, 622, 364
Cannon v. Mathew, 3 Helak. 512.	512, 513, 670		546
Carey	43 Am.		91
Carlet	751		606
Carito	597		57, 623
Carpet	N. C. 305
	L. Co. 124
	684
	Co. 41 U.
	700
Carr v.	737, 439, 499
Carrio	20, 29 W.
	512
Carric	512
Carrin	Am. Rep.
	127
Carroll County Supers. v. Smith, 111 U. S. 565, 29 L. ed. 580.	569
v. United States, 88 U. S. 18 Wall. 71, 21 L. ed. 771.	543
Carson v. Federal Street & P. V. R. Co. 147 Pa. 319, 15 L. R. A. 257.	355
v. Godley, 29 Pa. 101, 67 Am. Dec. 404, 613, 582, 584.	584
v. St. Francis Leves Dist. 59 Ark. 513.	739
Carterville v. Lyon, 69 Ga. 577.	597
Castro v. Queen, L. R. 5 App. Cas. 241 (Tichborne Case).	614, 615
Cathcart v. Comstock, 53 Wis. 606.	124
Catlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 158.	244
Catakill Bank v. Hooper, 5 Gray, 574.	360, 362
Cattle v. Haddock, 14 Neb. 69.	117
Central Trust Co. v. Bridges, 4 C. C. A. 523, 57 Fed. Rep. 733, 15 U. S. App. 115.	623
v. Condon, 51 U. S. App. 257, 67 Fed. Rep. 84.	622
v. Richmond, N. I. & R. R. Co. 69 Fed. Rep. 90, 31 U. S. App. 675.	623, 627
Cesar v. Karuta, 60 N. Y. 289, 19 Am. Rep. 164.	164, 613, 628
	356
	90
	117
	687
	307
	530
	301
	Co. 144 N.
	174
	736
	307
	L. R. Co. 7
	738
	106, 190
	1, 479
	8 C. C. A.
	App. 495, 623
	Y. 173, 38
	54, 437
	6 Kan. 337
	841
	9 L. ed. 594
	527, 530
v. Union Bldg. Assoc. 103 Ill. 279, 40 Am. Rep. 596.	771, 773
Chicago & E. L. R. Co. v. O'Connor, 119 Ill. 506.	506
v. Wilkes, 116 Ill. 449.	369
Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Carroll, 5 Ill. App. 201.	143
Chicago, R. & Q. R. Co. v. Outta, 94 U. S. 155, 24 L. ed. 94.	680
v. Hull, 24 Neb. 740.	588
Chicago, R. L. & P. R. Co. v. Smith, 111 Ill. 368.	223
Chicot County v. Davira, 40 Ark. 200.	489
China, The, v. Walsh ("The China") 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 63, 19 L. ed. 67.	306
Chin Yan, Ex parte, 60 Cal. 76.	108
34 L. R. A.

Callaghan v. Chipman, 30 Mich. 510.....	439	Christensen v. Hoo, 108 N. Y. 97, 98 Am. Rep. 439.....	754, 767
Callinan v. Gilman, 107 N. Y. 380.....	56	Christy v. Pridgen, 71 U. S. 4 Wall, 190, 18 L. ed. 439.....	624
Callaway v. McMillan, 11 Heisk. 557.....	593		816
Camden v. Stuart, 144 U. S. 104, 36 L. ed. 395.....	693		625
Camden & A. R. Co. v. Hooley, 99 Pa. 422, 44 Am. Rep. 120.....	143		769
Camp v. Wood, 78 N. Y. 92, 28 Am. Rep. 303.....	613		143
Campbell v. Campbell, 21 Mich. 439.....	307		143
v. Holt, 115 U. S. 623, 39 L. ed. 455.....	443		671
v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 35 Kan. 535.....	366		671
v. Mackay, 1 Myl. & C. 424.....	301		420
v. Morris & Harr. & McH. 395.....	306		211
Canada S. R. Co. v. Gebhard, 109 U. S. 537, 27 L. ed. 1034.....	703		545
Canajoharie Nat. Bank v. Diefsendorf, 123 N. Y. 302, 10 L. R. A. 379.....	72, 74		67
Canal Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 323, 35 L. ed. 397.....	396		239
Cannfield, Re, 28 Mich. 644.....	404, 406		341
Cannino v. Williamstown 1 Cash. 421.....	753		491
Canno.....	699, 670		307
Carrey.....	m.		341
Carlet.....	781		287
Carito.....	397		316
Carpet.....	393, 435		730
	134		137
	U.		295
	700		244
Carr v. Garrio.....	439, 439		34
	W.		323
	313		309
	313		27, 323
	bp.		331
	137		436
Carroll County Supers. v. Smith, 111 U. S. 565, 23 L. ed. 520.....	239		767
v. United States, 85 U. S. 13 Wall. 71, 21 L. ed. 771.....	643		312
Carson v. Federal Street & P. V. R. Co. 147 Pa. 319, 15 L. R. A. 367.....	365		678
v. Godley, 28 Pa. 111, 67 Am. Dec. 404, 613, 322, 334.....	733		190
v. St. Francis Leves Dist. 59 Ark. 513.....	367		507
Carterville v. Lyon, 69 Ga. 577.....	514		613, 533, 534
Castro v. Queen, L. R. 6 App. Cas. 341 (Tichborne Case).....	514, 515		546
Cathcart v. Comstock, 56 Wis. 405.....	134		91
Cathu v. Hull, 21 Vt. 153.....	244		696
Catakill Bank v. Hooper, 5 Gray, 574.....	390, 389		136
Cattle v. Haddock, 14 Neb. 59.....	117		124
Central Trust Co. v. Bridges, 8 C. C. A. 532, 57 Fed. Rep. 753, 16 U. S. App. 115.....	623		263
v. Condon, 21 U. S. App. 397, 57 Fed. Rep. 84.....	633		667, 671, 673
v. Richmond, N. L. & R. R. Co. 68 Fed. Rep. 90, 31 U. S. App. 675.....	620, 627		304
Cesar v. Karutz, 60 N. Y. 339, 19 Am. Rep. 164.....	613, 622		108
Chadwick v. Cornish, 25 Minn. 30.....	395		230
Chaffee v. Chaffee, 14 Mich. 463.....	90		535
Chamberlain v. Brown, 25 Neb. 434.....	117		531
Chandler v. Brown, 77 Ill. 333.....	697		536
Chapman v. Boardley, 31 Conn. 115.....	307		537
v. Morton, 11 Mees. & W. 534.....	530		538
v. Stockwell, 18 B. Mon. 653.....	308		539
Chas. E. Higgins Co. v. Higgins Soap Co. 144 N. Y. 422, 27 L. R. A. 43.....	174		540
Chase v. Oshkosh, 31 Wis. 313.....	736		541
v. Peck, 21 N. Y. 551.....	307		542
Chattanooga v. Nashville, O. & St. L. R. Co. 7 Lea, 561.....	735		543
Cheaney v. Hooser, 9 B. Mon. 330.....	135, 136		544
Chelmsford Co. v. Demarest, 7 Gray, 1.....	679		545
Chemical Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 8 C. C. A. 155, 59 Fed. Rep. 372, 16 U. S. App. 435, 23 L. R. A. 231.....	633		546
Chemung Bridge Co. v. Paige, 23 N. Y. 173, 33 Am. Rep. 407.....	84, 427		547
Cherokee County Comrs. v. State, 38 Kan. 337.....	676		548
Chicago v. Sexton, 115 Ill. 230.....	341		549
v. Sheldon, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 60, 29 L. ed. 594.....	527, 530		550
v. Union Bldg. Assn. 109 Ill. 373, 40 Am. Rep. 303.....	771, 773		551
Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. O'Connor, 119 Ill. 503.....	303		552
v. Wilts, 116 Ill. 449.....	309		553
Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Carroll, 5 Ill. App. 301.....	143		554
Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Outta, 94 U. S. 155, 24 L. ed. 94.....	630		555
v. Hull, 24 Neb. 740.....	363		556
Chicago, R. L. & P. R. Co. v. Smith, 111 Ill. 363.....	223		557
Chicot County v. Davies, 40 Ark. 200.....	439		558
China, The, v. Walsh ("The China") 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 63, 19 L. ed. 67.....	396		559
Chin Yau, Ex parte, 60 Cal. 75.....	103		560
34 L. R. A.			561

Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Houser, 111 Ind. 286.	844	Detroit v. Blackeby, 21 Mich. 84, 4 Am. Rep. 489	127
v. Palmer, 42 Conn. 68, 19 Am. Rep. 880.	176	v. Osborne, 128 U. S. 492, 34 L. ed. 280.	824, 624
Converse v. Meyer, 14 Neb. 190.	856	Detroit Manufacturers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Mer-
Copeland v. St. Joseph, 128 Mo. 417.	801	rill, 101 Mich. 368.	692, 698, 702, 708
Coody v. Gross Lumber Co. 22 Ga. 708.	828	Dewey v. Gray, 2 Cal. 874.	840, 842,
Cook v. Norton, 61 Ill. 325.	848	Dexter v. Spaul, 4 Mason, 115.	806
Cooke v. Murphy, 70 Ill. 98.	40	Diamond Match Co. v. Roeber, 108 N. Y. 478, 69
Cooley v. O'Connor, 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 684, 20 L.	840	Am. Rep. 464.	891
ed. 446.		Dick v. Martin, 7 Humph. 263.	827
v. Philadelphia Port Warden, 58 U. S. 12	811	Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 573, 25 L. ed.	681
How. 296, 18 L. ed. 296.	108	618.
Cooper v. District of Columbia, 4 McArthur. 250.	724	Dickson v. Wright, 53 Miss. 555, 24 Am. Rep.	288
v. McClurken, 22 Pa. 80.		677.	386
v. Omohundro, 88 U. S. 19 Wall. 65, 20 L.	744	Dillon v. Allen, 46 Iowa, 299, 28 Am. Rep. 145.	288
ed. 47.	622	Dinham v. Bradford, L. R. 6 Ch. 519.	74
	863	Dirt v. Morris, 81 U. S. 14 Wall. 484, 20 L. ed.	90
	506	722.	489
	696	Disborough v. Disborough, 51 N. J. Eq. 308.	143
	818	Division of Howard County, Re, 15 Kan. 194.	691
	772	Dixon v. Duke, 88 Ind. 424.	525
	880	Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 63, 28 L. ed.	778
	884	800.	550
L. R. A.		Dodge v. Council Bluffs, 57 Iowa, 540.	551
	390, 891	Doe, Birthright, v. Vardill, 5 Barn. & C. 428.	514
	882, 888	Ella, v. Sandham, 1 T. R. 705.	184
	101	Freeland, v. Burt, 1 T. R. 703.	292
	421	Patteshall, v. Turford, 3 Barn. & Ad. 390.	286
	856	Dolan's Case, 101 Mass. 219.	732
	892	Dolen v. Rogers, 149 N. Y. 491.	592
Rep. 9.	886	Dollars v. Roddenberry (Ga.) 25 S. E. 410.	691
a. 597, 17		Doller v. Hoferberth, 127 Ind. 414.	126
	303, 307	Donnelly v. Decker, 58 Wis. 461, 46 Am. Rep.	196
	802	687.	798
	608	Doolittle v. Stone, 186 N. Y. 618.	479
	508.	Doon Dist. Twp. v. Cummins, 142 U. S. 978, 35	306
14 L. R.		L. ed. 1048.	540
	827	Dongan v. Champlain Transp. Co. 68 N. Y. 1.	673
	878	Douglas v. Douglas, 81 Iowa, 421.	890
58 Mass.		a Phoenix Ins. Co. 188 N. Y. 208, 20 L. R.	882
	898	A. 118.	616
	211	Dover v. Twombly, 48 N. H. 89.
a. 229.	540	Dow v. Memphis & L. R. R. Co. 124 U. S. 652, 31
	786	L. ed. 563.
r. Reg.		Downing v. Ruger, 21 Wend. 178, 34 Am. Dec.
417.	830	298.
Cross v. Cross, 108 N. Y. 689.	811	Draper v. State, 4 Bart. 245.
Crowley v. City R. Co. 60 Cal. 628.	306	Drosten v. Mueller, 108 Mo. 684.
Croxier v. Boston, N. Y. & S. B. Co. 48 How.	684	Drury v. Holden, 121 Ill. 120.
Pr. 468.		Dubach v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 36 Mo. 488.
Cummings v. Missouri, 78 U. S. 4 Wall. 277, 18	404	Duffy v. Dubuque, 62 Iowa, 173, 50 Am. Rep.
L. ed. 356.		744.
Cummins v. Seymour, 79 Ind. 491, 41 Am. Rep.	772	Dunneen v. Rich, 22 Wis. 530.
616.	490	Dunbar v. Phenix Ins. Co. 73 Wis. 492.
Currie v. Southern P. Co. 21 Or. 566.	428	Dupes v. Blake, 148 Ill. 458.
Curtin v. Barton, 189 N. Y. 508.	806, 608	Durant v. Palmer, 29 N. J. L. 545.
Curtis v. Bradford, 88 Wis. 190.	126	Durkin v. Cobleigh (Mass.) 1
a. Whipple, 24 Wis. 360.

Kikenberry v. Bamar Twp. 28 Kan. 551, 21 Am. Rep. 126.....	679, 677	Fisk v. Potter, 2 Keyes, 64.....	686
Kidder v. State, 37 Ohio St. 181.....	515	Fitzpatrick v. Fitzpatrick, 6 Nev. 63.....	706
Kilton Trustees v. Gill, 94 Ky. 135.....	196	Flash v. Conn. 100 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 996.....	707
Killett v. Hamilton Mut. Ins. Co. 13 Gray, 129.....	369
v. Rbett, 5 Rich. L. 430, 37 Am. Dec. 780.....	319	F.....	445
v. Roswell, 10 Johns. 7, 6 Am. Dec. 308.....	684	F.....	84
Kills v. Hamilton, 4 Sneed, 513.....	627	F.....
v. State, 92 Tenn. 98.....	673	F.....	406
v. White, 61 Iowa, 444.....	169	F.....	134
Kilson v. Moses, 95 Ala. 221.....	639	F.....	423
Kilworth v. Grand Rapids, 37 Mich. 260.....	786	F.....	127
Kly v. Des Moines, 36 Iowa, 55, 17 L. R. A. 124.....	310	F.....
v. Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 158 Pa. 223.....	680	F.....	702
Embree v. Shideler, 36 Ind. 423.....	697
Emery v. Balitz, 94 N. Y. 408.....	481	F.....	530
Empire Mills v. Alston Grocery Co. (Tex. App.) 13 L. R. A. 306.....	379	F.....	206
Ensoce v. Dunn, 44 Conn. 93, 25 Am. Rep. 430.....	713, 719	F.....	450
Easton's Case, 118 N. Y. 151, 3 L. R. A. 464.....	235, 241-243, 246	F.....	341
Ebyart v. Hanover Twp. Trustees, 26 Ohio St. 613.....	350	F.....	306
Epperson v. State, 5 Lea, 291.....	673	F.....	771
Erickson v. Nesmith, 4 Allen, 223.....	749, 754, 763	F.....
Erskine v. Van Arsdale, 53 U. S. 15 Wall. 75, 21 L. ed. 68.....	631	F.....	703
Ervin v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 680.....	39	F.....
Erwin v. United States, 37 Fed. Rep. 463, 3 L. R. A. 239.....	514	F.....	697
Edmond, Re, 43 Fed. Rep. 697.....	514	F.....	536
Eurey v. Southern P. Co. 103 Cal. 541.....	364, 368	F.....	706
Eustis v. Bolles, 146 Mass. 414.....	380	F.....	700
Evans v. Boyder, 64 Mo. 513.....	561	F.....	339
Evansville v. State, Blend, 113 Ind. 343, 4 L. R. A. 98.....	413	F.....	345
Everett v. Los Angeles Consol. R. R. Co. (Cal.) 43 Pac. 307.....	397	F.....	731
v. Smith, 23 Miss. 59.....	259	F.....	8
Eviston v. Cramer, 37 Wis. 670.....	307	F.....	371
Ewing v. Duncan, 31 Tex. 260.....	460	F.....	381
v. Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 147 Pa. 40, 14 L. R. A. 686.....	738	F.....	714
Executive Communication, Re, 14 Fla. 319.....	254	F.....	361
Exeter Bank v. Rogers, 7 N. H. 21.....	479	F.....	677
F.
Fackler v. Wright, 98 Cal. 519.....	323
Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47, 25 L. ed. 544.....	747, 757
Farley v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 4 McCrary, 123, 14 Fed. Rep. 114.....	84
Farmer v. People, 77 Ill. 323.....	787
Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 68 Fed. Rep. 36.....	306
Farson v. Louisville Sinking Fund Comrs. 37 Ky. 119.....	644, 647
Farwell v. Sturges, 9 U. S. App. 423, 6 C. C. A. 113, 56 Fed. Rep. 739.....	745
Faxton v. Faxton, 23 Mich. 159.....	531
Fellow's Appeal, 98 Pa. 470.....	714
Fenelon v. Butts, 68 Wis. 344.....	306
Fergus Falls Water Co. v. Fergus Falls, 68 Fed. Rep. 586.....	581
Ferguson v. Hardy, 69 Ga. 755.....	233
v. Rafferty (Pa.) 6 L. R. A. 23, notes.....	397, 580
Ferrenbach v. Turner, 36 Mo. 416, 56 Am. Rep. 437.....	374
Ficklen v. Shelby County Tax. Dist. 145 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 601, 4 Intern. Com. Rep. 79.....	108
Fidelity & C. Co. v. Johnson, 73 Miss. 383, 30 L. R. A. 206.....	308
Fidelity Trust & B. V. Co. v. Morganfield, 36 Ky. 544.....	239
Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 671, 36 L. ed. 308.....	459
Fields v. State, 4 Coldw. 523.....	673
v. Stunston, 1 Coldw. 40.....	397
Finch v. York County, 19 Neb. 50, 56 Am. Rep. 741.....	311
Fire Department of New York v. Atlas B. B. Co. 100 N. Y. 503.....	439
First Municipality v. Cutting, 4 La. Ann. 325.....	327
First Nat. Bank v. Bard, 69 Hun. 539.....	623
v. Hatch, 78 Mo. 12.....	125
v. Mount Tabor, 63 Vt. 37, 38 Am. Rep. 734.....	540
Fisher v. Dudley, 74 Md. 242, 12 L. R. A. 556.....	500
v. Essex Bank, 5 Gray, 377.....	346
v. Rush County Comrs. 19 Kan. 414.....	312
v. Shropshire, 147 U. S. 133, 37 L. ed. 109.....	308
v. West Virginia & P. R. Co. 39 W. Va. 395, 23 L. R. A. 755.....	143
G.
Gaines v. Granger, 28 U. S. App. 342, 15 C. C. A. 233, 68 Fed. Rep. 69.....	633
Galey Bros. v. Kellerman, 123 Pa. 491.....	67
Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 29 S. W. 423.....	696
Gamble v. Cook (Mich.) 3 Det. L. N. 536, 64 N. W. 432.....	332, 333
v. Queens County Water Co. 123 N. Y. 31, 9 L. R. A. 627.....	52
Gandy v. Jubber, 5 Best & S. 78.....	619
Gardner, Re, 103 N. Y. 533, 37 Am. Rep. 708.....	534, 536
v. Barney ("Gardner v. The Collector") 12 U. S. 6 Wall. 449, 18 L. ed. 800.....	430
v. Connelly, 75 Iowa, 203.....	311
v. Thomas, 14 Johns. 134, 7 Am. Dec. 445.....	606
Garland, Ex parte, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 333, 13 L. ed. 395.....	354, 404
v. Wholebau, 30 Iowa, 371.....	468
Gates v. Green, 4 Paige, 355.....	556
v. Mack, 6 Cush. 613.....	330, 332
Gatlin v. Tarboro, 79 N. C. 119.....	490
Gay v. Parpart, 106 U. S. 673, 27 L. ed. 256.....	491
Gaylord Mfg. Co. v. Allen, 53 N. Y. 515.....	530
Gee v. McKillan, 14 Or. 203, 53 Am. Rep. 315.....	691
Geobrick v. State, 5 Iowa, 438.....	780
Gerard v. McCormick, 120 N. Y. 251, 14 L. R. A. 234.....	73
Gerhard v. Seekonk River Bridge Comrs. 15 R. I. 334.....	772
German Sav. Inst. v. De La Vergne Refrigerating Mach. Co. 17 O. C. A. 34, 70 Fed. Rep. 146.....	539
Getchell v. Benedict, 57 Iowa, 121.....	735

James v. State, 67 Ala. 84.....	787	Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Miller, 25 Mich. 279.....	236
v. Western Pennsylvania Nat. Gas Co., 146 Pa. 204.....	67	Lamar Ins. Co. v. Gulick, 102 Ill. 41.....	687
Judson v. Bessemer, 87 Ala. 240, 4 L. R. A. 742.....	544, 547	Lamb v. Gatlin, 2 Nev. & B. Eq. 37.....	691
Julia Bldg. Assn. v. Bell Teleph. Co. 88 Mo. 258, 57 Am. Rep. 396.....	874	Lanark v. Dougherty, 163 Ill. 163.....	213
Junction Railroad Case, 88 Pa. 628.....	688	Lancaster County Nat. Bank v. Moore, 78 Pa. 407, 21 Am. Rep. 24.....	277, 278
K.		Lancaster F. Ins. Co. v. Lenheim, 69 Pa. 497.....	616
Kansas v. Corrigan, 85 Mo. 67.....	687	Landell v. Hamilton, 175 Pa. 227.....	281
Kaufelt v. Bower, 7 Serg. & R. 64, 10 Am. Dec. 428.....	691-698	Lane v. Cotton, 1 Ld. Havm. 646.....	681
Kaw Life Assn. v. Lemke, 40 Kan. 661.....	479	v. Starkey, 20 Neb. 586.....	809
Kearley v. Duncan, 1 Head, 400, 73 Am. Dec. 179.....	827	Lange, Ex parte , 85 U. S. 13 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 572.....	393
Keeran v. Geraghty, 101 Ill. 26.....	502	Langworthy v. Green Twp. 95 Mich. 89.....	213
Keesee v. Civil Dis. Bd. of Edu. 6 Coldw. 180.....	722	Lanitz v. King, 98 Mo. 513.....	125
Keim v. Chicago, 46 Ill. App. 445.....	69	Lausing v. Smith, 8 Cow. 146.....	772
Kelley v. Hanibal & St. J. R. Co. 75 Mo. 126.....	365	La Pointe Supers. v. O'Malley, 47 Wis. 382.....	134
v. Milan, 127 U. S. 150, 32 L. ed. 82.....	490, 491	Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155.....	753
Kelly v. Davenport, 1 Browne (Pa.) 281.....	706	Lattimore v. Harsen, 14 Johns. 330.....	40
v. Rubio, 11 Or. 75.....	691	Lauderdale County v. Farnason, 7 Lea, 153.....	543
Kellogg, Ex parte , 8 Vt. 511.....	518	Lavery v. Woodward, 16 Iowa, 5.....	406
Kempton v. Saunders, 132 Mass. 468.....	381	Law v. People, Huck, 87 Ill. 335.....	399
Kendall v. Hamilton, L. R. 4 App. Cas. 504.....	390	Lawrence v. Davey, 23 Vt. 264.....	40
Kensfield v. Irwin, 53 Cal. 164.....	48	Lawrence Mfg. Co. v. Jaxessville Cotton Mills, 138 U. S. 552, 34 L. ed. 1005.....	490
Kenna v. Central P. R. Co. 101 Cal. 28.....	355	Lawton v. Steele, 119 N. Y. 241, 7 L. R. A. 134, 416.....	430
Kennedy v. Gibson, 75 U. S. 3 Wall. 505, 19 L. ed. 473.....	699	Leadley v. Evans, 2 Bing. 32.....	479
Kentucky U. R. Co. v. Gastneau, 88 Ky. 119.....	206	Leather Cloth Co. v. Lonsont, 29 L. J. Ch. N. S. 86.....	399
Kerr v. Merchants' Exchange Co. 3 Edw. Ch. 212.....	556	Leatherman v. Oliver, 151 Pa. 646.....	67
1. Rep. 48.....	421	Leavenworth County Comrs. v. Higginbotham, 17 Kan. 62.....	499
L. ed. 851.....	108	Leavitt v. Windsor Land & L. Co. 12 U. S. App. 198, 4 C. C. A. 425, 54 Fed. Rep. 439.....	530
109 N. Y. 231.....	387	Ledford v. Smith, 6 Bush, 132.....	399
p. 752, 13 C. C. o. 157 Mass. 7.....	495	Lee v. Lee, 66 How. Pr. 207.....	90
32 L. ed. 695, 3.....	108	Lee v. Clark, 20 Cal. 383.....	343
.....	673	Legg v. Annapolis, 42 Md. 203.....	459
.....	285	v. Britton, 64 Vt. 632.....	601
rena, 101 N. Y.	213	Leggett v. Great Northern R. Co. L. R. 1 Q. B. Div. 509.....	801
.....	772	Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. McKean, 90 Pa. 122, 25 Am. Rep. 444.....	599
Kingsley v. Kingsley, 39 Cal. 665.....	606	Lehigh Water Co.'s Appeal, 108 Pa. 515.....	93, 569, 571, 573
Kingston Mut. Ins. Co. v. Clark, 83 Barb. 196.....	479	Lehman v. Brooklyn Citr R. Co. 47 Hun, 355.....	731
Kipp v. Delamater, 68 How. Pr. 182.....	64	v. Glenn, 87 Ala. 618.....	608
Kirby v. Harrison, 2 Ohio St. 333, 69 Am. Dec. 79.....	285	Leighton v. Stuart, 19 Neb. 546.....	333
19 Am.	581	Leing v. Smart, 11 Humph. 306.....	527, 523
.....	811	Leitzner v. Columbia Water Power Co. (S. C.) 34 L. R. A. 215.....	222
.....	514, 515	Lemmon v. People, 20 N. Y. 608.....	549
transfer.....	813	Lemon v. Chancellor, 68 Mo. 353, 30 Am. Rep. 790.....	496
68 U. S.	374	Lewis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 88 Md. 568, 17 Am. Rep. 521.....	143
21.....	305	v. Henderson, 22 Or. 543.....	661
35 U. S.	102	v. Langdon, 7 Sim. 422.....	391
.....	457	v. New York Sleeping Car Co. 143 Mass. 267, 58 Am. Rep. 135.....	494
.....	184	v. Shreveport, 108 U. S. 233, 27 L. ed. 729.....	491
13 N. Y.	612	v. Widber, 99 Cal. 412.....	528
.....	72, 74	Libby v. Brown, 78 Me. 492.....	582
.....	285	Libby, McN. & L. v. Scherman, 146 Ill. 640.....	507
.....	672	License Tax Cases, 73 U. S. 5 Wall. 472, 18 L. ed. 601.....	101
.....	489	Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Mechanics' F. Ins. Co. 7 Wend. 81.....	599
46.....	580	Life Assn. of America v. Rundle ("Relfe v. Rundle"), 103 U. S. 235, 26 L. ed. 339.....	703
A. 476.....	90	Lille v. Dunbar, 52 Wis. 198.....	823
1. (Ind.).....	171	Lincoln v. Buckmaster, 32 Vt. 663.....	377
.....	143	v. Grant, 38 Neb. 369.....	335, 349
.....	344	v. Haugan, 45 Minn. 451.....	499
L.		v. Smith, 28 Neb. 762.....	554
Labaree v. Klosterman, 33 Neb. 150.....	655	Lindsey v. Leighton, 150 Mass. 235.....	532, 534
Lackland v. North Missouri R. Co. 31 Mo. 180.....	188	Linthicum v. Ray, 78 U. S. 9 Wall. 241, 19 L. ed. 667.....	554
Lacy v. Johnson, 58 Wis. 422.....	823	Little, Re, 1 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 341.....	380, 383
Lafayette, M. & R. R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 228.....	780	Littler v. Smiley, 9 Ind. 116.....	584
Lake v. Lake, 18 Nev. 363.....	90	Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 457, 32 L. ed. 797.....	497, 609
v. Lake, 17 Nev. 230.....	90	Liverpool Waterworks Co. v. Atkinson, 6 East, 507.....	479
Lake County Comrs. v. Graham, 130 U. S. 674, 32 L. ed. 1035.....	491	Livingston County v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 407, 25 L. ed. 1015.....	139
v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 32 L. ed. 1000.....	590, 540	Lloyd v. Fulton, 91 U. S. 479, 23 L. ed. 363.....	624
Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Hemmons, 140 Ill. 546.....	607	Loague v. Memphis & C. R. Co. 91 Tenn. 459.....	444
34 L. R. A.		Lockwood v. Wabash R. Co. 122 Mo. 86, 24 L. R. A. 516.....	374
		Lofdahl v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. R. Co., 58 Wis. 421.....	143
		Loftus v. Union Ferry Co. 84 N. Y. 455, 33 Am. Rep. 533.....	127
		Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 253, 36 L. ed. 429.....	517
		Long v. Burke, 2 Bush, 90.....	306
		v. Duluth, 49 Minn. 230.....	524, 526
		v. State, 23 Neb. 33.....	665

Lord Arlington v. Merricke, 3 Wms. Saund. 411	479	Magee v. Badger, 34 N. Y. 249, 90 Am. Dec. 691, 72, 74	74
Los Angeles v. Cohn, 101 Cal. 373	736	Mager v. Grima, 49 U. S. 8 How. 490, 12 L. ed. 1168	244
Lothrop v. Tilden, 8 Cush. 375	360, 362	Mabone v. Mabone, 19 Cal. 626, 81 Am. Dec. 91	456
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Brooks, 88 Ky. 129	206	Malze v. State, 4 Ind. 342	780
v. Davidson County Ct. 1 Sneed, 637, 68	260	Maltus v. Shields, 2 Met. (Ky.) 553	198
v. Kenley, 32 Tenn. 206	386	Manderson v. Commercial Bank, 28 Pa. 379	95
v. Pitt, 91 Tenn. 98	445	Maney v. State, 6 Lea. 231	672
Louisville, C. & L. R. Co. v. Hedger, 9 Bush, 645,	689	Manhattan Gaslight Co. v. Ely, 39 Barb. 174	582
15 Am. Rep. 740	689	Manlikee v. Beard, 35 Ky. 20	168
Louisville, N. A. & C. B. Co. v. Berkey, 136 Ind.	295	Manley v. Emilen, 40 Kan. 655	524
181	295	Manston v. Mointosh, 58 Minn. 525, 36 L. R. A.	850
v. Costello, 9 Ind. App. 462	143	Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Continental	585
v. Frawley, 110 Ind. 18	236	Bank, 148 Mass. 553, 2 L. R. A. 609	585
v. Goodykoontz, 139 Ind. 111	142	Marl v. Connecticut F. Ins. Co. 95 Ga. 604, 30 L.	850
v. Hart, 119 Ind. 273, 4 L. R. A. 549	236	R. A. 885	338
v. Schmidt, 134 Ind. 16	236	Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233, 57 Am. Rep. 825	676
v. Sears, 11 Ind. App. 654	768	Marion County Comrs. v. Harvey County	676
v. Wood, 113 Ind. 543	213	v. Rizzo, 24 Kan. 255	676
Louisville, St. L. & T. R. Co. v. Taylor, 98 Ky. 241	304	Marks v. Purdue University, 37 Ind. 155, 66	126
Lovegrove v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. 16 C. B.	126	Ind. 298	126
N. S. 669	126	Marr v. Enloe, 1 Yerg. 432	723
Loveace v. Travelers' Protective Assn. 126 Mo.	302	v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 85 Tenn. 629, 493	497
104, 30 L. R. A. 309	302	Marsh v. Burroughs, 1 Woods, 463	696
Lowell v. Spaulding (Mass.) 50 Am. Dec. 780, note	682	v. Fulton County Supers. 77 U. S. 10 Wall.	491
Lower v. Lower, 48 Iowa, 525	748	678, 19 L. ed. 1040	753
Lowry v. Inman, 48 N. Y. 119	767	Marshall v. Sherman, 148 N. Y. 9, 34 L. R. A. 757	819
v. Polk County, 51 Iowa, 50, 38 Am. Rep.	682	Marston v. Humes, 3 Wash. 267	347
114	768	Martin v. Hunter, 14 U. S. 1 Wheat. 304, 4 L. ed.	834
Ludlow v. Van Rensselaer, 1 Johns. 95	754	v. Richards, 155 Mass. 381	245
Luehrman v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 2	668	v. United States, 2 T. B. Mon. 90, 15 Am.	367
Lea, 425	668	Dec. 129	744
Luzerne Water Co. v. Toby Creek Water Co.	572	Martindale v. Parsons, 96 Ind. 174	367
148 Pa. 568	572	Martinton v. Fairbanks, 112 U. S. 670, 23 L. ed.	682
Lycoming F. Ins. Co. v. Langley, 62 Md. 211, 607	668	682	730
Lynch v. Chase, 58 Kan. 397	676	Massey v. Allen ("Allen v. Massey") 84 U. S. 17	624
Lyon v. Fishmongers' Co. L. R. 1 App. Cas. 642	555	Wall 351, 21 L. ed. 542	458
Lytle v. Bass, 7 Coldw. 308	827-828	Masten v. Masten, 15 N. H. 159	578
M		Mathews v. Alexandria, 68 Mo. 119, 30 Am.	481
MacAndrews' Case, 17 C. B. 3	467	Rep. 776	779
McBean v. Chandler, 9 Heisk. 348, 24 Am. Rep.	733	Mathis v. State, 31 Fla. 291	47
308	733	Matlock v. Hawkins, 98 Ind. 225	378
McCaig v. Erie R. Co. 8 Hun. 569	126	Mattews v. Shawnee County Comrs. 34 Kan.	127
McCandlish v. Keen, 13 Gratt. 615	307	606	706
McCarthy v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 18 Kan.	808	Matthieson v. McMahon, 38 N. J. L. 532	57
46, 28 Am. Rep. 742	808	Maximilian v. New York, 62 N. Y. 140, 20 Am.	832
McCauley v. Workman's Bldg. & S. Assn. 97	208	Rep. 468	226
Tenn.	208	May v. Black, 77 Wis. 101	752, 754, 768
McChurg's Appeal, 58 Pa. 51	391	Mayor v. Coffin, 80 N. Y. 312	57
McConihe v. State, McMurray, 17 Fla. 226	780	Maywood v. Logan, 73 Mich. 138	532
McCormick, Re, 24 Wis. 462, 1 Am. Rep. 197	515	Mead v. Hughes, 15 Ala. 148, 30 Am. Dec. 128, 226	236
McCortle v. Bates, 29 Ohio St. 419	845	Meeker v. Winthrop Iron Co. 17 Fed. Rep. 48	307
McCowan v. Whitesides, 31 Ind. 235	773	Meira v. Dimock, 6 Conn. 458	808
McCoy v. Brennan, 61 Mich. 362	606	Meister v. Moore, 96 U. S. 73, 24 L. ed. 826	735
v. Curtice, 9 Wend. 17, 24 Am. Dec. 115	540	Memphis v. Memphis City Bank, 91 Tenn. 568	728, 730
McCraney v. McCraney, 5 Iowa, 232, 68 Am.	136	v. Union & P. Bank, 91 Tenn. 560	728
Dec. 702	608	Menges v. Albany, 56 N. Y. 374	420
McCrinmon v. Linton, 4 Colo. App. 430	480	Menier v. Hoopers' Teleg. Works, L. R. 9 Ch.	88
McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 424	480	350	490
McDaniel v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 24 Iowa,	407, 680	Meraale v. Down, 64 Wis. 323	744
416	680	Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Folsom, 85 U. S. 18	606
v. King, 5 Cush. 460	307	Wall 277, 21 L. ed. 827	527
McDonald v. Carnes, 30 Ala. 147	490	Merchants' Bank v. Chandler, 19 Wis. 437	241
v. Elyton Land Co. 78 Ala. 363	746	Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago,	136
v. State, 80 Wis. 407	207	B. & Q. R. Co. 70 Iowa, 105	684
McDonough v. Phelps, 15 How. Pr. 372	828	Merriam's Estate, 141 N. Y. 479	684
Mace v. Reed, 30 Wis. 440	527	Merrick v. Amherst, 12 Allen. 500	678
McFarlane v. Moore, 1 Overt. 174, 3 Am. Dec. 762	773	Merrill v. Grinnell, 80 N. Y. 594	714
McGavock v. Omaha, 40 Neb. 64	608	v. Monticello, 138 U. S. 673, 34 L. ed. 1069	684
McGee's Appeal, 114 Pa. 470	468	Merriman v. Munson, 134 Pa. 114	230
McGhinney v. Fidelity & C. Co. 80 Me. 261	673	Merritt v. Earle, 20 N. Y. 150, 36 Am. Dec. 232	684
McGregor v. Gardner, 16 Iowa, 538	502	Metcalf v. Seattle, 1 Wash. 302	219
McGuire v. State, 6 Bart. 621	127	Methodist Church v. Remington, 1 Watts, 219,	579
McGunnigle v. McKee, 77 Pa. 81, 18 Am. Rep. 428	126	26 Am. Dec. 61	70
McKenna v. St. Louis, 6 Mo. App. 320	684	Methvin v. Methvin, 60 Am. Dec. 675	420
McKinzie v. Mathews, 59 Mo. 99	827	Metropolitan R. Co. v. Snashall, 3 App. D. C. 420	338
Macklin v. New Jersey S. B. Co. 7 Abb. Pr. N.	608	v. Shamp, 26 Neb. 729	82
S. 229	684	v. Staten Island R. Co. 7 N. Y. S. R. 245	700
Mackreth v. Symmons, 15 Ves. Jr. 329, 1 Lead.	608	Michigan C. R. Co. v. Myrick ("Myrick v.	430
Cas. in Eq. 447	308, 692	Michigan C. R. Co.") 107 U. S. 102, 27	176
McLaughlin v. Charlotte & S. C. R. Co. 5 Rich.	221	L. ed. 325	725
L. 584	827	Middletown, Re, 32 N. Y. 196	584
McLean v. State, 8 Heisk. 22	57	Miller v. Campbell, 140 N. Y. 457	608
McMahon v. Savannah, 66 Ga. 217, 43 Am. Rep.	556	v. Consolidation Bank, 48 Pa. 514, 38 Am.	514
65	628	Dec. 475	515
McMillan v. Solomon, 42 Ala. 358, 94 Am. Dec.	496	v. Dunn, 72 Cal. 462	608
654	214	v. Lash, 86 N. C. 51	608
McMurray v. Brown, 91 U. S. 296, 23 L. ed. 324	524	v. Pennoyer, 23 Or. 264	608
McPheeters v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 45 Mo. 22	524	Milliken v. Whitehouse, 49 Mo. 527	514
McQuigan v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 129 N. Y.	524	Mills, Re, 135 U. S. 253, 34 L. ed. 108	515
50, 14 L. R. A. 486	524	v. Com. 13 Pa. 631	608
Madden v. Lancaster County, 27 U. S. App. 528,	524	v. Duryee, 11 U. S. 7 Cranch, 481, 3 L. ed.	608
12 C. C. A. 568, 66 Fed. Rep. 188	524	411	608
34 L. R. A.

Mills v. Gleason, 11 Wis. 470, 73 Am. Dec. 781.....	184	National Bank v. Dillingham, 147 N. Y. 608.....	754, 754, 754, 754
Milvale, Re , 163 Pa. 374.....	569, 571, 572	National Fertilizer Co. v. Lambert, 49 Fed. Rep. 458.....	232
Miltenberger v. Logansport, C. & S. W. R. Co. 106 U. S. 224, 27 L. ed. 117.....	305	National L. Ins. Co. v. Huron Bd. of Edu. 27 U. S. App. 244, 10 C. C. A. 687, 42 Fed. Rep. 778.....	531
Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 494, 23 L. ed. 376.....	496	National State Bank v. Marshall Independent Dist. 89 Iowa, 490.....	539
Mims v. State, 36 Minn. 498.....	515	National Teleph. Mfg. Co. v. Du Bois, 145 Mass. 117, 30 L. R. A. 623.....	508
Minneapolis Mut. F. Ins. Co., Re , 49 Minn. 291.....	708	National Tube Works Co. v. Ballou, 148 U. S. 517, 38 L. ed. 1070.....	755, 755
Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co. v. Langdon, 44 Minn. 27.....	741	v. Chamberlain, 5 Dak. 54.....	531
.....	534	National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City, 10 C. C. A. 658, 42 Fed. Rep. 854, 27 U. S. App. 165, 37 L. R. A. 827.....	530
.....	714, 716	Needham v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 28 Vt. 300.....	501
.....	253.....	v. San Francisco & S. J. R. Co. 87 Cal. 409.....	558
.....	117	Nelson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 30 Minn. 74.....	138
.....	A. 129 689	v. Haywood County, 91 Tenn. 506.....	426
.....	143	v. Jenkins, 42 Neb. 183.....	117
.....	327, 328	v. Liverpool Brewery Co. L. R. 2 C. P. Div. 311.....	619, 634
.....	514	Neville v. Wilkinson, 1 Bro. Ch. 545.....	156
.....	26 L. 620	New v. Walker, 106 Ind. 365, 58 Am. Rep. 40.....	508
.....	27 L. 514	New Albany v. Meekin, 54 Am. Dec. 523.....	511
.....	819	Newell v. Keith, 11 Vt. 214.....	532
.....	157, 158	New Haven Horse Nail Co. v. Linden Spring Co. 142 Mass. 849.....	708
.....	28.....	Newman, Ex parte , 9 Cal. 519.....	109
.....	489	v. Emporia, 33 Kan. 456.....	587
.....	544, 547	New Orleans v. Great Southern Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 40 La. Ann. 41.....	101, 527
.....	491, 16	New Orleans Draining Co. Case, 11 La. Ann. 388.....	722
.....	623	New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana L. & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516.....	109
.....	388	525, 531
.....	754, 755	N.....	53
.....	Rep. 301	N.....	208
.....	C. R. 805	N.....	523
.....	550	N.....	592
.....	752, 753	N.....	520
Morris v. Missouri P. R. Co. 78 Tex. 17, 9 L. R. A. 349.....	508	N.....	424, 429
v. Tuttle, 72 N. Y. 575.....	84	N.....	396
Morrison v. Morrison, 138 Mass. 310.....	458	N.....	552
v. Rossignol, 6 Cal. 65.....	273	N.....	520
Morse Twist Drill & Mach. Co. v. Morse, 108 Mass. 73, 4 Am. Rep. 518.....	391	N.....	416, 424
Morton v. Comptroller General, 4 S. C. N. S. 483.....	471	N.....	396
Moynihan v. Allen, 162 Mass. 373.....	834	N.....	552
Mulhede v. Brooklyn C. R. Co. 30 N. Y. 370.....	213	N.....	125
Mullen v. St. John, 57 N. Y. 567, 15 Am. Rep. 580.....	564	N.....	527
Munger v. Jacobson, 99 Ill. 329.....	740	N.....	754, 754
Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 34 L. ed. 77.....	600	N.....	143
Monro v. Pacific Coast Dredging & Reclamation Co. 84 Cal. 515.....	808	N.....	280
Munroe v. Perkins, 9 Pick. 296, 20 Am. Dec. 475.....	39	N.....	100
Murphy v. State, 16 Neb. 363.....	356	N.....	439
Murray v. Lardner, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 181, 17 L. ed. 869.....	74	N.....	744
Murphy v. Neff, 49 U. S. 6 How. 414, 13 L. ed. 1135.....	607	N.....	238
Murtaugh v. St. Louis, 44 Mo. 479.....	187	N.....	431
Mutual F. Ins. Co. v. Phoenix Furniture Co. (Mich.) 84 L. R. A. 604.....	702	N.....	390
Munsarelli v. Hulshizer, 163 Pa. 646.....	230	N.....	390
Musky v. Shattuck, 1 Denio, 238.....	681	N.....	390
Myer v. Pleasant, 41 La. Ann. 645.....	512	N.....	456
Myers v. Myers, 41 Barb. 114.....	458	N.....	491
v. Stafford, 114 N. C. 234.....	392	N.....	534
v. State, 1 Conn. 502.....	739	N.....	393
Mynning v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. 67 Mich. 677.....	344
N.
Nace v. Boyer, 30 Pa. 99.....	714	Oakfield Paving Co. v. Hilton, 89 Cal. 479.....	429
Nash v. Minneapolis Mill Co. 24 Minn. 501, 51 Am. ep. 349.....	593	Oates v. First Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 238, 25 L. ed. 580.....	700
Nashville v. Berry, 2 Tenn. Legal Rep. 26.....	731	O'Brien v. McGlinchey, 68 Me. 532.....	356
Nashville & K. R. Co. v. Wilson County, 39 Tenn. 608.....	728	O'Connor v. Illinois C. R. Co. 44 La. Ann. 339.....	514
Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 101, 32 L. ed. 864, 2 Intern. Com. Rep. 238.....	108	O'Dea v. O'Dea, 81 Hun, 441.....	69
v. Hughes, 94 Tenn. 450.....	671	Odiorne's Appeal, 54 Pa. 175, 38 Am. Dec. 523.....	168
Nashville L. Ins. Co. v. Mathews, 8 Lea, 508.....	827	O'Donohue v. Hendrix, 17 Neb. 287.....	337
Nason v. Directors of Poor, 128 Pa. 445.....	682	Ogden v. Hatry, 145 Pa. 640.....	67
v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 23 U. S. App. 220, 9 C. C. A. 685, 61 Fed. Rep. 605, 24 L. R. A. 699.....	396	Oglesby v. Attribl, 105 U. S. 605, 26 L. ed. 1185.....	84
Nathan v. Louisiana, 49 U. S. 6 How. 73, 13 L. ed. 968.....	301	Ogletree v. Dozier, 59 Ga. 300.....	255
84 L. R. A.		O'Hara v. Wells, 14 Neb. 408.....	354
		Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Collarn, 73 Ind. 261, 38 Am. Rep. 134.....	143
		O'Laughlin v. Dubuque, 43 Iowa, 541.....	236
		Olcott v. Fond du Lac County Supers. 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 673, 21 L. ed. 363.....	126

Old Nat. Bank v. German-American Nat. Bank, 155 U. S. 532, 39 L. ed. 253	535	People v.	801	812
Omaha Bridge Cases, 10 U. S. App. 96, 2 C. C. A. 174, 51 Fed. Rep. 309	490, 521	People v.	802	854
Omaha Horse R. Co. v. Cable Tramway Co. 80 Fed. Rep. 324	524	People v.	803	426
O'Malley v. Missouri P. R. Co. 118 Mo. 319	125	People v.	804	397
Omro Supers. v. Kaimo, 39 Wis. 468	639	People v.	805	427
Opening Linwood Place, Re (Minn.) 87 N. W. 77	781	People v.	806	235
Opening of Berks Street, Re, 12 W. N. C. 10	597	People v.	807	513
Opinion of the Justices, 6 Oush. 573	99	People v.	808	489
Opinion of the Justices, 35 N. H. 379, 33 N. H. 423	439	People v.	809	429
Oregon Steam N. Wall. 6	67 U. S. 20	People v.	810	404
Ornelas v. Ruiz, 3d. 787	517	People v.	811	294
Osborn v. Bank Wheat.	22 U. S. 9	People v.	812	181
Osborne v. O'Re	40	People v.	813	811
Osborne County	5 Kan. 397	People v.	814	490
Osborn v. Staley	1. Rep. 640	People v.	815	490
Owen v. Louisville	1y. 623	People v.	816	490
P.		People v.	817	490
Padfield v. Padfield, 93 Ill. 210, 73 Ill. 232, 75 Ill. 12	58	People v.	818	490
Page v.	230	People v.	819	490
Paine v.	49	People v.	820	490
Paine v.	41	People v.	821	490
Pape v.	367	People v.	822	490
Parbau v.	4. Jus.	People v.	823	490
Parker v.	146 Ill.	People v.	824	490
Parker v.	773	People v.	825	490
Parker v.	530	People v.	826	490
Parker v.	10	People v.	827	490
Parker v.	515, 517	People v.	828	490
Parker v.	380-382	People v.	829	490
Parker v.	695, 699	People v.	830	490
Parker v.	517	People v.	831	490
Parrot v.	307	People v.	832	490
Pascoe v.	99	People v.	833	490
Passen v.	3 L. ed.	People v.	834	490
Patten v. Central R. & B. Co. 85 Ga. 658	107	People v.	835	490
Patterson v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 77 Wis. 218	143	People v.	836	490
Patten v. Smith, 4 Conn. 490, 10 Am. Dec. 168	207	People v.	837	490
Patterson v. Bloomer, 35 Conn. 57, 95 Am. Dec. 218	715	People v.	838	490
Patterson v.	361	People v.	839	490
Patterson v.	307	People v.	840	490
Patterson v.	71	People v.	841	490
Patterson v.	112 Ill. 196, 106 U. S. 519, 27 L. ed. 265	People v.	842	490
Patterson v.	754, 755, 766	People v.	843	490
Patterson v.	740	People v.	844	490
Patterson v.	14 Lea.	People v.	845	490
Paul v. Virginia, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 367	506, 507, 509	People v.	846	490
Paxon v. Brown, 27 U. S. App. 49, 10 C. C. A. 125, 61 Fed. Rep. 374	531, 422	People v.	847	490
Payne v. Avery, 21 Mich. 524	307	People v.	848	490
Pearce v. Richard, 15 R. L. 142	502	People v.	849	490
Pearson v. Brunswick County Supers. 91 Va. 284	145	People v.	850	490
Pease v. Kelly, 8 Or. 417	491	People v.	851	490
Pease v.	749	People v.	852	490
Peck v. Miller, 39 Mich. 594	754, 766	People v.	853	490
Peck v.	40	People v.	854	490
Peck v.	542	People v.	855	490
Peck v.	623	People v.	856	490
Peck v.	103	People v.	857	490
Peck v.	600	People v.	858	490
Peck v.	375	People v.	859	490
Peck v.	574	People v.	860	490
Peck v.	562	People v.	861	490
Peck v.	219	People v.	862	490
Peck v.	96	People v.	863	490
Peck v.	255	People v.	864	490
Peck v.	397	People v.	865	490
Peck v.	429	People v.	866	490
Peck v.	489	People v.	867	490
Peck v.	245	People v.	868	490
Peck v.	489	People v.	869	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	870	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	871	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	872	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	873	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	874	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	875	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	876	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	877	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	878	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	879	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	880	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	881	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	882	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	883	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	884	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	885	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	886	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	887	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	888	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	889	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	890	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	891	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	892	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	893	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	894	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	895	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	896	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	897	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	898	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	899	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	900	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	901	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	902	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	903	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	904	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	905	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	906	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	907	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	908	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	909	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	910	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	911	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	912	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	913	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	914	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	915	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	916	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	917	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	918	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	919	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	920	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	921	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	922	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	923	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	924	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	925	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	926	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	927	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	928	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	929	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	930	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	931	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	932	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	933	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	934	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	935	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	936	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	937	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	938	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	939	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	940	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	941	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	942	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	943	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	944	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	945	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	946	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	947	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	948	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	949	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	950	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	951	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	952	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	953	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	954	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	955	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	956	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	957	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	958	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	959	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	960	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	961	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	962	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	963	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	964	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	965	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	966	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	967	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	968	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	969	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	970	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	971	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	972	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	973	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	974	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	975	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	976	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	977	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	978	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	979	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	980	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	981	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	982	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	983	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	984	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	985	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	986	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	987	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	988	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	989	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	990	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	991	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	992	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	993	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	994	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	995	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	996	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	997	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	998	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	999	490
Peck v.	490	People v.	1000	490

Beggs v. Hargo , 98 Tenn. 85.....	304	Scotton v. Pegg , 8 Hurlst. & N. 206.....	44
v. Merrill , 55 Kan. 787.....	676	Scott v. Cotton , 91 Ala. 623.....	225, 227
v. Rogers , 149 Mass. 440.....	40	v. Detroit Young Men's Soc. , 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 119.....	540
Boggenkamp v. Hargreaves , 89 Neb. 544.....	865	v. Scott , 1 Cox. Ct. Cas. 878.....	160
Boland v. Logan , 18 Ala. 307.....	225	Scott County v. Ring , 29 Minn. 308.....	479
Bollins v. Lake County , 34 Fed. Rep. 845.....	889	Scovill v. Thayer , 105 U. S. 143, 26 L. ed. 968.....	875
Bonnie v. Chauncey , 129 N. Y. 574, 14 L. R. A. 712.....	176	Serantom School Dist.'s Appeal , 113 Pa. 178.....	780
Bonnie's Estate , 127 N. Y. 80, 13 L. R. A. 401.....	233, 237, 243, 246	Seamans v. Zimmerman , 91 Iowa, 363.....	708
Boschmeier v. Roesele , 54 N. Y. 303.....	250		125, 128
Boswell v. Prior , 2 Salk. 480.....	619		381
Boss v. Adams , 13 Bush. 870.....	806		712, 716
v. Daveport , 66 Iowa, 548.....	210		450
v. Davis , 97 Ind. 79.....	809		211
v. Georgia, C. & N. R. Co. , 89 S. C. 453.....	221		845
v. Ross , L. R. 1 Prob. & Div. 734.....	458		513
v. Wigg , 34 Hun. 192.....	795		508
Boss's Case , 2 Pick. 165.....	408		747
Bousillon v. Bousillon , L. R. 14 Ch. Div. 851.....	890		44
Rowan v. Runnels , 46 U. S. 5 How. 124, 12 L. ed. 25.....	896		510
Rowell v. Williams , 29 Iowa, 210.....	210		396
Rowley v. Empire Ins. Co. , 86 N. Y. 563.....	800		190
Rumsey v. New York & N. E. R. Co. , 189 N. Y. 88.....	489		240
Rush v. Coal Bldg. Min. Co. , 131 Ind. 135.....	143		17, 730
Russell v. Com. , 7 Serg. & R. 489.....	515		871, 873
v. La Roque , 18 Ala. 149, 151.....	342, 344		314
Russell's Appeal , 75 Pa. 279.....	714		108
Russellville , Ex parte , 85 Ala. 19.....	850		117
Ryan v. Lynch , 66 Ill. 160.....	489		850
			143
			806
			342
			754, 768
			880
			455
			268
			714
			726
			726
			84
			608
			148, 850
			804 213, 214
			125
			128
			557
			867
			745
			540, 547
			608
			798
			107, 222, 500, 508
			808
			53
			587
			772
			211
			124
			396
			211
			775
			125
			754, 769
			67
			506
			627, 820
			177, 570
			855
			56
			311
			585
			143
			497
			489
			623
			517
			206
			486
			397
			278
			614
			771

Somers v. Somers, 89 Kan. 129.....	117	State v. Winkelmeier, 35 Mo. 108.....	299
Somerset Potters' Works v. Minot, 10 Cush. 598	389	v. Wordin, 56 Conn. 216.....	222
Soon Hing v. Crowley, 118 U. S. 708, 28 L. ed.	109	v. Worthingham, 23 Minn. 528.....	397, 399
1145.....	545	State, ex rel. Attorney General, v. Boyd, 19
Soper v. Henry County, 25 Iowa, 284.....	140	Nev. 48.....	604
South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Wood, 66 Ala. 167,	140	Attorney General, v. Francis, 28 Kan. 724	459
41 Am. Rep. 749.....	280	Attorney General, v. Hagood, 13 S. C. 48.	490
South Bend v. Lewis, 88 Ind. 512.....	694	Attorney General, v. Mead, 71 Mo. 206 490, 490	49
South Branch Lumber Co. v. Ott, 143 U. S. 822,	140	Attorney General, v. Phillips 30 Fla. 579.	781
35 L. ed. 1136.....	822	Baker, v. Sullivan, 62 Minn. 223.....	125
Southern Exp. Co. v. Armistead, 50 Ala. 350.....	728	Baraboo, v. Sauk County Supers. 70 Wis.	834
Southern Oil Works v. Blackford, 14 Lea, 857.....	490	485.....	136
South Nashville Street R. Co. v. Morrow, 87	490	Basha, v. Boyce, 73 Md. 409.....	86
Tenn. 403, 2 L. R. A. 868.....	490	Bell, v. St. Louis Club, 125 Mo. 303, 25 L. R.	136
South Ottawa v. Perkins, 24 U. S. 280, 24 L. ed.	490	A. 573.....	527
154.....	490	Board of Edu., v. Haben, 23 Wis. 600.....	527
Southwark Bank v. Com. 25 Pa. 443.....	490	Butler, v. Passaic, 44 N. J. L. 171.....	527
Southworth v. Palmyra & J. R. Co. 2 Mich. 287	490	Ooogam, v. Harbour, 53 Conn. 76, 55 Am.	527
.....	471, 490	Rep. 65.....	527
.....	527	Cope, v. Foraker, 46 Ohio St. 677, 4 L. R.	260, 261
ec. 571.....	490	A. 498.....	54 N.
il.....	96	527
R. A.....	818	H. Co.....	309
.....	345	312
R. A.....	772, 773	778
.....	181	780
.....	490	A. 65.....	420
A. 419.....	130	490
.....	781	Neb.....	200, 201
.....	254	772, 773
.....	129	Kean, v. Elizabeth, 54 N. J. L. 463.....	377
.....	181	Laclede Gaslight Co., v. Murphy, 130 Mo.	87
.....	854	10, 81 L. R. A. 798.....	841
.....	847	Lamar, v. Dillon, 22 Fla. 545, 23 L. R. A.	307
.....	180	124.....	820
.....	489	Ledger Pub. Co., v. Gloyd, 14 Wash. 5.....	135
.....	676	Lincoln, v. Babcock, 19 Neb. 230.....	48
.....	729, 731	McCarty, v. Montgomery County Comra.	789
.....	181	26 Ind. 523.....	429
.....	854	McCurdy, v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 664, 9 Am.	736
.....	373	Rep. 622.....	134
.....	181	McGee, v. Gardner, 8 S. D. 558.....	780
.....	181	Minneapolis, v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 38	606
.....	103, 104	Minn. 248.....	326
.....	180	Minnesota R. Constr. Co., v. Hastings, 24	499
.....	498, 4	Minn. 78.....	134
.....	272.....	Mylrea, v. Janesville Water Power Co. 22	736
.....	856	Wis 493, 32 L. R. A. 391.....	134
ec. 73.....	255	Park, v. Portage County Supers. 24 Wis.	780
.....	255	49.....	606
.....	787	Paul, v. Gloucester County Circuit Ct.	326
.....	180	Judge, 50 N. J. L. 565, 1 L. R. A. 86.....	499
.....	854	Peck, v. Bowden, 18 Fla. 17.....	134
.....	788	Pigott, v. Benton, 13 Mont. 308.....	780
.....	103	Poole, v. Robinson, 20 Neb. 96.....	606
.....	180	Priest, v. Regents of Wis. University, 54	134
.....	190	Wis. 170.....	525, 530
.....	69	Read, v. Atlantic City, 49 N. J. L. 556.....	843
.....	527	Reed, v. Marion County Comra. 21 Kan.	315
.....	180	419.....	843
.....	102	Russell, v. Tucker (Mont.) 84 L. R. A. 315.	91
.....	284	Shackleton, v. Guttenburg, 30 N. J. L. 680	499
.....	853	Shrader, v. Phillips, 22 Fla. 408.....	348
.....	738	Stevenson, v. Tudy, 19 Nev. 391.....	606
.....	676	Sturdevant, v. Allen (Neb.) 62 N. W. 35.....	109
ec. 636.....	471, 490	The Township, v. Powell, 67 Mo. 303, 29	612
.....	ec. 301 353	Am. Rep. 512.....	102
ec. 566.....	255	Tol, v. French (Mont.) 30 L. R. A. 415.....	527
.....	180	Van Vorst, v. Jersey City, 27 N. J. L. 493.	730
.....	134	Warner, v. Hoagland, 51 N. J. L. 62.....	48
.....	180	Watson, v. Cobb, 3 Kan. 32.....	815, 816, 817
.....	136	Woody, v. Rotwitz (Mont.) 45 Pac. 370	603
ec. 255.....	180	479
ec. 31.....	460	Wyandot County, v. Harper, 4 Ohio St.	296
.....	489	607, 67 Am. Dec. 383.....	490
ec. 299.....	102	State Treasurer v. Mann, 24 Vt. 571, 30 Am.	350
ec. 549.....	190	Dec. 698.....	532
.....	515	Stayner v. Joyce, 120 Ind. 99.....	68
.....	671	Steckert v. East Saginaw, 22 Mich. 104.....	606
.....	254	Steele v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 47 Fed. Rep. 803.....	109
.....	515	Stenberg v. Wilcox (Tenn.) 34 L. R. A. 615.....	612
.....	393	Stephen's Appeal, 87 Pa. 203.....	255
.....	211	Stephens v. Fox, 58 N. Y. 313.....	843
.....	776	v. Stephens, 51 Ind. 543.....	34
.....	789	Steppe v. Alter, 48 La. Ann. 363.....	722
.....	102	Sterling v. Drake, 29 Ohio St. 457, 23 Am. Rep.	578
ec. 258.....	788	702.....	606, 607
.....	213	Sterling School Furniture Co. v. Harvey, 45	40
.....	543, 669, 722	Iowa, 466.....
		Stevens, R. 5 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 112.....
		Stewart v. Boston & P. R. Co. 146 Mass. 605
		v. Brown, 37 N. Y. 350, 93 Am. Dec. 578
		v. Keteltas, 36 N. Y. 338.....

Stewart v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 9 Lea, 304.....	527, 531
v. Stewart, 5 Conn. 516.....	52
Stewart's Appeal, 59 Pa. 413.....	579
Stilson v. Gibbs, 53 Mich. 230.....	207
Stiles v. Dunnevan MBS. Opin.....	199
Stiver v. Staver, 3 Ohio, 19.....	343, 345
Stockwell v. Hunter, 11 Met. 443, 45 Am. Dec. 220.....	555, 556
Story v. Furman, 25 N. Y. 214.....	740
Strason v. Montgomery, 32 Wis. 53.....	523
Stratton Claimants v. Morris Claimants, 59 Tenn. 497, 511, 13 L. R. A. 70.....	443, 723
Strohen v. Franklin Sav. Fund & L. Assn. 115 Pa. 273.....	304
Stewart v. Havana, 17 Neb. 211.....	214
v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 136, 30 Am. Rep. 399...	43
Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Illinois Iron & Bolt Co. 42 Fed. Rep. 52.....	385
Summer v. Hicks, 97 U. S. 2 Black, 532, 17 L. ed. 355.....	624
Susquehanna Canal Co. v. Bonham, 9 Watts & S. 27, 43 Am. Dec. 415.....	597
Sutter v. First Reformed Dutch Church, 43 Pa. 613.....	171
Sutton v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 63 N. Y. 343.....	127
Sweetland v. Illinois & M. Teleg. Co. 37 Iowa, 423, 1 Am. Rep. 235.....	437
Swift v. Newport, 7 Bush, 37.....	198
v. Tyson, 41 U. S. 13 Pet. 1, 10 L. ed. 565...	700
Swift's Estate, Re, 127 N. Y. 77, 13 L. R. A. 709 241, 244, 245.....	245
Swords v. Edgar, 59 N. Y. 23, 17 Am. Rep. 235 613, 594.....	594
T.
Tacoma Hotel Co. v. Tacoma Light & W. Co. 3 Wash. 316, 14 L. R. A. 639.....	525, 531
Takt, 22 parts, 13 Ves. Jr. 133, note.....	290
Tanner v. Hall, 1 Pa. 417.....	724, 725
Tate v. Hawkins, 51 Ky. 532, 50 Am. Rep. 181...	303
v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 7 Ind. 479.....	720
v. Pennsylvania, Gulf, L. & D. Co. 37 Fla. 429.....	235
..... C. R. Co. 11.....	545
..... U. S. 9 How.	523
.....	730
.....	637
..... L. A. 973.....	45, 46
.....	103
..... 106 Ind. 113.....	771
..... 204.....	316
.....	603
..... v. Little, 101 U. S. 216, 23 L. ed. 564, 754, 755, 756.....	756
Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cox, 145 U. S. 593, 35 L. ed. 323.....	393
v. Southern P. Co. 137 U. S. 43, 37 L. ed. 514.....	490
Thelen v. Hunter (Idaho) 45 Pac. 3.....	544
Thoenke v. Fiedler, 91 Wis. 395.....	623
Thomas v. Barnes, 156 Mass. 581.....	40
v. McDaniels, 63 Iowa, 300.....	311
v. Thomas, 24 Or. 254.....	691
v. Western Car Co. 149 U. S. 95, 37 L. ed. 633.....	505, 631, 632
v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 33, 25 L. ed. 353.....	373
Thomson v. Dill, 34 Ala. 175.....	344
Thompson v. Heffner, 11 Bush, 353.....	303
v. Reno Sav. Bank, 19 Nev. 103.....	397
v. Thompson, 4 Cush. 127.....	351, 352
v. Thompson, 9 Ind. 323, 63 Am. Dec. 633...	558
v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 44 Wis. 531, 54 Am. Rep. 644.....	497
Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 37 Vt. 140, 33 Am. Dec. 635.....	101, 107
Tiley v. Moyers, 43 Pa. 404.....	576
Tishman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136, 31 L. ed. 634.....	622
Tilman v. Cocke, 9 Baxt. 429.....	723
Timlin v. Standard Oil Co. 125 N. Y. 514.....	593
Tippacaw County Comrs. v. Barnes, 123 Ind. 463.....	340
Todd v. Election Comrs. 104 Mich. 474, 30 L. R. A. 330.....	600
v. Flight, 9 C. B. N. S. 377.....	613
Toledo, St. L. & K. C. R. Co. v. Wingate, 143 Ind. 123.....	144
Toler v. Keifer, 51 Ind. 383.....	296
Tompkins v. Augusta & K. R. Co. 21 S. C. 491...	251
Toplin v. Toplin, 123 U. S. 121, 30 L. ed. 1110...	580
Toronto General Trust Co. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 123 N. Y. 45.....	235
34 L. R. A.

Towle v. American Bldg. L. & I. Soc. 61 Fed. Rep. 446.....	204
Townsend, Re. 39 N. Y. 171.....	220
Trafford v. Adams Exp. Co. 8 Lea. 96.....	442, 444
Tresno Enterprise Co. v. Allen, 57 Cal. 505.....	479
Trull v. Madison County Comrs. 72 N. C. 388.....	549
Tucker v. Illinois C. R. Co. 43 La. Ann. 114.....	613
Turley v. Logan County, 17 Ill. 151.....	489
Turlock Irrig. Dist. v. Williams, 76 Cal. 300.....	739
Turner v. Scott, 51 Pa. 120.....	714
Turpin v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 504, 29 L. ed. 956.....	513
Tutt v. Port Royal & A. R. Co. 28 S. C. 400.....	221
Tyler v. Tyler, 19 Ill. 151.....	389, 390
v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 40 Ill. 421, 14 Am. Rep. 26.....	493, 497
U.
Ulrich v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 108 N. Y. 80.....	654
Union Bank v. Campbell, 4 Humph. 394.....	279
v. Wando Min. & Mfg. Co. 17 S. C. 339.....	686
Union Depot Co. v. St. Louis, 76 Mo. 398.....	375
Union Nat. Bank v. Bank of Kansas City, 136 U. S. 223, 34 L. ed. 341.....	694
Union P. R. Co. v. Botsford, 141 U. S. 250, 35 L. ed. 734.....	214
v. Buffalo County Comrs. 9 Neb. 429.....	643
v. Carr, 1 Wyo. 95.....	480
v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 2 C. C. A. 174, 51 Fed. Rep. 309, 10 U. S. App. 95.....	459
v. Peniston, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787.....	105
Union Trust Co. v. Morrison, 125 U. S. 591, 31 L. ed. 825.....	304, 305
United States, Re. 96 N. Y. 327.....	620
v. Ballin, 144 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 321.....	414, 470
v. Blaisdell, 3 Ben. 122.....	513
v. Dashiell, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 183, 15 L. ed. 319.....	693
v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325.....	109
v. Guiteau, 1 Mackey, 498.....	553
v. Hack, 38 U. S. 8 Pet. 271, 8 L. ed. 941.....	607
v. Irving, 42 U. S. 1 How. 250, 11 L. ed. 120.....	479
v. Keenler, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 82, 19 L. ed. 574.....	693
v. Kemel, 62 Fed. Rep. 57.....	181
v. Kirkpatrick, 23 U. S. 9 Wheat. 720, 6 L. ed. 199.....	479
v. Macon County Ct. 96 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 331.....	643
v. Maxwell, 9 Dill. 273.....	514
v. Morgan, 52 U. S. 11 How. 154, 13 L. ed. 643.....	693
v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 361, 25 L. ed. 325.....	641
v. Nre, 4 Fed. Rep. 869.....	514
v. O'Neill, 2 Sawy 481.....	181
v. Ottawa Auditors, 23 Fed. Rep. 427.....	641
v. Patterson, 29 Fed. Rep. 775.....	514
v. Peck, 108 U. S. 64, 26 L. ed. 48.....	34
v. Prescott, 44 U. S. 3 How. 573, 11 L. ed. 734.....	693
v. Pridgeon, 169 U. S. 43, 39 L. ed. 631.....	517
v. Thomas, 68 U. S. 15 Wall. 597, 21 L. ed. 80.....	693
v. Wilson, 28 U. S. 7 Pet. 150, 8 L. ed. 640.....	263
at rel. White, v. Knox, 111 U. S. 784, 23 L. ed. 693.....	693
University of Alabama v. Moody, 62 Ala. 359.....	544
V.
V.	Adm. Cong.
V.	1.....
V.	2, 497, 7 Am.
V.	Pa. 109.....
V.	Dec. 351.....
V.	514.....
V. 527, 528
V. 528
V. 578
V.	Mich. 276.....
V.	Wall. 523, 19 L.
ed. 482.....	103
Verdier v. Port Royal R. Co. 15 S. C. 476, 468.....	220, 221
Vickers v. Vickers, L. R. 4 Eq. 329.....	373
Victorian Railway Comrs. v. Coulton, L. R. 13 App. Cas. 222.....	739
Vina v. Gilman, 21 W. Va. 306, 45 Am. Rep. 608.....	599
Vincennes v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 132 Ind. 114, 16 L. R. A. 495.....	523, 525, 531
Vincent v. Walker, 93 Ala. 169.....	227
Vineant v. Knox, 27 Ark. 246.....	439
Vinton v. Baldwin, 95 Ind. 433.....	141

Vierbo v. Friedlander , 120 U. S. 707, 30 L. ed. 776	558
Vosburgh v. Diefendorf , 119 N. Y. 367	72
W.
Wabash R. Co. v. Hughes , 25 Ill. 174	499
Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Locks , 112 Ind. 401	126
v. Rector , 104 Ill. 236	206
Waggoner v. Jermaine , 3 Denio, 305, 45 Am. Dec. 474	418
Waggoner-Gates Mill Co. v. Ziegler-Zahn Commission Co. , 128 Mo. 475	423
Wagner v. Rock Island , 145 Ill. 120, 21 L. R. A. 519	521
Wagner , 30 Minn. 220	90
Waite, R. , 90 N. Y. 483	708
Waite v. Mathews , 50 Mich. 382	404
Walden Nat. Bank v. Birch , 120 N. Y. 221, 14 L. R. A. 211	481
Waldhier v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. , 71 Mo. 514	176
Waldron v. Ritchings , 3 Daly, 228	754
Wallace v. Columbia & G. R. Co. , 34 S. C. 66	221, 222
v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. , 155 Mass. 236	143
v. Rappleye , 108 Ill. 229	396
Walla Walla Water Co. v. Walla Walla , 60 Fed. Rep. 367	596
Waiting v. Michigan , 116 U. S. 446, 29 L. ed. 691	311
Wallis v. State , 7 Blackf. 372	736
Walker v. Cincinnati , 21 Ohio St. 14, 8 Am. Rep. 24	320
v. Griffith , 60 Ala. 361	490
v. Kree , 14 S. C. 142	72, 73
v. Struve , 70 Ala. 187	307
Walsh, R. , 57 Mich. 406	404
R. , 37 Neb. 454	516, 516
v. New York & N. E. R. Co. , 140 Mass. 571	507, 508
Wann v. Western U. Teleg. Co. , 27 Mo. 472, 90 Am. Dec. 365	495, 496
Wapello County v. Bingham , 10 Iowa, 20, 74 Am. Dec. 370	479
Ward v. Colfax County School Dist. No. 15 , 10 Neb. 268, 35 Am. Rep. 477	602
v. Maryland , 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 41A, 20 L. ed. 449	303, 306
v. Rochester Electric R. Co. , 48 N. Y. S. R. 64	305
Wardens of St. Saviour's v. Bostock , 2 Bos. & P. 175	479
Wardle v. Cummings , 36 Mich. 400	697
Warner v. Beers , 23 Wend. 124	490
v. Jaffray , 95 N. Y. 248, 48 Am. Rep. 618	706
v. People, Connor , 2 Denio, 272, 48 Am. Dec. 740	420
Warwick v. Lafayette , 4 La. Ann. 419	471
Warren v. Burt , 12 U. S. App. 591, 7 C. C. A. 105, 58 Fed. Rep. 101	622
v. Prescott , 84 Me. 468, 17 L. R. A. 425	508
Washington v. Nashville , 1 Swan, 180	729, 731
Washington Bridge Co. v. Stewart , 44 U. S. 3 How. 412, 11 L. ed. 658	341, 342, 343, 344
Washingtonian Home v. Chicago , 157 Ill. 414, 29 L. R. A. 798	397
Washington, S. A. & P. R. Co., R. , 115 N. Y. 442	427
Waterbury v. Russell , 8 Baxt. 162	623, 629
Waterhouse v. Cleveland Public Schools , 8 Helsk. 657, 869	723, 730, 731
v. Louisiana Citizens' Bank , 25 La. Ann. 77	235
Watkins v. Paine , 52 Ga. 50	590
Watkins Nat. Bank v. Sands , 47 Kan. 591	622, 623
Watts v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. , 20 W. Va. 193, 23 L. R. A. 674	222
Wayzata v. Great Northern R. Co. , 50 Minn. 496	166
Webb v. Gilman , 80 Me. 189	303
Webber v. Virginia , 108 U. S. 344, 25 L. ed. 565	102
Weill v. Kenfield , 54 Cal. 111	489
Weinberg v. Regents of University , 37 Mich. 246	154, 155
Weishaupt v. Weishaupt , 27 Wis. 631	90
Weisinger v. Bank of Gallatin , 10 Lea, 520	827
Weich v. Seymour , 28 Conn. 387	479
Wells, Ex parte , 21 Fla. 280	780
Welsh v. Alabama & V. R. Co. , 70 Miss. 20	397
v. Barrett , 15 Mass. 390	591
Welton v. Missouri , 91 U. S. 275, 28 L. ed. 347	102
Wendell v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. , 91 N. Y. 420	143
Wertz v. Wertz , 43 Iowa, 537	166
Westbrook v. Davis , 48 Ga. 471	235
Western & A. R. Co. v. Roberson , 22 U. S. App. 187, 9 C. C. A. 646, 61 Fed. Rep. 592	308
Western Sav. Fund Soc. v. Philadelphia , 31 Pa. 185	690

34 L. R. A.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Allen , 65 Miss. 549	497
v. Blanchard , 63 Ga. 230, 45 Am. Rep. 499	497
v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. , 11 Fed. Rep. 1	594
v. Carew , 15 Mich. 525	497
v. Cohen , 78 Ga. 522	497
v. Crall , 38 Kan. 479	496
v. Fontaine , 58 Ga. 483	497
v. Griswold , 37 Ohio St. 201	496, 497
v. Howell , 38 Kan. 685	497
v. Short , 53 Ark. 434, 9 L. R. A. 742	497
v. Stevenson , 128 Pa. 442, 5 L. R. A. 515	695
v. Wood , 6 C. C. A. 422, 57 Fed. Rep. 471, 21 L. R. A. 705	793
West Plains Twp. v. Sage , 14 C. C. A. 552, 69 Fed. Rep. 943	677, 678
Whitbread, Ex parte , 2 Meriv. 102	301
White v. Cotshausen , 129 U. S. 329, 32 L. ed. 677	624
v. Smith , 39 Pa. 185, 75 Am. Dec. 599	482
White Sewing Mach. Co. v. Ellice , 61 Mich. 423	596
White Star Line S. S. Co. v. Gordon County , 51 Ga. 47	267
Whitfield v. Lord Le Despencer , 3 Cowp. 754	621
Whitford v. Panama R. Co. , 23 N. Y. 48	796
Whiting v. Sheboygan & F. du L. R. Co. , 25 Wis. 167, 3 Am. Rep. 30	126
v. Townsend , 57 Cal. 515	263
Whitmarsh v. Conway F. Ins. Co. , 16 Gray, 389, 77 Am. Dec. 414	399
Whitsett v. Union Depot & R. Co. , 19 Colo. 242	772
Whittaker v. Howe , 2 Beav. 362	391
Whyte v. Nashville , 2 Swan, 369	729, 731
Wickersham v. Johnston , 104 Cal. 497	273
Wiedeman v. Keller , 58 Ill. App. 393	695
Wiegins v. Chicago , 69 Ill. 372	106
Wilbory v. United States , 193 U. S. 492, 41 L. ed. 239	513
Wilcox v. State , 3 Helsk. 118	672
Wilc v. Dean , 3 Allen, 579	351, 352
Wilder v. Weakley's Estate , 34 Ind. 181	377
Wiley v. Athol , 150 Mass. 436, 6 L. R. A. 342	499
Wilkinson v. Kahrer ("Re Kahrer") , 140 U. S. 545, 25 L. ed. 573	191, 192
Wilkins v. Davis , 3 Low, Dec. 511	490
Wilcocke, Ex parte , 7 Cow. 402, 17 Am. Dec. 585	414
Williamson v. Boston , 117 N. Y. 423	423
R. 9 Exch. , 157	125
N. , 642	723
L. 120	359
3 N. Y. , 551	515, 517
21	69
7 Prob. Div. , 76	459
L. R. A. , 391	397
15 Co. , 120 Pa.	549
red. L. , 250	67
L. ed. , 91	109
120 N. Y. , 145, 75	513
C. 69	485, 486
48 Pa. , 424	696
Veal (Ind.) , 41	396
740	797
349	391, 392
Rep. , 677	187
Pa. , 542, 39 Am.	555, 556
279	499
127	127
678	678
163	696
38 Kan. , 590	524, 525
117	117
126 N. Y.	799
10, 13 L. R. A. , 458	676
23 Kan. , 494	676
U. S. , 232, 40 L. ed. 972	545, 547
75 U. S. & Wall. , 123, 19 L. ed. 382	311
84 Ind. , 474, 43 Am. Rep. 102	664
54 Ala. , 150	396
118 Ill. , 186	396
7 Lea , 47	296
110 Ind. , 251	296
N. A. & C. R. Co. , 107 Ind. 361, 57 Am. Rep. 114	143
41 Minn. , 239	592

Worth v. Petersburg R. Co. 59 N. C. 301.....	102	Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220.....	102, 104
Worthington v. Central Vermont R. Co. 64 Vt. 107, 15 L. R. A. 323.....	143	Yorston v. Yorston, 83 N. J. Eq. 496.....	189
Wright v. Naeff, 101 U. S. 791, 25 L. ed. 921.....	524	v. Godbe, 83 U. S. 15 Wall. 565, 21 L. ed. 251.....	631
v. Orrville Gold, 5 & C. Min. Co. 40 Cal. 30.....	83	v. Farwell, 139 Ill. 826.....	742, 754, 755, 756, 766
v. Wilmington, 58 N. C. 156.....	127	v. Lego, 30 Wis. 394.....	638
Wyeth Hardware Co. v. Standard Implement Co. 47 Kan. 423.....	632, 638, 634	v. Montgomery & E. R. Co. 2 Woods. 605.....	544, 547
Wyman v. Leavitt, 71 Me. 227, 36 Am. Rep. 308.....	788	Youngblood v. Sexton, 83 Mich. 403, 20 Am. Rep. 654.....	101, 102, 104
Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 373.....	436	Youngs v. Carter, 10 Hun. 194.....	58
Y.		Younkin v. Younkin, 44 Neb. 729.....	348
Yale, Ex parte , 3 P. Wms. 24, note A.....	330	Z.
Yard v. Patton, 18 Pa. 275.....	96	Zabriskie v. Cleveland, C. & C. R. Co. 64 U. S. 23 How. 381, 16 L. ed. 498.....	351
Yates v. Milwaukee, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 384.....	555	Zeigensfuss v. Zeigensfuss, 21 Mich. 414.....	60
Yarger v. Hains, 4 Humph. 269.....	397

STATUTES AND CONSTITUTIONS CITED, CONSTRUED, ETC

England.Statutes.

2 Jac. I. chap. 2. Monopolies.....	173
20 Car. II. Revocation of wills.....	369
11 Geo. II. chap. 19. Distract of emblements.....	291
1 Vict. chap. 28. Marriage defined.....	389
224. Lord Campbell's act.....	791, 799

United States.Constitution.

Art. 1, § 7. Presentation of bills to President for signature.....	96
§ 2, cl. 2. Regulation of commerce.....	811
§ 2. Judgments of other states.....	503, 607, 708
§ 2. Privileges and immunities of citizens.....	805
Amend. 11. Judicial power.....	96
12. Election of President.....	147
14. Privileges and immunities of citizens.....	101
Equal protection of laws.....	349

Statutes.

1823, May 20. Land grant.....	152
1857, March 3. Land grant.....	185
1851, Aug. 5. Revenue from imports.....	223
1851, Aug. 5. Direct tax.....	263
1852, June 27. Payment of state claims.....	263
49 Cong. chap. 315, p. 171. Municipal and county indebtedness.....	337

Statutes at Large.

Vol. 5, p. 59. Land grant.....	183
12, p. 101, chap. 105, § 3. Power of national banking association.....	473
12, p. 479. Good-time credit on sentences of convicts.....	516
14, p. 517, chap. 173, § 35. Federal bankrupt law.....	628

Revised Statutes.

§ 649. Issues of fact tried by court without jury.....	743
700. Review of rulings on trial without jury.....	743
1026. Regulation of procedure.....	517
1023. Delivering copy of mittimus.....	513
5123, p. 903. Power of national banking association.....	473
5439. Illegal use of mails.....	510
5544. Good-time credit on sentences of convicts.....	515

Alabama.Constitution, 1819.

Art. 1, § 12. Imprisonment for debt.....	644
24 L. R. A.....

Constitution, 1861.

Art. 1, § 12. Imprisonment for debt.....	644
--	-----

Constitution, 1865.

Art. 1, § 22. Imprisonment for debt.....	644
--	-----

Constitution, 1868.

Art. 1, § 22. Imprisonment for debt.....	644
--	-----

Constitution, 1875.

Art. 1, § 21. Imprisonment for debt.....	643
--	-----

Statutes.

1892, Dec. 12. Insolvent banks.....	693
1893, pp. 94, 95. Insolvent banks.....	643

Code.

§ 2250. Power of wife to do business.....	227
2241. Separate property of wife.....	227
2242. Separate property of wife.....	227
2246. Power of wife to contract.....	226
2243. Right of wife as to disposition of property.....	227
2290. Appointment of guardian of insane person.....	226

California.Constitution.

Art. 4, § 2. Election of members of assembly.....	47
15. Mode of enacting a law.....	263
22. Power of legislature to authorize payment of claims against the state.....	263
§ 2. Election of governor.....	47
§ 2. Vacancy in office.....	47
15. Election of lieutenant governor.....	47
§ 2. Vacancy in supreme court.....	43
§ 5. Filling vacancy.....	43
11, § 8. Framing charter.....	264

Resolutions.

1893, March 2. Prosecution of claims.....	263
---	-----

Statutes.

1851, April 23, p. 415. Concerning offices.....	45
---	----

Civil Code.

§ 55. Marriage.....	269
992. Goodwill defined.....	273
993. Goodwill of business.....	273
§§ 1836-1874. Construction of contracts.....	359
§ 1776. Sale of goodwill of business.....	274

Political Code.

§ 95. Resignation of lieutenant governor.....	49
390, subd. 5. Powers of governor in case suit is pending against state.....	264
1191. Printing of candidates' names on ballot.....	45

Code of Civil Procedure.
§ 1517. Sale of decedent's assets.....	273
1524. Sale of deceased partner's interest in firm.....	273
1561. Sale of decedent's assets.....	273
1875. Judicial knowledge.....	263
Colorado.
Constitution.
Art. 7, § 1. Elections.....	57
Civil Code.
§ 20. Consolidation of actions.....	54
Mills' Annotated Statutes.
§ 1524. Descents.....	53
1534. Widow's personal property.....	52
1535. Election of widow to claim money.....	52
2011. Election against will.....	52
4315. Right of interested person to testify..	54
Connecticut.
Bill of Rights.
§ 1. Equality of rights.....	104
Statutes.
1869, chap. 180. Collateral inheritance tax.....	247
General Statutes.
§ 1164. Implements of the debtor's trade.....	718
§§ 1206-1208. Liability for support of illegitimate child.....	362
§ 1209. Agreement as to support of illegitimate child.....	361
1210. Agreement as to support of illegitimate child.....	362
Florida.
Constitution.
Art. 2, § 20. Special laws.....	780
§ 21. Local and special laws.....	780
§ 24. Local and special laws.....	780
4, § 11. Power of pardon.....	252
§ 12. Power of pardon.....	253
Statutes.
1865, chap. 4457. Howard Bishop.....	253
Revised Statutes.
§ 1003. Competency of witnesses.....	252
Thompson's Digest.
P. 355, § 2. Disposition of money made by execution sales.....	256
Georgia.
Code.
§ 2215. Definition of realty.....	292
2319. Fixtures.....	297
3543. Crops exempt from execution.....	290
4000. Disposition of mortgaged property.....	293
5153. Jurisdiction of justices' court.....	237
Illinois.
Statutes.
1871-73, p. 229. Liability of stockholders.....	743
Revised Statutes, 1889.
Chap. 22, §§ 1-40. Stockholders made parties to the suit.....	697
73, §§ 103-111. Dissolution of insurance companies.....	697
Indiana.
Constitution.
Art. 4, § 23. Local and special laws.....	780
Revised Statutes, 1881.
§ 57. Injury to property.....	770
2169. Boarding moving trains.....	768
6054. Sale of patent rights.....	365
34 L. R. A.
§ 6055. Sale of patent rights.....	365
6056. Penalty for violating statute governing sale of patent right.....	365
8121. Sale of patent rights.....	365
Revised Statutes, 1894.
§ 57. Injury to property.....	770
2290. Boarding moving trains.....	768
8120. Sale of patent rights.....	365
8122. Penalty for violation of statute governing sale of patent right.....	365
Iowa.
Constitution.
Art. 2, § 20. Local and special laws.....	780
Statutes.
1866, chap. 112. Transportation of livestock....	699
1890, chap. 210, §§ 1, 2. Forfeiture of insurance policies.....	467
Code.
§ 1203. Prohibiting common carriers from making contracts.....	639
1229. Liability of telegraph proprietor.....	497
2213. Power of wife to contract.....	169
2223. Verification of petition for divorce....	166
McClain's Code.
§ 1144. Insurance.....	703
Kansas.
Constitution.
Art. 2, § 16. Form of statutes.....	677
12, § 2. Corporation dues.....	751
Statutes.
1865, March 2, § 4. Submission of issues of fact in civil cases.....	744
1879, chap. 50. Refunding of township indebtedness.....	675
1891, chap. 163. Refunding of township indebtedness.....	676
1893, chap. 112. Refunding of township indebtedness.....	676
General Statutes, 1888 (Dassler's ed. 1885.)
Chap. 22. Personal liability of stockholders...	743
General Statutes, 1889.
Chap. 6, § 1. Assignment.....	623
§§ 14. Insurance companies.....	756
107, § 1. Taxing property.....	811
§ 2. Personal property defined.....	811
7. Listing property for taxation.....	811
8. Listing property for taxation.....	811
10. Listing property for taxation.....	811
100. Number of school districts.....	811
763. Passage of ordinance.....	526
† 737. Power of cities to contract for waterworks.....	524
517. Municipal water supply.....	524
1192. Personal liability of stockholders.....	745
1401. Municipal water supply.....	524
1402. Municipal water supply.....	524
†† 7125-7130. Municipal water supply.....	524
Kentucky.
Constitution.
§ 61. Elections as to sale of liquor.....	259
64. Division of counties.....	260
145. Qualifications of voter.....	258
147. Form of ballot.....	258
148. Number of elections.....	258
153. Filling of vacancies in general assembly.....	258
154. Power of general assembly.....	258
157. County indebtedness.....	258
196. Common carrier's liability.....	684
256. Amendments to the Constitution.....	290
455. Elections for school trustees.....	254
Statutes.
1868, March 5 (Vol. 2, v. 219). Charter of Russellville.....	194

1880, March 12 (Vol. 2, p. 236). Limits of Russellville.....	194
1880, May 1 (Vol. 2, p. 374). Russellville.....	194
1888, March 14. Lien act.....	623
1891, March 4. Stipulation for limitation of time to sue on contract.....	638
1893, July 2. Government of towns.....	194

General Statutes.

chap. 10. Action by personal representative.....	793
§ 7, § 1. Damages for negligent killing.....	793
§ 8. Damages for negligent killing.....	794
§ 63, art. 1, § 24. Vendor's lien.....	307
§ 264. County indebtedness.....	238

Statutes, 1894.

§ 242-246. Lien act.....	623
--------------------------	-----

Louisiana.Civil Code.

Art. 670. Liability of owner for defective buildings.....	613
§ 216. Liability of owner for defective buildings.....	613
§ 222. Liability of owner for defective buildings.....	611

Maryland.Constitution.

Art. 1, § 1. Elections.....	58
§ 48. Municipal corporations.....	57
§ 51. Property permanently located taxable.....	311

Statutes.

1880, chap. 154. Bel Air.....	58
1883, chap. 359. Bel Air.....	58

Code.

Art. 51, § 2. Valuation of property for taxation.....	311
§ 145. Adding new property to tax list.....	313

Code of Public Local Laws.

Art. 23, § 23. Bel Air.....	58
§ 30. Bel Air.....	58

Massachusetts.Constitution.

Chap. 2, art. 2. Opinions of justices.....	59
Pt. 2, chap. 1, § 1, art. 4. Power to pass laws.....	60

Statutes.

1888, chap. 165, § 21. Partners.....	361
1894, chap. 320, § 2. Civil service rules.....	58
1897, chap. 437. Civil service.....	60
1899, chap. 473. Civil service.....	60
1905, chap. 501. Civil service.....	60
1906, chap. 449. Civil service.....	61
chap. 517. Civil service.....	58

Public Statutes.

Chap. 157, § 15. Supervisory jurisdiction of supreme court.....	379
§ 23. Debts or demands against the estate of insolvent debtor.....	380
40. Choice of assignee.....	381
61. Partnership debts.....	380
68. Partnership debts.....	380
68. Insolvent partner.....	380
68. Release of an insolvent.....	381
§ 120 et seq. Jurisdiction of partnership estates.....	380
§ 121. Jurisdiction of partnership estates.....	382
122. Jurisdiction of partnership estates.....	382
124. Jurisdiction of partnership estates.....	381

Michigan.Constitution, 1835.

Art. 10, § 5. Support of university.....	153
24 L. R. A.

Constitution, 1850.

Art. 12, § 2. Educational fund.....	153
-------------------------------------	-----

Constitution.

Art. 6, § 12. Powers of justices of peace.....	155
10, § 1. Powers of counties.....	155
§ 2. Powers of county officers.....	155
11, § 1. Powers of supervisors.....	155
§ 2. Powers of township officers.....	155
12, § 1. Powers of townships.....	155
§ 2. Superintendent of public instruction.....	155
§ 3. Regents of university.....	153
7. Term of office of regents.....	153
8. Organization of regents.....	153
9. Powers of board of education.....	155

Statutes.

1887, p. 142. Establishment of university.....	153
1875, Apr. 27. Medical department of university.....	150
1898, § 33. Release of convicts.....	401
1896, No. 257. Establishment of medical college at Detroit.....	150

Howell's Statutes.

§ 4683. Medical department of university.....	150
---	-----

Minnesota.Constitution, 1891

Art. 4, § 53. Special legislation prohibited.....	773
§ 54. Special legislation prohibited.....	773

Statutes.

1867, ex. sess. chap. 1, subchap. 1, § 7. St. Paul, Minn., Spokane, & Manitoba Rail- road.....	187
1868, chap. 42. Sale of public property to rail- road.....	190
1874, chap. 1, subchap. 4, § 7. St. Paul charter; power of com- mon council.....	188
§ 11. Power to grant right of way on highway.....	189
1887, chap. 40. Sale of dairy products.....	319
1888, chap. 247. Sale of dairy products.....	319
1896, chap. 203. Inspection of dairy herds.....	319
223. Public improvements.....	773

Special Laws.

1872, Feb. 23, chap. 92. Chicago, Minneapolis, & St. Paul Railroad.....	185
--	-----

General Statutes, 1878.

Chap. 24, § 47. Railroad in street.....	189
---	-----

General Statutes, 1894.

§ 2642. Railroad in street.....	189
2650. Sale of public property to railroad.....	189
3261. Insurance.....	708
4430. Revocation of wills.....	389
4470. Inheritance by widow.....	388
4471. Inheritance by widow.....	388
4477. Inheritance by widow.....	388
5361. Submission of question to jury.....	385
5600. Evidence of transaction with deceased person.....	395
6348. Bribery of a judicial officer.....	189
§ 7004, 7005. Sale of dairy products.....	319
§ 7241. Sufficiency of indictment.....	189
7247. Sufficiency of indictment.....	189
7248. Sufficiency of indictment.....	189

Penal Code.

§ 64. Bribery of a judicial officer.....	189
--	-----

Mississippi.Constitution, 1869.

Art. 7, § 2. Electoral franchise.....	475
---------------------------------------	-----

Constitution, 1890.

§ 140. Election of governor.....	475
141. Choice of governor by legislature.....	475
171. Jurisdiction of justices of the peace.....	397
198. Right of employee of railroad corpora- tion to recover for injuries.....	396

§ 241. Electoral franchise.....	475	Art. 5, § 9. Requirement of appointments and promotions in the civil service.....	421
242. Poll tax.....	474	§ 10. Legislature empowered to fill vacancies.....	420
§§ 254-259. Apportionment.....	475	4, § 1. Deprivation of life, liberty, and property.....	423
Missouri.		5, § 1. Authority of legislature to create municipal corporations.....	425
Constitution.		10, § 2. Election of local officers.....	411
Art. 4, § 12. Jurisdiction of supreme court....	129	Statutes.
Statutes.		1890, chap. 330. Levying on credits.....	244
1895, § 8. Telegraph.....	495	1890, chap. 300. Attachments in justices' courts.....	249
§ 9. Telegraph.....	495	1851, chap. 871. Taxation of debts due to non-residents.....	245
Revised Statutes, 1879.		1852, chap. 71. Limitation of the power of receiver.....	697
§ 1526. Threatening letters.....	129	1853, Oct. Compensation to families for death of persons by accident.....	800
Revised Statutes, 1889.		1855, ch.....	245
Art. 5, chap. 42. Power to regulate use of streets.....	573	1857, ch.....	245
P. 2065. St. Louis charter: power over streets.....	573	1859, ch.....	245
§ 100. St. Louis charter: power to pass ordinances.....	573	1870, ch.....	245
§ 2721. Power of wire-using corporations.....	577	§ 1.....	245
2792. Power of wire-using corporations.....	577	buy.....	245
2793. Power of wire-using corporations.....	577	owners.....	245
2792. Threatening letters.....	129	owners.....	245
2869. Definition of libel.....	180	owners.....	245
Chap. 49, § 4426. Damage for death.....	119	owners.....	175
§ 4427. Damage for death.....	119	owners.....	245
Montana.		chap. 515. New York city aldermen.....	427
Political Code.		542. Limitation of names on ballot.....	428
§ 1516. Nomination by convention.....	327	1875, chap. 370, title 2, § 103, subd. 2. Elmira police commissioners.....	426
Nebraska.		1877, chap. 70. Syracuse fire department.....	426
Constitution.		1878, chap. 49. Oswego school commissioners.....	426
Art. 2, § 24. When laws become operative....	353	chap. 245. For relief of holders of insurance policies.....	175
Compiled Statutes, 1895.		1880, chap. 224. Troy police commissioners.....	426
Chap. 14, art. 2, § 24. Government of cities of the second class.....	353	1881, chap. 5, § 1. Binghamton commissioners.....	426
25, § 10. Divorce and alimony.....	117	chap. 517, §§ 2, 4. Rome fire commissioners.....	426
Criminal Code.		1882, chap. 48. Lockport police commissioners.....	426
§ 2. Punishment for murder.....	669	1883, chap. 290, title 2. Power of majority to select officers.....	414
Nevada.		chap. 554. Buffalo police commissioners.....	426
Constitution.		559, § 2. Buffalo police commissioners.....	426
Art. 4, § 20. Prohibition of county business....	608	1885, chap. 25, § 185. Fire and police commissioners.....	426
§ 25. County governments.....	608	§ 187. Fire and police commissioners.....	426
Statutes.		205. Fire and police commissioners.....	426
1891, Nov. 25, § 1. Marriages.....	784	205. Fire and police commissioners.....	426
1891, p. 22. County tax.....	604	chap. 54, § 1. Troy police commissioners.....	426
1895, March 15, p. 78. Storey county.....	608	189, § 19. Watertown police commissioners.....	426
General Statutes.		chap. 483. Collateral inheritance tax.....	243
§ 2008. County funds.....	604	1897, chap. 718. Collateral inheritance tax.....	243
New Jersey.		1899, chap. 307. Collateral inheritance tax.....	243
Constitution.		chap. 406. Collateral inheritance tax.....	243
Art. 4, § 7, ¶ 11. Special laws.....	780	May 14. Incorporation and government of street railway companies.....	426
New Mexico.		1890, chap. 553. Collateral inheritance tax.....	245
Statutes.		1891, chap. 215. Collateral inheritance tax.....	245
1897, p. 72, § 10. Indebtedness against exempted property.....	604	1892, chap. 299. Transfer tax.....	249
1899, p. 153, § 35. Exempt property.....	608	chap. 603. Board for examination of plumbers.....	429
Compiled Statutes, 1884.		609. Collateral inheritance tax.....	243
§ 2614. Meaning of "person".....	607	677. Statutory construction law.....	240
New York.		1894, chap. 732, § 1. Grounds of attachment.....	249
Constitution.		1895, chap. 427. Removal of police force from office.....	414
Art. 1, § 1. Deprivation of the rights of citizens.....	411	Webster and Skinner's Laws.
§ 13. Prohibition of any oath as qualification for office.....	411	Vol. 1, p. 236. Attachment in justices' courts.....	249
2, § 6. Selection of election officers.....	414	Revised Laws, 1813.
§ 12. Passed without the acceptance of the city.....	431	Vol. 2, p. 157. Attachment in justices' courts.....	249
84 L. R. A.		Revised Statutes.
		Vol. 2, ed. 2, § 6, ¶ 8. Supervisor required to pay successor school moneys.....	681
		p. 1282, § 6. Power of supervisor to disburse school moneys.....	681
		p. 274. Attachments in justices' courts.....	249
		Code of Procedure, 1849.
		§ 227. Attachment.....	249
		229. Grounds of attachment.....	249

Code of Civil Procedure.

625. Attachment.....	249
626. Attachment.....	249
627. Levying on credits.....	244
627. Consideration of actions.....	54
2478. Levying on credits.....	244

North Carolina.Constitution.

Art. 2, § 14. Creation of town indebtedness....	486
§ 22. Reading and ratification of act....	486

Statutes.

1891, chap. 315, § 10. Railroads.....	488
---------------------------------------	-----

Code.

§ 1077. Selling liquor to minors.....	805
1078. Damages to person injured by liquor....	806
2448. Power of county commissioners to provide employment of convicts.....	392

North Dakota.Constitution.

§ 65. Joint resolutions.....	96
83. Powers of secretary of state.....	97
202. Amending Constitution.....	99

Revised Code.

§ 491. Duty of secretary of state.....	97
503. Duty of secretary of state.....	97

Ohio.Constitution.

Art. 2, § 1. Legislative power.....	499
§ 2. Elections by ballot.....	499

Statutes.

1893, Apr. 17, § 6a (28 Ohio Laws, p. 135). Printing ballots.....	499
---	-----

Oregon.Hill's Code.

§ 2339. Power of eminent domain.....	399
2340. Power of eminent domain.....	399

Pennsylvania.Constitution.

Art. 2, § 7. Local and special laws.....	780
18, § 5. Compensation for property taken.....	499

Statutes.

1855, Apr. 21 (P. L. 385). Taxing real property of railroad corporations.....	566
1861, Apr. 23 (P. L. 410). Leasing powers of railroad companies.....	579
1865, Mch. 24 (P. L. 49). Powers of railroad companies.....	579
1866, Feb. 15. Meadville city.....	598
1867, Mch. 12. Easton borough.....	572
1868, Apr. 14 (P. L. 100). Power of railroad companies.....	579
1870, Feb. 17 (P. L. 51). Leasing powers of railroad companies.....	579
1870, Mch. 23. Meadville city.....	568
Apr. 6. Meadville city.....	568
1874, Apr. 22, p. 94. Gas and water companies.....	98
May 23. Government of cities of the third class.....	568
1887, May 12. Intoxicating liquors.....	95
1890, May 14 (P. L. 211). Street railway act.....	573
May 23. Municipal waterworks.....	571
1893, June 8. Powers of married women.....	569
1895, May 22, p. 112. Excluding nonresidents from the benefit of the statute of limitations....	441

Brightly's Purdon's Digest.

P. 955, pl. 4 (12th ed.). Gas and water companies.....	98
--	----

Rhode Island.Statutes.

1893, chap. 627. Adopted children.....	501
34 L. R. A.

Revised Statutes, 1857.

Chap. 178, §§ 16-21. Recovery for death by wrongful act.....	809
--	-----

South Carolina.Constitution, 1868.

Art. 1, § 23. Compensation for taking property.....	280
---	-----

Constitution.

Art. 2, § 7. Public debts.....	471
--------------------------------	-----

Statutes.

1897, Dec. 24. Trustees of Columbia canal.....	219
1890, Dec. 24. Trustees of Columbia canal.....	219

General Statutes, 1832.

§§ 1550-1561. Eminent domain.....	229
-----------------------------------	-----

Revised Statutes, 1893.

§§ 1743-1755. Eminent domain.....	220
§ 2130. Homestead.....	300

Tennessee.Constitution, 1859.

Art. 11, § 7. Special acts.....	543
---------------------------------	-----

Constitution.

Art. 1, § 6. Right of trial by impartial jury.....	673
8. Property rights.....	448, 673
9. Criminal prosecutions.....	673
21. Compensation for property taken for public use.....	448
23. Imprisonment for debt forbidden.....	673
2, § 2. Legislative authority.....	723
§ 17. Bills.....	446
ol. 2. Title of act.....	667
2. Repealing acts.....	671
§ 23. Taxing property.....	723
23. Taxing property.....	723
§ 2. Concurrence of three judges necessary to decision.....	540
11, § 2. Prohibiting passage of special laws.....	543, 738

Statutes.

1850, Feb. 1. Survival of action for negligent injury.....	444
1871, chap. 73. Survival of action for negligent injury.....	444
1879, chap. 84, § 13. Repealing act.....	672
chap. 183, § 4. Repealing act.....	672
1881, chap. 121. Assignment act.....	446
chap. 171, § 83. Repealing act.....	672
1883, chap. 184. Measure of damages for wrongful killing.....	443
1891, chap. 101. Liability of railroad for stock killed on track.....	671
chap. 101, § 8. Repealing act.....	672
1893, chap. 89, § 12. Repealing act.....	672
1895, Feb. 23. Disposal of garbage.....	282
May 11, chap. 123, pp. 253, 260. Assignment act.....	446
chap. 67. Hotel, inn, and boarding house keepers.....	666
80, p. 122. Authority of Knox county court to build bridge across Tennessee river.....	542
Ex. Sess. chap. 1. Reelfoot lake levee district.....	727

Code, 1853.

§ 2291. Survival of action for negligent injury.....	444
2292. Survival of action for negligent injury.....	444

Milliken & Vertrees' Code.

§ 53. Power of majority to act.....	540
842. Concurrence of three judges necessary to decision.....	540
1192. Power of school directors.....	550
8130. Right to damages for wrongful killing.....	443
8131. Right to damages for wrongful killing.....	443
8134. Measure of damages for wrongful killing.....	443
4187. Agreed case.....	542
5338. Cumulative sentences.....	514
5348. "Murder" defined.....	673
5349. Murder.....	673
§§ 5468-5472. False pretences.....	673

Vermont.
Constitution.
Art. 7, chap. 1. Government for common benefit.....	101
Statutes.
1894, No. 59. Itenerant vendors.....	100
Revised Laws.
§ 2951. Peddlers' license.....	108
Virginia.
Statutes.
1893, chap. 78. Ballot law.....	147
p. 730. Duties of secretary of electoral board.....	145
1894, March 6. Method of voting.....	145
1893, March 4 (pp. 768-770). Method of voting.....	145
Code.
Chap. 8, § 67. Appointment of registrars of election.....	145
§ 68. Duties of secretary of electoral board.....	145
69. Filling of vacancies.....	145
71. New registration.....	145
117. Appointment of judges of election.....	145
133. Appointment of commissioners.....	145
2901. Sunday trains.....	108
2902. "Sunday" defined.....	108
Washington.
Constitution.
Art. 2, § 19. Title of act.....	819
§ 6. Prohibiting county indebtedness for any other than county purposes.....	820
§ 7. Prohibiting county aid.....	820
Statutes.
1895, Feb. 12, p. 3. Powers of counties relative to public works.....	819
Wisconsin.
Constitution.
Art. 4, § 22. Powers of board of supervisors..	13
§ 1. Rule of taxation.....	135
§ 10. Contraction of debt.....	135
Statutes.
1895, chap. 128. Home for feeble-minded.....	121
84 L. R. A.

Revised Statutes, 1849.
Chap. 41, § 5. Plat of 1851.....	735
Revised Statutes, 1831.
§ 255. Suit of infant.....	143
256. Suit of infant.....	143
258. Damages for death of child.....	143
Revised Statutes, 1894.
Chap. 22. Support of insane persons.....	131
254. Suit of infant.....	143
257. Suit of infant.....	143
257. Damages for death of child.....	143
659, subd. 5. County taxes.....	124
2359. Judgment and replevin.....	822
2368. Judgment and replevin.....	822
Code, 1881.
§ 23. Damages for death of child.....	142
Wyoming.
Constitution.
Art. 14. Salaries.....	840
15, § 5. County revenue tax.....	878
16, § 3. Limitation of county indebtedness.....	837
§ 4. Municipal indebtedness.....	837
Statutes.
1890, chap. 80, § 84. Nomination of candidates for office.....	849
§ 85. Primary meeting defined.....	849
86. Certification of nominations.....	849
88. Filing certificates.....	849
93. Nominations.....	849
95. Declining nomination.....	849
96. Filling vacancy.....	849
97. Filling vacancy.....	849
1890-91, chap. 72. Limitation of action on contract.....	839
1898, chap. 6. Predatory wild animals.....	838
chap. 83. County orders.....	844
1895, chap. 102, p. 237. Animal tax levy.....	843
Revised Statutes, 1887.
P. 39. Municipal and county indebtedness.....	837
§ 1798. Powers and duties of county commissioners.....	842
1801. County orders.....	844
1802. Board meetings.....	844
1901. Authority of commissioners to settle accounts against county.....	844
2270. Limitation of action on contract.....	858
2590. Memoranda of decedent.....	891
2591. Testimony of adverse party.....	898
2595. Confession of judgments.....	844
2599. Confession of judgments.....	844
2571. Confession of judgments.....	844

LAWYERS' REPORTS

ANNOTATED.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

Lewis F. F. ABBOTT

2.

Valentine DOANE, Jr.

(168 Mass. 483.)

1. A note by a stockholder, director, and creditor of a corporation, given to the maker of an accommodation note which the corporation had received the benefit of, in consideration of money furnished by the maker of the accommodation note to pay it, is not without consideration although the payee was bound to take up the other note.

2. The performance of a contract by a party who has hesitated or refused to NOTE.—Performance of existing contract obligation as consideration for new promise.

In its simplest form this question is free from difficulty, and the decisions upon it are harmonious. But when the further question is involved, as to how far a person may free himself from his contract obligation and make his old promise form the consideration for a new promise by his adversary, the subject becomes technical, and is attended with much difficulty; and the decisions dealing with it have not always dealt with the facts as they appeared in the case in reaching conclusions, so that conflict and uncertainty appear. A strict application of fundamental principles to the actual facts would remove much of this difficulty, and extend the rule governing the simpler forms of the subject into its more complex forms.

The general rule is that a promise cannot be conditioned on a promise to do a thing to which the party is already legally bound. Wimer v. Overseers of Poor, 104 Pa. 817.

And this rule extends universally through all the cases in which the simple question has arisen as to whether or not performance of an existing obligation is a consideration for a new promise by the other party.

So, performing the obligation of a mortgage contract is not a sufficient consideration for a new promise by one of the parties. Lukens's Appeal, 142 Pa. 396, 18 L. R. A. 581.

Payment of existing debt as consideration.

A large number of cases hold that payment of part of a debt already due is no consideration for a promise to release the remainder of the debt. Note to Fuller v. Kemp (N. Y.) 20 L. R. A. 785.

In Anonymous, 1 Vent. 258, it is said that a promise by a person to pay a sum of money which he owes is not a good consideration; but payment of a debt without suit is a good consideration.

No man can make his own wrong in withholding what he justly owes the foundation of a demand against his creditor. Keffer v. Grayson, 76 Va. 517.

An engagement by a man to pay his own debts is no consideration for a promise to him by a third person. Jones v. Waite, 5 Bing. N. C. 341.

The payment by one of a debt clearly due does not constitute sufficient consideration for any kind of contract or agreement. No one can claim compensation for doing that which he is plainly and clearly bound by law to do. Swaggard v. Hancock, 25 Mo. App. 586.

24 L. R. A.

Payment of money presently due is not a consideration for a promise to give the debtor a quitclaim deed to land standing in the name of the creditor. Tucker v. Bartle, 35 Mo. 114.

A payment of an existing debt is not a consideration upon which a court of equity will enforce a promise to convey real estate. Smith v. Phillips, 77 Va. 548.

A promise to surrender a premium note which has been given to an insurance company upon payment of an assessment then due is without consideration. Sands v. Hill, 42 Barb. 651.

Payment of money already due is not a consideration for an agreement to attempt to collect the balance of the debt from other persons. Pemberton v. Hoosier, 1 Kan. 108.

In case of a claim of a balance due under a contract and for an additional amount for extras, an agreement to pay the balance due on the contract in case of the abandonment of the claim for extras is not founded on any consideration, since an agreement to pay that which a party has contracted to pay does not constitute a consideration for a new promise to perform the same contract. Widman v. Brown, 88 Mich. 241.

Payment of part of what is due on a judgment is not a consideration for a promise by the creditor to convey to the debtor land which he had received in part satisfaction of the original debt in addition to the satisfaction of the entire judgment. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Rink, 110 Ill. 538.

A promise by a creditor in consideration of the execution of a note by his debtor for a debt already due to supply him with goods in the future is without consideration. Overdeer v. Wiley, 30 Ala. 708.

If interest is already payable on an overdue account, a positive agreement by the debtor to pay interest is not a sufficient consideration for an agreement by the creditor to give six months' notice of withdrawal before proceeding to collect the money. Orme v. Galloway, 9 Exch. 544, 2 C. L. Rep. 480, 23 L. J. Exch. N. S. 113 (1884).

A promise to take up notes on which the promisor is liable as indorser is not a valid consideration. Sherwin v. Brigham, 30 Ohio St. 137.

So, payment of a part of the amount due is no consideration for a promise to extend the time for payment of the residue. King v. State Bank, 9 Ark. 185, 47 Am. Dec. 739; Stone v. State Bank, 8 Ark. 145; Thompson v. Robinson, 34 Ark. 44; Liening v. Gould, 13 Cal. 598; State, Clark, D. & Co., v. Dav-enport, 12 Iowa, 335; Price v. Cannon, 3 Mo. 483; complete it may constitute a good consideration for a promise by a third person who will be benefited by such performance.

(April 6, 1895.)

EXCEPTIONS by defendant to rulings of the Superior Court for Suffolk County, made during the trial of an action on a promissory note, which resulted in a verdict in plaintiff's favor. OVERRULED.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Miller v. Holbrook, 1 Wend. 317; Kellogg v. Olmsted, 23 Barb. 96; Hall v. Constant, 2 Hall, 185; Halliday v. Hart, 30 N. Y. 474; Turnbull v. Brock, 31 Ohio St. 649; Jenkins v. Clarkson, 7 Ohio, pt. 1, p. 72; Pomeroy v. Blade, 16 Vt. 230; Wheeler v. Washburn, 24 Vt. 293.

In Kellogg v. Olmsted, 25 N. Y. 189, the court, in deciding that a promise to pay an overdue debt at a certain time in the future with interest is not a consideration for a promise to extend the time of payment, states that it has been decided over and over again that if the creditor whose debt is due receives part payment of it, and in consideration of such payment promises to postpone or extend the time for payment of the balance, the promise is void for want of consideration.

So, a promise to pay an existing obligation will not support a promise to extend the time of payment. Hopkins v. Logan, 5 Mees. & W. 241, 7 Dowl. P. C. 360.

An agreement to pay in the future is not a consideration for the extension of the time of payment of a debt already due. Stickler v. Giles, 9 Wash. 147.

A promise before the maturity of a promissory note to extend the time of payment to a fixed date, if at that time it will be promptly paid, is without consideration. Gibson v. Irby, 17 Tex. 173.

A note given in part payment of an existing liability is not a sufficient consideration to support an agreement to give time for payment of the residue. Gison v. Renne, 19 Wend. 399.

An agreement to pay money which is due in a way which could be insisted upon by the creditor without the agreement is no consideration for the extension of time for the payment. McManus v. Bark, L. R. 5 Exch. 65, 39 L. J. Exch. N. S. 65, 21 L. T. N. S. 676.

The agreement to pay a debt which is due by regular instalments with interest is not a consideration for an agreement to postpone the time of payment. Reer v. Foakes, L. R. 11 Q. B. Div. 221, 52 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 712.

So, payment of accrued interest on a note is not a consideration for a promise to extend the time of payment. Helms v. Crane, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 89; Hale v. Forbis, 3 Mont. 395; Hunt v. Postlewait, 23 Iowa. 427; Dennis v. Piper, 21 Ill. App. 169; Waters v. Simpson, 7 Ill. 570.

So, accepting a non-negotiable note for the interest due on a bond is without consideration so as to constitute a valid contract to extend the time of payment of the bond. Gahn v. Niemcewicz, 11 Wend. 312.

So, a promise to pay interest during the time of forbearance is no consideration for the agreement to forbear, when the debtor is already bound to pay interest. Reynolds v. Ward, 5 Wend. 501; Parmelee v. Thompson, 45 N. Y. 53, 6 Am. Rep. 33; Abel v. Alexander, 45 Ind. 523, 15 Am. Rep. 270; Holmes v. Boyd, 30 Ind. 382; Dow v. Chambers, 14 Phila. 647; Moore v. Macon Sav. Bank, 22 Mo. App. 692.

An agreement to pay interest on a note in the same way which the law would imply from the contract will not be a consideration for the extension of the time of payment. McCann v. Lewis, 9 Cal. 246.

34 L. R. A.

Mr. W. B. French, for defendant:

In order to constitute a valid consideration to support a promise, the promisee must do something which he was not bound to do.

Jennings v. Chase, 10 Allen, 526; Smith v. Bartholomew, 1 Met. 276, 2 J. Am. Dec. 365; Pool v. Boston, 5 Cush. 219; Bartlett v. Wyman, 14 Johns. 260; Dodge v. Stiles, 26 Conn. 463.

When one party to a contract makes a promise to the other party to the contract as an in-

A mere agreement to pay interest as called for on the contract is not sufficient to uphold an agreement to extend the time for payment of the debt. Wilson v. Powers, 130 Mass. 127.

The agreement to pay interest in a certain manner or to pay the principal in certain instalments is not a consideration for an agreement to extend the time of payment. Van Allen v. Jones, 10 Bosw. 369; Hume v. Mazelin, 84 Ind. 574.

Payment of part of a note when it is due, and an agreement to pay interest on the residue, is not a consideration for an agreement to extend time of payment of the note. Fairchild v. Warren, 21 How. Pr. 187.

But the time for the performance of a contract may be enlarged if the agreement for enlargement is made at a time when each party will receive some consideration for his promise to extend the time.

At any time before breach the parties may by mutual promises extend the time for performance. McNish v. Reynolds, 96 Pa. 493.

In case of an agreement executory on both sides the time for performance may be extended by mutual agreement without any other or further consideration. Clark v. Dale, 20 Barb. 42.

But after the time for performance of a contract has expired, so that there is a breach by one of the parties, there can be no valid extension of time of performance without a new consideration. Hill v. Blake, 16 Jones & S. 253.

In Cox v. Bennet, 13 N. J. L. 165, a condition in a bond for the payment of money within a year was held capable of enlargement by an agreement without consideration so as to make a certain portion payable each year until the entire amount was paid.

But in Stryker v. Vanderbilt, 27 N. J. L. 63, it was held that an agreement, after the breach of the original contract, to extend the time of the performance, must be on a new consideration.

In Miller v. Holbrook, 1 Wend. 317, the court says of Keating v. Price, 1 Johns. Cas. 23, 1 Am. Dec. 92, in which the time of performance of a contract was enlarged, that it is to be presumed that in that case it appeared that the promise to enlarge the time of performance was founded on a good and sufficient consideration.

In Flanders v. Fay, 40 Vt. 316, it seems to be assumed that to enlarge the time of performance of a contract requires a new agreement upon a new consideration.

Where a debt is payable in specific property a new contract made before the debt has become payable, changing the mode of payment and extending the time, needs no new consideration for its support. Thrall v. Mead's Estate, 40 Vt. 540. The court says there is a manifest distinction between cases where the debt is already due when the agreement is made and one where it is not due and is payable in specific articles, and the debtor relying on the new agreement suffers the time specified in the original contract for payment to expire. In such case it would be a fraud to allow the creditor to collect the debt in money when the original contract expires, and repudiate the new agreement, and thus convert the debt into money contrary to document to secure its performance, the promise is without consideration, although the promisor receives some benefit from the performance. There seems to be no reason on principle why the same rule should not hold where a third person, a stranger to the contract, makes a like promise.

Putnam v. Woodbury, 68 Me. 58; Brownlee v. Lowe, 117 Ind. 420; Gordon v. Gordon, 56 N. H. 170; Johnson v. Sellers, 33 Ala. 265; Schuler v. Mylon, 48 Kan. 282; L'Amoreux v.

Gould, 7 N. Y. 849, 57 Am. Dec. 524; Peelman v. Peelman, 4 Ind. 612; Merrick v. Giddings, 1 Mackey, 394; Davenport v. First Cong. Soc. 33 Wis. 390.

A promise based on the consideration of doing that which one is already bound to do is invalid, whether the plaintiff's prior obligation were an obligation to the defendant or to a third person.

Hilliard, Cont. p. 251; Richardson v. Williams, 49 Me. 558; Edison v. Jackson Water

the agreement and to the prejudice of the debtor.

If one who has contracted to deliver coal at a certain time is not able to comply with his contract, and so notifies the other party, and requests him, if he is going to take advantage of the breach, to say so, saying under such circumstances the coal will not be delivered at all, whereupon the other party states that he will waive the breach and accept and pay for the coal when delivered, the latter cannot, after receiving the coal, refuse to pay for it because it was not delivered within the terms of the contract. Lawrence v. Davey, 28 Vt. 284.

In Connelly v. Devoe, 37 Conn. 570, where there was a contract to dig a well within a given time, which could not be done because of the caving in of the well after it was partly constructed, whereupon the parties made a new agreement for extending time of performance, it was contended that there was no consideration for the extended time, but the court said that the abandonment of the original contract when in force, to substitute a new agreement for it, was a sufficient consideration. And the court then says that, further, it was for the interest of the owner to have the work completed, and adds: "And besides, defendant suffered the plaintiff to go on with the work after the agreement was made."

It appears in the case that after the new agreement the builder on the faith of the contract to extend the time for performance purchased additional materials and performed additional work, so that a refusal to extend the time would result in appropriating his added labor and money for which he would receive no compensation, and which he would not have furnished had the refusal to continue been made when the accident occurred. Of course such conduct worked an estoppel against afterwards refusing to permit him to finish the work, and is of itself sufficient ground to uphold the recovery in favor of plaintiff, so that what is said about consideration is not really necessary to the decision of the case.

Where an action for breach of the covenant to repair was defended upon the ground that after the breach the landlord agreed, in consideration that the tenant would repair before a certain date, to refrain from suit before that time, the court said there is no good consideration laid for the plaintiff's promise to forbear to sue. The defendant was liable to damages upon the covenant immediately for not repairing, and therefore the promise by him to repair before the designated date would be no consideration for the plaintiff's promise to forbear. Bayley v. Homan, 8 Bing. N. C. 915.

Promise to release joint debtor.

The payment of a debt by a debtor, which is due and payable, is not a sufficient consideration to support a promise. So, an agreement by the holder of a joint and several debt to one of the debtors upon his payment of part of the amount to look to the other debtor for the balance is without consideration and is not binding. Smith v. Bartholomew, 1 Met. 276, 25 Am. Dec. 365.

34 L. R. A.

An agreement by one of the makers of a note to pay the whole amount is no consideration for the promise of the surety to release the other maker from liability. Cameron v. Warbritton, 9 Ind. 351.

The promise of one partner to pay the debts of the firm is no consideration for the promise of a creditor to release the other partner. Wadhams v. Page, 1 Wash. 420; Barly v. Burt, 68 Iowa, 716; Wildes v. Fessenden, 4 Met. 12; Lodge v. Dicus, 3 Barn. & Ald. 611; David v. Ellice, 5 Barn. & C. 196, 1 Car. & P. 368, 7 Dowl. & R. 600; Smith v. Rogers, 17 Johns. 340.

Some of the cases involving the question of release of partner involve other matters than the mere question of consideration, so that the subject is not fully treated here.

Payment by surety.

Payment by a surety whose obligation has become fixed is no consideration for the promise of the other party to deliver up to him the obligation of the principal. Dixon v. Adams, Cro. Eliz. pt. 2, p. 538.

Promise not to sue.

Payment of part of a debt already due and payable is no consideration for the agreement to forbear to sue for the residue. Warren v. Dodge, 121 Mass. 106; Reynolds v. Lofland, 3 Harr. (Del.) 366; Pabodie v. King, 12 Johns. 428.

A promise by a debtor to make monthly payments upon certain of his overdue notes upon which the holder has no security is not a good consideration for the promise of the creditor to forbear for a time to press for payment of another overdue note against the same debtor upon which there are indorsers. Jennings v. Chase, 10 Allen. 523.

An agreement not to sue in case of the making of definite payments of a sum already due is without consideration. Keirn v. Andrews, 50 Miss. 30.

A payment of part of the sum due on a note is not a sufficient consideration for a promise to remit interest due upon the note or to delay suit. Barron v. Vandvert, 13 Ala. 232.

Payment of interest due is not a consideration for an agreement to forbear. Crossman v. Wohlleben, 90 Ill. 537; Woolford v. Dow, 24 Ill. 423.

A promise to forbear in collection of a debt upon the promise of the debtor to pay interest which was already due is without consideration. Stuber v. Schwick, 33 Ill. 191.

A promise to pay in the future rent now due and for which a suit has been brought is no consideration for an agreement to discontinue the suit. Farrington v. Bullard, 40 Barb. 512.

So, a payment of part of a judgment is not a consideration for holding up the execution as to the remainder. Yeary v. Smith, 45 Tex. 72.

Compliance with obligation to deliver papers or property.

A promise to pay for the delivery of a paper which the holder is already in duty bound to deliver is without consideration. McCaleb v. Price, 12 Ala. 753.

Where a person has agreed to surrender a cou-

Co. 12 Cal. 542; Ritenour v. Mathews, 42 Ind. 7; 3 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 886, note; Havana Press Drill Co. v. Ashurst, 148 Ill. 115; Re Goddard's Estate, 86 Vt. 415; Baker v. Wahrmond, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 268; Ford v. Garner, 15 Ind. 298; Reynolds v. Nugent, 25 Ind. 828; Newton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 66 Iowa, 423; Vanderbilt v. Schreyer, 91 N.Y. 392; Seybolt v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 95 N. Y. 563, 47 Am. Rep. 75; Robinson v.

Jewett, 116 N. Y. 40; Sherwin v. Brigham, 39 Ohio St. 187; Wimer v. Overseers of Poor, 104 Pa. 817; Successive Promises of the Same Performances, 8 Harvard L. Rev. 27, 1894.

There are two English cases which state a contrary rule.

Scotson v. Pegg, 80 L. J. Exch. N. S. 325; Shadwell v. Shadwell, 80 L. J. C. P. N. S. 145.

Scotson v. Pegg seems to be, however, directly in conflict with Herring v. Dorell, 8 tract whenever requested by another to do so, his surrender will furnish no consideration for a new promise by the other. Proctor v. Thompson, 13 Abb. N. C. 340.

In case one has by fraud obtained a satisfaction piece of a judgment under such circumstances that a court of equity would compel him to return it, his retention of it is not a consideration for a promise on the part of the judgment creditor that the judgment should be subordinated to mortgages subsequently executed. Crosby v. Wood, 6 N. Y. 260.

An agreement by a mortgagor to surrender possession of the mortgaged premises after condition broken, as is required by the law of the land, will not furnish a consideration for a new promise on the part of the mortgagee. Wendover v. Baker, 121 Mo. 273.

The surrender of a satisfied note, and the cancellation of a mortgage given to secure it, are not alone sufficient considerations to support a new note. Smith v. Boruff, 75 Ind. 413.

The delivery by an executor to a legatee of property to which he is entitled under the will is no consideration for a release of all other demands which the legatee may have against the executor. Bruton v. Wooten, 15 Ga. 570.

The surrender by the creditor of collateral security after the signing of a release by a composition deed is not a sufficient consideration for a promise by the debtor to pay money to the creditor. Cowper v. Green, 7 Mees. & W. 633.

A promise by one for whom a boat is being built, that in case it is delivered to him he will pay all demands of those who have worked on it under contract with the builder, is without consideration. Jones v. Miller, 12 Mo. 408.

If one acting for the benefit of a corporation procures the renewal of a lease a contract to induce him to assign the lease to the corporation is without consideration. Robinson v. Jewett, 115 N. Y. 40.

Agreement to comply with lease.

A new promise by a landlord after the execution of a lease is not sufficient to maintain an action in favor of the tenant when it is founded only upon the promise of the tenant to perform his contract. Jackson v. Cobbin, 8 Mees. & W. 790, 1 Dowl. N. S. 93.

Gratuitous agreements in variation of a lease, if unexecuted, will not prevent the specific enforcement of the lease as originally written. Price v. Dyer, 17 Ves. Jr. 264.

An agreement after the execution of the lease of a farm, that the tenant will not use the pasture for horses without extra compensation to the landlord, is without consideration. Tryon v. Mooney, 9 Johns. 258.

A promise by a tenant in possession of a farm to do things not required by the contract is without consideration and void. Brown v. Crump, 1 Marsh. 607.

Where a covenant requires a house to be in repair, a subsequent agreement that a man shall be employed three or four days about the repair of the house is without consideration and will not satisfy the obligation. Adams v. Tapling, 4 Mod. 88.

34 L. R. A.

If after the destruction of a fence on leased premises the lessee is still under obligations to continue to occupy the premises, a promise on the part of the landlord to repair the fence in consideration of the lessee's remaining on the property is without binding force. Proctor v. Keith, 13 B. Mon. 253.

A promise by the landlord to make repairs which he is not bound by the lease to make, in consideration that the tenant remain on the premises, when his contract binds him to do so, cannot be enforced. Eblin v. Miller, 73 Ky. 371; Libbey v. Telford, 45 Me. 316, 77 Am. Dec. 229; Purcell v. English, 86 Ind. 34, 44 Am. Rep. 256; Gill v. Middleton, 105 Mass. 477, 7 Am. Rep. 648; Doupe v. Gennin, 37 How. Pr. 5; Speckels v. Sax, 1 R. D. Smith, 253.

A promise by a landlord during the continuance of the lease to make certain repairs on the mere consideration of the rent reserved in the lease is without consideration. Miller v. Ridgely, 19 Ill. App. 306.

If after the execution of a lease the lessee objects to taking possession because of the defective condition of the premises, whereupon the landlord promises to make repairs, the promise is without consideration. Gottsberger v. Radway, 2 Hilt. 342. The court says that a binding contract having been made it was necessary that some new consideration should exist to support a promise to make repairs or constitute an agreement which would take the place of, change, or alter the conditions of the one already existing.

But if the premises become untenable a promise of the tenant to remain may furnish a sufficient consideration for a promise by the landlord to pay for all damages done to his furniture by so doing. Dunn v. Robins, 48 N. Y. S. R. 45.

So, an agreement by a landlord to reduce the rent reserved in the lease at a time when the tenant has not refused to execute the terms of the lease, and has no right to do so, is without consideration and void. Goldborough v. Gable, 140 Ill. 299, 15 L. R. A. 294; Wheeler v. Baker, 59 Iowa, 90; Crowley v. Vitty, 7 Exch. 322, 21 L. J. Exch. N. S. 135.

Conversely, a promise to pay more rent during the existence of the term, is without consideration. Taylor v. Winters, 6 Phila. 123.

An executory agreement in writing, without any consideration, to reduce the rents secured to be paid by a lease, is a mere nudum pactum. Loach v. Farnum, 80 Ill. 368.

After suit brought to recover rent in arrears an agreement by the tenant to pay the arrearages and the costs of the suit is no consideration for an agreement to abate the rent in the future. Coe v. Hobby, 72 N. Y. 141, 28 Am. Rep. 120.

But an agreement for a different rent may be made at any time in case of a tenancy at will. Hanson v. Hellen (Me.) 3 New Eng. Rep. 229.

And if a reduction of rent is necessary to enable the tenant to continue business, and the landlord considers that it would be of advantage to him to have the business continue, there is a sufficient consideration for a reduction of the rent. Jaffray v. Greenbaum, 64 Iowa, 492.

So, if during the term of a lease, under which a certain number of bushels of corn are to be paid as Dowl. P. C. 604; Atkinson v. Settras, Willes, Rep. 483; Jones v. Wait, 5 Bing. N. C. 841; Clark, Cont. pp. 188, 189; 1 Parsons, Cont. 8th ed. 452.

Mr. Henry L. Parker for plaintiff.

Allen, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff had given his accommodation note to a corporation, which had had it discounted at a bank, and left it unpaid at its maturity. The defendant being a stockholder, director, and creditor of the corporation, wishing to have the note paid at once for his own advantage, entered into an agreement with the plaintiff, whereby he was to give to the plaintiff his own note for the amount, and the plaintiff was to furnish money to enable the defendant to take up the note at the bank. This agreement was carried out, and rent from the crop raised, the crop is destroyed by an unprecedented storm, whereupon the persons agree that the tenant shall plant another crop and give the landlord one half of what is raised, there is a sufficient change of consideration to support the agreement. Raymond v. Kraushopf, 87 Iowa, 602.

In Nicoll v. Burke, 8 Abb. N. C. 513, the court, without discussing the question of consideration, holds that an agreement to take less rent for the future was binding after the agreement was executed by the completion of the term and the payment of the rent for the term at the altered rate.

Agreement to comply with marriage contract.

A note executed by a husband living separate from his wife, to induce her to return to him, is without consideration. Copeland v. Boaz, 9 Baxt. 223, 40 Am. Rep. 89.

But since some cases treat the consideration in such cases as illegal rather than as wanting entirely (Merrill v. Peaslee, 146 Mass. 460), that branch of the subject does not properly fall within the scope of this note, and the cases are reserved for a full treatment of the subject elsewhere.

Promise to do duty.

The general question of compliance with a duty imposed by law, such as cases of public officers, witnesses, etc., are not included in this note. But there are a few cases which are so close to the line of contract obligations, that they are inserted here.

An agreement by a father to pay his minor daughter wages if she will stay at home and help her mother in the care of the household is without consideration. Boiton v. Terpeny, 14 N. Y. Week. Dig. 533.

Where it appears that scales of the buyer by which articles subject to a contract of purchase and sale have been weighed were incorrect, an agreement by the seller to pay the buyer a bonus for reweighing them correctly is without consideration, since it is the duty of the buyer to ascertain the correct weight. Billings v. Filley, 31 Neb. 511.

In Cobb v. Cowdery, 40 Vt. 25, 94 Am. Dec. 370, it is said that a promise is without consideration where the only consideration for it is the promise of the other party to do, or his actual doing, something which he was previously bound by law to do.

It is impossible to say there is a valuable consideration where the debtor does no more than the law compels him to do, and the creditor receives no more than he is entitled to receive. Keffer v. Grayson, 76 Va. 317.

Where a mortgagor has agreed in the mortgage to procure insurance on the property and assign the policy to the mortgagee, an agreement by the mortgagee upon receiving the assignment to account to the mortgagor for one half of the proceeds of the policy in case of loss is without consideration and void. Lewis v. McReavy, 7 Wash. 294.

Cases to be distinguished.

Where there is breach on both sides.

If the contract has been broken by the other party, so that one who is demanding additional consideration is under no obligation to go on with the performance, there may be a valid new contract. Thus, if under a building contract the owner does not pay the instalments when they are due, and the builder then refuses to go on without security, an agreement for security is valid. Byington v. Simpson, 134 Mass. 145.
34 L. R. A.

Additional promises on both sides.

If the service is not contemplated in the original contract, a new agreement for extra compensation in regard to it is valid. Richardson v. Hooper, 13 Pick. 446.

If the modification requires the doing of something additional on the part of one party, the other after accepting performance cannot escape liability on the ground that the contract was without consideration. Maxwell v. Graves, 59 Iowa, 614.

If after the making of a contract to melt iron in a mill at a certain amount per ton the mill stops, and before it resumes there is an agreement to take less per ton, the starting of the mill is a sufficient consideration to support the agreement. Church v. Florence Iron Works, 45 N. J. L. 123.

Unforeseen difficulties may entitle to a new contract for extra compensation. Osborne v. O'Reilly, 43 N. J. Eq. 497.

If one party has a right to terminate the agreement at his option, a promise by the other to pay a certain compensation as an inducement not to exercise the option is not without consideration. Spangler v. Springer, 23 Pa. 454.

Work already completed when additional promise made.

After the work has been completed a promise by the owner of the building to pay by a different scale of prices or at higher rates than those provided by the original contract is without consideration. Randolph v. Perry, 3 Port. (Ala.) 376, 37 Am. Dec. 659.

Waiver of conditions.

More cases of waiver of the performance of conditions in a contract, such as Fleming v. Gilbert, 3 Johns. 523, are distinguishable from those of the making of new contracts.

A provision in a lease for three months' notice of intention to quit at the end of the term may be waived by the landlord making a new contract within three months of the expiration of the term for the payment of rent at a different time than that provided for in the original lease. Wilgus v. Whitehead, 6 W. N. C. 537.

Acceptance of performance.

Where one person contracts to fix on a proper location and build a mill, the acceptance of the mill after it is finished is a waiver of any objection to the locality, or to the time, or to the manner of building. Emerson v. Cogswell, 16 Me. 77.

Where an engine contracted for was not delivered at the time called for by the contract, but was subsequently delivered under an agreement to waive any claim for damages for the delay, and the buyer claimed that the agreement was void because without consideration because he received the defendant now contends that his note to the plaintiff was without consideration, because the plaintiff was already bound in law to take up the note at the bank. It is possible that, for one reason or another, both the bank and the plaintiff may have been willing to wait awhile, but that the defendant's interests were imperiled by a delay, and indeed required that the note should be paid at once, and that the corporation whose duty it was primarily to pay it was without present means to do so. Since the defendant was sane, sui juris, was not imposed upon, nor under duress, knew what he was about, no more than he was entitled to under the old contract, the court states that the case is within the rule that a contract may be modified by a new agreement without any new consideration, but finally decides that the real question is not so much whether there was any consideration for the waiver of a legal right by the buyer as whether at the time when the delivery was made the contract, according to the understanding of the parties, was performed. If the buyer consented to receive the engine in satisfaction of the contract after the time for delivery had passed, the acceptance was as much binding on him as if he had consented to receive it in time, waiving some defects in material or finish. Moore v. Detroit Locomotive Works, 14 Mich. 266.

Promise of additional compensation for completing contract.

It is in this class of cases that the difficulty has arisen. Application of the rules so overwhelmingly established by the decisions cited above would seem to lead to the conclusion that a promise of additional compensation for completing work called for by a contract would be nudum pactum. And such was the rule of the earlier cases. But some of the later decisions by the application of what would appear to be false principles, or the assumption of facts which did not exist, have gone far towards establishing a rule that if one under contract to do certain work, during its progress demands additional compensation therefor, which is promised him, he can enforce the promise. This result may perhaps properly follow in two classes of cases:

(1) Those in which while the contract is yet progressing toward completion one party becomes so convinced that the other is not receiving sufficient benefit that he is willing to give him something extra, and so, without breach by either, the parties rescind the old contract and then make a new one providing for additional benefit.

(2) If one party has refused to go on so that his contract is broken, and both parties recognize it as terminated, so that all that remains is his adversary's right of action for the breach, then the contract obligation no longer exists, and it would seem that the parties could make any new contract they wish to although it involves the same subject-matter as the old one. In such case the liability for damages for the breach still exists and a consideration is necessary to release it, although of course if so agreed the consideration may be found in the undertakings of the new contract. It is the failure to apply these rules to the actual facts of the cases which has involved the cases in such confusion.

General rule.

The general rule is that if the rights of one contracting to work on a building are fixed by the contract, any promise to pay him extra for doing what the contract binds him to do is without consideration. Nelson v. Pickwick Associated Co. 30 Ill. App. 333.

A promise to pay one to do what he is already bound to do by contract is without consideration. Ritenour v. Mathews, 42 Ind. 7.

In Laboyteaux v. Swigart, 103 Ind. 596, the court in deciding that payment by a third person to a surety liable for a debt of a less amount than was due was a sufficient consideration for his agreement to pay off the whole debt, says that it is a general principle that a promise to one to pay him if he will do that which by law or by contract he is already bound to do, is without consideration and cannot be enforced.

When a party merely does what he has already obligated himself to do he cannot demand an additional compensation therefor, and, although by taking advantage of the necessities of his adversary he obtains a promise for more, the law will regard it as a nudum pactum, and will not lend its process to aid in the wrong. Lingenfelder v. Wainwright Brewing Co. 103 Mo. 573.

Illustrations of the rule.

A sailor cannot recover on a promise for extra wages. Harris v. Watson, Peake, 72.

So, a seaman is not entitled to sue on a promise made by the master of the vessel to induce him to stay by the ship when others of the crew have deserted. Stilk v. Myrick, 2 Campb. 517, 6 Esp. 129; Harris v. Carter, 3 El. & Bl. 559, 23 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 295, 2 C. L. Rep. 1532, 18 Jur. 1014.

So, a promise to pay seamen additional wages, made at a foreign port on their threat of desertion, is without consideration and void. Bartlett v. Wyman, 14 Johns. 260.

So, where a seaman shipped for a voyage at a certain price per month, the articles providing that he might be transferred to another ship in the same service, and during the voyage he was so transferred under articles which provided for higher wages, the court refused to enforce the new contract, holding that it was without consideration. Fraser v. Hatton, 2 C. B. N. S. 512.

But this rule may be changed if the conditions of the voyage are so far changed as to release the seamen from their contract. Hartley v. Ponsonby, 7 El. & Bl. 872, 26 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 822, 5 Jur. N. S. 744; Turner v. Owen, 3 Post. & F. 177.

Where a person had contracted to enter the military service of the United States to the credit of a certain township for a certain bonus, and afterwards refused to do so because of an offer from another township of a greater bonus, whereupon he was offered the same by the first township, the court held that there was no consideration for the latter promise, and that it would not be enforced. Reynolds v. Nugent, 26 Ind. 823.

Where one who had contracted for the construction of a railroad refused to proceed without extra pay, which was promised, the court held the promise to be without consideration. Ayres v. Chicago, R. L. & P. R. Co. 53 Iowa, 473.

Where one party to a contract refuses to perform it unless promised some further pay or benefit than the contract provides, and the promise is made, and such refusal and promise are one transaction, the promise is without consideration unless the promise was induced by substantial and unforeseen difficulties in the performance which would cast upon the party additional burdens not anticipated when the contract was made. King v. Duluth, M. & N. R. Co. 61 Minn. 432.

Where an architect refused to comply with his contract to supervise the erection of a building because a part of the work was given to a business rival of a concern of which he was president, and the owner of the building in order to induce him to and probably acted for his own advantage, it would certainly be unfortunate if the rules of law required us to hold his note invalid for want of a sufficient consideration, when he has had all the benefit that he expected to get from it. In this commonwealth, it was long ago decided that even between the original parties to a building contract, if, after having done a part of the work, the builder refused to proceed, but afterwards, on being promised more pay by the owner, went on and finished the building, he might recover the whole sum so promised. Munroe v. Perkins, 9 Pick. 298, 30 Am. Dec. 475.

comply with his contract promised him a commission on the work done by such rival, the court refused to enforce the contract, saying, to permit a plaintiff to recover under such circumstances would be to offer a premium on bad faith and invite men to violate their most sacred contracts that they may profit by their own wrong. Lingenfelder v. Wainwright Brewing Co. 108 Mo. 578.

An agent for the sale of machines, who has undertaken to pay the freight and storage charges on them, cannot rely on a subsequent promise by the manufacturer, made upon his importunity, to pay such charges. Esterly Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Pringle, 41 Neb. 255.

Where a sealed covenant for the erection of a building provides for such alterations and additions as the owner may direct, the making of an alteration or addition is not such a consideration for an oral agreement by the owner modifying the sealed instrument as will make the oral agreement binding on the owner. Tinker v. Geraghty, 1 E. D. Smith. 687.

A promise to pay a contractor extra for excavating hardpan is not binding if his contract bound him to do that work without extra pay. Nesbitt v. Louisville, C. & C. R. Co. 2 Speers, L. 687. In that case the court says if the contractor had stopped his work and had preferred to abandon his contract rather than make the excavation, and the other party to induce him to go on, had agreed to pay him for it, then that would have been a new consideration enough to support the contract. And that case was followed in Colcock v. Louisville, C. & C. R. Co. 1 Strobb. L. 820.

A promise to one engaged to work for a year for a certain amount, of payment at an increased rate at the expiration of the term if his conduct merits it, is a mere gratuity and cannot be enforced at law. Toimie v. Dean, 1 Wash. Ter. 47.

A promise to a salesman of certain additional compensation after the signing of a written contract providing that his compensation for the year shall be a certain sum is without consideration. Cogray v. New England Piano Co. 41 N. Y. Supp. 668.

Cases which apply the opposite rule.

If one party refuses to go on with the contract without modification, and thereupon the other agrees to the modification, such agreement is on a valid consideration. Bryant v. Lord, 19 Minn. 396.

That doctrine was, however, subsequently repudiated by the Minnesota court.

A promise by a brewery company to pay a largely increased price for ice upon the refusal of the ice company to deliver it at the contract rates will not, after the ice has been delivered, be so far without consideration as to justify a refusal to pay for it at the increased rates. Goebel v. Linn, 47 Mich. 489, 41 Am. Rep. 723.

But in case the fact of modification of the original agreement is disputed, and the claim raised that the new contract was simply for the purpose of mitigating damages for breach of the original contract, the question is for the jury. Endries v. Belle Isle Ice Co. 49 Mich. 279.

Where a master notifies his servant that he will thereafter pay him less than the contract price, and the servant continues to work without notifying the master that he will claim more, it constitutes a new agreement which will preclude any recovery at the original contract rates. Spicer v. Earl, 41 Mich. 191, 33 Am. Rep. 123.

An agreement to warrant the soundness of a slave for the purpose of inducing one who has contracted on the previous day to purchase him, without warranty to comply with his contract is based on a sufficient consideration and may be enforced. Stoudenmeyer v. Williamson, 30 Ala. 558.

In Scotson v. Peggs, 6 Hurst. & N. 295, 30 L. J. Exch. N. S. 325, 3 L. T. N. S. 753, 9 Week. Rep. 280, Martin, B., asks, if a builder is under contract to finish a house by a certain date and the owner promises to pay him a certain amount of money if he will do it, what is to prevent the builder from recovering the money?

The resignation of an office in a corporation is a sufficient consideration for a promissory note, although the payee had previously agreed for a valuable consideration to resign the office on demand of the maker. The court says on plaintiff's refusal to resign, he still held the office but was liable to defendant for the breach of his agreement. Defendant could not displace him or in any way compel the immediate performance of the agreement. He had only his legal remedy against the plaintiff for the breach. By the new contract he obtained from the plaintiff his actual resignation, and in consideration thereof he gave the note. By the surrender of an office which he had a right to retain the plaintiff suffered a detriment, and the defendant thereby gained an advantage which furnished a valid consideration for the note. Peck v. Requa, 13 Gray, 467.

Grounds for upholding new contract.

So long as the maxim ex nudo pacto non oritur actio remains a part of the law, it is impossible that while a valid contract exists that a on one side shall equal b on the other a proposition shall be enforced that a shall be considered equal to b + c if c has any value. Therefore to enforce the latter proposition it is necessary to extinguish the former. This is easily accomplished if the right course is taken. But the difficulty is the contracting parties do not take such step. The almost universal rule is that without any express rescission of the old contract the promise is made simply for additional compensation, making the new promise a mere nudum pactum. But the courts, for the purpose of doing what the parties did not do, but should have done, i. e. getting rid of the old contract, have adopted various expedients none of which seems satisfactory.

a. Waiver.

The Massachusetts case, which together with Lattimore v. Hansen, 14 Johns. 381, seems to be the foundation upon which all the cases upholding the new promise rest, seems to have been placed on the ground of waiver.

A contract under seal to erect a house for a certain price which was not adequate compensation was changed by parol agreement that the contractor should have more pay if he would go on and finish the work, and it was contended that there was no consideration for this promise. But the court said this depends entirely on the question whether the first contract was waived. The plaintiff having refused to perform that contract, as he might do subjecting himself to such damages as the other party might show he was entitled to recover, after-

See also Holmes v. Doane, 9 Cush. 185; Peck v. Regua, 18 Gray, 407; Rogers v. Rogers, 189 Mass. 440; Hastings v. Lovejoy, 140 Mass. 261, 265, 54 Am. Rep. 463; Thomas v. Barnes, 156 Mass. 581. In other states there is a difference of judicial opinion, but the following cases sanction a similar doctrine:

Lattimore v. Harsen, 14 Johns. 330; Stewart v. Keeltas, 86 N. Y. 388; Lawrence v. Davey, 28 Vt. 264; Osborne v. O'Reilly, 42 N. J. Eq. 467; Goebel v. Linn, 47 Mich. 489, 41 Am. Rep. 723; Cooke v. Murphy, 70 Ill. 96. In England and in others of the United States a different rule prevails. But when one, wards went on upon the faith of the new promise and finished the work. This was a sufficient consideration. Munroe v. Perkins, 9 Pick. 298, 20 Am. Rep. 475; and that case is cited as authoritative in Hastings v. Lovejoy, 140 Mass. 261, 54 Am. Rep. 463.

And in an Alabama case it is said that if two persons make a contract one of them may waive performance of the contract by the other, and assume some new and additional obligation as the consideration of the performance by the other, and such obligation will be binding on him. Johnson v. Sellers, 33 Ala. 285.

It is difficult to understand how a contract can be gotten rid of by waiver. Strict performance either as to time or as to details may be waived. But the use of the word "waive" to express the idea "rescind" is inaccurate. And to rescind requires mutual promises based on mutual consideration. The breach may be waived.

But the doctrine of waiver will, if applied to the breach, not operate to release the liability under the old contract, because waiver of the breach simply reinstates the old contract instead of terminating it.

b. Mutual agreement.

Some of the cases have been put upon the ground of mutual agreement.

Mutual agreement to rescind an existing contract while it is still executory on both sides will be effectual. But, as will be seen from the cases, the agreement was not to rescind but to do or give something additional, and in some cases this was plainly done after one party had refused to continue and so was in default, and the other party entitled to his release.

In Thomason v. Dill, 30 Ala. 454, the court in holding that an agreement of one who after he has entered into a contract to purchase property agrees to furnish sureties upon the security given therefor, which the original contract did not require, would be binding if it was affected by mutual agreement between the parties, says, persons before or after the consummation of a contract may either rescind or modify it, and no other consideration is necessary to support such contract of rescission or modification than the mutual agreement of the parties.

Where one who had contracted to care for defendant's ward refused to proceed with the contract without a modification thereof, a new contract was made which defendant alleged to be without consideration, but the court said that the new contract operated as a rescission of the old one, stating that the release of one from the stipulations of the original agreement is the consideration of the release of the other; and the mutual releases are the consideration for the new contract and are sufficient to give it full legal effect. Rollins v. Marsh, 128 Mass. 116.

Where a carpenter had contracted to build a refrigerator for a merchant, and while it was in process of construction the merchant made some objections to the way in which the work was being done, whereupon the carpenter warranted it and the merchant accepted the warranty, the court held the warranty binding, saying the contract when modified by the subsequent oral agreement is substituted for the contract as originally made, and the original consideration attaches to and supports the modified contract. Thomas v. Barnes, 156 Mass. 581.

In that case compromise of the dispute might have furnished a consideration for the warranty. But the case was not put on that ground.

Where one who had contracted to erect a building refused to go on without a promise of additional pay, which was promised, the court says, one promise is a sufficient consideration to support another. Where one person does an act beneficial to another, or agrees to do so, that forms sufficient consideration to support an agreement. Here were mutual promises, one to perform labor and to furnish material, and the other to pay for them. The performance of labor and the furnishing of materials were of benefit to one, and of loss and injury to the other, and the new and additional contract was binding. Cooke v. Murphy, 70 Ill. 96.

Where, after a person had contracted to erect a building for a certain amount, the price of labor and material went up so that he could not have complied with his contract without great loss, whereupon he refused to do so without more pay, which was promised him, the court held the promise binding, on the ground that the mutual promises of the parties were a sufficient consideration to support the contract. But in that case it also appears that the plan of the building was changed and the promise to build on the changed plan was a sufficient consideration for the promise for the extra pay, so that what the court said about mutual promises was not necessary to the extent to which it was apparently intended to go. Bishop v. Busse, 60 Ill. 403.

In the above cases there appears to have been no express agreement for rescission. There was simply the promise of something additional by one party. Where there is modification only by additional promise by one of the parties during the existence of the contract it would seem that the doctrine of mutual promises is misapplied. To constitute a consideration, a promise must involve something which if performed would itself be a consideration. A promise by one person to permit another to make him a present is no consideration to uphold the promise to give. And yet a promise of extra pay for performing a contract is nothing more than that. Furthermore some of the above cases involve facts in which it is doubtful if mutual promises, even if express, would rescind the contract.

In case one of the parties has absolutely refused to continue performance it would seem that the doctrine of mutual promises of rescission is inapplicable, especially where it is implied, as it is in the above cases. In such case the contract of the defaulting party is broken and the obligation of the other party released. Mutual promises will no longer rescind the contract or remove the liability for the breach, because the party not in fault being already released from his liability to perform the contract, the promise of the other party to release him therefrom is no advantage to him or detriment to his adversary, and so is no consideration for his promise to release the liability for the breach. If, therefore, the new contract is formed after the recognized breach of the old one the liability for the breach of the old one still remains unless released for a consideration and the damages on it would in all probability be the difference between who is unwilling or hesitating to go on and perform a contract which proves a hard one for him, is requested to do so by a third person, who is interested in such performance, though having no legal way of compelling it or of recovering damages for a breach, and who accordingly makes an independent promise to pay a sum of money for such performance, the reasons for holding him bound to such payment are stronger than where an additional sum is promised by the party to the original contract. Take an illustration. A enters into a contract with B to do something. It may be to pay money, to render the old and the new contract price. Therefore the liability under the old contract and the gain under the new one would offset each other. And the implication by the courts of mutual agreements for the purpose of getting rid of the old contract is clearly inadequate to accomplish that end, and the rulings cannot be made to rest upon that ground.

c. Election.

Some of the cases are placed on the ground of election.

Where a person abandons his contract the opposite party has his election to sue or make a new agreement. And if in the new agreement he makes new or additional promises dependent upon the performance of the work contracted for, and the work is completed, the promises are binding. Coyner v. Lynde, 10 Ind. 282.

This doctrine has evidently been abandoned in Indiana, as appears from cases cited above.

A party refusing to perform his contract thereby subjects himself to an action for damages, and the opposite party has his election to bring an action for the recovery of such damages or to accede to the demands of his adversary and make the promise; and if he does so it is a relinquishment of the original contract and a substitution of a new one. Rogers v. Rogers, 139 Mass. 440.

Where a ship owner agreed to carry a carpenter to a certain place in case he would make certain repairs on the ship, and before the ship sailed he refused to do so unless a certain sum of money should be paid, whereupon the carpenter gave his note for the amount and was thrown out of the ship for failure to pay it, for which he brought suit, the court says the defendant might show that at a period prior to the sailing of the vessel he gave notice to the effect that he would not comply with his agreement and would hold himself responsible for all damages by reason of such breach of contract; and if the plaintiff thereupon elected not to avail himself of his right to recover damages, but chose to make a new contract, giving the defendant more advantageous terms, such new contract would be a valid consideration between the parties. No new consideration is necessary. Holmes v. Doane, 9 Cush. 135.

Suing for breach of the old contract and making a new one are clearly not inconsistent remedies to which the doctrine of election will apply, but the wronged party may do either, neither, or both at his option, so that the mere making of the new contract will not of itself release the liability for breach of the old one.

d. Acting on promise.

In one case it is said that it is a sufficient consideration for the new promise that the person claiming the benefit of it went on and completed his contract on the faith of it. Courtenay v. Fuller, 65 Me. 156; Rogers v. Rogers, 139 Mass. 440.

The party should not be heard to say that he acted on the promise of reward rather than on his solemn obligation to perform.

Besides there is in such case for the old consideration, i. e., the performance of the work, on the one side, the agreement to release damages for the breach in addition to the promise for greater compensation, and there is plainly no new consideration to support such agreements.

34 L. R. A.

But it is suggested in Bates v. Starr, 2 Vt. 536, 21 Am. Dec. 568, that there may be cases in which a contract is terminated by accord and satisfaction, or an executory accord which has been so far executed that it could not be receded from without great inconvenience in which the second contract would supersede the first one.

A contract can be altered or modified only by a distinct and substantive contract between the parties founded on some valid consideration. But if there was no original consideration for the change, yet if it is acted upon until it would work a fraud or injury to refuse to carry it out, it becomes binding and effectual as a contract. The modification cannot be supported by the supposition that it is founded on the continuation or extension of the consideration of the prior contract, which was complete of itself and so far as it went fixed the rights of the parties. Thurston v. Ludwig, 6 Ohio St. 1, 67 Am. Dec. 323.

The doctrine of Bates v. Starr and Thurston v. Ludwig is applicable, however, not so much to promises of extra compensation, as to modification in the manner or time of performance.

e. New contract satisfies claim for damages.

Some of the courts imply that the old liability is merged in the new contract.

When the new contract is made, the old contract is held to be waived or abandoned or the parties are left to their legal rights and remedies for its breach, but that does not operate to make the new agreement invalid for want of consideration. Peck v. Requa, 18 Gray, 407.

And that doctrine is carried further in Rollins v. Marsh, 128 Mass. 114, so as to hold that the new contract operates as a rescission of the old one, and that the legal remedy for the breach is lost.

If after partial fulfillment of a contract to sell and deliver goods at certain prices the seller refuses to deliver any more at those prices, whereupon a new contract is made at a higher rate, the new contract prima facie takes the place of the original agreement as to everything remaining unperformed, and no action will lie for the breach of the old contract. Rogers v. Rogers, 139 Mass. 440.

The court says if the parties agreed that orders should be filled at prices stipulated for in the new contract, without considering whether the new agreement would of itself be a discharge of partial breaches, performance of the new agreement would operate as a discharge or an accord and satisfaction, unless it appeared that such was not the intention of the parties.

Where a bid for work was made under an assurance that certain work called for by the specifications would not be required because of the proposed erection of another building which would render it unnecessary because of which the cost of it was not included in the bid, but it was subsequently required, whereupon the bidder refused to do the work without extra pay for that part, which was promised, the court says the owner thus relieved the bidder from all claims he might have had against him for the breach of the contract in refusing to do this work under it, and his subsequent agreement to do it was sufficient consideration to support his promise to pay for it. Stewart v. Ketteltas, 36 N. Y. 388.

If the new contract is valid the presumption is certainly strong that it was intended to satisfy all service, or to sell land or goods for a price. The contract may be not especially for the benefit of B but rather for the benefit of others, as, e. g., to erect a monument, an archway, a memorial of some kind, or to paint a picture to be placed where it can be seen by the public. The consideration moving from B may be executed or executory. It may be money or anything else in law deemed valuable. It may be of slight value, as compared with what A has contracted to do. Now A is legally bound only to B, and, if he breaks his contract, nobody but B can recover damages, and those damages may be claims under the old contract. But since technically the old contract must be out of the way before the new one can become valid, the use of the fact that the new one exists as a premise from which to prove the annulment of the old involves an assumption which is hardly justifiable. In Massachusetts, where the performance of the old obligation is a sufficient consideration for the new promise (Rogers v. Rogers, 139 Mass. 440), and the new contract prima facie takes the place of the old one, of course such assumption is permissible. But in states which still recognize the rule ex nudo pacto non oritur actio, and hold that performance of an existing obligation is no consideration for a new promise, there is no ground for implication of satisfaction of the old contract. In case the old contract has been broken a liability for damages exists. This liability can be extinguished by contract upon a consideration. If the parties expressly contract, or by conduct plainly imply, that the extinguishment of this liability is to form one of the terms of the new contract, that will be sufficient. But the mere making of the new promise is not sufficient to raise the implication that all the other necessary steps have been taken. Absence of the other necessary steps is, on the other hand, strong evidence that the new promise is simply on the old consideration and therefore a nudum pactum.

The correct reasoning.

Where plaintiffs contracted to build a cart way for a certain sum under a penalty, and after beginning the work became dissatisfied and gave notice that they would abandon the work, whereupon the owner promised them more pay, for which they sued, the court said by the old contract the plaintiffs subjected themselves to a certain penalty for the nonfulfillment, and if they chose to incur this penalty they had a right to do so, and if afterwards the owner made a new agreement with them it was valid. Lattimore v. Harsen, 14 Johns. 381.

In that case the plain implication is that the penalty still existed. But that since the amount was liquidated it was more advantageous for the builder to suffer the penalty and get the additional compensation than to perform the old contract as it stood. Of course the result might not be so advantageous where the damages are not liquidated.

But in Allen v. Jaquish, 21 Wend. 632, Lattimore v. Harsen is explained on the ground that the old contract was rescinded by a new contract executed and fully carried into effect.

Where a tenant upon refusal to pay rent because of the landlord's refusal to repair is notified to quit, the lease is at an end, and if then the landlord, to retain the tenant, promises to make the repairs, the contract is a new one, although the rent is to be the same, and the landlord may be liable on his contract. Conkling v. Tuttle, 52 Mich. 680.

If a contract to perform certain stipulated services for a certain sum is not rescinded by the mutual consent of the parties, then a promise to pay an additional sum for the same services is without consideration and cannot be enforced. Festerman v. Parker, 10 Ired. L. 474. In that case the plaintiff had agreed to erect a mill for a certain price, and after it was partly done he refused to go on without additional pay, which was promised. The court says the variation of a contract is as much a matter of contract as the original agreement. In what was the contract in this question varied? Not in 34 L. R. A.

the work done, that was not altered in the slightest manner. The plaintiff came under no new obligation, he was to do the same work he had previously bound himself to do. It was varied in this, that the defendant promised to give an additional sum if plaintiff would do the work. This would be no valid promise. A consideration is an essential ingredient to the existence of every simple contract. What loss, trouble, or inconvenience, or charge resulted to plaintiff by his executing the work? He was bound to build the mill by his original contract, and he was to do nothing more. What benefit would result to defendant by the promise to pay the additional money? None whatever. He was to get from the plaintiff precisely the same quantum of work without it as with it. The promise was a mere nudum pactum not binding in law.

Where a person contracted to do certain work for a certain price, the first instalment of which should be the assignment of a bond and mortgage of a third person, and when the assignment was due refused to take it unless its payment was guaranteed, and suspended work, whereupon the assignor executed the guaranty, the court held that there was no consideration for the guaranty, and that it could not be enforced, saying that the builder had only done what he was before legally bound to do. Even though it lay in his power to refuse to perform his contract he could do this only upon paying the other party the damages occasioned by his nonperformance, and that in contemplation of law would be equivalent to performance. He had no legal or moral right to refuse to perform the obligation of the contract into which upon a good consideration he had voluntarily entered. But the court says it would doubtless be competent for parties to cancel an existing contract and make a new one to complete the same work at a different rate of compensation, but it seems that it would be essential to its validity that there should be a valid cancellation of the original one. Such was the case of Lattimore v. Harsen, supra; Vanderbilt v. Schreyer, 91 N. Y. 382, Revereing 21 Hun, 637.

The doctrine that the person is bound by his new promise is stated by the court in King v. Duluth, M. & N. R.-Co. 61 Minn. 482, "not to commend itself either to our judgment or our sense of justice. . . . No amount of astute reasoning can change the plain fact that the party who refuses to perform, and thereby coerces a promise from the other party to the contract to pay him an increased compensation for doing that which he is legally bound to do, takes an unjustifiable advantage of the necessities of the other party. . . . Surely it would be a travesty on justice to hold that the party so making the promise for extra pay was estopped from asserting that the promise was without consideration. A party cannot lay the foundation of an estoppel by his own wrong. . . . Where the promise is simply a repetition of a subsisting legal promise there can be no consideration for the promise of the other party, and there is no warrant for inferring that the parties have voluntarily rescinded or modified their contract. . . . The promise cannot be legally enforced, although the other party has completed his contract in reliance upon it."

Promise to perform additional duty for same consideration.

Where the owner of a building, under threats of suspending the work, secures from the contractor slight. They may even be already liquidated at a small sum by the terms of the contract itself. Though A is legally bound, the motive to perform the contract may be slight. If after A has refused to go on with his undertaking, or while he is hesitating whether to perform it or submit to such damages as

B may be entitled to recover, other persons interested in having the contract performed intervene, and enter into a new agreement with A by which A agrees to do that which he was already bound by his contract with B to do, and they agree jointly or severally to pay him a certain sum of money, and give without any additional consideration a guaranty not embraced in the original contract, it is without consideration and cannot be enforced. McCarty v. Hampton Bldg. Asso. 61 Iowa, 387.

If a party has sold and delivered an article of a stipulated quality and at a given price, an agreement to warrant it of a better quality without any further consideration is nudum pactum. McDugald v. McFaddin, 6 Jones, 1, 80.

Where a contract calls for payment in lawful silver money an agreement to take the pay in legal tender is without consideration. McCall v. Ely, 64 Pa. 254.

After the making of a contract to purchase land which is subject to a servient tenement a refusal to comply with the agreement without a promise to abandon such tenement, which results in such promise, does not furnish a consideration for the promise which makes it binding. Erb. v. Brown, 60 Pa. 216.

In case of a note given by one partner to another for his interest in the concern, which was given under an undertaking on the part of the former to indemnify the withdrawing partner from all losses of the firm, an agreement to withdraw the note in consideration of the continuing partner's settling certain suits that had been brought against the firm is without consideration. Malone v. Dougherty, 79 Pa. 44.

Under a contract for the sale and delivery of hogs at a certain time, payment for which the law would regard as due when they were delivered, a promise to make payment of a portion of the price before the time for delivery is without consideration. Thurston v. Ludwig, 6 Ohio St. 1, 67 Am. Dec. 323.

Promise by stranger to the contract.

Another question upon which the cases are not fully agreed is as to how far a promise by a third person to induce a party to comply with his contract is binding.

Statute of frauds.

If the promise of the third person is only to pay what was due by the original contracting party under the contract, it is a promise to answer for the debt of another within the statute of frauds. Ellison v. Jackson Water Co. 12 Cal. 542.

Promise where contract obligation not fully fixed.

Before a surety has incurred any liability under his contract a promise by a third person to induce him to remain on the bond is not without consideration. Carroll v. Nixon, 4 Watts & S. 617.

If the liability of a surety has not become fixed, and to prevent his taking steps to be relieved from his obligation a third person promises to indemnify him against liability, such agreement is not without consideration to support it. Drury v. Fay, 14 Pick. 323.

And this suggestion may support the leading English case of Shadwell v. Shadwell, 9 C. B. N. S. 159, 30 L. J. C. P. N. S. 145, 7 Jur. N. S. 811, 3 L. T. N. S. 623, 9 Week. Rep. 163.

In that case a letter by a man to his nephew expressing satisfaction at his engagement to marry a certain person, and promising an annuity to aid the nephew, was held to support an action in favor of the latter when he had entered into the marriage. 34 L. R. A.

Byles, J., dissented, saying that the rule that a promise based on doing what a man was already bound to do applied to the case. And that the reason why the doing what a man is already bound to do is no consideration, is not only that in judgment of law such consideration is of no value, but because a man can hardly be allowed to say that the prior legal obligation was not his determining motive.

But the nephew may have intended to postpone the time of marriage until his income was sufficient, in which case his immediate marriage in reliance upon his uncle's promise may have furnished a consideration for the promise.

Compliance with existing obligation.

Some cases have pushed the doctrine of Shadwell v. Shadwell, 9 C. B. N. S. 159, 30 L. J. C. P. N. S. 145, 7 Jur. N. S. 811, 3 L. T. N. S. 623, 9 Week. Rep. 163, to the full extent of holding a promise binding if made by a third person to induce a party to comply with his contract.

The performance of an act which a person has agreed with another to perform is a good consideration to support a contract with a third person if the latter derives a benefit from its performance. Therefore if a person promises a ship owner that if he will deliver a cargo of coal to him in his ship he will discharge it at a certain rate, he is not relieved from the promise by the fact that the ship owner was under contract with third persons to deliver the coal to him. Footen v. Peag, 6 Hurst. & N. 295, 30 L. J. Exch. N. S. 223, 3 L. T. N. S. 153, 9 Week. Rep. 230.

So, where a person entered into the services of a captain of a war vessel to act as cook at wages above those to which his rating in the services entitled him, it was contended that the captain was under no liability to him because the promise was without consideration, since he was bound to act for the regular wages, but Erskine, J., said the case is the same as if the contract had been that in consideration of the plaintiff entering into the service of a third person, the captain would pay him wages in addition to the wages given him by such person. In such case there being an express promise it will be no answer to say that the plaintiff did not enter the captain's service. Clutterbuck v. Coffin, 8 Macn. & G. 842, 4 Scott. N. R. 509, 1 Dowl. N. S. 479, Car. & M. 273, 11 L. J. C. P. N. S. 65, 6 Jur. 181.

And that doctrine has been recognized in the District of Columbia.

A promise made in consideration of the doing of an act which the promisee is already under obligation to a third person to do, though made as an inducement to secure the doing of that act, is not binding because it is not supported by a valid consideration. At least when the act done on the part of the promisor involves nothing more than performance of the original obligation towards the person to whom it was due. But if the promise is made in consideration of a promise to do the act entered into directly with the promisor, then the promise is binding because not made in performance of a subsisting obligation to another person, but upon a new consideration moving between the promisor and promisee. And if the promisee was already bound by his contract with the third person, and was actually performing it at the time of the promisor's request, the mere fact of the request their note or notes therefor, and A accordingly does what he had before agreed to do, but what perhaps he might not otherwise have done, no good reason is perceived why they should not be held to fulfil their promise. They have got what they bargained for, and A has done what otherwise he might not have done, and what they could not have compelled him to do. This is so held in England, and the view is supported by English text-writers, though not always for precisely the same reasons. Scotson v. Pegg, 6 Hurlst. & N. 295; Shadwell v. Shadwell, 80 L. J. O. P. N. S. 145; Pollock, Cont. 6th

ed. 175, 177; Anson, Cont. 4th ed. 87, 88; Leake, Cont. 8d ed. 540. In this country the courts of several states have taken the opposite view, though in some instances the cases referred to as so holding, when examined, do not necessarily lead to that result. These cases are collected in the defendant's brief and in Williston's discussion of the subject in 8 Harvard L. Rev. 27. Without dwelling further on the reasons for the doctrine, it seems to us better to hold, as a general rule, that if A has refused or hesitated to perform an agreement with B and is requested to do so by C, who will derive a ben-by the new party is not evidence that the performance was caused by that request so as to show a consideration moving between the parties for the performance, which will support the promise. Merrick v. Giddings, 1 Mackey, 304.

And it is now adopted in Massachusetts by Abbott v. Doane.

But the great weight of authority is the other way.

In Morrison v. Heath, 11 Vt. 610, the court, in deciding that after the abandonment of a contract by two persons to erect a meeting house for a committee, the promise by one of the committee to one of the contractors to pay him the additional cost of the house over the contract price in case he would go on and finish the building is a new contract which can be enforced, says it is undoubtedly true as a general rule that the performance of that which a man is already under legal obligation to do can never be the consideration of additional undertakings by the other party, perhaps not even by third persons; but that this case is not of that character.

In Brownlee v. Lowe, 117 Ind. 420, the court, in holding that the consideration for the promise in that case was sufficient because the promisee was not bound to go on with the work when the promise was made, states that it is doubtless true that a promise without a new consideration to pay one if he will do that which he is already bound by contract with a third person to do without the promise sued on, is without consideration and void.

A bond is nudum pactum whose sole consideration is a payment made by the obligee to a third person in discharge of an existing legal obligation. The performance of an existing legal obligation without more by one person affords no consideration in law for an original undertaking by another person. Hanks v. Barron Bros., 95 Tenn. 275.

Performance by a railroad company carrying mails of its duty towards the government of carrying messengers on its trains is no consideration for a clause in a pass issued to a messenger exempting the carrier from liability for injuries to the messenger caused by its negligence. Seybolt v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co., 96 N. Y. 552, 47 Am. Rep. 75, affirming 81 Hun, 100.

An agreement by a surety to pay notes on which his liability has become fixed does not form a consideration for an agreement by a third person to repay him the amount so paid. L'Amoureux v. Gould, 7 N. Y. 349, 57 Am. Dec. 524.

Payment of money which the buyer is obligated by the terms of a purchase-money mortgage to pay is not a consideration for the promise of the mortgagee who has assigned the mortgage, to give security to indemnify the buyer against claims that might arise against the mortgaged premises. Conover v. Stillwell, 34 N. J. L. 54.

A promise to pay a mail contractor for performing his contract with the postoffice department is without consideration. Putnam v. Woodbury, 68 Me. 55.

34 L. R. A.

A promise to indemnify persons who have subscribed to procure the location of a college at a certain town after they have made a binding contract with the college authorities to pay the subscription, which at most can merely be additional inducement for the fulfillment of the contract, will not be supported by any consideration. Schuler v. Myton, 48 Kan. 232.

A mortgage by the principal debtor to a surety, who is already bound for the payment of the debt, given in consideration that he will pay the debt and release the principal debtor's property from an execution levy, is without consideration. Harris v. Cassady, 107 Ind. 158.

A promise by a surety in consideration that the principal will relieve him from liability on the debt is not enforceable. Kitenour v. Mathews, 43 Ind. 7.

A promise by sureties that in case the principal will pay the debt out of a particular fund soon to be received they will effect a life insurance for the benefit of the principal, is without consideration. Ford v. Garner, 15 Ind. 298.

A promise by a surety on a bond that if the principal will perform the obligation of the bond, the surety will make to him a deed of certain land, is without consideration and void. Peelman v. Peelman, 4 Ind. 612.

An agreement to convey to a corporation a license to use a patent in order to induce a stockholder to pay up his subscription, although made by another stockholder with intent to prevent the abandonment of the enterprise, is without consideration. Havana Press Drill Co. v. Ashurst, 148 Ill. 115.

A promise to a church that if it will within a certain time pay its indebtedness to its former pastor the promisor will release a claim which he holds against it, although acted on and the debt paid, is a mere gratuity and not enforceable. Davenport v. First Cong. Soc., 38 Wis. 380.

In case of a contract between a man and a board of school trustees that he will bring his wife to teach in the school, a promise by a third person of money to the man to induce him to comply with his contract is without consideration. Johnson v. Sellers, 38 Ala. 265.

If to induce the drawer to take up certain bills of exchange which he is under obligations to do, the acceptor gives him his promissory note to enable him to raise the money to do so, the drawer cannot compel the maker to pay the note, since it is without consideration in his hands. Mallalieu v. Hodgson, 16 Q. B. 689, 20 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 330, 15 Jur. 817.

The discharge of one of two joint debtors entitles the other to his discharge also, so that a promise by a third person to pay the debt in order to secure his discharge is without consideration. Herring v. Dorell, 8 Dowl. P. C. 604, 4 Jur. 800.

H. P. F.

ed from such performance, and who promises to pay him a certain sum therefor, and A thereupon undertakes to do it, the performance by A of his agreement, in consequence of such request and promise by C, is a good consideration to support O's promise.

Exceptions overruled.

CALIFORNIA SUPREME COURT.

J. T. JENNINGS, Appt.,

J. J. BROWN, Resp.

(.....Cal.....)

Adding his party designation, &c. Independent Democrat," to the name of a candidate written upon a ballot, in the same way that party designations follow the names of candidates in the printed list, as required by Pol. Code, § 1191, does not destroy the legality of the ballot when it was manifestly not intended as a distinguishing mark.

(September 18, 1896.)

A PPEAL by contestant from a judgment of the Superior Court for San Mateo County in favor of defendant in a proceeding to contest the declared election of defendant to the office of county supervisor. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. George C. Ross and Knight & Haggerty for appellant.

Messrs. Sullivan & Sullivan, for respondent.

The addition of a political designation to the ticket has been held not to invalidate the ticket.

Coffey v. Edmonds, 58 Cal. 526; Coffey v. Lyman, 92 Cal. 135.

Temple, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a contest for the office of supervisor in the county of San Mateo. The judgment appealed from confirms the election of defendant. The appeal is from the judgment, with a bill of exceptions.

In precinct No. 1 the record shows that 118 votes were counted without objection for contestant, and 11 votes were objected to and reserved by counsel for respondent; 184 votes were counted without objection for respondent, and 19 votes were objected to by contestant. It subsequently appears that all ballots were counted, and as counted the tally stood for Brown 184 votes, for Jennings 128. It is not expressly stated that the ballots objected to by respondent's attorney were ballots for contestant, or that those objected to by contestant were cast for respondent, but it would naturally be supposed that such was the case; and, if so, then the tally clerks must have made a wrong addition. It should have been, on that hypothesis, 153 for Brown, and 129 for Jennings. This would have changed the result as finally declared. The court was requested by the contestant to recount the votes, but declined to do so. There were also 4 ballots which had not been counted by the precinct officers. The bill of exceptions fails to show error in this respect. It surely does not show all that occurred at the trial; for, while it appears that some 80 ballots were objected to, it is impossible to find from the record how the court ruled upon one half that many. There were two tally clerks, and the court reporter also kept tally. All agreed, and the court was satisfied that no mistake had been made. We have carefully examined the ballots which were brought here for our inspection under a previous order. We find nothing upon any of these worthy of notice, unless it is the ballot upon which the voter has written, under the head "State Printer," the name "W. D. Craig, Independent Democrat." It is objected that the voter was only authorized to write the name of the person voted for, and that the addition "Independent Democrat" is unauthorized, and may constitute a distinguishing mark. Section 1191, Pol. Code, provides that after a candidate's name shall be printed his party designation, and they were so printed on the ballot. It would be quite natural, then, that one writing in the name of a candidate not in the list should add such designation. Perhaps the statute should be construed as requiring or permitting the name to be written in the same manner as the others are printed. The designation would then be a descriptio personae, and a part of the designation of the person voted for, and authorized by the statute. This state of things existed in Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 101, 29 L. R. A. 678. Upon all the ballots cast at one precinct there appeared, written under the head of "Justice of the Peace," "C. G. Brown, Republican." It was shown that the writing was all in the same hand, and that but one person voting at the precinct was lawfully assisted. This court sanctioned the counting of the vote for the person lawfully assisted. There the word "Republican" was, or might have been, a distinguishing mark, just as "Independent Democrat" is here. The fact was disregarded as of no consequence. I am not inclined to hold that any of the requirements of the election law are directory only, but, while all of its provisions are mandatory, they should be liberally construed. The so-called "Australian Ballot System" only secures secrecy in voting when the elector desires it, and has sufficient independence to insist upon it. But a voter can—and, by one who has sufficient power over him, be forced to—so mark his ballot that it can be identified. Many ways could be suggested in which this could be done without destroying the legality of the ballot. It is quite manifest in this case that the words were not intended as a distinguishing mark, and, as the law may be construed as permitting it, I see no reason for changing the rule followed in Tebbs v. Smith.

NOTE.—For marks to distinguish ballots, see note to Rutledge v. Crawford (Cal.) 18 L. R. A. 761; also Sego v. Stoddard (Ind.) 22 L. R. A. 483, and cases cited in footnotes thereto; also Tebbe v. Smith (Cal.) 34 L. R. A.

29 L. R. A. 678; Dennis v. Caughlin (Nev.) 20 L. R. A. 731; Parker v. Orr (Ill.) 80 L. R. A. 227; Buckner v. Lynip (Nev.) 30 L. R. A. 384.

The judgment is affirmed.

We concur: McFarland, J.; Garoutte, J.

PEOPLE of the State of California, as rel.
John C. LYNCH,
v.
James H. BUDD.
(.....Cal.....)

1. "At the next election by the people," the time prescribed by Const. art. 5, § 8, for the expiration of commissions granted by the governor for the filling of vacant offices, means the next election provided for the filling of the particular office vacant, not necessarily the next succeeding general election.

2. No election to fill a vacancy in the office of lieutenant governor can be held in the absence of any constitutional or statutory provision for it.

(September 3, 1906.)

APPPLICATION for a writ of mandamus to compel defendant to issue in his proclamation for the coming election a call to fill the office of lieutenant governor for an unexpired term. Denied.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. J. De Haven, for petitioner:

The Constitution declares that the term for which Mr. Jeter was temporarily appointed shall expire at the next general election by the people.

People, Casserly, v. Fitch, 1 Cal. 530.

There is no provision in our Constitution, nor in any statute, which declares that the people shall only have the right to elect a lieutenant governor for a full term, and that if such officer shall die upon the day of his induction into office or the day after that the people shall have no right to choose a person to fill such vacancy. In regard to the right to fill the vacancy occurring in that office the Constitution expressly declares that the people have delegated the power—the right to make a temporary appointment until the next election by the people. So far and so far only and during that brief period of time and until they can conveniently act have the people deprived themselves of the right to fill the vacancy in that office.

Mechem, Pub. Off. § 140; State, Weeks, v.

Gamble, 18 Fla. 9; Henshaw v. Foster, 9 Pick. 817; State, Whitney, v. Johns, 8 Or. 583.

The Constitution not authorizing the executive to fill the vacancy to the end of the term, this power must be exercised by the people or the legislature.

People, Barbour, v. Mott, 3 Cal. 505.

It is a maxim that is no less true in law than in logic that the greater includes the less, and it is a political axiom that the power to fill an office for a full term includes the lesser right to fill a vacancy therein, unless there is something in the Constitution or law which deprives such original power of this right and delegates it elsewhere.

People, Casserly, v. Fitch, 1 Cal. 519; People, Gorham, v. Campbell, 2 Cal. 135.

All political power is inherent in the people. Under our form of government the people have the right to choose all officers from the highest to the lowest, and the consequent right to fill any vacancy in any office unless they, by the Constitution which they have formed for their own government, have delegated the power elsewhere.

In regard to the right to fill vacancies in elective offices, it is the express declaration of the Constitution that the people have delegated the power to fill such vacancies only during the period between the happening of the vacancy and the first general election thereafter.

It is perhaps necessary before the Constitution shall become self-executing that the legislature should pass general laws for the regulation of elections, prescribing the hours between which the ballots shall be deposited upon the day of the general election prescribing the mode of the appointment of officers of such election and the manner in which the ballots shall be returned and canvassed; but when they have done that, and the people assemble at a general election thus authorized by law, then they have the right to vote to fill any office which the Constitution contemplates should be filled at such an election.

State, Goodin, v. Thoman, 10 Kan. 191.

Messrs. W. W. Foote and Garret W. McEnerney, for respondent:

Unless there is a provision of the Constitution or of a statute which authorizes the holding of an election to fill an unexpired term in the office of lieutenant governor no election can be held, and the respondent will not be compelled to issue a proclamation therefor.

There is no law for the holding of an election for lieutenant governor except for the full term.

No election can be held except by virtue of some provision of the Constitution or of a statute authorizing the same.

People, McKune, v. Weller, 11 Cal. 49, 70 Am. Dec. 754; People, Love, v. Mathewson, 47 Cal. 442; Kenfield v. Irwin, 52 Cal. 164; Mechem, Pub. Off. § 170; Matthews v. Shawnee County Comrs. 34 Kan. 606; Swyer v. Haydon, 1 Nev. 75; State, Daggett, v. Collins, 2 Nev. 351; 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 294; State, McGee, v. Gardner, 3 S. D. 553; Satterlee v. San Francisco, 23 Cal. 314; Brewer v.

NOTE.—This case decides a novel question respecting vacancies in the office of lieutenant governor. As to vacancies in the governor's office 34 L. R. A.

caused by sickness, see Barnard v. Taggart (N. H.) 25 L. R. A. 613.

Davis, 9 Humph. 208, 49 Am. Dec. 706; Kimberlin v. State, 130 Ind. 120, 14 L. R. A. 838.

Even though Mr. Jeter's commission expires with the election of November, 1896, nevertheless there is no implied power to fill the office of lieutenant governor for the unexpired term at that election.

The expiration of an incumbent's term of office does not vacate the office.

People, Parsons, v. Edwards, 98 Cal. 153; People, Mensies, v. Gunst, 110 Cal. 447; People, Love, v. Mathewson, State, McGee, v. Gardner, and Sawyer v. Haydon, supra.

The Constitutional provision that a commission to fill a vacancy shall expire at the end of the next session of the legislature or at the next election by the people means that the term shall expire at the end of the next session of the legislature when the office is filled by the legislature, and that as to elective officers the term shall expire at the next election for that office by the people.

Muthers v. Shawnee County Comrs. supra; People, Murphy, v. Hardy, 8 Utah, 68; People, Cloud, v. Wilson, 73 N. C. 155; State, Watson, v. Cobb, 2 Kan. 32; Sawyer v. Haydon, and State, Daggett, v. Collins, supra; State, Atty. Gen., v. Philips, 30 Fla. 579; State, McGee, v. Gardner, and People, Love, v. Mathewson, supra.

Mr. Jeter will be entitled to hold his office after the election in November, 1896, until the election and qualification of his successor.

People, Latine, v. Tyrrell, 87 Cal. 475; People, Richardson, v. Henderson (Wyo.) 23 L. R. A. 751; People, Kehoe, v. Fische, 76 Hun, 80; People, Parsons, v. Edwards, supra.

Mr. Jeter's right to hold until the election and qualification of his successor amounts to a right to hold for the balance of the unexpired term.

People, Sweet, v. Ward, 107 Cal. 286; State, Johnson, v. Albert, 55 Kan. 154; Sheen v. Hughes (Ariz.) 40 Pac. 679.

Temple, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an application for a writ of mandate to compel the governor to include in his proclamation for the coming election a call to fill the office of lieutenant governor for the unexpired term of Spencer G. Millard, deceased. Respondent has filled the vacancy caused by the death of the lieutenant governor by the appointment of William T. Jeter, who has duly qualified.

In this case both parties concede—as, indeed, the exigencies of each require him to do—that the vacancy caused by the death of Millard was one which the governor had the power to fill. If there can be question of the power of the governor in this respect, therefore, we have not considered it. And no question has been made, nor have we considered, whether a mandate will issue to compel the chief executive to perform an act which, if it be his duty to perform, is enjoined upon him by the Constitution as the executive, nor whether he can be compelled to perform any public duty at the instance of one who has no vested right to have it performed, nor any interest special to himself, or other than that which every citizen has in its performance; or, rather, we have not considered whether to issue the mandate asked for would trench upon the province of the executive.

The Constitution provides (§ 8, art. 4) that members of the assembly shall be elected in 1880 and biennially thereafter. Section 2, art. 5, provides that the governor shall be elected "at the time and places of voting for members of assembly, and shall hold his office for four years from and after the 1st day of January subsequent to his election." Section 15, art. 5, is as follows: "A lieutenant governor shall be elected at the same time and places, and in the same manner, as the governor; and his term of office and his qualifications of eligibility shall also be the same. He shall be president of the Senate, but shall have only a casting vote therein. If, during a vacancy of the office of governor, the lieutenant governor shall be impeached, displaced, resign, die, or become incapable of performing the duties of his office, or be absent from the state, the president pro tempore of the Senate shall act as governor until the vacancy be filled or the disability shall cease. The lieutenant governor shall be disqualified from holding any other office, except as specially provided in this Constitution, during the term for which he shall have been elected." And in the following section it is provided that in case of the death, resignation, impeachment, absence from the state, or inability to act of the governor, "the powers and duties of his office shall devolve upon the lieutenant governor for the residue of the term, or until the disability shall cease." It will be seen that in case of a vacancy in the office of governor the vacancy is not to be filled, but the powers and duties devolve upon the lieutenant governor, he does not cease to be lieutenant governor. Under such circumstances it would hardly be contended that when the powers and duties of the governor devolve upon the lieutenant governor the latter thereby becomes governor, and can appoint a lieutenant governor. Nor do I think it could be contended that when the president pro tempore of the Senate acts as governor he could appoint a person to fill the vacancy in the office of lieutenant governor. If he could, he would then appoint himself out of office, and it would be his duty to do so.

But it is conceded by the parties that upon the death of the lieutenant governor the governor may fill the vacancy by appointment. This is unmistakably within the language of § 8, art. 5, which reads as follows: "When any office shall from any cause become vacant, and no mode is provided by the Constitution and law for filling such vacancy, the governor shall have the power to fill such vacancy by granting a commission, which shall expire at the end of the next legislature or at the next election by the people." An office has become vacant, and there is no other mode provided by the Constitution or laws to fill it. "The next election by the people" does not mean the next general election or the next election held by the people, but it must mean that the appointee shall hold until some one has been elected to fill that office. But there is nothing in this provision which indicates when this election shall be held, but only that until someone has been elected to fill the vacancy the appointee shall hold. This section does not direct that such election shall be at the next general election. It provides simply for filling vacancies by appointment, and that such appointees shall hold until the office is filled in the manner provided by law; but does not itself provide for such election or direct when it shall be. If, however, the phrase "the next election by the people" is equivalent to the phrase "the next election," and we assume that it was intended thereby to indicate the election at which such vacancy would be filled, we would feel compelled to hold that the next election is that which the Constitution has provided for filling that particular office; that is, the next gubernatorial election. Many authorities may be cited in support of this proposition. In Matthews v. Shawnee County Comrs. 84 Kan. 606, the governor appointed a judge to fill a vacancy. The Constitution provided for an appointment to fill the vacancy until the next regular election. Upon a contest the supreme court said: "The words 'regular election' do not necessarily mean general election, or township election, or any state, county, city, or district election. They simply mean the regular election prescribed by law for the election of the particular officer to be elected." State, Atty. Gen., v. Philips, 30 Fla. 579, involved a municipal office. The court said: "When it is declared that the city council shall fill vacancies until the next regular election, it means until the next regular election provided by the charter for electing the officer whose term has become vacant." To the same effect are State, McGee, v. Gardner, 3 S. D. 553; Sawyer v. Haydon, 1 Nev. 75; People, Cloud, v. Wilson, 72 N. C. 155; State, Watson, v. Cobb, 2 Kan. 32; and People, Love, v. Mathewson, 47 Cal. 442. The effect of these decisions is that the term "next election" means the next election for a lieutenant governor, and that the language used in § 8 cannot be understood as itself directing that at the next succeeding general election the vacancy shall be filled.

Is an election at that time authorized by any law? The Constitution contains no provision for holding an election for filling this vacancy, and is silent as to whether the appointee shall hold for the residue of the term. And this is more noticeable because as to some other officers there are explicit directions upon the subject. In regard to justices of this court and judges of the superior court, it is expressly provided that in case of a vacancy the appointee shall hold until the election and qualification of a successor, "which election shall take place at the next general election." Sections 8, 5, art. 6. In regard to railroad commissioners, the provision is that the appointee shall hold office for the residue of the unexpired term. The Constitution is equally silent in regard to filling vacancies in other executive offices. A similar state of things existed under the Constitution of 1849, and the legislature passed a law for filling such vacancies ("An Act Concerning Offices," April 28, 1851: Stat. 1851, p. 415). This act did not provide for the election of a lieutenant governor. Like the governor, he was required, in case of resignation, to resign to the legislature if that body was in session; if not in session, to the secretary of state. Such is also the requirement of the present Code. Pol. Code, § 995. Like the old statute, the present Code contains no provision in regard to an election to fill a vacancy in the office of lieutenant governor. As to other state officers, the provision is that they shall hold for the balance of the unexpired term. There has never been in the laws a provision for an election to fill a vacancy occasioned by the death or resignation of a lieutenant governor. Perhaps it was not supposed that such vacancy would ever be filled, even by appointment. At all events, there is no law, either constitutional or statutory, for such an election. In such case there can be no election. People, McKune, v. Weller, 11 Cal. 49, 70 Am. Dec. 754; People, Love, v. Mathewson, 47 Cal. 442; Kensfield v. Irwin, 52 Cal. 164. In Sawyer v. Haydon, 1 Nev. 75, it was said: "We think no court or judge has gone so far as to hold that the people might hold an election or vote for any particular officer at a general election, unless special provision was made for electing such officer for the particular term to which he was seeking to be elected, either in the Constitution or some statutory enactment." This was also said in People, Love, v. Mathewson, 47 Cal. 442. The efficacy of an election depends upon the law in pursuance of which it is held, and the fact that an office is elective does not of itself, without some law authorizing and regulating the election, render valid any attempted election. The writ is therefore denied.

84 L. R. A.

We concur: Beatty, Ch. J.; McFarland, J.; Van Fleet, J.; Harrison, J.; Henshaw, J.

Garoutte, J., concurring:

I concur in the judgment. The Constitution provides that the powers and duties of the office of governor, in case of vacancy, shall devolve upon the lieutenant governor for the residue of the term, or until the disability shall cease. The Constitution further provides that in case of a vacancy in both the office of governor and lieutenant governor the president pro tempore of the Senate shall act as governor until the vacancy be filled. The Constitution does not provide that the president pro tempore of the Senate shall perform the duties of the office of lieutenant governor in case a vacancy exists in that office. And this omission to so provide is, to my mind, an unintentional lapse on the part of the framers of the Constitution. Such appears to be plain when we consider that there is an express provision of that instrument casting upon the president pro tempore of the Senate authority to perform the duties of the office of governor if there be no lieutenant governor, taken in connection with the many other provisions of that instrument which all point to that conclusion. But no authority is found in the Constitution vesting the president pro tempore of the Senate with the duties of the lieutenant governor when a vacancy occurs in that office, and hence any such question is foreclosed.

The foregoing conditions being present, a vacancy occurred in the office of lieutenant governor upon the death of the incumbent, and the governor had the power to fill such vacancy by virtue of § 8, art. 5, of the Constitution. That section reads as follows: "When any office shall from any cause become vacant, and no mode is provided by the Constitution and law for filling such vacancy, the governor shall have the power to fill such vacancy by granting a commission, which shall expire at the end of the next legislature or at the next election by the people." It follows that the result of this litigation in part rests upon the true construction of the words "the next election by the people." It is conceded by the present incumbent of the office that the next election by the people since his appointment will be the coming presidential election to be held in November, but he claims the words should be construed to mean "the next election by the people at which a lieutenant governor is regularly to be elected." If the framers of an instrument of the dignity and importance of a state Constitution had intended such to be the law, it was easy for them to have said so, and they should have so declared in terms. And, in the absence of a declaration of that kind, I do not consider myself authorized to so interpret a phrase of that instrument; certainly not unless the intent of its authors to that effect is plainly apparent; and we look in vain for such intent. Upon a question of statutory construction it was said in Elythe v. Ayres, 96 Cal. 582, 19 L. R. A. 40: "We are not here to construct a statute, but to construe a statute. We can neither interpolate nor eliminate, and we are bound to assume that the legislature enacted the law as it now stands with a due comprehension of the meaning of words, and of the rules of statutory construction, and that they incorporated into the act all that was intended, and that they intended that effect should be given to all that was found therein." And that principle of construction applies with full force here. If any layman of ordinary intelligence, be he merchant, doctor, or mechanic, should have the question submitted to him as to the proper signification of the words here under consideration, to wit, the officer's commission shall expire "at the next election by the people," he would say without hesitation that the commission expired at the next general election. Such is the fair and legitimate construction of the language. There are some decisions of courts of other states which in a measure look in an opposite direction from the views here expressed. But these decisions are largely based upon provisions of law not identical with the one here involved. Many of those provisions use the term "regular election," and in such cases stress by the court is laid upon the word "regular" as a most material element in arriving at the true construction of the language. Notwithstanding the foregoing construction of the constitutional provision is favorable to the petitioner, still the relief he asks must be denied. For, though the appointee's commission expire at "the next election by the people," still, in the absence of some law authorizing the election of a lieutenant governor at that time, no election can be held, and I find no such law. A provision of Constitution or statute declaring a certain day upon which the commission of an officer shall expire is in no sense a provision that an election shall be held upon that day to fill the office. Under these conditions the present appointee of the governor will hold until his successor is elected and qualified, regardless of the day upon which his commission may expire; and his successor can only be elected at a time fixed by law, which time will be at the regular state election in the year 1898.

COLORADO SUPREME COURT.

Horace G. SMITH Jr., et al., Appts.,
v.

Jane H. SMITH.

(.....Colo.....)

1. A fraud upon the rights of a wife is committed when the husband strips himself of all his property just before death by delivering deeds of real estate that had been made some years before and giving a check for money which constituted all his personal property in order to defeat his wife's rights as his heir, after obtaining the full benefit of the property up to the end of his own life.

2. A consolidation of several actions against different defendants cannot be made under Civ. Code, § 20, which authorizes consolidation of causes of action which might have been joined when they are in the same court and "between the same parties."

3. The improper consolidation of several actions attacking deeds of a decedent is ground of reversal where the defendants therein were thereby deprived of the right to each other's testimony.

(May 18, 1896.)

A PPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the District Court for Arapahoe County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to set aside certain conveyances of real estate as in fraud of plaintiff's rights. Reversed.

NOTE.—As to fraud in transferring property so as to cut off a wife's interest by way of dower or otherwise, see Phelps v. Phelps (N. Y.) 23 L. R. A. 34 L. R. A.

625; Stroup v. Stroup (Ind.) 27 L. R. A. 523; Walker v. Walker (N. H.) 27 L. R. A. 799; and Murray v. Murray (Ky.) 3 L. R. A. 95.

Statement by Hayt, Ch. J. :

In this one appeal are embraced three several actions, commenced in the district court by Jane H. Smith, as plaintiff, against Horace G. Smith, Jr., Ralph Smith, and Jessie F. Smith, defendants, respectively. In the court below the actions were consolidated, and tried as one action. The complaints are alike in each of the three cases, except as to the party defendant. It is alleged that appellee, Jane H. Smith, was married to Horace G. Smith in November, 1884, and that she remained his lawful wife until the 17th day of August, 1892, upon which last-mentioned date he died, at the age of seventy-five years; that at the time of the intermarriage of plaintiff and the deceased he had three children living, the defendants in these several cases; that on the 28th day of August, 1888, the deceased, being the owner of a large amount of real estate in the city of Denver, to the value of $40,000, free and clear from all liens and encumbrances of any kind and nature whatsoever, executed deeds to all of such real estate to the defendants in severalty. Plaintiff alleges that these deeds which bear date August 28, 1888, were made secretly, without her knowledge, and without consideration, with the intent and design to defraud plaintiff in the event of her husband's death. It is further alleged that by these deeds the deceased conveyed to each of the defendants about a one-third portion in value of all his real estate; that the deeds were acknowledged on the 28th day of August, 1888, but that none of them were filed for record until the 16th day of August, 1892, this being the day before the death of the grantor. It is further alleged that at the time the deeds were filed for record the said Horace G. Smith was in extremis, and expected to die, and also that from the time of the execution of these deeds until the same were recorded they remained under the exclusive care and control of the grantor; that during all this time he retained the possession, dominion, and absolute control over all the property thus deeded, receiving all the rents, income, and revenues therefrom, the same as if the deeds had never been made, and in all respects exercised the exclusive rights of ownership over all the property. It is further alleged that these deeds are testamentary in character, and were made by the grantor, acting in collusion with the grantees, for the purpose of defrauding plaintiff of her right as heir of her husband. It is further alleged that plaintiff was thereby left without means for her support, and that she was physically frail, and in delicate health, and unable to work for a living. To these complaints a general demurrer was in each instance interposed and overruled. Thereupon the defendants each answered separately. The answers are the same in all the cases. In their answers, the defendants admitted that Horace G. Smith was the owner of the real estate described in the complaints, but denied that the real estate was of the value of $40,000, and allege that it was only of the value of $15,000. They deny that on the 16th day of August, 1892, Horace G. Smith was pronounced to be in extremis, or that his death was then and there expected. They deny that the deeds were in his possession, as alleged in the complaint, and allege that the deeds, as soon as executed, were delivered to the defendants, respectively, and retained by them. It is denied that the grantor, after the execution of the deeds, retained possession or control over the property, and also that he received the rents, income, or revenues therefrom. After the answers were filed, the causes were consolidated upon the motion of plaintiff, and against the objection of the defendants, and each of them. Upon these issues the cause was tried to the court without a jury. Upon the evidence the court determined the issues in favor of the plaintiff, and decreed that the defendants, and each of them, be compelled to convey to her the one half of all the real estate described in the complaint, and conveyed to the defendants, respectively, by the quitclaim deeds of August 28, 1888. The defendants, having excepted to the findings and decree, bring the case here by appeal.

Messrs. David Mitchell and N. M. Laws, for appellants:

Plaintiff's husband had a perfect right to dispose of the property if he was entirely free from debt, and in any event only creditors before or subsequent to the act could question it.

Bump, Fraud. Conv. 2d ed. 271, 272; Wait, Fraud. Conv. §§ 89-91.

The deed to defendant was made, acknowledged, and delivered to the defendant by Horace G. Smith, the grantor. This was and is sufficient to transfer the title, even though Horace G. Smith may have desired and intended thereby to prevent his wife, the plaintiff, from ever acquiring any right, title, or interest in or to the real estate so by him conveyed, or from ever deriving any benefit therefrom; she being only an heir and basing her claim on that ground.

Diefendorf v. Diefendorf, 182 N. Y. 100.

The grantor cannot procure his deed to be set aside.

Colee v. Colee, 123 Ind. 109; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 871; Woerner, American Law of Administration, § 296.

What the grantor cannot do his heir cannot do.

Bump, Fraud. Conv. 487; Wait, Fraud. Conv. § 121; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 871.

The complaint does not allege that the grantor was in any way incapacitated, or that he was moved by undue influence on the part of the defendant in any way or manner, or that defendant did or said anything to procure the making of the conveyance sought to be set aside. In such case the deed must stand.

Wait, Fraud. Conv. § 481; Smith v. Meaghan, 28 Hun, 423.

In this state a husband or wife has the right absolutely to do whatever he or she will with his or her property independent of the other to all intents and purposes the same as if sole and unmarried.

Crain v. Wright, 114 N. Y. 811; Palmer v.

Hanna, 6 Colo. 55; Burdsall v. Waggoner, 4 Colo. 257.

Even if the deed was voluntary it is good and binding on the grantor and his heirs.

1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 871; Campbell v. Whitson, 68 Ill. 240, 18 Am. Rep. 555; Gregory v. Filbeck, 13 Colo. 379; Bump, Fraud. Conv. 2d ed. 808, and cases cited in notes 1, 2.

Being free from debt, Horace G. Smith had the right to do with his property as he saw fit. Burdsall v. Waggoner, supra.

Heirs taking by descent are estopped by the deed of their ancestor.

Bond v. Swearingen, 1 Ohio, 395.

Neither spouse has any vested right, inchoate or otherwise, in the property of the other so long as both live.

Holladay v. Dailey, 1 Colo. 464, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 610, 23 L. ed. 189; Stewart v. Stewart, 5 Conn. 316; Bump, Fraud. Conv. 2d ed. 18-15; Peaslee v. Barney, 1 D. Chip. (Vt.) 331, 6 Am. Dec. 743.

If the grantor made the conveyance in furtherance of a fraudulent purpose on his part, a court of equity will not set it aside at his instance.

Tyler v. Tyler, 126 Ill. 525; Bump, Fraud. Conv. 2d ed. 436, 437.

Such deed is binding on the grantor, his heirs, executors, and administrators.

Bump, Fraud. Conv. 437, 438; Hallorn v. Trum, 125 Ill. 250; Horner v. Zimmerman, 45 Ill. 15; Ward v. Enders, 29 Ill. 524; Choteau v. Jones, 11 Ill. 319; Wait, Fraud. Conv. § 121.

The three cases consolidated here are not between the same parties (the plaintiff is the same in each but there is a different defendant in each action); nor are the causes of action or supposed causes of action such as might have been joined.

Denver v. Kent, 1 Colo. 336; Mayer v. Coffin, 90 N. Y. 312; Abbott, Law Dict. title Consolidation of Actions; 8 Estee, Pl. 148, note 8; Bech v. Ruggles, 6 Abb. N. C. 69.

The court misconceived the force and effect of the order of consolidation, and was thereby led into the error as to the competency of the witnesses.

Mowry v. Davenport, 6 Lea, 91.

It is not an effect of consolidation to make the testimony in each case apply as well to the other.

Lofland v. Coward, 12 Heisk. 546; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Hillmon, 145 U. S. 285, 36 L. ed. 706; Russell v. Chicago Trust & Sav. Bank, 139 Ill. 588, 17 L. R. A. 345.

Each of said defendants has a clear right to show by competent witnesses who had knowledge of the facts that the said several deeds were actually and unconditionally delivered by the grantor to the respective grantees on the day of their date and acknowledged; but this right was denied to each of said defendants by the orders and rulings of the court above excepted to; and each of said defendants was injuriously affected thereby.

Hobart v. Hobart, 63 N. Y. 80; Smith v. Meaghn, 28 Hun, 423; Stewart v. Stewart, 41 Wis. 624.

An absolute deed takes effect on its delivery, and the right of possession in the grantee cannot be limited or postponed by parol agreement between the parties, and if the grantor remains in the possession of the deeded premises after the execution and delivery of the deed he is a tenant at will of the grantee.

Wright v. Graves, 80 Ala. 416.

If the several deeds were delivered to the several grantees on the day of their date such delivery was the consummation of conveyances which the grantor had the right to make; and the several grantees had the right to receive these several conveyances and enjoy the benefit thereof.

Bump, Fraud. Conv. 2d ed. 15, 16.

When the deed has a date it will be presumed that it was executed and delivered on that day.

5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 446.

The possession of a deed by the grantee, duly signed and acknowledged, is prima facie evidence of delivery on the day of its date, and casts the burden of proof on the party who claims that it was delivered on another day or that it was not delivered at all.

3 Greenl. Ev. § 297; Brown v. State, 5 Colo. 496; Blair v. Howell, 68 Iowa, 619; Stewart v. Stewart, 50 Wis. 445.

And the proof, before it will be held sufficient to rebut the presumption of delivery, must be clear and convincing.

McCann v. Atherton, 106 Ill. 31; Tunison v. Chamblin, 88 Ill. 378.

Messrs. V. D. Markham and Bartels & Blood, for appellee:

Where the defenses are the same, or where there are no defenses, then consolidation may be compelled by the defendant. The same rule would apply to the plaintiff.

Powell v. Gray, 1 Ala. 77.

The question of consolidation is addressed to the discretion of the court and cannot be reviewed on error.

McRae v. Boast, 3 Rand. (Va.) 481; Den, Smith, v. Fen, 9 N. J. L. 417.

The court will order a consolidation of several actions of ejectment where there are the same question and defense in all the cases.

Hartman v. Spiers, 87 N. C. 80; Jackson, Pionier, v. Schaubert, 4 Cow. 78; Burnham v. Dalling, 18 N. J. Eq. 132; Wilson v. Riddle, 48 Ga. 609; Beach v. Woodyard, 5 W. Va. 231; Wyatt v. Thompson, 10 W. Va. 645; Wilkinson v. Johnson, 4 Hill, 46.

Conveyance by a husband to his children of all his property, made a short time before his death without a valuable consideration, and securing to himself the use and control thereof during his life, is fraudulent against his wife and will be set aside in equity.

Thayer v. Thayer, 14 Vt. 107, 39 Am. Dec. 211; Killing v. Reidenhauer, 6 Serg. & R. 531; Youngs v. Carter, 10 Hun, 194; Jiggitts v. Jiggitts, 40 Miss. 719; Bigelow, Fr. § 96; Brown v. Bronson, 35 Mich. 415; Smith v. Hines, 10 Fla. 258; Petty v. Petty, 4 B. Mon. 215, 39 Am. Dec. 501; Brewer v. Connell, 11 Humph. 500.

A wife may maintain an action to set aside a conveyance by her husband, made with intent to deprive her of alimony in a divorce suit against him, though the cause for such divorce did not arise until after the conveyance was made.

Gregory v. Filbeck, 13 Colo. 379; Johnson v. Johnson (Ky.) 2 S. W. 437; Hanna v. Palmer, 6 Colo. 156, 45 Am. Rep. 524.

Where the husband during coverture secretly makes a conveyance of all his property, and keeps the knowledge thereof from his wife, and thereafter retains the control and management of his property, such instrument should be treated and considered as a will, for it is testamentary in its nature, and not as a deed; and considering it as such, inasmuch as it deprives his wife of more than one half of the property, it should be held to be void as to her.

Lines v. Lines, 142 Pa. 149; Swaime v. Perine, 5 Johns. Ch. 482, 9 Am. Dec. 818; Gilson v. Hutchinson, 120 Mass. 27; Cranson v. Cranson, 4 Mich. 280, 68 Am. Dec. 534; Jones v. Jones, 64 Wis. 801; Tucker v. Tucker, 83 Mo. 464; Smith v. Smith, 12 Cal. 216, 78 Am. Dec. 583.

The same rule applies to personalty which is given with the intent of depriving a widow of her distributive share. It will be set aside as a fraud upon her.

Manitake v. Beard, 85 Ky. 20.

Hayt, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The record in this case discloses that the real estate deeded to his children, the issue by a former wife, was all the real estate owned by Horace G. Smith, Sr.; that, aside from this, he had no other property or choses in action, except a few hundred dollars in cash, deposited to his credit in a bank; and that a few hours before his death he executed a check for this to one of his sons. As a result of these transactions, he left his widow absolutely penniless at his death. She was then old and infirm, and has since been dependent upon the charity of friends for her support. Appellants contend that under the statutes of this state the obligation of the husband to provide for his wife upon his decease is simply a moral obligation, and one that cannot be enforced by the courts. Wherever the common law has prevailed, it has from the earliest times required the husband to support the wife so long as the marriage relation existed between them, and she remained true to her marital vows. Moreover, it imposes the duty upon the husband having property to provide for the support and comfort of his widow after his demise. The obligation in this latter respect is to a large extent mutual, and the books are full of authorities to the effect that, where either husband or wife attempts secretly to convey property on the eve of marriage, such conveyances would be set aside for the benefit of the defrauded party. So, also, where the husband has attempted to convey real estate in fraud of his wife's right of dower, the courts have never been called upon in vain to protect such rights. Although in this state dower and the tenancy by curtesy are abolished, the statute provides that whenever either party shall die intestate, possessed of real estate, if such intestate leave a husband or wife and children, one half of such estate shall descend to such surviving husband or wife. Mills' Anno. Stat. § 1524. It is also provided that, if any decedent leaves a widow, residing in this state, she shall be entitled to certain personal property, particularly describing the same, and that she may have the same set apart for her, not subject to the payment of his debts. Id. § 1534. It is further provided that, when an inventory shall have been made of such personal estate, the widow may relinquish her rights to all property allowed to her, and that in lieu thereof she may claim the value of such property in money or other personal property, at her election. Id. § 1535. It is also provided: "In case any married man shall hereafter deprive his wife of over one half his property, by will, it shall be optional with such married woman, after the death of her husband, to accept the condition of such will, or one half of his whole estate, both real and personal." Id. § 8011. It is the obvious intent and purpose of the foregoing acts to provide the widow with the necessary means for her support in case of the death of the husband, whenever his property is sufficient for that purpose. Under these statutes, appellee contends that where the husband, during coverture, secretly makes conveyance of all his property, and keeps the knowledge thereof from his wife, thereafter retaining control and management of the same, such conveyance should be treated and considered as testamentary in character, and not as a deed; and, in so far as the wife is deprived thereby of more than one half the real property, it should be held void as to her. To this proposition the zeal and ability of counsel have been largely directed, and our attention has been called to numerous authorities upon either side of the controversy, some of them directly in point, and others bearing more or less upon the question presented. Our examination of the cases cited, however, does not disclose one showing a parallel to the heartlessness and inhumanity manifested by the deceased. In many of the cases the husband has attempted to convey his personal property by a gift, to the exclusion of his widow, leaving for her reliance such interest as she might be entitled to in his real estate under the law. In other instances the husband has attempted to convey his real estate, leaving his personal property to be shared by his widow and other heirs; but this decedent has attempted to strip his widow, at his death, of all his property, both real and personal. As to whether such a transaction should be upheld, the authorities are not uniform, and to reconcile them would be impossible. In Stewart v. Stewart, 5 Conn. 316, the husband executed a deed conveying all his real estate to his children, placing the conveyance in the hands of a third person, to be delivered to them upon his death, on the happening of which event, two years after the execution of the deed, it was delivered pursuant to the trust, and the court held that the instrument was strictly a deed, and not a testamentary disposition; second, that it was not fraudulent in relation to the widow's right of dower. The case is the strongest we have found in favor of appellants' position. The action was, however, at law, and not in equity, and the court in the course of the opinion mentions the fact that that may be a fraud in equity which is not at law. The case of Small v. Small, 56 Kan. 1, 80 L. R. A. 243, is strongly relied upon by appellants. It is held in that case that, subject to certain limitations, and against any claim of the widow made after death, a married man in Illinois or Kansas may, during coverture, give away to his children the bulk of his property, although the well-known effect of the gift will be to deprive the widow of a fair share of the property, which would otherwise have fallen to her. In the course of the opinion the Kansas court quotes with approval the following language from the case of Williams v. Williams, 40 Fed. Rep. 521: "The main question in its broadest sense, is simply this: Can a married man give away his property, during coverture, for the purpose of preventing his wife from acquiring an interest therein after his death? The law seems to be that if such gift is bona fide, and accompanied by delivery, the widow cannot reach the property after the donor's death.

Neither the wife nor children have any tangible interest in the property of the husband or father during his lifetime, except so far as he is liable for their support, and hence he can sell it or give it away without let or hindrance from them. Of course, the sale or gift must be absolute and bona fide, and not colorable only. And if the sale or gift would bind the grantor it would bind his heirs." The writer of the foregoing seems to have understood that a colorable sale could be set aside. Set aside by whom? If made for the purpose of defrauding an heir, it could only be set aside at the suit of the party defrauded, while the grantor, being a party to the fraud would be refused relief by the courts; hence it does not necessarily follow, as stated by him, that all sales or gifts which are binding upon the grantor are likewise binding upon his heirs.

As our statutes are borrowed from Illinois, decisions in that state are entitled to great weight. The case of Padfield v. Padfield was before the supreme court of Illinois three times. 68 Ill. 210, 72 Ill. 322, 78 Ill. 16. The conclusion of the court is, we think, fairly expressed in the following from Kerr on Fraud and Mistake, which is quoted with approval in the last opinion: "There can be no doubt of the power of a husband to dispose absolutely of his property during his life independently of the concurrence, and exonerated from any claim of his wife, provided the transaction is not merely colorable and be unattended with circumstances indicative of fraud upon the rights of the wife. If the disposition by the husband be bona fide, and no right is reserved to him, though made to defeat the right of the wife, it will be good against her." Kerr, Fraud & Mistake, p. 220. Accepting this as a correct statement of the law, we think the case made by the pleadings and proofs before us brings the present case within the exception; for here, as we have shown, the transaction was merely colorable, and made under circumstances strongly indicative of fraud upon the rights of the wife. The proof shows that these three several deeds were held from record for the period of four years after their execution. If one of these deeds had been withheld from record for that length of time, this would be a suspicious circumstance, while the fact that all were thus withheld leads very strongly to the conclusion that they were so withheld as a result of an understanding between the grantor and the three grantees, and that these grantees were guilty of collusion in the matter for the purpose of preventing information of the transfer from reaching the wife of the grantor, and to permit the grantor in the meantime to continue to exercise exclusive dominion and control over the property. In the case of Youngs v. Carter, 10 Hun, 194, the facts were that Daniel Youngs, a widower, was engaged to be married to the plaintiff in August, but in consequence of his sickness the marriage was put off until September. In the interim he, without the knowledge of the plaintiff, conveyed nearly the whole of his real estate to two daughters by a former marriage, and took back from them a lease for his life. The plaintiff did not learn of this conveyance until after marriage, and then immediately brought suit to have the same set aside. The court held that the conveyance was a fraud upon the inchoate right of the wife to dower, and adjudged her entitled to dower in the land so conveyed. In the course of the opinion, which is an instructive one, the court advances the following argument: "When the conveyance in controversy was executed, the relation of the grantor to the plaintiff was of a strictly confidential nature, and a natural expectation inspired as well as implied by it was, that upon its consummation, she should succeed to all the legal rights of a wife in the property owned by him. She acquired by means of it an equitable claim upon him to that extent. But, at the same time, it was not so entirely controlling as to prevent him from discharging such other equitable obligations as he might have previously incurred to his children. It simply restrained him from disposing of his property, fraudulently, for the purpose of preventing it from becoming subservient to the rights which the laws of the state secured to a wife." This principle is announced and carried to its logical result in the case of Manikes v. Beard, 85 Ky. 20, where the husband, in contemplation of death, gave to his children the whole of his personal estate, with the fraudulent intent to deprive his wife of the interest therein to which she would be entitled as his widow; and the court did not hesitate to set aside the gift at the suit of the widow. This case is a much stronger one in favor of the widow than that case, for the reason that there the gift was of personal property only, over which the owner has, by the commercial law, greater freedom than over his real estate; and her dower interest remained in the lands left by the husband at his demise, and this dower interest was sufficient to support her. Here, by the fraudulent conduct of the husband, the wife was stripped of all her rights as heir to his personal estate and to his real estate as well. It is not necessary in this case, and it is not our intention, to say anything that will prevent the husband, during his lifetime, from selling his personal property or transferring his real estate for such consideration as he may be willing to accept, or without consideration, provided always that the transaction shall be absolute and bona fide, and not colorable only; but what we do say is, where, as here, the complaint charges, and the evidence shows, that the transaction complained of is colorable merely, and resorted to by the husband for the purpose of defeating his wife's rights as his heir, he hoping thereby to obtain the full benefit of the property to the last hour of his life, and at the same time to be able to deprive her of all interest therein as his heir, is as much of a fraud on the part of the husband as it is for a debtor having in contemplation the incurring of an indebtedness to put his property beyond his control, and the courts have universally declared the latter to be in violation of the statute of frauds. The same principle should govern in this case. The transaction is shown to have had its inception in a desire on the part of both the grantor and grantees to deprive the wife and stepmother of the benefits conferred upon her as an heir of her husband under our statutes, and the action of the district court in characterizing the transaction a fraud upon the rights of the wife as an heir is founded upon the plainest principles of justice and equity, and must be sustained.

31 L. R. A.

We have thus far considered the cause as made by the pleadings and evidence. We are satisfied, however, that a great injustice was done the defendants by the order of consolidation, made by the district court, as thereby they were prevented from fully presenting their defenses. The cases were consolidated upon the motion of the plaintiff and against the objection of the defendants and each of them, and by reason of such consolidation each defendant was deprived of the evidence of the defendants in the other suits; i. e. of the evidence of his codefendants after the consolidation. The ruling excluding these witnesses is based upon § 4816, Mills' Anno. Stat., which provides, among other things, "that no party to any civil action, suit, or proceeding, or person directly interested in the event thereof, shall be allowed to testify therein, of his own motion, or in his own behalf, . . . when any adverse party sues or defends as the trustee or conservator of an idiot, . . . of any deceased person," etc. The argument of appellee in support of the ruling of the court below proceeds upon the basis that, after the consolidation, there was but one suit, to which all the defendants were parties. If the suits were properly consolidated, the exclusion of the witnesses must be upheld, but if the order of consolidation was not proper, the subsequent exclusion of the witnesses was also erroneous. The Civil Code provides at § 20 that, "whenever two or more actions are pending at one time between the same parties, and in the same court, upon causes of action which might have been joined, the court may order the actions to be consolidated into one." At 84 L. R. A.

least one of the essential conditions to consolidation under this provision was lacking in these suits, namely, they were not between the same parties. It is urged, however, by appellees, that courts have the inherent right, independent of statute, to consolidate suits at law and actions in equity, where the interest of the parties and the public may be subserved by such consolidation. An examination of the authorities leads to the conclusion that, in the absence of legislation, the power of consolidation of actions has been exercised with the greatest freedom according to the will of the particular judge before whom the actions may have been pending, without any definite rule having been established for the guidance of the courts with reference thereto. The provisions of our Code with reference to consolidation are similar to those to be found in many of the other code states. See 4 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 676. No case has been cited, and we know of none, where a consolidation has been permitted under such a statute, unless all the prescribed conditions existed; and in a number of states the code provision has been referred to as controlling. In the case of Mayor v. Coffin, 90 N. Y. 312, the court says: "The order of consolidation must be reversed because the special term had no power to make it. The authority to consolidate actions is given by § 817 of the Code, and permits it only where both actions are pending between the same plaintiff and the same defendants for causes of action which might have been joined." See also Kipp v. Delamater, 58 How. Pr. 183; Blesch v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 44 Wis. 593. For error in ordering the consolidation, and in depriving each of the defendants of the evidence of the others, the judgment must be reversed, and the cause remanded.

Judgment reversed.

Campbell, J., concurring specially:

Upon the ground that the order of consolidation was erroneous, I concur in the judgment of reversal. From that portion of the opinion in which the Chief Justice holds the conveyance by the husband to be a fraud upon the property rights of the wife, I dissent. While joining with my associates in characterizing the husband's conduct, from a moral standpoint, as most reprehensible, I am not, as at present advised, prepared to say that the law of this state does not permit him to do what the evidence in the case shows that he has done. My reading of the authorities is that the rule announced in the majority opinion should prevail where tenancy by the curtesy and dower exist; but the application of the principle to the case at bar, where, as in our state, dower and tenancy by the curtesy have been abolished, does not seem to me to be warranted.

MARYLAND COURT OF APPEALS.

John B. HANNA, Appt.,

v.

James C. YOUNG, The Treasurer of Bel Air.

(.....Md.....)

1. The qualifications of voters at municipal elections may be prescribed by the legislature as by requiring them to be taxpayers, in the absence of any constitutional provision to the contrary.
2. The right to vote "at all elections," given by Const. art. 1, § 1, to every male citizen of full age "who has been a resident of the state for one year and of the legislative district of Baltimore city or of the county in which he may offer to vote for six months," does not extend to municipal elections outside of the city of Baltimore.

(October 23, 1896.)

APPPEAL by defendant from an order of the Circuit Court for Harford County granting a writ of mandamus to compel defendant to turn over the property in his possession as treasurer of the town of Bel Air to a person who was alleged to have been elected as his successor in office. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Thomas H. Robinson, Gilbert S. Hawkins, and H. J. Jewett, Jr., for appellant:

Municipal corporations are institutions designed for the local government of towns and cities; or, more accurately, towns and cities, with their inhabitants, are, for purposes of subordinate local administration, invested with a corporate character.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 12.

Charters can be changed at pleasure when the constitutional rights of creditors are not invaded.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 63; Ex parte Harrington v. Rochester, 10 Wend. 547; People v. Morris, 12 Wend. 325; State v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 12 Gill & J. 899, 38 Am. Dec. 819; Cooley, Const. Lim. 3d ed. 192; Baltimore v. State, Board of Police, 15 Md. 881, 74 Am. Dec. 572; Groff v. Frederick City, 44 Md. 78.

The power of local government is the instinctive purpose and the distinguishing feature of a municipal corporation proper.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 20.

The controlling voice ought to be with those who have to bear the burden.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 17.

The mayor of a city is not an officer under the state within the meaning of a constitutional provision giving the supreme court jurisdiction only when title to an office under the state is in contest.

Britton v. Steber, 62 Mo. 870.

The right of suffrage is not regarded as one of the inalienable rights enumerated in the Declaration of American Independence and in the bills of rights of the states.

1 Story, Const. 580; 1 Bl. Com. 171; Huber v. Reilly, 53 Pa. 115; Paine, Elections, 2.

Citizenship and the right of suffrage are not inseparable; the latter is not a universal, inalienable right, but is altogether conventional. Anderson v. Baker, 23 Md. 581.

The elective franchise is conferred on the citizen by the sovereign power of the state to subserve a public general purpose.

Anderson v. Baker, 23 Md. 584.

A franchise not having for its purpose the public general interest is not created or affected by art. 1 of the Constitution.

If special or extra municipal powers be granted not affecting civil, political, or other rights which concern all but which involve directly the expenditure and payment of money, it is but just that the project should be required to have the support of a majority in value of those who must pay the expense.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 15.

In some of the states it is provided by constitutional provision that to entitle a man to vote he must as a prerequisite have paid within two years next preceding the time of the election at which he claims a right to vote a state or county tax.

McCrary, Elections, § 74.

Any office established by statute may be abolished by statute.

Davis v. State, 7 Md. 161, 61 Am. Dec. 831; Standford v. Wingate, 2 Duv. 440.

If the legislature can say who shall be elected can it not say who shall elect?

State, Hardwick, v. Shearingen, 12 Ga. 23; Stewart v. Foster, 2 Binn. 110.

No municipal elections except those held in the city of Baltimore are within the terms or meaning of the Constitution.

Smith v. Stephan, 66 Md. 388.

"Voters of the county," a phrase used in the Constitution of Wisconsin, is interpreted to mean "those who have a right to vote at the elections held for the purpose of choosing state officers."

State v. Williams, 5 Wis. 308; State, Cothren, v. Lean, 9 Wis. 283.

The clauses of art. 95, La. Const., which restricted eligibility to parish offices to persons who have the right to vote in the parish, contemplated state offices.

State v. Blanchard, 6 La. Ann. 515.

The Wisconsin Constitution undertook to designate who should vote at municipal elections, and declared that "the electors of such cities, towns, or villages" should be entitled.

It was held in State, Cornish, v. Tuttle, 53 Wis. 45, that the words "electors of such cities" meant residents therein who were electors.

Long prior to and ever since the adoption of the Constitution it has been the legislative rule, rather than the exception, to fix in the charters of towns and cities a qualification for electors different from that prescribed in the Constitution for county and district electors.

Buckner v. Gordon, 83 Ky. 665.

The presumption must always be in favor of the validity of laws if the contrary is not clearly NOTE.—As to legislative power over municipal elections, see State, Lamar, v. Dillon (Fla.) 22 L. R. A. 124; also (as to power to give women the right to vote in city elections) Coffin v. Thompson (Mich.) 21 L. R. A. 662, and note.

demonstrated; it must be a clear and unequivocal breach of the Constitution—not a doubtful and argumentative implication.

Baltimore v. State, Board of Police, 15 Md. 476, 74 Am. Dec. 572; Anderson v. Baker, 23 Md. 628; State v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 12 Gill & J. 438, 88 Am. Dec. 819; Dorchester County Comrs. v. Meekins, 50 Md. 39; Groff v. Frederick City, 44 Md. 73; Fell v. State, 42 Md. 71, 20 Am. Rep. 83.

Constitutions are not to be construed according to words used in a particular clause, but the whole must be considered.

Manly v. State, 7 Md. 135; Anderson v. Baker, 23 Md. 581.

Mr. George L. Van Bibber, for appellee: The Constitution having prescribed the qualifications of electors, these qualifications cannot be changed or added to by the legislature.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed. § 195; Cooley Const. Lim. 5th ed. 753; People v. Canaday, 78 N. C. 198, 21 Am. Rep. 465; St. Joseph & D. O. R. Co. v. Buchanan County Ct. 39 Mo. 485.

Municipal corporations are parts of the state government exercising delegated political powers for public purposes.

Regents of University v. Williams, 9 Gill & J. 397, 31 Am. Dec. 72; State v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. supra; Baltimore v. Root, Armstrong, 8 Md. 102, 63 Am. Dec. 603; Frederick v. Groshon, 80 Md. 444, 96 Am. Dec. 591; St. Mary's Industrial School v. Brown, 45 Md. 481; Pumphrey v. Baltimore, 47 Md. 147, 28 Am. Rep. 446; Daly v. Morgan, 69 Md. 468, 1 L. R. A. 757; Baltimore & E. S. R. Co. v. Spring, 80 Md. 517, 27 L. R. A. 72; Baltimore v. Keeley Institute, 81 Md. 115, 27 L. R. A. 646; Revell v. Annapolis, Id. 9.

Municipal corporations have no powers except such as are delegated to them by the legislature, and the legislature cannot delegate a power prohibited by the Constitution.

Baltimore & E. S. R. Co. v. Spring, supra.

Roberts, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The sole object of this appeal is to test the validity of the 30th section of the act of the general assembly of Maryland, passed at January session, 1896, chap. 359, entitled, "An Act to Repeal Section 23 of Article 13 of the Code of Public Local Laws, Entitled Harford County, Sub-title Bel Air, as Repealed and Re-enacted by the Acts of 1890, chap. 154, and also to Repeal Section 80 of Article 13 of the Code of Public Local Laws, Entitled Harford County, Sub-title Bel Air, and to Re-enact the Same with Amendments."

The facts proper to be stated are that an election for five town commissioners was held in the town of Bel Air on the 1st Monday of May, 1896, and was conducted in accordance with the provisions of its charter as amended by the act of 1896, except that the judges of election as required by § 30 of said act did not, as a condition precedent, require of each person offering to vote at such election to show that he was assessed with $100 worth of real or personal property on the tax book of said town before he was entitled to vote. The said judges of election ignored this provision of the act of 1896 and allowed all male citizens residing within the corporate limits of Bel Air, above the age of twenty-one years, to vote, notwithstanding the right of a number of said citizens to vote was challenged, upon the ground that they were not assessed with the requisite amount of property. The election was accordingly conducted as if the act of 1896 had not been passed or was void of legal effect. The result of the election was that the five persons receiving the highest number of votes acted as if they had been duly elected; having qualified and organized, they proceeded to elect James C. Young, the petitioner in this case, treasurer of the town of Bel Air for the ensuing year.

34 L. R. A.

The petitioner and appellee here, having qualified, demanded of the appellant, who had on the 1st Monday of May, 1895, been elected treasurer of Bel Air, the possession of the books, papers and other property of the town then in his possession. This the appellant refused to do, and the appellee accordingly filed his petition in the court below, for the writ of mandamus to compel the delivery to him of said books, etc. The appellant answered said petition, denying the validity of said election and justifying his refusal to deliver said books, etc., because the judges conducting said election had failed and refused to observe and give effect to the provisions of the act of 1896, which prescribed a property qualification for said electors voting at said election. Whereupon issues were joined and the case was heard by the court below, without the aid of a jury. The court directed the writ to issue and from the order of the court this appeal is taken. The question lies within very circumscribed limits, but it is nevertheless a question which has not heretofore been passed upon by this tribunal. Whilst it has received consideration in some of the courts of the other states of the Union, it does not, however, appear to have been determined except in a very limited number of cases.

The contention here is that the 30th section of the act of 1896 is directly in conflict with the provisions of art. 1, § 1, of the Constitution of the state, which reads as follows: "All elections shall be by ballot and every male citizen of the United States of the age of twenty-one years or upwards, who has been a resident of the state for one year, and of the legislative district of Baltimore city, or of the county, in which he may offer to vote, for six months next preceding the election, shall be entitled to vote, in the ward or election district in which he resides, at all elections hereafter to be held in the state."

It is contended on the part of the appellant that this section of the Constitution plainly comprehends and includes within its express terms all elections, whether state, Federal, county, or municipal. Yet there is but one municipality mentioned in this section of the organic law, and, in fact, Baltimore city is the only municipality mentioned eo nomine in any part of the Constitution. This court in Smith v. Stephan, 66 Md. 381, Mr. Justice Bryan delivering the opinion of the court, said: "It is sufficient to say that no municipal elections except those held in the city of Baltimore are within the terms or meaning of the Constitution." Whilst the Constitution, art. 3, § 48, authorizes and empowers the general assembly to create corporations for municipal purposes, it nowhere prohibits the legislature from imposing upon the qualified voters, residing within the corporate limits of a town, any reasonable restrictions it may deem proper, when seeking the exercise of the right of elective franchise in the selection of its officers. In this respect the power of the legislature is unlimited. The argument advanced at the hearing in this court, to the effect that the act in question is void because the Constitution has conferred the right and prescribed the qualifications of all electors in this state, the legislature is without authority to change or add to them in any manner.

If the premises of this contention were correctly stated, the argument and sequence would undoubtedly be correct. But, as already observed, the Constitution (art. 3, § 48) only in general terms authorizes the creation of corporations for municipal purposes, and leaves to the legislature the enactment of such details as it may deem proper in the management of the concerns of the corporation or which may be regarded as beneficial in the government of the same. The Constitution of this state provides for the creation of certain offices, state and county, which are filled, either by election or by appointment; and we regard it as an unreasonable inference to suppose that municipal elections, held within the state (outside the corporate limits of Baltimore city), can be properly termed elections under the Constitution, such as state and county elections; or that the framers of the Constitution ever contemplated that art. 1, § 1, of that instrument was intended to apply to municipal elections, such as the one now under consideration, which is the mere creature of statutory enactment.

In the creation of a new municipality, the Constitution devolves upon the general assembly the entire duty of giving vitality to and of organizing and fostering the body corporate without any other constitutional regulation than the mandate to provide for the system itself. It is therefore the mere creature of legislative sanction and the subject of statutory regulation. In the case of State, Lamar, v. Dillon, 82 Fla. 545, 23 L. R. A. 124, it was held that the suffrage provision in the Constitution of that state (which is substantially the same as art. 1, § 1, in the Constitution of this state), prescribing the qualifications of electors at all elections under it, does not apply to elections for municipal officers, but such elections are subject to statutory regulations; and further, that it is competent for the legislature to prescribe the qualifications of voters at the same.

It is only at elections which the Constitution itself requires to be held, or which the legislature under the mandate of the Constitution makes provision for, that persons having the qualifications set forth in said § 1, art. 1, are by the Constitution of the state to be qualified electors. Nowhere in the Constitution are the governments of municipalities in this state, or their officials, either clothed with power or designated as any part of our state government, but their very creation, together with all the powers and attributes which attach to their management, are lodged by the Constitution with the legislative department of our state government, save in some respects the city of Baltimore. The same question now under consideration here arose in the case of McMahon v. Savannah, 66 Ga. 217, 43 Am. Rep. 65. The suffrage clause in the Constitution of the state of Georgia is almost in totidem verbis the same as that in the Constitution of this state. The statute sought to be declared unconstitutional was assailed upon the ground that it imposed upon the electors of the city of Savannah the payment of a poll tax as a condition essential to their qualification as voters at any municipal election. The court held the statute to be a valid exercise of legislative power; and further held that "all legislative acts in violation of the Constitution are void, and it is the duty of the judiciary so to declare. But in considering and passing upon the question of the constitutionality of the law, the rule is too well established and settled to be departed from, that it must be made to appear that the statute, before it is declared inoperative for that cause, must be 'plainly and palpably' in violation of the Constitution." Beall v. Beall, 8 Ga. 210. The solemn act of the government will not be set aside by the courts in a doubtful case.

The incompatibility or repugnancy between the statute and the Constitution must be "clear and palpable." Parham v. Decatur County Inferior Ct. Justices, 9 Ga. 858. We also refer to the cases of Buckner v. Gordon, 81 Ky. 666, and Valverde v. Shattuck, 19 Colo. 104, as sustaining the views expressed in this opinion. The last-mentioned case was a special proceeding under a statute of the state of Colorado praying for the dissolution of the town of Valverde and its annexation to the city of Denver. In such proceeding the county court made an order requiring the mayor and trustees of the town to call an election for the purpose of determining the question of dissolution and annexation; this order required the question to be submitted to a vote of the qualified electors of said town at such election. The mayor and trustees of the town sought to vacate the order on the ground of the unconstitutionality of the statute under which it was obtained. The statute required that the question of dissolution and annexation be submitted "to a vote of such of the qualified electors of such town or city (to be annexed) as have in the year next preceding paid a property tax therein." The suffrage clause, § 1 of art. 7 of the Constitution of the state of Colorado, is substantially the same (in so far as it involves the question under consideration in this case) as that of the Maryland Constitution.

Mr. Justice Elliott delivering the opinion of the court observes: "It is manifest that some restriction must be placed upon the phrase 'all elections,' as used in § 1 [of the Constitution] else every person having the qualifications therein prescribed might insist upon voting at every election, private as well as public, and thus interfere with the affairs of others in which he has no interest or concern. In our opinion, the word 'elections,' thus used, does not have its general or comprehensive signification, including all acts of voting, choice, or election without limitation, but is used in a more restricted political sense,—as elections of public officers.”

Without extending the discussion of this question we are clearly of opinion, both upon reason and authority, that the appellee's contention is not sustained.

For the reasons stated, the order of the court below directing the writ of mandamus to issue is reversed.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

OPINION OF THE JUSTICES.

(186 Mass. 539.)

1. A preference of veterans over all other persons except women, given by Stat. 1896, § 2, when they have passed the civil service examination, is not unconstitutional.
2. The discretion to appoint veterans to certain offices and employment without an examination, which is given by Stat. 1896, § 3, if in the opinion of the appointing power the public service requires this to be done, is not unconstitutional.
3. The provision that civil service commissioners shall establish rules to secure the employment of veterans in the labor service of the commonwealth and its cities and towns in preference to all other persons except women, which is made by Stat. 1896, § 6, if construed to mean that only those found competent shall be preferred, is within the constitutional power of the legislature.

(Allen, Lathrop, and Barker, JJ., contra.)

(September 26, 1896.)

SUBMISSION to the Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court of questions as to the validity of a statute and rules of the civil service commissioners relative to the civil service of the state.

The following order was passed by the council on June 16, 1896, and transmitted on June 20, by his Honor the acting governor, to the justices of the supreme judicial court:

Council Chamber, State House,
Boston, June 16, 1896.

Whereas certain amendments to the civil service rules have been prepared by the civil service commissioners, pursuant to § 2 of chap. 320 of the Acts of the legislature for 1884,—to carry out certain provisions of chap. 517 of the Acts of the legislature for 1896,—and said amendments have been submitted to the governor and council for approval;

And whereas such amendments involve the question of the constitutionality and validity of the provisions of §§ 2, 3, and 6 of said chap.

NOTE.—For other cases as to civil service laws, see Rogers v. Buffalo (N. Y.) 9 L. R. A. 579; Com. v. Hensel, v. Fittler (Pa.) 15 L. R. A. 205; Newcomb v. Indianapolis (Ind.) 28 L. R. A. 733; People, McClelland, v. Roberts (N. Y.) 31 L. R. A. 309; and Brown v. Russell (Mass.) 33 L. R. A. 253.
34 L. R. A.

517 of the Acts of 1896,* and the preference in appointment and employment in the public service thereby provided for persons who served in the army or navy of the United States in the time of the war of the Rebellion, and were honorably discharged therefrom, and also citizens of Massachusetts who have distinguished themselves by gallant and heroic conduct while serving in the army or navy of

*Sec. 2. Veterans may apply for examination for any position in the public service classified under chapter 320 of the Acts of the year 1884 and acts in amendment thereof, and the civil service rules thereunder, subject to said rules; and if such veterans pass the examination they shall be preferred in appointment to all persons not veterans; and it shall be the duty of the civil service commissioners to cause the names of veterans passing examination to be placed upon the eligible list for the position sought, in the order of the respective standing of such veterans, above the names of all applicants not veterans. The commissioners shall cause to be certified to the appointing officers for appointment the names of all such veterans in preference to applicants not veterans, so long as there are names of veterans upon the eligible list, and the appointment shall be made from the list so certified. But nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the certification and employment of women.

*Sec. 3. Veterans may apply for appointment to or for employment in any position in the public service classified as aforesaid, without examination. In such application such veteran shall state under oath such facts as may be required by the civil service rules. Age, loss of limb, or other physical impairment, which shall not in fact incapacitate, shall not disqualify such veteran from appointment under this section. Appointing officers may by requisition call for the names of any or all such veterans so applying without examination, and appoint or employ any of them in the office or position sought.

*Sec. 6. The civil service commissioners shall establish rules to secure the employment of veterans in the labor service of the commonwealth and of the cities and towns thereof, in the class for which they make application, in preference to all other persons except women. The civil service commissioners may recognize an age limit in certifying persons for employment in the labor service, provided the appointing officer shall certify in his requisition that the work to be performed is so arduous as to require the services of young and vigorous men, and provided also that the commissioners shall upon investigation become satisfied that such certificate is true. In towns and cities in which the civil service act and the rules of the civil service commissioners have not been applied to the labor service the selectmen of the towns and the city councils of the cities shall take such action as may be necessary to secure the employment of veterans in the labor service of their respective towns and cities, in preference to all other persons, except women. Citizens of Massachusetts who have distinguished themselves by gallant and heroic conduct while serving in the army or navy of the United States, and who have received a medal of honor from the President of the United States, shall be deemed to be veterans under the meaning of this act, and shall receive all the benefits thereof."

the United States, and who have received a medal of honor from the President of the United States:

And whereas doubt has been raised as to the constitutionality of said sections of said act and of said proposed amendments to the civil service rules thereunder, and the governor and council before approving said amendments desire the opinions of the justices of the supreme judicial court thereon;

And whereas said questions of law are important, and the occasion is solemn,—

It is therefore voted: That the opinions of the justices of the supreme judicial court be required, under art. 2 of chap. 8 of the Constitution, upon the following important questions of law:

First: Is it within the constitutional power of the general court to provide, as in § 2 of said chapter of the Acts of the legislature for 1896, that veterans and medal holders, as defined in said act, applying for examination for any position in the public service classified under the civil service rules, and passing the required examination, shall be preferred in appointment to all persons not such veterans, although the latter may have a higher marking or standing upon the eligible list for such position?

Second: Is it within the constitutional power of the general court to provide, as in § 3 of said chap. 517 of the Acts of the legislature for 1896, that appointing officers may by requisition call for the names of any or all veterans or medal holders, as defined in said act, applying for appointment to or employment in any position in the public service classified as aforesaid, without examination; and to appoint or employ any of such unexamined veterans or medal holders in the office or position sought, in preference to persons not such veterans or medal holders, who have passed the required examination for such office or position, and whose names are upon the eligible list therefor?

Third: Is it within the constitutional power of the general court to provide, as in § 6 of said chap. 517 of the Acts of the legislature for 1896, that in the labor service of the commonwealth and the cities and towns thereof, the civil service commissioners shall establish rules to secure the employment of veterans and medal holders, as defined in said act, in the class for which they make application, in preference to all other persons except women?

Fourth: Are §§ 2, 3, and 6 of said chap. 517 of the Acts of the legislature for 1896 constitutional?

Fifth: Would the amendments to the civil service rules, prepared by the civil service commissioners under said chap. 517 of the Acts of the legislature for 1896, and herewith submitted to the justices (numbered respectively, for this purpose, 1st, 2d, and 8d), be constitutional and valid, if approved by the governor and council?

Proposed amendments to civil service rules, prepared by the civil service commissioners and submitted to the justices of the supreme judicial court, under question 5th.

First: Section 1 of Civil Service Rule 12 is hereby rescinded, and in place thereof the following is substituted:

"Sec. 1. The word 'veteran' in these rules shall mean a person who served in the army or navy of the United States in the time of the war of the Rebellion, and was honorably discharged therefrom; and also a citizen of Massachusetts who has distinguished himself by gallant and heroic conduct while serving in the army or navy of the United States, and who has received a medal of honor from the President of the United States."

Second: Civil service Rule 27 is hereby rescinded, and the following rule is substituted therefor:

"Rule 27. 1. Whenever any officer or board having the power of appointment to any office or employment under these rules shall make requisition not expressly calling for women, the commissioners shall certify the names of all veterans who have passed the examination for the position sought, in the order of the respective standing of such veterans upon the list; and in case there is no such veteran upon the list, then the commissioners shall certify the names of the three most eligible persons not veterans upon the list. In case such officer or board shall in the requisition request the certification of women, then the commissioners shall certify the names of the three most eligible women upon the list.

"2. The appointment or employment shall be made from the list of names so certified, subject to the provisions of the following section.

"3. Whenever any officer or board having the power of appointment to any office or employment shall in his requisition so request, the names of any or all veterans registered under Rule 12 shall be certified, and any of the veterans so certified may be appointed or employed in the office or position sought."

Third: Section 2 of Civil Service Rule 45 is hereby rescinded, and in place thereof the following sections are substituted:

"1. When the services of laborers are required, the officer or board having the appointment or selection shall notify the commissioners, stating the number of men wanted, the precise nature of the labor in which they are to be employed, and the time and place of employment; and the commissioners shall thereupon certify the names with the residences of the veterans registered for the required labor, and the employment shall be made from the list so certified; provided, however, if any age limit is specified in the requisition, such limit may be recognized by the commissioners, if the appointing officer shall certify in his requisition, and the commissioners upon investigation are satisfied that the work to be performed is so arduous as to require the services of young and vigorous men.

"2. In case there is not a sufficient number of veterans so registered and within the age limit for the work required (where such limit is made and recognized as above provided) the commissioners shall certify twice the number of men called for, over and above the number of veterans, if any, certified, making an impartial selection, and giving preference, first, to those who have had experience in the work required, and, second, to those having families dependent upon them for support."

To His Honor the Acting Governor of the Commonwealth, and to the Honorable Council:

We, the undersigned justices of the supreme judicial court, in compliance with the order of the council of June 16 last, and the request of the acting governor of June 20 last, copies of which are annexed, respectfully submit the following opinion:

The principal questions are whether §§ 2, 3, and 6 of chap. 517 of the Acts of 1896 are within the constitutional power of the general court. Sections 2 and 3 of the statute are substantially re-enactments of pre-existing statutes which were expressly repealed by § 8. See Stat. 1887, chap. 437; Stat. 1889, chap. 473; Stat. 1895, chap. 501, § 1. The authority given to the general court by the Constitution to pass statutes on the subject has been often cited, and is found in chap. 1, § 1, art. 4, of the Constitution. So far as civil officers are concerned, it has full power and authority "to name and settle annually, or provide by fixed laws for the naming and settling all civil officers within the said commonwealth, the election and constitution of whom are not hereafter in this form of government otherwise provided for; and to set forth the several duties, powers, and limits of the several civil and military officers of this commonwealth, and the forms of such oaths or affirmations as shall be respectively administered unto them for the execution of their several offices and places, so as the same be not repugnant or contrary to this Constitution." So far as public employments are concerned which do not constitute the employee a public officer, the authority is "to make, ordain, and establish all manner of wholesome and reasonable orders, laws, statutes, and ordinances, directions and instructions either with penalties or without, so as the same be not repugnant or contrary to this Constitution, as they shall judge to be for the good and welfare of this commonwealth, and for the government and ordering thereof, and of the subjects of the same, and for the necessary support and defense of the government thereof." Section 2 of the statute of 1896 authorizes veterans to apply for examination under the civil service statutes and rules, and provides that, if such veterans pass the examination, they shall be preferred in appointment to all male persons not veterans. The effect of the section is that the veterans must first be found qualified, by an examination in accordance with the civil service statutes and rules, to perform the duties of the office or employment which they seek, and, if they are found so qualified, they are to be preferred in appointment to all other persons, except women. The general court may have been of the opinion that a person who had served in the army or navy of the United States in the time of the war of the Rebellion, and had been honorably discharged therefrom, or who was a citizen of Massachusetts, and had distinguished himself by valiant and heroic conduct in the army or navy of the United States, and had received a medal of honor from the president of the United States, is a person who has shown such qualities of character that it is for the interest of the commonwealth to appoint him to certain offices or employments in preference to other male persons, if he is found otherwise qualified to perform the duties. The general court may have so thought, on the ground either that such a person would be likely to possess courage, constancy, habits of obedience and fidelity, which are valuable qualifications for any public office or employment, or that the recognition of the service of the veterans in the way provided for by the statute would promote that love of country and devotion to the welfare of the state which it concerns the commonwealth to foster. If such was the opinion of the general court, we cannot say that it was beyond its constitutional power to enact this section.

Of the wisdom of such legislation we are not made the judges. The section does not purport to give an absolute preference to veterans, without regard to their qualifications, and the constitutionality of similar legislation was not considered in the recent decision of the court of which we are the justices. See Brown v. Russell, 166 Mass. 14, 32 L. R. A. 258.

Section 3 of the Statute of 1896 gives a discretion to the appointing power to appoint veterans to certain offices and employments without an examination, if in its opinion the needs of the public service require this to be done. Before the enactment of the civil service statutes the qualifications of the persons to be appointed or employed in the offices and employments covered by these statutes usually were left to be ascertained by the appointing power in such manner as it saw fit. The effect of this section is to permit veterans to be appointed to office or employment in the old way, if it seems best to the power having the right of appointment. It may be that the general court was of opinion that there were certain offices and employments in which it was important that the appointee should have the qualifications usually found in veteran soldiers and sailors; and that the good of the public service would be promoted by giving this discretion to the appointing power. Undoubtedly this, like the preceding section, gives a certain advantage to veterans over other persons, in being appointed to office or employment, but the section implies that the veteran to be appointed shall be found qualified by the appointing power in its own way, and it was not intended to provide for the appointment of veterans who are not qualified to perform the duties pertaining to the office or employment which they seek. The section does not necessarily exclude the appointment of other persons if the appointing power is of opinion that the appointment should be made under the civil service statutes and rules. We cannot say that this section is an enactment beyond the constitutional power of the general court. The constitutionality of § 6 of the statute of 1896 depends, we think, upon the meaning to be given to it. If the section means that the civil service commissioners shall establish rules to secure the employment of veterans in the labor service of the commonwealth and of the cities and towns in preference to all other persons except women, which rules shall secure the employment of veterans whether they are or are not found qualified to perform the labor which pertains to the service, and thus shall compel the commonwealth and its cities and towns to pay wages to veterans for labor which they do not and cannot perform, we should have great difficulty in sustaining it as a constitutional enactment. This section does not relate to public offices, and without suggesting that any distinction can be made between public offices and public employments in the matter we are considering, the section was passed under the authority given to the general court to make all manner of wholesome and reasonable laws. We doubt whether a statute which purports to compel the commonwealth and its cities and towns to employ in the labor service persons who are not able to perform the labor, and to pay them wages as laborers, could be held to be either wholesome or reasonable. But if the section means that the civil service commissioners shall establish rules to secure the employment of veterans in the labor service of the commonwealth and its cities and towns in preference to all other persons except women, if the veterans are found competent to perform the labor, we think the enactment is within the constitutional power of the general court. The civil service rules provide generally that applicants for the labor service, who produce satisfactory evidence of their capacity for labor and their habits as to industry and sobriety, shall be registered in the order of their application, at such convenient times and place or places as shall be designated by the commissioners. Rule 45, § 1. The special regulations in relation to the employment of laborers and mechanics which have been adopted by the commissioners provide not only that the applicant must produce a certificate, signed by two reputable citizens of his city, of his capacity for labor and of his habits of industry and sobriety, but also that before entering the name of an applicant on the register such further inquiry may be made in regard to his character and capacity as the commissioners may deem practicable or expedient, and that in case an applicant is found to be unfit, or in any way disqualified, to perform the service which he seeks, his name shall not be entered on the register, and the reason therefor shall be indorsed on the applicant's statement. Regulations 4, 7, 9. These rules and regulations were adopted before the passage of the Statute of 1896, and were contained in the reports of the civil service commissioners to the general court. It may be presumed that the general court knew of the existence of these rules and regulations when they passed the Statute of 1896, and the authority given by the 6th section to establish rules to secure the employment of veterans in the labor service in preference to all other persons except women, considered with reference to the existing statutes and rules, makes it reasonable to infer that the intention of the general court was that the rules so established might provide for determining in some manner that the veterans who make application to be employed in the labor service should have the capacity to perform the labor involved in the service. The section should be so construed as to be within the constitutional power of the general court if it reasonably can be. Without unequivocal language to that effect, we should hesitate to impute to the general court an intention to give to persons entirely incapacitated for labor an absolute right to be employed and paid in the labor service of the commonwealth and of its cities and towns, as if they could and did perform the labor. Such a provision would seem inconsistent with a purpose to promote efficiency in the public service, and to legislate in the interest of all the people. The requirement that the commissioners shall establish rules to secure the employment of veterans "in preference" to others implies that the employment of veterans is to be regulated in the interest of the public service, as well as to secure to them a preference, and that they are not to be employed in the labor service if they have not the ability to labor. It could hardly have been the intention of the general court that women should be employed in the labor service who could not perform the labor, or that the proviso of Stat. 1896, chap. 449, should give an absolute preference to veterans in employment, even although the veterans were incapable of performing the duties of the employment. The 6th section of Stat. 1896, chap. 517, does not purport to define what the preference shall be which the rules established by the commissioners are to secure, but the preference intended is probably not greater than the preference conferred by the 2d and 3d sections of the statute. Unless, then, the appointing officers call for the names of veterans for labor service whose qualifications have not been ascertained by the commissioners in any manner, we think that the commissioners may provide by rules for determining the qualifications of the veterans. Construing the 6th section in this way, we are of opinion that it is an enactment within the constitutional power of the general court. Mr. Justice Holmes concurs in this construction of the section, but is not prepared to say that it would be unconstitutional upon a different construction.

The remaining questions relate to the civil service rules which the commissioners have prepared and submitted to the acting governor and council for approval. We perceive no constitutional objection to the approval of these rules, although we think that the rule relating to the appointment of veterans in the labor service under the 6th section of the Statute of 1896 might have made explicit provisions for determining the qualifications of the veterans who seek service under this section, unless the appointing officers call for veterans who have not submitted to anything in the nature of an examination.

WALBRIDGE A. FIELD.
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.
MARCUS P. KNOWLTON.
JAMES M. MORTON.

To his Honor the Acting Governor of the Commonwealth, and to the Honorable Council:

In the opinion of the undersigned, there is no difference in the constitutional principles which govern the selection of persons for public office and for public employment, and the reasons given in Brown v. Russell, 166 Mass. 14, 32 L. R. A. 253, for holding Stat. 1895, chap. 501, §§ 2, 6, unconstitutional as to public office apply to public employment as well. In both cases the important matter is to get the best possible service, and the selections should be made with reference to the qualifications or fitness for the performance of the duties which are to be performed. And, since this is so, it is not within the constitutional power of the legislature to fix as a decisive test anything which does not bear such a relation to the duties to be performed as to show special fitness for the performance of those duties. The fact of being a veteran, as defined in Stat. 1896, chap. 517, does not bear such a relation to the duties of a present office or employment in the civil service of the commonwealth that it can be made a decisive test in the selection of persons for such offices or employments. A veteran may or may not have special fitness for such positions. Certainly to have served honorably in the army or navy is not the only way in which one can acquire such fitness. However useful the training may be which many of the veterans received in the army or navy, it cannot be laid down as a universal proposition that every veteran who can pass the examination to which all applicants are subjected is better qualified for such office or employment than any other person now is or can become. The appointing power cannot be required to pass by cases of conspicuous fitness, and to accept service of a lower character, simply because a veteran applies for the position. In requiring this to be done, the statute sets apart a class of persons, who, in consequence of what they did in the war, and irrespective of present qualifications, are to be preferred, so that nobody else, however well fitted, or however meritorious by reason of valuable or distinguished services in other occupations—calling for fidelity and fortitude, can be considered as eligible for appointment, or can become eligible in the future, in competition with them. No matter what may have been the services, training, and discipline, or what may be the natural ability or acquired skill of others, the power of selecting them for public office or employment is cut off. This involves a compulsory disregard of actual fitness and qualifications, to the detriment of the public service. Nor can the fact that a veteran has passed the prescribed examination be made a decisive test in favor of his appointment. This may merely show that he has the minimum qualifications required, but cannot be made to entitle him to a compulsory preference over those who are better qualified. It is therefore not within the constitutional power of the legislature to enact that veterans shall be preferred for public office or employment to others who may have higher standing or superior qualifications; and the first and third questions are answered in the negative.

The second question is answered in the affirmative, for the reasons given in the opinion signed by a majority of the justices.

The fourth and fifth questions are answered in the negative, to the extent hereinbefore explained.

JOHN LATHROP.
JAMES M. BARKER.
CHARLES ALLEN.

OHIO SUPREME COURT.

WOODLAND OIL COMPANY, Plf. in Err.,
v.
Thomas J. CRAWFORD.
(.....Ohio.....)

*1. C. granted, demised, and let, by written instrument, a certain tract of

*Headnotes by the COURT.

NOTE.—Effect of assignment of oil and gas lease.

I. Liability of assignor.

II. Liability of assignee.

The liability for rent under an oil and gas lease has been treated in a prior note to the case of Kunkle v. People's Nat. Gas Co. 33 L. R. A. 847.

The question of the forfeiture of an oil or gas lease, including that as to the right of the lessee to set up his own default to release him from his obligation, is the subject of a note to Evans v. Consumers' Gas Trust Co. (Ind.) 31 L. R. A. 673.

The effect of an assignment of such a lease upon the rights and liabilities of the parties has been passed upon in a considerable number of cases. These are harmonious and do not materially differ from decisions on a similar point in respect to leases of other property.

The general subject of the liability of an assignee of a leasehold for rent was treated at length in a note to Bonetti v. Treat (Cal.) 14 L. R. A. 151.

34 L. R. A.

land and all the oil and gas in or under the same to U. and his assigns, for the purpose, and with the exclusive right, of drilling and operating the land for gas and oil for five years, and as much longer as oil or gas should be found thereon in paying quantities, upon the consideration of $1 paid, and a promise to pay certain rentals for further delay if default should be made in drilling a well within one year, and which instrument had the following forfeiture clause: "And a failure on the part of U. to complete such well or wells as above specified, or instead thereof to pay the rental as above provided, shall render this lease and agreement null and void, together with all rights and claims, and not binding on either party, and not to be revived without the consent of both parties hereto in writing." Default having been made in drilling, in an action to recover the promised rental,—Held, First, that such instrument is a lease of the land, oil, and gas for the limited time and purpose expressed therein. Second. That the forfeiture is for the benefit of the lessor, and at his option. Third. That the promise to drill a well or pay rental cannot be discharged by a mere failure to perform the promise. Fourth. Upon failure to drill the well, or instead thereof to pay the agreed rental, such rental may be recovered by action as rental, and need not be sued for as unliquidated damages.

I. Liability of assignor.

It is very clear that a lessee continues liable on his covenants in an oil and gas lease notwithstanding his assignment of the lease, as his privity of contract continues. Washington Nat. Gas Co. v. Johnson, 123 Pa. 576; Edmonds v. Mounsey (Ind. App.) 44 N. E. 196.

So, the owner of an oil and gas lease, who, to settle differences with the owner of a seam of coal through which an oil well has been drilled, agrees to pay a certain sum for the well then being drilled, and in addition a like sum for each additional well drilled upon said land thereafter, cannot escape liability for the payment of the stipulated amount for each well thereafter drilled in operations under the oil lease by the fact that it had assigned the lease and the additional wells were drilled by assignees, where the assignment was ex parte and not assented to by the owner of the coal. Pittsburg Consol. Coal Co. v. Greenlee, 164 Pa. 549.

2. U. assigned the lease to the oil company, and in such assignment stipulated that the oil company should have and hold the lease under the terms thereof, and under and subject to the rents and covenants therein reserved and contained, on part of the lease to be paid, kept, done, and performed, and the oil company accepted the assignment and received the lease thereunder. Held, that thereby the oil company stepped into the shoes of U., and assumed his obligations, and became liable for the rentals due under the lease.

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Monroe County to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover rent alleged to be due under an oil and gas lease. Affirmed.

II. Liability of assignee.

The liability of an assignee of an oil and gas lease to pay the rent arises, not from any express assumption or agreement to pay it which may be contained in the written assignment, but from the privity of estate by reason of the ownership and right to enjoy the benefits of the lease. Edmonds v. Mounsey (Ind. App.) 44 N. E. 196.

So, the assignee of an oil and gas lease is liable for the payment of all rents and royalties which accrue while he holds the assignment of the lease. Fennell v. Guffey, 155 Pa. 38; Id. 139 Pa. 341.

And an assignee of a lease containing a covenant that the lessee will prosecute the oil business with due diligence for the common benefit of the parties is bound by the covenant. Bradford Oil Co. v. Blair, 113 Pa. 63, 37 Am. Rep. 442.

And an assignee of an oil and gas lease by written assignment, who receives and holds the lease as sole and exclusive owner, becomes bound for the performance of the conditions therein stipulated respecting the payment of a year's rental during delay to complete a well. Brookenridge v. Parrott (Ind. App.) 44 N. E. 66.

The fact that possession of the land was never actually taken by the assignees of an oil and gas lease does not prevent them from being liable on a covenant in the lease to pay a specified rent until the completion of an oil well on the premises. Edmonds v. Mounsey, supra.

A purchaser of an oil lease at sheriff's sale takes subject to all the covenants and conditions contained in the lease, and if he fails to inquire as to them he is fixed with notice of all that inquiry would have disclosed, including the fact that failure to complete a well within a specified time

Statement by Burket, J.:

On the 23d day of March, 1889, Thomas J. Crawford, defendant in error, his wife joining to release dower, entered into a contract in the nature of an oil lease with one Cyrus Underwood, which lease, omitting the acknowledgment, is as follows:

This agreement, made the 23d day of March, A. D. 1889, by and between Thomas J. Crawford and Mary A. Crawford, his wife, of the township of Perry, county of Monroe, and state of Ohio, of the first part, and Cyrus Underwood, of Jamestown, state of New York, of the second part, witnesseth: That the said parties of the first part for and in consideration of $1 to them in hand paid by the party of the second part, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, and of the agreements hereinafter mentioned, have granted, demised, and let unto the party of the second part all the petroleum and gas in or under that certain tract of land hereinafter described, and also all the said tract of land, for the purpose and with the exclusive right of drilling and operating upon said premises for said petroleum and gas; the said tract of land being situated in the township of Perry, county of Monroe, and state of Ohio, and is bounded and described as follows, to wit, north by lands of John T. Duvall and David G. Crawford, east by lands of Peter Eddy and David G. Crawford, south by lands of Chas. Biggle and Fanny Scales, west by lands of Fanny Scales and Wm. Robinson; containing one hundred and twenty-eight (128) acres, be the same more or less,—together with the right of way over said premises to the places of operating, the right to lay pipes to makes a liability to pay a specified annual rental until the well is completed, and also the terms upon which the lease can be terminated. Aderhold v. Oil Well Supply Co. 158 Pa. 401.

But an assignee of an oil and gas lease, who subsequently assigns it to another party, is liable only for a breach of the covenants which occurred while he had title to the premises, and not for anything which occurred before or after. Bradford Oil Co. v. Blair, supra.

And, on the other hand, an assignee of an oil and gas lease who acquires title after the time when a well should have been completed is not liable for the money called for by the lease in case of default to complete such well, as he is liable only upon covenants which are broken while his privity of estate exists. Washington Nat. Gas Co. v. Johnson, 123 Pa. 576.

The rule is simply that an assignee of an oil and gas lease who is in possession when the time for performance arrives is liable on a covenant in the lease because of the privity of estate which arose on his acceptance of the assignment; but as his liability grows out of privity of estate, it ceases when the privity ceases, and if he assigns before the time for performance his liability ceases with his title. Ibid.

Each successive assignee of an oil and gas lease is therefore liable for covenants maturing while the title is held by him because of privity of estate, but is not liable for those previously broken or subsequently maturing because of the absence of any contract relations with the lessor. While he holds the estate and enjoys its benefits he bears its burdens, but he lays down both the estate and its burdens by an assignment. Ibid.

B. A. B.

convey water, oil, and gas; also to use water from said premises, and to remove any machinery or fixtures placed on said premises by the party of the second part. To have and to hold the same unto the said party of the second part, his heirs and assigns, for the term and period of five years from the date hereof, and as much longer as oil or gas is found in paying quantities thereon. In consideration thereof, the said party of the second part agrees to give or pay to the parties of the first part the full equal one-eighth part of the petroleum produced and saved by the party of the second part from the premises, and to deliver the same free of expense, into tanks or pipe lines to the first party's credit. And should gas be found in any well in sufficient quantities to justify marketing the same, the party of the second part shall pay to the parties of first part at the rate of two hundred ($200) dollars per annum for each of such wells so long as the gas shall be sold therefrom. It is also agreed that no wells shall be drilled within 300 feet of the buildings now on the premises without the consent of both parties. It is further agreed that the party of the second part shall complete a test well in the township of Perry, county and state aforesaid, or within two (2) miles of the above-described premises, within one year from the date hereof, or, in default thereof, pay to the parties of the first part, for further delay, a yearly rental of $128 for the above-described premises from the said time for completing the said test well until such well be completed; and, in case oil is found in paying quantities in said test well, the party of the second part agrees to complete a well on the above-described premises within one year from the completion of said test well, or, in default thereof, pay to the parties of the first part, for further delay, a yearly rental of thirty-two ($32) dollars for the above-described premises from the time set for completing a well thereon until such well shall be completed. The rentals, as they become due under this contract shall be deposited to the credit of the parties of the first part in the Monroe Bank, of Woodsfield, Ohio, or paid direct to the said first parties. And a failure on the part of the second party to complete such well or wells as above specified, or instead thereof to pay the rental as above provided, shall render this lease and agreement null and void, together with all rights and claims, and not binding on either party, and not to be revived without the consent of both parties hereto in writing. The parties of the first part reserve a sufficiency of water for the use of the stock kept on the premises, and also for household use. It is understood that all the conditions between the parties hereto shall extend and apply to their respective heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns. In witness whereof the said parties have hereunto set their hands and seals the day and year first above written.

T. J. Crawford.

Mary A. (her mark) Crawford.

Cyrus Underwood.

Sealed and delivered in the presence of George Neff,
D. Crawford.

Six other parties entered into the same kind of contracts with Mr. Underwood as to lands owned by them, all of which contracts were duly recorded. On the 10th day of April, 1889, Mr. Underwood made an assignment of said seven contracts to the Woodland Oil Company, and which assignment, with a description only of the lands of defendant in error, is as follows:
34 L. R. A.

"Assignment of Leases.

Know all men by these presents that Cyrus Underwood, of Jamestown, New York, for and in consideration of the sum of $1, to me in hand paid by Woodland Oil Company at and before the enrolling and delivery of these presents, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, hath granted, bargained, sold, assigned, and transferred, and by these presents doth grant, bargain, sell, assign, and transfer, unto the said Woodland Oil Company, its successors and assigns, all the whole of the grantees' or lessees' interest and estate of, in, and to the following mentioned indentures of lease, grants, and conveyances, and the lands, and premises therein granted, leased and demised and intended so to be, situate in the county of Monroe, and state of Ohio, to wit, Thomas J. Crawford and wife to C. Underwood, dated March 23, 1889, 128 acres in Perry township, recorded June 27, 1889, in Book 4, page 23. With the appurtenances, together with the same interest of, in, and to all the tubing, casing, buildings, improvements, rigs, machinery, boilers, engines, oil and gas well supplies, connections and fixtures upon the said premises, or any part thereof, and to the grantees' or lessees' interest belonging and appertaining; and also all my estate, rights, title, interest, claim and demand whatsoever of, in, to, and out of the said leases, grants, or conveyances, lands and premises, and other property hereby conveyed or intended so to be. To have and to hold the said interests in the said leases, grants, conveyances, lands, and premises unto the said Woodland Oil Company, its successors and assigns, to the use of the said Woodland Oil Company, its successors and assigns, for and under the terms, limitations, and conditions and reservations of the said leases or grants respectively, and under and subject to the rents, royalties, and covenants in the said lease or conveyances respectively reserved and contained on the part of the grantees or lessees thereof to be paid, kept, done, and performed, and to have and to hold the said interests in the remaining property hereby conveyed unto the said Woodland Oil Company, its successors and assigns, forever. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal the 10th day of April, 1891.

Cyrus Underwood. [Seal.]

Signed, sealed, and delivered in presence of

H. S. Grayson,

H. J. O'Donnell.

Afterwards Thomas J. Crawford commenced an action against the Woodland Oil Company for breach of said contracts, and to recover the rental therein agreed to be paid. The first cause of action in his amended petition is as follows: "For a first cause of action, the plaintiff, Thomas J. Crawford, says: That the defendant, the Woodland Oil Company, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the state of Pennsylvania, and owning real estate and personal property in Monroe county, Ohio, that on the 23d day of March,

1889, said plaintiff and Mary A. Crawford, his wife who has since died, entered into a certain indenture of lease (of which reference is hereto made, marked 'Exhibit A,' in the petition herein filed, and which exhibit is made a part of this amended petition as if hereto annexed or attached as an exhibit), with one Cyrus Underwood, for the consideration of $1, paid said plaintiff by said Cyrus Underwood; that in said indenture of lease said plaintiff and his said wife granted, demised, and let unto the said Cyrus Underwood, his heirs and assigns, all petroleum in or under a certain tract of land hereinafter described, and also said tract of land for the purpose and with the exclusive right of drilling and operating upon said premises for said petroleum and gas, together with the right of way over said tract of land to the place of operating, the right to lay pipe lines to convey water, oil, and gas; also to use water from said premises, and also to remove any machinery or fixtures placed on said premises; the said tract of land or premises being situated in the township of Perry, county of Monroe, and state of Ohio, and is bounded and described as follows, to wit, north by the lands of John T. Duvall and David G. Crawford, east by lands of Peter Eddy and David G. Crawford, south by the lands of Charles Biggle and Fannie Scales, west by the lands of Fannie Scales and William Robinson,—containing one hundred and twenty-eight (128) acres, be the same more or less,—for the term and period of five years, and as much longer as oil and gas are found in paying quantities thereon. Plaintiff says that in said indenture of lease said Cyrus Underwood agreed to give or pay to said plaintiff the full equal one-eighth part of the petroleum produced and saved by said Cyrus Underwood from the said premises, and deliver the same, free of expense, into tanks or pipe lines to the credit of the plaintiff; and, should gas be found in any well in sufficient quantities to justify marketing the same, the said Cyrus Underwood shall pay plaintiff at the rate of $200 per annum for each of such wells as long as the gas shall be sold therefrom. And said plaintiff further says that said Cyrus Underwood covenanted and agreed therein to complete a test well in the township of Perry, in the county of Monroe, and state of Ohio, or within 2 miles of the above-described premises, within one year from the 23d day of March 1889, or, in default thereof, pay to the said plaintiff, for further delay, a yearly rental of one hundred and twenty-eight (128) dollars for the above described premises from the said time for completing the said test well until such well shall be completed. The rentals as they become due under this indenture of lease shall be deposited to the credit of the plaintiff in the Monroe Bank, of Woodsfield, Ohio, or paid direct to said plaintiff. Plaintiff says that on the 10th day of April, 1891, said Cyrus Underwood assigned and transferred all his rights, title, and interest in and under said indenture of lease to the defendant, the Woodland Oil Company, said defendant assuming as a part of the consideration all his (Underwood's) liabilities thereunder; that neither said Cyrus Underwood nor said defendant has ever drilled, put down, begun, or completed a test well or any other well, as prescribed in said indenture of lease, in said township of Perry, county of Monroe, and state of Ohio, or within 2 miles of said premises, or paid to plaintiff, or deposited in the Monroe Bank, aforesaid, to plaintiff's credit, any rentals or money in default thereof as stipulated under said indenture of lease, although often requested so to do. Plaintiff says that he has duly performed all the conditions on his part to be performed under said indenture of lease, and that said Mary A. Crawford joined in said indenture of lease merely to release her inchoate right of dower, and had and claimed no interest in said rentals, the same being the sole property of plaintiff; and that said plaintiff on the 28d day of March, 1889, owned, and still owns, said premises described in said indenture of lease. Wherefore plaintiff prays for judgment against said defendant for the sum of $384.00, with interest on $128.00 from March 28, 1891, on $128.00 from March 28, 1892, on $128.00 from March 28, 1893."

There were eight other causes of action, two of which were abandoned, and the other six were each like the first, except that they were on other contracts which had been assigned to defendant in error after a failure to drill or pay rental, and a total recovery of over $2,000 was asked for a breach of the seven contracts.

The oil company demurred to each cause of action of the amended petition upon the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The demurrer was overruled, and exceptions taken. The oil company then answered, and as a first defense stated that two other named persons had an interest in the subject of the action and in obtaining the relief demanded. The second, third, and fourth defenses to the whole of the amended petition are as follows: "Defendant, for a second defense to the amended petition, and to each cause of action thereof, admits that it is a corporation, and it admits that all the leases named in the petition were made to Cyrus Underwood at the time stated; and it admits that said Underwood assigned the same (except No. 9, Exhibit 1) to defendant about the time stated therein; it admits that no well was completed in one year, and no rental has been paid by defendant, but it denies that it assumed or agreed to assume any of the liabilities of said Underwood to plaintiff under said leases, or to any one of the lessors under whom Underwood held; and it denies that the acceptance of the assignments of said leases from said Underwood created any liability, or in any way obligated this defendant to pay to said lessors, or either of them, or to plaintiff, any yearly rental then due, or hereafter to become due, on any of said leases; and it denies that it is indebted to plaintiff in any sum on either cause of action of his petition; and it denies each and every allegation of the petition not herein admitted. Defendant says, for a third defense to the amended petition, and to each and every cause of action thereof, that each and every lease described in the several causes of action in said petition contained, among other provisions, the following: 'And a failure on the part of the second party to complete a well or wells as above specified, or instead thereof to pay rental as above provided, shall render this lease and agreement null and void, together with all the rights and claims, and not binding on either party, and not to be revived without the consent of both parties hereto, in writing.' And defendant avers that before the assignment by Cyrus Underwood to it of the leases described in the petition, the time for completing a test well according to the terms of each and all of said leases had expired, and one yearly rental was overdue, yet no test well was completed, and no rental has been paid, which rendered said leases and each of them null and void; and neither of said leases was revived by said Cyrus Underwood and plaintiff or the other lessors, or by any other person or persons, and defendant says that each and all of the leases described in the petition were null and void when the same were assigned to it, and that neither of them has since been revived. Defendant, for a fourth defense to the amended petition, and to each cause of action thereof, says that the sums of money to be paid for delay in completing wells called 'yearly rental' in each of said leases was intended and understood by the parties thereto to be a penalty, and was intended to indemnify the plaintiff and the other lessors for all damages actually sustained by delay or failure to complete a test well and other wells on the lands leased; and it avers that neither plaintiff nor any of the lessors under whom he claims have sustained damages by reason of defendant having failed to complete a test well or other wells on said lands, for at the time of the execution of said leases and at the commencement of this action there was neither oil nor gas in paying quantities under the land described in said lease or either of them."

The oil company also filed three separate defenses to the first cause of action of the amended petition, the first of which is as follows: "Defendant, without waiving any of its defenses to the amended petition, but insisting on each of them the same as if this separate answer were not made, answers the first cause of action as follows: Defendant says that the lease described in the first cause of action was executed March 23, 1889, and the first yearly rental claimed by plaintiff thereunder became due March 23, 1891, as stated in the amended petition; and defendant avers that it is not liable under the assignment of the lease for yearly rental which accrued before said assignment, and it denies that it is liable for any subsequently accrued rental." The second and third defenses to the first cause of action are not material here.

The plaintiff below demurred to the third defense in the general answer to the amended petition, and also to the first special answer to the first cause of action in the same petition, both of which demurrers were sustained, and exceptions taken. The reply of the plaintiff below, as to what was left of the answers after sustaining these two demurrers, was a general denial. The case was tried to a jury, and verdict returned for plaintiff below for $463.07, and motion made for a new trial, which was overruled, and judgment entered on the verdict; to all of which defendant below excepted. The circuit court affirmed the judgment, and thereupon a petition in error was filed here to reverse both judgments.

34 L. R. A.

Messrs. J. P. Spriggs & Son and Mallory & Jeffers, for plaintiff in error:

No possession was ever taken by the licensee or his assignee under any of these instruments, so that they were all unexecuted licenses.

Ohio Oil Co. v. Toledo, S. & F. R. Co. 4 Ohio C. C. 210; Herrington v. Wood, 6 Ohio C. C. 826; Meridian Nat. Bank v. McConica, 8 Ohio C. C. 442; Shepherd v. McCalmont Oil Co. 88 Hun, 87.

Failure to drill a test well or to pay the rental at the time it became due rendered the license void.

The assignee of one of the instruments in suit is not liable for rental overdue at the time of the assignment, unless under a special agreement.

Stern v. Florence Sewing Mach. Co. 53 How. Pr. 478; Le Gierse v. Green, 61 Tex. 128, Johnston v. Bates, 16 Jones & S. 180.

In general a sum of money in gross to be paid for the nonperformance of an agreement is considered as a penalty.

Taylor v. Sandisford, 20 U. S. 7 Wheat. 18, 5 L. ed. 884; Baird v. Tolliver, 6 Humph. 186, 44 Am. Dec. 398; Wallis v. Carpenter, 13 Allen, 19; Cheddick v. Marsh, 21 N. J. L. 463; Bell v. Truit, 9 Bush, 287.

Equity will relieve the lessee from such a contract made by mutual mistake.

Moore v. Platte County, 8 Mo. 467; Colwell v. Lawrence, 88 Barb. 643; Goldsbrough v. Baker, 3 Cranch, C. C. 48; Greer v. Tweed, 13 Abb. Pr. N. S. 427; Colwell v. Lawrence, 88 N. Y. 71.

Messrs. C. S. Buchanan, L. E. Matz, and C. L. Weems, for defendant in error:

A lease is voidable only at the election of the lessor, but not of the lessee, though the proviso expressly declares that it shall be void.

1 Parsons, Cont. 506, 507; Taylor, Land. & T. S. 492; 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. 102; Smith v. Whitbeck, 18 Ohio St. 471; 3 Kent, Com. 464, 465; Gay v. Davey, 47 Ohio St. 396; Wms. Real Prop. 396; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 758.

A clause providing that the agreement shall be void if the lessee does not complete the well or pay the rent does not take away the lessee's liability to pay the rent where he fails to complete the well.

Leatherman v. Oliver, 151 Pa. 646; Ray v. Western Pennsylvania Nat. Gas Co. 138 Pa. 576, 12 L. R. A. 390; Clark v. Jones, 1 Denio, 516, 43 Am. Dec. 706; Galey Bros. v. Kellerman, 128 Pa. 491; Jones v. Western Pennsylvania Nat. Gas Co. 146 Pa. 204; Wills v. Manufacturers' Nat. Gas Co. 180 Pa. 222, 5 L. R. A. 603; Ogden v. Hatry, 145 Pa. 640; Smith v. Miller, 49 N. J. L. 521; Garnhart v. Finney, 40 Mo. 449, 98 Am. Dec. 803.

The assignee of a lease is bound in favor of the lessor to know the contents of the lease and for all rents in arrears.

Barroillet v. Battelle, 7 Cal. 450; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 681, 1031, 1033; Smith v. Harrison, 42 Ohio St. 180; Worthington v. Hewes, 19 Ohio St. 66; Babcock v. Scoville, 56 Ill. 461; Rawlings v. Duvall, 4 Harr. & McH. 1.

Where the agreement is for the performance or nonperformance of only one act, and there is no adequate means of ascertaining the pre-discharge which may result from a violation, the parties may, if they please, by a separate clause of the contract, fix upon the amount of compensation payable by the defaulting party in case of a breach; and a stipulation inserted for such a purpose will be treated as one for liquidated damages.

1 Pom. Eq. Jur. 604, § 442; Grasselli v. Lowden, 11 Ohio St. 349; Cothrel v. Talmage, 9 N. Y. 551, 61 Am. Dec. 716; Clement v. Cash, 21 N. Y. 253; Lange v. Werk, 2 Ohio St. 519; Lehigh Zinc & I. Co. v. Bamford, 150 U. S. 665, 37 L. ed. 1215; Bamford v. Lehigh Zinc & I. Co. 83 Fed. Rep. 677; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 599, 600; McKean v. Wharton, 121 Pa. 424; Gilmore v. Ontario Iron Co. 86 N. Y. 455; Clark v. Midland Blast Furnace Co. 21 Mo. App. 58; Bradford Oil Co. v. Blair, 113 Pa. 83, 57 Am. Rep. 442; Westmoreland & C. Nat. Gas Co. v. De Witt, 130 Pa. 235, 5 L. R. A. 751.

Burket, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

By the instrument in question the plaintiff below granted, demised, and let the oil, gas, and tract of land for the purpose and with the right of drilling and operating for oil and gas for five years, or as much longer as oil or gas should be found in paying quantities in the land. This is more than a license. It is a lease of the land, oil, and gas for a limited time and purpose, with a right of possession to the extent reasonably required for such purpose, the landlord retaining all that should not be so required. The principal contention in this case arises upon that part of the lease which provides that a test well should be drilled within one year, and, in default, payment of a yearly rental of $128 for further delay, and the further provision that a failure to drill the test well or pay the rental should render the lease null and void, and not binding on either party, and not to be revived without the consent in writing of both parties. It was this provision that was relied upon in the demurrer to the amended petition, and in the third general defense in the answer of the oil company. Reduced to its essence, this is a promise in writing, upon sufficient consideration, to pay a yearly rental of $128 for the right to use, to a limited extent, certain premises, with a further provision in the same instrument that a failure to pay should discharge the debt, that a default of payment should be the equivalent of payment, that failure should be performance, that nonpayment should be payment. Such contradictions in like instruments have caused courts to look critically into such instruments to ascertain the real intention of the parties, because such contracts cannot be enforced according to their letter. A promise to pay cannot be fulfilled by a failure to pay. A promise to drill a well cannot be satisfied by failure to drill such well. The proper construction to be placed upon such an agreement is that upon failure of the lessee to drill a well, or pay the rental, or both, as the case may be, the lessor may elect to put an end to the lease, and enforce payment of the promised rental, or sue for damages for failure to drill the well; or he may elect to have the lease continue in force to the end of the term, and enforce the drilling of wells and the payment of rentals as provided in the lease. Such provisions of forfeiture are for the benefit of the lessor, and not for the benefit of the lessee. The lessee cannot plead his own default or wrong in discharge of his obligation to drill or pay rental. Parties may agree that, in the case of failure to drill, or failure to pay, or both, the lessee shall be relieved of his obligation upon such terms as the parties may agree upon in the lease, whether the terms be of value to the lessor or loss or inconvenience to the lessee; but a naked default and nonperformance, as in this lease, cannot be held to discharge the obligations of the lessee. The following authorities are in point: Leatherman v. Oliver, 151 Pa. 646; Ray v. Western Pennsylvania Nat. Gas Co. 138 Pa. 576, 12 L. R. A. 290; Clark v. Jones, 1 Denio, 516, 43 Am. Dec. 706; Galley Bros. v. Kellerman, 128 Pa. 491; Jones v. Western Pennsylvania Nat. Gas Co. 146 Pa. 204; Wills v. Manufacturers' Nat. Gas Co. 130 Pa. 222, 5 L. R. A. 608; Ogden v. Hatry, 145 Pa. 640; Smith v. Miller, 49 N. J. L. 521; Taylor, Land. & T. § 492; 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. 102, 119.

It would also be competent for an owner of land to give an option to another party, upon a sufficient consideration, to drill one or more wells within a stated time, and, upon failure to drill such wells within the time limited, all rights to cease as to both parties. And it is contended by the oil company in this case that the leases in question are such options, or else are mere unexecuted licenses. In case of an option, a certain consideration is paid or agreed to be paid to tie up the land for a given time, and during that time the owner is prevented from using or disposing of the land contrary to the terms of his contract. But in such cases the consideration for the option must be paid, and cannot be satisfied by a naked default. If such default could be held as satisfaction of the consideration, the instrument would be without consideration, and therefore void. In the leases in question the consideration is $1 paid, and certain rentals promised to be paid in default of drilling a well; and, considered as an option, the whole consideration for the option must be paid. The same result follows if the instruments be regarded as unexecuted licenses. The consideration paid and agreed to be paid for the license is $1 paid and certain rentals to be paid, and the licensor not having interfered with the rights of the licensee, the latter is bound to pay the full consideration promised for the license, even though he never availed himself of its privileges. So that, whether the instruments in question are regarded as leases, options, or licenses, the plaintiff below is entitled to receive the considerations or rentals agreed to be paid.

The first defense to the first cause of action of the amended petition, to which a demurrer was sustained, raised the question whether the oil company became liable, under the assignment to it, for the rentals which had matured and remained unpaid at the time of the assignment of the leases, as well as for the rentals which thereafter accrued. We think that the demurrer was properly sustained. In his assignment of the leases Mr. Underwood stipulated that the oil company should have and hold the leases under the terms thereof, and under and subject to the rents and covenants therein reserved and contained on part of the lessee to be paid, kept, done, and performed. By accepting this assignment with that stipulation, and causing the same to be recorded, and receiving the leases thereunder, the oil company became bound to perform all the unperformed terms of the leases. It stepped into Mr. Underwood's shoes, and assumed his obligations.

It is also urged that the failure to drill the required well, and failure to pay the agreed rental, did not entitle the lessor to recover the amount named as rental, but at most would only entitle him to recover unliquidated damages. We regard the case as one of rental. The amount agreed to be paid was for the exclusive right of drilling and operating the premises for oil and gas. Failure to exercise the right would not relieve the company from payment of the amount agreed upon as the price of such exclusive right.

There are some other questions made in the record, but we find no error as to them, and do not regard them as of sufficient general interest to warrant a further report.

Judgment affirmed.

WASHINGTON SUPREME COURT.

City of TACOMA, Respt.,

v.

Henry KRECH, Appt.

(.....Wash.....)

A city ordinance making it unlawful for barbers to pursue their calling on Sunday, without applying to other kinds of employment, is unconstitutional as class legislation.

(September 28, 1896.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for Pierce County convicting him of violating a city ordinance prohibiting barbers from pursuing their occupation on Sunday. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. O'Brien & Robertson, for appellant:

The state has passed a general Sunday law which by its terms does not forbid a person carrying on his trade or calling on Sunday.

State v. Krech, 10 Wash. 166.

This being the case the city of Tacoma has not under its enabling act and the charter adopted by the city thereunder power to pass such an ordinance as was attempted herein.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 89, 317 et seq., 329; Champer v. Greencastle, 188 Ind. 839, 24 L. R. A. 768; Crawfordville v. Braden, 130 Ind. 149, 14 L. R. A. 268; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 1166, 1167, and authorities there cited.

This ordinance is unreasonable in its operation, unjust and special, and, under the provisions of our Constitution guaranteeing individuals freedom and forbidding encroachments on their rights, is void as being in conflict therewith.

Keim v. Chicago, 46 Ill. App. 445; Virgo v. Toronto, 22 Can. Sup. Ct. Rep. 447.

NOTE.—See, in accordance with the above decision, those of Eden v. People (Ill.) 32 L. R. A. 659; Ex parte Jentzsch (Cal.) 32 L. R. A. 664; and contra, People v. Havnor (N. Y.) 31 L. R. A. 689.

For constitutionality of Sunday laws generally, see note to Judetind v. State (Md.) 22 L. R. A. 721. 34 L. R. A.

Messrs. J. P. Judon, W. H. H. Kean, and Stacy W. Gibbs, for respondent:

If legislation affects all engaged in the same business or pursuit, and is in partial, but not total, restraint of trade, it is not class legislation.

People, Nechamaus, v. Warden of City Prison, 144 N. Y. 529, 27 L. R. A. 718.

This legislation is a valid exercise of police power. It is in aid of public health, in a less degree of public morals.

People v. Bellet, 99 Mich. 151, 22 L. R. A. 696; People v. Havnor, 1 App. Div. 459.

It is too late to begin to deny the constitutionality of Sunday laws against worldly labor. Judetind v. State, 78 Md. 510, 22 L. R. A. 721.

The ordinance in question relates to the public health and public morals.

Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 223; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 82, 24 L. ed. 989; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 663, 24 L. ed. 1037; Stone v. Mississippi, Harris, 101 U. S. 814, 25 L. ed. 1079; Butcher's Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516; New York Health Department v. Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 82, 27 L. R. A. 710.

Article 2, § 10, of the Constitution grants powers to cities of the first class, co-ordinate with those possessed by the legislature, to govern in local matters with a reserved power in the legislature.

St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 149 U. S. 465, 37 L. ed. 810; People v. Hoge, 55 Cal. 612; State, Kansas City, v. Field, 99 Mo. 352; Scurry v. Seattle, 8 Wash. 278; Howe v. Barto, 12 Wash. 627.

Article 2, § 102, of the Constitution is self-executing, and gives municipalities this power without any legislation.

Re Cheney, 90 Cal. 617; Ex parte Tuttle, 91 Cal. 589; Re Linehan, 72 Cal. 114; McCloskey v. Kreling, 76 Cal. 511; Ex parte Casnelio, 62 Cal. 598; Re Stuart, 61 Cal. 874.

The general welfare clause in the case of a city of this class is sufficient, and is not inconsistent with the general policy of the state. On the contrary it is in harmony with it.

Theisen v. McDavid, 84 Fla. 440, 26 L. R. A. 234; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 397, and cases cited; McPherson v. Chebanse, 114 Ill. 46, 35 Am. Rep. 857.

Laws against worldly labor on Sunday are constitutional.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. 589; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 5th ed. § 397, and note.

This law does not abridge the rights of citizens of this state.

People v. Hasbrouck, 11 Utah, 291.

It is not class legislation.

People v. Bellef, 99 Mich. 151, 23 L. R. A. 696; People v. Hannon, 1 App. Div. 459; Leiberman v. State, 26 Neb. 464; Black, Const. Prohibition, § 71; Com. v. Hamilton Mfg. Co. 120 Mass. 383; Foster v. Police Comrs. 102 Cal. 433.

Barbering is not a work of necessity.

Com. v. Waldman, 140 Pa. 89, 11 L. R. A. 563; State v. Frederick, 45 Ark. 347; State v. Wellott, 54 Mo. App. 310.

Per Curiam:

The appellant was convicted in the municipal court for violating a city ordinance of the city of Tacoma, which ordinance prevents barbers from pursuing their calling, from shaving or doing any work in connection with their trade, for compensation, on Sunday. Appeal was taken to the superior court of Pierce county. On the trial, appellant was again convicted, and from the judgment of that court this appeal is taken.

This judgment is attacked for various reasons by the appellant, but, with the view we take of his last contention,—viz. that the law is special, and is obnoxious to the provisions of our Constitution in relation to special legislation,—a discussion of the other propositions will not be necessary. One class of people is singled out by this law, while other laboring people, in different characters of employment, are allowed to prosecute their work. Conceding, for the purpose of this case, the right of the legislature to pass a law restricting or forbidding manual labor on Sunday, yet, under the provisions of our Constitution, the restriction must be imposed alike upon all residents of the state, or the effect of the law would be to work privileges and immunities upon one class of citizens which did not equally belong to all citizens. If this law is valid, then the legislature would have the right to prohibit farm labor on Sunday, to prohibit working by printers on Sunday, to prohibit nine-tenths of the employments which citizens usually engage in in this country, and leave the other one-tenth of the people to pursue their vocations. This would plainly be granting privileges and immunities to one class which did not belong equally to all citizens. The object of the Constitution was to prohibit special legislation, and substitute in its place a general law, which bore on all alike. It seems to us that the ordinance in question is "special legislation," within the meaning of the Constitution; and, of course, if the legislature had no right to pass such a law, it could not delegate such power to a city council. This view is sustained by Ex parte Jentsch (Cal.) 32 L. R. A. 664; Keim v. Chicago, 46 Ill. App. 445; Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238; State v. Granneman, 182 Mo. 826; and Elden v. People, 161 Ill. 296, 32 L. R. A. 659. It is true, there have been some decisions, notably in the state of New York, holding the contrary view; but we are satisfied with the reasoning of the cases cited, and therefore hold the ordinance to be unconstitutional.

The judgment will be reversed, and the cause dismissed.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

John D. CHEEVER, Appt.,

v.

PITTSBURG, CHENANGO, & LAKE ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY, Respt.

(150 N. Y. 50.)

One who takes the negotiable note of a corporation from its president as collateral security for a loan to him or a firm to which he belongs is not precluded from claiming as a bona fide holder by reason of the fact that the note was signed by the president, where it was payable to a third person who had indorsed it.

(Bartlett, Haight, and Vann, JJ., dissent.)

(October 6, 1894.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, First Department, affirming a judgment of the New York County Circuit in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due on certain promissory notes. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

Messrs. James J. Myers and Austen G. Fox, with Messrs. Theall & Beam, for appellant:

The presumption is that the rights and relations of parties to negotiable paper are precisely such as they appear upon its face.

Hoge v. Lansing, 35 N. Y. 136; Colson v. Arnot, 57 N. Y. 259, 15 Am. Rep. 496.

NOTE.—For some authorities as to circumstances giving notice of fraud to the purchaser of negotiable paper, see Cana Joharie Nat. Bank v. Diefendorf (N. Y.) 10 L. R. A. 677.

34 L. R. A.

As to the power of the president of a corporation, see note Walt v. Nashua Armory Assn. (N. H.) 14 L. R. A. 354.

When these notes were offered as collateral security for a loan to the firm of M. S. Frost & Son, each note upon its face appeared to be, not a corporate obligation created by the president in his own favor, but rather a corporate obligation issued regularly for value to a stranger, John T. Bruen, and indorsed by him for value to M. S. Frost & Son, who were then the ostensible owners.

What they appeared to be Mr. Brooks had a right to assume they were.

Hoge v. Lansing, supra; Mechanics' Bkg. Asso. v. New York & S. White Lead Co. 85 N. Y. 505; Belmont Branch of State Bank v. Hoge, Id. 65; Magee v. Badger, 84 N. Y. 247, 90 Am. Dec. 691; Colson v. Arnot, 57 N. Y. 259, 15 Am. Rep. 496; Central Bank v. Hammett, 50 N. Y. 158; Jarvis v. Manhattan Beach Co. 148 N. Y. 652, 31 L. R. A. 776; Goodman v. Simonds, 61 U. S. 20 How. 365, 15 L. ed. 941.

The mere fact that Mr. Frost, who presented the notes on behalf of M. S. Frost & Son, was president of the defendant corporation did not show as matter of law that the firm of M. S. Frost & Son were not the owners of the notes.

Ex parte Bushell, 3 Mont. D. & De G. 615; Exchange Bank v. Monteath, 26 N. Y. 506; Bank of New York Nat. Bkg. Asso. v. American Dock & T. Co. 148 N. Y. 559; Jarvis v. Manhattan Beach Co. supra; Bank of Genesee v. Patchin Bank, 18 N. Y. 309; Farmers' & M. Bank v. Butchers' & D. Bank, 16 N. Y. 125; Smith v. Lusher, 5 Cow. 688; Gale v. Miller, 44 Barb. 420; Ridley v. Taylor, 18 East, 175; Swan v. Steele, 7 East, 210; Murphy v. Camden, 18 Mo. 122; Tutt v. Addams, 24 Mo. 186; Eckert v. Cameron, 48 Pa. 120; Attenborough Bank v. Mackenzie, 25 L. J. Exch. 244; 1 Ames, Cases on Bills & Notes, 743, note (8); 7 Harvard L. Rev. 307; Atlas Nat. Bank v. Savery, 127 Mass. 75; Fifth Ward Sav. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 48 N. J. L. 513; Walker v. Kea, 14 S. O. 142; Lafayette Sav. Bank v. St. Louis Stoneware Co. 4 Mo. App. 276, 2 Mo. App. 299; Edwards v. Thomas, 66 Mo. 468; Tewis v. Tewis, 24 Mo. 535; Chapman v. Remington, 80 Mich. 552; Freeman's Nat. Bank v. Savery, 127 Mass. 80, 84 Am. Rep. 845.

The president having been authorized to give the corporate notes to the amount of $10,000, it is no defense as against a purchaser for value without notice for the corporation to show that the president abused his authority and did not apply the notes to the purpose which was indicated in the resolution of authority.

Jarvis v. Manhattan Beach Co. 148 N. Y. 652, 31 L. R. A. 776; Lexington v. Butler, 81 U. S. 14 Wall. 282, 20 L. ed. 809; Bank of Bengal v. Macleod, 7 Moore, P. C. C. 35; Ridgway v. Farmers' Bank, 13 Serg. & R. 256, 14 Am. Dec. 681; Exchange Bank v. Monteath, 17 Barb. 171.

Mr. Frank Sullivan Smith, for respondent:

The plaintiff is not a bona fide holder of the notes for value without notice of facts affecting their validity before maturity and in the usual course of business, and therefore cannot recover upon said notes.

Wilson v. Metropolitan Elav. R. Co. 120 N. Y. 145; American Exch. Nat. Bank v. New 34 L. R. A.

York Bk. & P. Co. 148 N. Y. 698; Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Forty-second Street & G. S. F. R. Co. 139 N. Y. 146; Gerard v. McCormick, 130 N. Y. 261, 14 L. R. A. 234; Pendleton v. Fay, 2 Paige, 302; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 388, 1 Am. Rep. 115, 97 Am. Dec. 107; Garrard v. Pittsburgh & O. R. Co. 29 Pa. 154; Farrington v. South Boston R. Co. 150 Mass. 406, 5 L. R. A. 849; Petrie v. Clark, 11 Serg. & R. 877, 14 Am. Dec. 636; Culver v. Reno Real Estate Co. 91 Pa. 367; Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Mechanic's F. Ins. Co. 7 Wend. 31; Adriance v. Roome, 53 Barb. 399; Stainer v. Tyson, 3 Hill, 279; Mages v. Badger, 84 N. Y. 247, 90 Am. Dec. 691; Chemung Canal Bank v. Bradner, 44 N. Y. 680; Kraft v. Freeman Printing & Pub. Asso. 87 N. Y. 623; Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 54, 26 L. ed. 693.

Where a party has knowledge of such facts as would induce a man of ordinary prudence to make further inquiry, a failure to make inquiry is visited with all the consequences of notice.

Wade, Law of Notice. § 11; Petrie v. Clark, Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Mechanic's F. Ins. Co., Adriance v. Roome, Stainer v. Tyson, and Culver v. Reno Real Estate Co. supra.

The original holder was not a holder in good faith.

Knowing Frost's agency for the railroad company, and that he was acting for himself in furtherance of a personal interest adverse to the railroad company, Francis A. Brooks was put upon inquiry to ascertain whether he was authorized by the railroad company to make personal use of the notes. To rely upon the assurances of Frost without obtaining knowledge of the truth was but permitting Frost to commit a fraud upon the railroad company as well as the indorsees.

Story, Agency. § 186; Farmers' & M. Bank v. Butchers' & D. Bank, 16 N. Y. 134; Dowden v. Cryder, 55 N. J. L. 829; Bank of New York Nat. Bkg. Asso. v. American Dock & T. Co. 148 N. Y. 559; Columbia Bank v. Gospel Tabernacle Church, 127 N. Y. 361; Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Mechanic's F. Ins. Co. supra; German-American Bank v. Brenham, 85 Fed. Rep. 185; Anderson v. Kissam, Id. 699; Mechem, Agency, § 898; Union Nat. Bank v. Underhill, 103 N. Y. 336; Moore v. National Bank, 15 Fed. Rep. 141; Moore v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 111 U. S. 156, 28 L. ed. 885.

There is no presumption that the president of a corporation has power to bind it.

Lyndon Mill Co. v. Lyndon Literary & B. Inst. 63 Vt. 581.

The notes in suit having been obtained and negotiated in fraud of the railroad company, the onus was upon the plaintiff of showing that he acquired the said notes in good faith.

Grant v. Walsh, 145 N. Y. 503; Joy v. Dieffendorf, 180 N. Y. 6; Canajoharie Nat. Bank v. Dieffendorf, 128 N. Y. 191, 10 L. R. A. 676; Vosburg v. Dieffendorf, 119 N. Y. 857; Nickerson v. Ruger, 76 N. Y. 283; Ocean Nat. Bank v. Carll, 55 N. Y. 441; First Nat. Bank v. Green, 43 N. Y. 298.

The pledge of the notes in suit by the president of the railroad company was unauthorized and cannot bind the defendant.

Shaw v. Saranac Horse Nail Co. 144 N. Y.

320; Owning v. Williamson, 1 Sandf. Ch. 17; Waldron v. McComb, 1 Hill, 111; Bloomer v. Waldron, 3 Hill, 361; Albany F. Ins. Co. v. Bay, 4 N. Y. 9; Merchants' Bank v. Livingston, 74 N. Y. 223; Wright, Agency, 79; Mechem, Agency, § 356; Story, Agency, 78; Randolph, Com. Paper, § 794; Bank of Bengal v. Macleod, 7 Moore, P. C. C. 85; Francis v. Joseph, 3 Edw. Ch. 182; Perry v. Council Bluffs City Waterworks Co. 67 Hun, 456; Park Bank v. Watson, 42 N. Y. 490, 1 Am. Rep. 578.

It is immaterial whether the notes were taken in good faith and for value before maturity if the circumstances attending their issue were sufficient to put Mr. Brooks upon his inquiry, and if the result of such inquiry diligently pursued would have acquainted him with the facts which rendered the transaction unlawful.

Wilson v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 120 N. Y. 145; Pendleton v. Fay, 2 Paige, 202; Garrard v. Pittsburgh & C. R. Co. 29 Pa. 154; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 888, 1 Am. Rep. 115, 97 Am. Dec. 107.

When fraud in fact is self-evident, as in a case of deception, or misrepresentations found or attempted, it is the duty of the court to adjudge upon it without submitting it to the jury.

Thomp. Trials, § 1981, citing Williams v. Bantshorn, 30 Ala. 211; Hardy v. Simpson, 18 Ired. L. 182; Sturtevant v. Ballard, 9 Johns. 337, 6 Am. Dec. 281; Worseley v. Demattos, 1 Burr. 467; Bigelow, Fr. 1st ed. 468; Gage v. Parker, 25 Barb. 141; Erwin v. Voorhees, 26 Barb. 127.

Proof that a promissory note purporting to be made by a corporation was signed by the president and secretary is not sufficient without proof of the authority of the president and secretary to sign the note.

McCullough v. Moss, 5 Denio, 567; People's Bank v. St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church, 109 N. Y. 512; National Bank v. Navassa Phosphate Co. 56 Hun, 186; Dabney v. Stevens, 40 How. Pr. 341; First Nat. Bank v. Council Bluffs City Waterworks Co. 56 Hun, 412; Wahlig v. Standard Pump Co. 30 N. Y. S. R. 890.

O'Brien, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The complaint in this action contained four separate causes of action, each upon a promissory note of the defendant. The last two causes of action were not defended, and upon these the plaintiff recovered, but was defeated upon the two notes embraced in the first and second causes of action. The defense to these two notes was that they were made by the defendant's president, one M. S. Frost, and by him wrongfully diverted from the uses and purposes for which they were intended to his own personal or private benefit, or the benefit of a firm of which he was a member, and that the plaintiff is not a bona fide holder, but chargeable with notice of these facts. The following are copies of the two notes in controversy, with the indorsements thereon when put in circulation by the defendant's president.

$5,000.

Greenville, Pa., Feby 24th, 1898.

Four months after date the Pittsburgh, Shenango, & Lake Erie Railroad Company promises to pay to the order of John T. Bruen five thousand dollars, at the American Exchange National Bank, New York City. Value received.
31 L. R. A.

The Pittsburgh, Shenango, & Lake Erie Railroad Company, by M. S. Frost, President.

Attest: E. S. Templeton, Secretary.

Indorsed: Pay to the order of M. S. Frost & Son.

John T. Bruen.

M. S. Frost & Son.

$5,000.00.

Greenville, Pa., Feby 24th, 1898.

Three months after date the Pittsburgh, Shenango, & Lake Erie Railroad Company promises to pay to the order of John T. Bruen five thousand dollars, at the American Exchange National Bank, New York City. Value received.

The Pittsburgh, Shenango, & Lake Erie Railroad Company, by M. S. Frost, President.

Attest: E. S. Templeton, Secretary.

Indorsed:

John T. Bruen.

M. S. Frost & Son.

The body of these notes, and every part of them except the signature of the president, was in the handwriting of Templeton, the secretary. The president was authorized by the board of directors to issue the corporate notes to the extent of $10,000 for the purpose of purchasing flat cars. In March, 1898, before the notes became due, Frost went to Boston, and there negotiated a cash loan of $30,000 from Francis A. Brooks for the benefit of M. S. Frost & Son, giving the firm note therefor, and delivering to him the two notes in question, indorsed as they now appear, with other obligations, as collateral security for the payment of this loan. Subsequent to the maturity of the notes, Brooks became the absolute owner, by consent of the pledgor, and the proceeds applied upon the debt, and still later he transferred them to a third party, and they have come to the hands of the plaintiff, for value. It is not claimed that the plaintiff occupies any other or different position than Brooks would if he had brought the action upon the notes at maturity. Bruen, the payee of the notes, was the private secretary of Frost, the president; and the notes were made payable to him by Templeton, the secretary of defendant, who drew them in that form at the suggestion of the president. There is not, and cannot be, any dispute with respect to the authority of Frost to make the notes. They were made with sufficient authority, the fraud upon the defendant consisting in the wrongful use of them when made for a legitimate purpose, by the president for his own private business. Nor is there any dispute with respect to the fact appearing on the plaintiff's case, that Brooks paid value for the notes, and made present advances in cash to Frost in the sum already stated. It is equally clear upon the record that Brooks had no actual knowledge of the facts surrounding the origin of the paper, or of the diversion of it by the president. He received the notes and made the advances in Boston, whereas they were made, and the transactions stated with respect to them took place, in a distant state, where the office of the company was, and is indicated on the paper as the place where made.

The learned trial judge held, as matter of law, that the plaintiff could not recover upon the notes, for the reason that he was chargeable with knowledge of the facts and circumstances that rendered them invalid in the hands of Frost. The plaintiff is doubtless chargeable with such knowledge or notice as to the antecedent equities of the defendant as Brooks, his assignor, had, but with no others. If the notes were valid obligations in the hands of Brooks, the plaintiff may assert every right that he could have asserted. It needs no argument to show that if Brooks had knowledge or notice, or is in law chargeable with knowledge or notice, of the fraud by means of which the notes were diverted from the purpose for which they were authorized to be made, the plaintiff cannot recover. But it is not claimed that he knew anything about the origin or diversion of the paper, in fact. All that is claimed is that when it was presented to him in Boston by Frost, whom he knew to be the president of the railroad, there was enough upon the face of the paper to put him upon inquiry, and therefore to charge him with knowledge of all the facts that such inquiry would have disclosed. He knew nothing, so far as appears, outside of the paper itself, except the fact that the party presenting it was defendant's president, and that he was proposing to pledge the notes for his own debt, or rather for the debt of his firm, which, for all the purposes of the question, may be assumed to be the same thing. The question in the case is therefore reduced to a very narrow inquiry, and that is whether Brooks, standing in all other respects in the position, and sustaining the character, of a bona fide purchaser of negotiable paper, is deprived of that character and the benefits of that position by reason of anything appearing upon the face of the notes themselves.

The mind, at the threshold of the inquiry, encounters two principles that point in opposite directions, and lead to different conclusions, as the one or the other is allowed to preponderate in the mental process of determining the legal rights of the parties. On the one hand is the principle which protects a bona fide holder of commercial paper from existing, antecedent equities between the parties, and on the other the principle which protects a corporation from the unauthorized and fraudulent acts of its own officers. There is not much difficulty in stating the rule of law defining the duties and obligations of a party to whom negotiable paper is presented for discount or sale before due. He is not bound, at his peril, to be on the alert for circumstances which might possibly excite the suspicion of wary vigilance. He does not owe to the party who puts the paper afloat the duty of active inquiry, in order to avert the imputation of bad faith. The rights of the holder are to be determined by the simple test of honesty and good faith, and not by a speculative issue as to his diligence or negligence. The holder's rights cannot be defeated without proof of actual notice of the defect in title, or bad faith on his part, evidenced by circumstances. Though he may have been negligent in taking the paper, and omitted precautions which a prudent man would have taken, nevertheless, unless he acted malà fide, his title, according to settled doctrine, will prevail. Magee v. Badger, 34 N. Y. 249, 90 Am. Dec. 691; American Exch. Nat. Bank v. New York Belt & P. Co. 148 N. Y. 705; Knox v. Eden Musee American Co. Id. 454, 31 L. R. A. 779; Canajoharie Nat. Bank v. Dieffendorf, 123 N. Y. 202, 10 L. R. A. 676; Vosburgh v. Dieffendorf, 119 N. Y. 357; Jarvis v. Manhattan Beach Co. 148 N. Y. 653, 31 L. R. A. 776.

34 L. R. A.

Applying these rules to the conceded facts of the case, it seems to me to be impossible to impute bad faith to Brooks in the transaction. He advanced a large sum of money on the faith of the paper, without any actual knowledge that the relations of the party with whom he dealt to the paper were different from what they appeared to be on the face of it. The question now is, not what the facts were, but what they appeared to be, and what he had the right, from the notes themselves, to assume. He had the right to assume that the relations to the paper of every party whose name appeared on it were precisely what they appeared to be. Hoge v. Lansing, 85 N. Y. 136. He had the right to believe that the notes had been issued by the defendant to Bruen for value, in the regular course of business, and were by him transferred to Frost & Son in like manner. There was nothing to suggest to him that Frost was dealing with paper that belonged to the railroad, for his own benefit. The appearances were that the defendant had put the notes in circulation by delivery to Bruen, and that they came to Frost's firm in the regular course of business, for value, and were then the property of the firm. It is quite true that all these appearances were deceptive, and that the actual facts were otherwise. But how was a banker or business man in Boston to know or suspect that Bruen was only the nominal payee, and a mere instrument in the transaction to enable the president to divert the paper to his own use? The name of the party who presented it and had it in his possession appeared on the face of the paper to have signed it as president. The name of another officer of the corporation was upon it also, attesting its regularity, and everything was in his handwriting, except the signature of the president and the indorsement of the payee. So far as Brooks was concerned, the paper showed that it had been issued to a stranger in the regular course of business, and, through his indorsement, had come to the hands of a mercantile firm of which the president of the corporation was a member. If this were the fact, there is no doubt as to his right to use it in the business of the firm. The holder of a note, who has no actual knowledge or notice of a defect in the title, or other equities between the parties, when circumstances come to his knowledge sufficient to put him upon inquiry, is chargeable with knowledge of all the facts that such inquiry would have revealed. The difficulty in this case is to find the circumstance which can be said to be sufficient to put Brooks upon the inquiry. There was absolutely nothing on the face of the paper, except the signature, as president, of the party who was dealing with it; and that, we think, was not sufficient, in view of the fact that the appearances were that he was a purchaser from a third party. The principle that applies in a case where an officer of a corporation makes the corporate obligation payable to himself, and then attempts to deal with it for his own benefit, does not aid in solving the question in this case. When paper of that character is presented by the officer or agent of the corporation, it bears upon its face sufficient notice of the incapacity of the officer or agent to issue it. Hanover Nat. Bank v. American Dock & T. Co. 148 N. Y. 612; Bank of New York Nat. Bkg. Assn. v. American Dock & T. Co. 143 N. Y. 559; Wilson v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 120 N. Y. 145; Gerard v. McCormick, 130 N. Y. 261, 14 L. R. A. 234. There are numerous cases that belong to that class cited by the learned counsel for the defendant in his brief. There is a manifest distinction between them and the case at bar. Here the officer was not dealing with corporate notes payable to himself, but with notes that had been regularly issued, so far as appeared from their face, to a stranger, and by him transferred to a firm of which the officer was a member, and for which he acted as agent in procuring the loan from Brooks, and pledging them as security. The presence of Frost's name upon the paper, as one of the agents who issued it, was not naturally or reasonably calculated, under the circumstances, to arouse suspicion in the mind of Brooks, or to lead him to believe that the president was attempting to defraud the corporation in disposing of the notes. None of the cases cited by the learned counsel for the defendant sustain the proposition that such a circumstance is sufficient to put the purchaser of negotiable paper upon inquiry, or charge him with knowledge of the fact in case he fails to make it; and there are many cases that tend to support the contrary view. American Exch. Nat. Bank v. New York Belt & P. Co. 148 N. Y. 698; Müller v. Consolidation Bank, 48 Pa. 514, 88 Am. Dec. 475; Walker v. Kes, 14 S. C. 143.

It is said that, if the plaintiff's right to recover in this case is sanctioned by this court, an easy way will be opened for the perpetration of frauds upon corporations by officers intrusted with its negotiable obligations, and that the device of making the paper payable to the order of a nominal payee, interested or aiding in the fraud, will be a favorite one to accomplish the end. We must leave all such cases to be dealt with upon the peculiar facts and circumstances as they arise. It is more reasonable and just to assume that corporations will be able to protect themselves by proper vigilance from the dishonesty of their own officers, than to impute to parties who have taken the paper for value, ignorant of its origin, constructive knowledge of the facts, upon such circumstances as exist in this case.

We think that there was nothing on the face of the paper, or in the facts shown, to warrant the court in holding, as matter of law, as it did, that the obligations were received by Brooks, and the advances made on them, mala fide. That is the effect of the ruling at the trial, and the conclusion was not supported by the facts.

It follows that the judgment must be reversed, and a new trial granted; costs to abide the event.

Andrews, Ch. J., and Gray and Martin, JJ., concur.

34 L. R. A.

Bartlett, J., dissenting:

The contest in this case arises over two notes for $5,000, constituting the first and second causes of action set forth in the amended complaint. The plaintiff's exceptions were heard in the first instance at general term, were overruled, and as to these causes of action the complaint was dismissed. The material facts to be considered on this appeal are undisputed. On the 17th day of February, 1888, the board of directors of the defendant railroad company held a meeting, and adopted the following resolution: "Resolved, that the president be, and he is hereby, authorized to make a contract for the purchase of fifty flat cars for the use of this company, and is authorized, in carrying out this purpose, to give the notes of this company, to the sum of $10,000." M. S. Frost, the president of the company, on the day the resolution was passed, asked the secretary to prepare the notes in blank, and, upon objection being made, suggested that they be payable to Mr. Bruen, his private secretary; stating that, when he wished to negotiate the notes, Bruen could indorse them. It is admitted that the president of the company fraudulently appropriated these notes to his own use, and that no part of the proceeds was used in procuring cars under the resolution, or for the benefit of the company in any way. The disposition made of these notes by Frost, the president of the defendant is set forth in the testimony of Francis A. Brooks, of Boston, the alleged holder in good faith. He states: "I had business transactions with Mr. Frost . . . on the 19th day of March, 1888. I took of him the note of M. S. Frost & Son for $30,000. . . . He then applied to me for a loan of $30,000, and I made such loan, and took the note of M. S. Frost & Son, of him, for that amount. I received of him, as collateral security for said note of $30,000, certificates or receipts representing bonds of the Pittsburgh, Shenango, & Lake Erie Railroad Company, deposited with a certain trust company or companies, of a par value of $21,000; also two notes, of $5,000 each, of the Pittsburgh, Shenango, & Lake Erie Railroad Company, dated February 24, 1888, one payable on three months' time, and one payable on four months' time." Brooks also testifies that he did not become the absolute owner of the notes until long after they were due, and that in the October or November before he swore to his deposition in this action he transferred them. At the time the notes fell due they were not presented to the company for payment. The two notes were in the following form, except one was for three months, and the other four months:

$5,000. Greenville, Pa., Feb'y 24, 1888.

Three months after date the Pittsburgh, Shenango, & Lake Erie Railroad Company promises to pay to the order of John T. Bruen five thousand dollars, at the American Exchange National Bank, New York City. Value received.

The Pittsburgh, Shenango, and Lake Erie Railroad Company, by M. S. Frost, President.

Attest: E. S. Templeton, Secretary.

One note was indorsed: "John T. Bruen. M. S. Frost & Son." The other was indorsed:

"Pay to the order of M. S. Frost & Son. John T. Bruen. M. S. Frost & Son."

It is not claimed that Bruen, the private secretary of Frost, and the payee of these notes, had any interest whatever in them. One note was indorsed by him to M. S. Frost & Son, and the other in blank. It is not claimed that this transfer was for value. The one question is whether Brooks was the bona fide holder of the notes, for value, in the usual course of business, before maturity, and without notice of facts affecting their validity; it not appearing that he had knowledge of the fraudulent acts of Frost in diverting the paper of the corporation to his own use, although he did know that Frost was president of defendant, and was using these notes for his own purposes. In other words, was there enough upon the face of this negotiable paper, and the transaction in which he took it, as collateral security for the loan he then made, not only to have put Brooks, as a prudent man, upon inquiry, but to enable the court to say, as matter of law, on the undisputed facts, that he acted mala fide in not requiring Frost to disclose his authority to transfer his company's notes as collateral in his own business? Counsel do not agree as to whether the evidence shows that the loan was made to Frost, or to his firm. Brooks's testimony may be read either way, possibly. At all events, it does not seem perfectly clear, but we do not regard it as important. Frost was borrowing this money and using the notes of his company for his own purposes, either as an individual, or for his firm. Although a partnership is to be regarded as a legal entity for certain purposes, this fiction may not be invoked to shield one of the copartners, or to enable him to do as a partner that which the law prohibits him from doing as an individual. Jones v. Blun, 145 N. Y. 333.

It is the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant that, when these notes were offered to Brooks as collateral security, they were not, upon their face, corporate obligations created by Frost in his own favor, but rather a corporate obligation issued regularly, for value, to a stranger, John T. Bruen, and indorsed by him, for value, to M. S. Frost & Son, who were then the ostensible owners. I do not think, upon the face of the notes and the transaction of loan, there was enough to warrant Brooks in assuming that M. S. Frost & Son were the ostensible holders, for value, from a stranger. In the loan transaction, Frost gave Brooks, as collateral, only securities of the company of which he was president; and, as to the notes in controversy, the original payee indorsed direct to Frost's firm. If this simple device is to serve the purposes of dishonest officers of corporations, who desire to realize upon corporate paper of their own fraudulent creation, then the way is open to them for unrestricted plunder. A president of a corporation executes its note, fills in as payee the name of his office boy, and, upon securing the latter's indorsement to his firm, is possessed of paper issued regularly for value to a stranger, and duly indorsed. Anyone in the commercial world is then at liberty to discount the note without fear of legal consequences. The fact that Frost was in the possession of the notes of the defendant, indorsed to him by the original payee, which he had executed as its president, and proposed to use for his own purposes, was enough to put Brooks upon inquiry; and, failing to do so, he acted mala fide. This is a safe rule, and any other would be fraught with the greatest danger to corporations. It is, of course, quite possible that the president or other officer of a corporation may be lawfully in possession of its commercial paper, executed by himself, and entitled to use it in his own business, but there is no hardship in a rule requiring the proposed purchaser to ascertain the fact. There is no peril to the general business public in such a rule, as the fact that the officer of a corporation desires to use its paper, signed by himself, in his private business, is an unusual circumstance, and naturally suggests inquiry. In the case at bar, if inquiry had been made of the secretary of the company an immediate disclosure of the proposed fraud upon the defendant would have resulted. This rule invokes no new principle, and is in harmony with the law for the protection of the bona fide purchaser for value, as expounded in this country for many years. In Mayes v. Badger, 84 N. Y. 249, 90 Am. Dec. 691, this court, in referring to the rights of the bona fide holder of commercial paper, said: "He is not bound, at his peril, to be upon the alert for circumstances which might possibly excite the suspicions of wary vigilance. He does not owe to the party who puts negotiable paper afloat the duty of active inquiry, to avert the imputation of bad faith. The rights of the holder are to be determined by the simple test of honesty and good faith, and not by a speculative issue as to his diligence or negligence." This is a clear statement of the rule of law, and its application to the facts in the case at bar defeats recovery. The rule was restated by this court very recently as follows: "In all cases where it is sought to defeat the right of the holder of negotiable paper before maturity to recover against the maker, it is essential that actual notice be proved of the defect in title, or that circumstances be shown evidencing bad faith in the holder and creating reasonable grounds for suspecting his conduct in the transaction." American Exch. Nat. Bank v. New York Belt & P. Co. 143 N. Y. 705. Also in Knox v. Eden Musee American Co. 143 N. Y. 454, 81 L. R. A. 779, the rule is thus stated: "And the transferee, although he may have been negligent in taking it, and omitted precautions which a prudent man would have taken, nevertheless, unless he acted mala fide, his title, according to the doctrine now settled, will prevail." In Canajoharie Nat. Bank v. Dieffendorf, 123 N. Y. 203, 10 L. R. A. 676, this court said in regard to the rights of the holder of commercial paper: "What constitutes good faith in such transactions has been the subject of frequent discussion in the books, and while differences of opinion may exist on some points, there is perfect uniformity among them upon the point that a want of good faith in the transaction is fatal to the title of the holder. . . . The requirement of good faith is expressed in the very term by which a holder is protected, and is fundamental in the maintenance of that character." The Supreme Court of the United States, in Murray v. Lardner, 69 U. S. 2

Wall, 121, 17 L. ed. 859, said: "The rule may perhaps be said to resolve itself into a question of honesty or dishonesty, for guilty knowledge and wilful ignorance alike involve the result of bad faith."

The burden of establishing good faith is upon the plaintiff, and, when the presumption in his favor is rebutted by defendant's proofs, then he must show affirmatively his good faith. In this case the plaintiff rests upon the face of the notes, and the undisputed facts of the transaction in which they were taken as collateral security, thus making the existence of good faith a question of law. There was no question for the jury. These facts bring Frost, the agent of the defendant, and Brooks, the money lender, together, with full knowledge in Brooks that Frost was the president of the defendant, and proposing to use the corporate notes he had executed for his own purposes, his title being derived from the original payee.

The counsel for appellant, in an ingenious and able argument, starts out with the proposition that Frost was an agent of two principals, —one the defendant corporation, and the other the firm of M. S. Frost & Son; thus making the situation like that of a partnership note made to the order of a stranger, and indorsed by him, and subsequently indorsed and negotiated by another partnership, the person who negotiated the note for the indorsee firm being a member of each partnership. He cites two cases in this connection which he insists should be decisive of this appeal, viz., Miller v. Consolidation Bank, 48 Pa. 514, 88 Am. Dec. 475, and Walker v. Kee, 14 S. C. 142. I have already pointed out that Frost could not shield himself behind his firm. Both he and Brooks must meet this transaction as if the notes were indorsed by the original payee to Frost personally. Even if it be assumed that Frost stood in the attitude of double agency, as suggested, it would not render applicable the principle laid down in the cases cited, as Frost's position as president of the defendant corporation and member of the firm of M. S. Frost & Son would not confer upon him the power to negotiate corporate paper precisely as if the corporation were another firm in which he was a partner. Miller v. Consolidation Bank, 48 Pa. 514, 88 Am. Dec. 475, just cited, was a case where a partner in two firms drew the note of one firm, indorsed it to the other firm, discounted it at the Consolidation Bank, passed the proceeds of the discount to indorsee firm, and subsequently drew them out and converted them to his own use. The court held, under these circumstances, that the bank properly discounted the paper. Agnew, J., said: "One who is a member of several firms has presumptively the same power in each that his partners have. To say he cannot draw and indorse the same paper, as the representative of different firms, is simply to negative his power to act in the second firm because he has acted in the first. Having in each the power of a partner presumptively as to the public, and acting in 34 L. R. A.

that apparent right, it is no ground of suspicion that his indorsement of the name of one firm is in bad faith to the other, as maker of the note. . . . But here there is nothing out of the usual course of business, and nothing in the face of the paper to indicate that the note was not drawn by the firm of Miller & Persch, in their usual course of business, in a partnership transaction with Persch & Steeb."

No argument is necessary to show that this case, and the one cited with it, have no application to the case at bar, and the same may be said of a large number of authorities on the brief of appellant involving a similar principle. In the case at bar the transaction was entirely out of the usual course of business, and the presumption was that the proposed use of the corporate paper was irregular. This court, in the second division, in Wilson v. Metropolitan Elec. R. Co. 120 N. Y. 145, recognized the principle we are now discussing, although holding it did not defeat the recovery in that case, for the reason that the purchaser of a promissory note purporting to have been issued by a corporation, who makes the purchase under circumstances which devolve upon him the duty of inquiry as to its validity, assumes no greater risk, by his failure to make inquiry, than the burden of proving that the facts he could have discovered, had he made inquiry, would have protected him. In the case cited the note was drawn by the defendant's president, payable to the order of the corporation, and indorsed by him as president and individually. It was conceded that the president was using the note for his individual benefit, to the knowledge of plaintiff, but, as it appeared that an inquiry would have disclosed a state of facts showing the president was authorized to so use it, the defendant was liable. This court, in disposing of the case, said (p. 150, 120 N. Y.): "Undoubtedly the general rule is that one who receives from an officer of a corporation the notes or securities of such corporation, in payment of, or as security for, a personal debt of such officer, does so at his own peril. Prima facie the act is unlawful, and, unless actually authorized, the purchaser will be deemed to have taken them with notice of the rights of the corporation."

The learned counsel for the respondent submitted an able brief, with an exhaustive reference to the authorities in support of the recovery below, but I deem any further discussion of the cases as unnecessary. I have already suggested that there is no doubt as to the rule applicable to the bona fide holder for value of commercial paper. It is too well settled to admit of serious debate at this late day, and the only question here is whether it can be said, under the admitted facts, that Brooks was put upon his inquiry, and, failing to follow it up, is chargeable with bad faith. I think, as already stated, that this question must be answered in the affirmative. The judgment appealed from should be affirmed.

Haight and Vann, JJ., concur.

FARMERS' LOAN & TRUST COMPANY,
as Trustees, Resp't.,

v.

NEW YORK & NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY et al., Resp'ts.,

and

Artemus H. HOLMES et al., Impleaded, etc., Appls.

(150 N. Y. 410.)

1. It is a matter of common knowledge that where the ownership of a majority of the stock of a corporation changes, the board of directors usually changes, unless its members are already in harmony with the policy of its purchasers.
2. A corporation owning a majority of the stock of another company, and assuming control of its business through the control of its officers and directors, assumes the same trust relation towards the minority stockholders that a corporation itself usually bears to stockholders.
3. A corporation purchasing a majority of the stock of another competing one cannot obtain control of its affairs, divert the income of its business, refuse business which would enable the defaulting company to pay its interest, and then institute an action in equity to enforce its obligations for the avowed purpose of obtaining entire control of its property to the injury of the minority stockholders.
4. Evidence that officers of a corporation, acting in the interest of another company which owned a majority of its stock, declined to accept business which would produce a fund with which to pay interest that was due, and diverted its income to other and improper purposes, whereby a default in the interest was occasioned, is admissible in defense of a foreclosure instituted on behalf of such other corporation as owner of a majority of the mortgage bonds.
5. Refusal to find facts material to sustain a defense, and which are established by undisputed evidence, is error.
6. The statutory right of a corporation to purchase stock of another company does not give it any right, as the owner of a majority of the stock and bonds of such company, to manage its affairs so as to cause a default on a mortgage, and obtain control of the property by foreclosure at less than its value to the injury of the minority stockholders.
7. A request to foreclose a mortgage, which must be made by the holders of $2,000,000 in amount of bonds, is not valid when made only by the holder of $1,700,000, who is not in fact the owner of them but holds them subject to the order of another, and who claims to represent the owners of other bonds for which the party he represents had a mere contract to purchase.

(October 26, 1894.)

APPPEAL by defendants Holmes and Pick from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Second Department, affirming a judgment of a special term for Westchester County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to foreclose a mortgage. Reversed.

NOTE.—As to how far a corporation may own stock in another company, see note to Buckeye Marble & F. Co. v. Harvey (Tenn.) 18 L. R. A. 252.

34 L. R. A.

Statement by Martin, J.:

This action was brought to foreclose a second mortgage upon the property of the New York & Northern Railway Company, made by it, and given to the plaintiff, as trustee, to secure the payment of second-mortgage bonds issued by that company, amounting to $3,200,000. This mortgage was made in pursuance of a plan for the reorganization of the predecessor of the New York & Northern Railway Company. The interest on the bonds for the first four years was payable only out of the net income, and no interest became due under the mortgage until June 1, 1892. It provided that no foreclosure could be had until the expiration of one year after default in the payment of the interest, and that then the plaintiff might, and upon the written request of the holders of two millions in amount of such bonds should, apply to a court having jurisdiction for a foreclosure and sale of the mortgaged premises. The capital stock of the New York & Northern Railway Company consisted of $3,000,000, par value, of common stock, and $6,000,000, par value, of preferred stock, making a total of $9,000,000. On July 20, 1893, Drexel, Morgan, & Co., claimed to own a portion and to represent the holders of another portion of the second mortgage bonds, which together amounted to more than $2,000,000, requested the plaintiff to take proceedings for the foreclosure of the mortgage, and under a provision in it to that effect, to declare the whole principal and interest secured thereby to be at once due and payable. None of the original defendants interposed any defense; but on October 5, 1893, on their own motion, the appellants were made parties defendant in the action, and served an answer. The appellants are stockholders of the New York & Northern Railway Company, representing about 20,000 shares of preferred and common stock, and appear in this action on their own behalf, and also on behalf of the holders of the other shares represented by them. In the answer, the appellants, with other defenses, in substance, allege that this action was brought in pursuance of an unlawful plan and combination by and between the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company and others acting for it, to render the stock of the New York & Northern Railway Company valueless, and to secure its property for the benefit of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company; that the latter, in order to carry such plan into effect, purchased a large number of the second-mortgage bonds, and also a majority of the stock of that company; that by virtue of its ownership of a majority of such stock, and preparatory to the foreclosure of the mortgage, it obtained and assumed control of the affairs of the New York & Northern Railway Company, by causing changes in its directory and officers so as to make them favorable to the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, thereby preventing the New York & Northern Railway Company from saving its default in payment of the interest then due, and from taking measures for its safety, or from resisting the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company's scheme to acquire its property by such foreclosure; that the railroad of the New York & Northern Railway Company was a parallel and competing road with the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, and that by the means already referred to, the latter company sought to secure the property of the former through such foreclosure for its own benefit, and at a price much less than its true value; that this was rendered possible by its acquiring a majority of the stock of that company, and thereby being able to control the affairs of the New York & Northern Railway Company, and to so manage its business in collusion with its directors and officers that its obligations could not be met or its default made good; that such acts on the part of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company were fraudulent, and prohibited by the laws of the state; and that the written request to the plaintiff asking for a foreclosure did not comply with the terms and provisions of the mortgage, as the persons making the request were not at the time holders of $2,000,000 of the bonds it was given to secure.

On the trial the defendants introduced in evidence the following letters and papers:

The New York Central and Hudson River R. Co. Principal Office.

Albany, N. Y., March 18th, 1893.

Circular letter to the stockholders in respect of according control of the New York and Northern Railway. The New York and Northern Railway extends from One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street, in the city of New York, occupying a line practically midway between this company's Hudson River Division and its Harlem Division, to Brewsters on the line of the latter, a distance of about 60 miles. It has a fine bridge across the Harlem river, and has within the bounds of the city of New York 8 miles of a 100-foot roadway, and it owns 33 acres of terminal property, also within the bounds of the city. The relation and value of this line to this company is too well known to require explanation. To acquire the control of it will cost this company about $4,000,000, and agreements in respect thereof have been entered into subject to the approval herein asked for. It is proposed, after the control is acquired, to enter into a lease with the present company, or perhaps with a company to be organized in its stead, under which this company will guarantee the principal and interest of $5,000,000 in 4 per cent 100-year gold bonds. Of this amount $4,000,000 will represent the cost of control, as above stated, and $1,000,000 will be reserved for developing, improving, and bettering the line. As will be seen by the form of notice at the top hereof, a special meeting of the stockholders of this company has been called, to be held on the 19th day of April next, to which meeting this matter will be submitted for approval and authorization. Accompanying this is the form of a proxy to be used at the meeting, which, when executed, may be returned to the undersigned in the same envelope with the proxies for other meetings which are sent herewith. What has been said in the other circular letters which go out with this in respect of the desirability of a full vote may be taken to apply, with equal force, to this present letter.

E. D. Worcester, Secretary.

34 L. R. A.

New York, April 3, 1893.

Drexel, Morgan, & Company.

E. V. W. Rossiter, Esq., Treasurer, New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company, Grand Central Depot, New York—Dear Sir:

We have paid out for the New York Central as follows:

$1,700,000 second mortgage bonds,
at 80.....	$1,360,000
2,500,000 preferred stock, at 85..	875,000
2,200,000 common stock, at 15....	330,000
Total.....	$2,565,000

Will you kindly send us your note dated April 1st for that amount, and oblige, yours, truly, Drexel, Morgan, & Company.

P. S. Equipment obligations and floating debt obligations have not yet been delivered. We will report later as to them.

D. M. & Co.

$2,565,000. New York April 1, 1893.

On demand upon ten days' notice after date, we promise to pay to the order of Drexel Morgan, & Company two million five hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars, with interest. Value received.

New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company.

Chauncey M. Depew, President.

E. V. W. Rossiter, Treasurer.

The indorsements were: August 1, 1893, interest paid to date; also $740,996 on account of principal of within. Also further indorsements of full payment, August 1, 1893, for $1,804,094.89.

New York, April 5, 1893.

E. V. W. Rossiter, Esq., Treas'r, N. Y. C. & H. R. R. Co., City—Dear Sir:

In payment for the following securities of the N. Y. & Northern R. R. Co., viz., $1,700,000 2d mtg. bonds, $2,500,000 preferred stock, $2,200,000 common stock, we have received from you a demand note, on ten days' notice, for $2,565,000, dated April 1st, 1893, and signed by Chauncey M. Depew, president, and E. V. W. Rossiter, treasurer of the N. Y. Central & H. R. R. Co. We hold the above-mentioned securities subject to your order.

Yours very truly,

Drexel, Morgan, & Co.

The following is a resolution of the stockholders of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, which was adopted at a stockholders' meeting held April 19, 1893:

Resolved, that the stockholders of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company hereby approve and authorize the acquirement, by purchase, of a controlling interest in the stock and bonds of the New York & Northern Railway Company, and approve and authorize the making of a lease with the company, or a company which shall be organized in its stead, of its railroad and property, and approve and authorize the guaranty under such lease of the principal and interest of $5,000,000 in 4 per cent 100-year gold bonds of the lessor company."

The report of the New York Central &

Hudson River Railroad Company to its stockholders, made June 4, 1898, was as follows:

At a special meeting held April 19, 1898, 640,878 shares of the capital stock of this company were voted in favor of a resolution approving and authorizing the acquirement, by purchase, of a controlling interest in the stock and bonds of the New York & Northern Railway Company, and approving and authorizing the making of a lease with that company (or a company which shall be organized in its stead) of its railroad property, and approving and authorizing the guaranty under such lease of the principal and interest of $5,000,000 in 4 per cent 100-year gold bonds of the lessor company.

The following note was also introduced in evidence:

$1,824,094.

August 1st, 1898.

On demand, upon ten days' notice after date, we promise to pay to the order of Drexel, Morgan, & Company one million eight hundred and twenty-four thousand and ninety-four dollars, with interest. Value received.

New York Central and Hudson River

Railroad Company,

Chauncey M. Depew, President.

E. V. W. Rossiter, Treasurer.

The indorsements upon this note showed payments in full, commencing August 2, 1898, and ending August 9.

A contract between Louis V. Bell and Henry K. McHarg was also introduced in evidence, which shows that on the 14th of July, 1898, the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company agreed to purchase from them, at the price or rate of 80 cents on the dollar, second mortgage bonds of the New York & Northern Railway Company of the par value of at least $750,000, to be paid for at that rate in the bonds of the company which should, at the time of their issue, be the owner of the railroad covered by such mortgage, and a part of an issue of $6,200,000, bearing interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum, payable 100 years from the date of the new bonds, and secured by a mortgage upon said mortgaged property, principal and interest to be guaranteed by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company; the purchase money to bear interest at 4 per cent from July 18, 1898, to be paid either by making the new bonds draw interest from that date, or by delivering to them bonds of the $5,000,000 issue, the par value of which should be equal to the interest from July 18; the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company to have the option to pay the purchase price in cash. The contract also provided that the bonds purchased might be used by Messrs. Drexel, Morgan, & Co. for the purpose of reorganizing the New York & Northern Railway Company.

The president of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company gave the following testimony: "I was aware of the notice sent by Drexel, Morgan, & Company to the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, and I acquiesced in having it sent. It was sent in pursuance of the general purpose expressed in our circular of March 18, 1898, and our statement of June 30, 1898, to our stockholders, to acquire control, by lease or otherwise, of the New York & Northern Railroad property."

84 L. R. A.

The evidence also disclosed that in October, 1898, the minority stockholders gave notice to the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, Drexel, Morgan, & Co., and Charles T. Barney that they were willing to contribute their proportion of the money necessary to pay or purchase the interest coupons for the nonpayment of which such foreclosure was being had, and asked them to contribute their proportion for a like purpose. To this the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company made no reply. Barney replied that the stock standing in his name was owned by someone else, while Drexel, Morgan, & Co. declined to act upon that proposition. That the New York & Northern Railway Company and the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company were duly organized, and that the plaintiff was a domestic corporation, were found as facts by the court. It also in substance found that the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company owns and operates railroads which are parallel or competing lines with the New York & Northern Railway; that the appellant Pick owned 100 shares of the capital stock of the New York & Northern Railway Company, and represented about 18,000 other shares of such capital stock, and the defendant Holmes owned 1,200 shares; and that the purchase of the bonds by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company was after default had been made in the payment of the interest thereon. The court also found that the plaintiff had received a written request, signed by the holders of more than $2,000,000 in amount of such bonds, requesting it to bring an action for the foreclosure and sale of the premises covered by such mortgage; that it was for the best interests of all concerned that all the property should be sold in one parcel, and a sale in any other way would be greatly to the detriment and injury of the parties interested in the railroad and its affairs; and that the rights of all the parties interested could be fully protected only by a sale of the mortgaged premises, property, and appurtenances as an entirety. As conclusions of law, the court held that there was due under said mortgage, for principal and interest, the sum of $3,453,511.11, and that the plaintiff was entitled to a judgment of foreclosure and sale.

Messrs. Simon Sterne and James C. Carter, with Messrs. Holmes & Adams, for appellants;

The Central company had no right to purchase the stock of the Northern company with a hostile intent toward that corporation. Such purchase entailed upon it active duties of protection and good faith; and its various acts, both of omission, in failing to call the stockholders together for the purpose of taking action to cure the default either by a voluntary assessment upon the stock or by any other of the numerous methods in which an insolvent railroad corporation can recover itself, and of commission in wilfully causing the continuance of the default by the repeated refusals of lucrative business offered and particularly in the direct blow to the Northern company's life dealt by the act of the Central company in requesting the trustee to declare the principal sum due and to commence foreclosure,—all done in defiance of such duties owed by it,—should be disregarded by a court of equity, and no benefit should be allowed to result to the wrongdoer by reason thereof.

Perry, Tr. §§ 166 et seq., 428-435.

The purchase of the bonds must be deemed to have been made on behalf of the Northern company at the price paid for the bonds, and the foreclosure must be set aside and the bondholders decreed to have an equitable lien on the property for the amount paid for the bonds,—a lien, however, which they cannot assert until they disengage themselves from the trust relation they have assumed.

Draper v. Gordon, 4 Sandf. Ch. 210; Slade v. Van Vechten, 11 Paige, 21, Quackenbush v. Leonard, 9 Paige 334; Lewin, Tr. 8th ed. 275.

When a person by the purchase of stock in a corporation becomes jointly interested with others in the property of such corporation he will not be permitted by any means to get the sole beneficial ownership of such property at the expense of other joint owners.

Jackson v. Ludeling, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 616, 23 L. ed. 492; Gamble v. Queens County Water Co. 123 N. Y. 91, 9 L. R. A. 527; Wright v. Oroville Gold, S. & C. Min. Co. 40 Cal. 20; Ervin v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 27 Fed. Rep. 625; Taylor v. Chichester & M. R. Co. L. R. 2 Exch. 379; Meeker v. Winthrop Iron Co. 17 Fed. Rep. 48; Cook, Stock & Stockholders, § 622; Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 529; Beach, Priv. Corp. § 70; 2 Bigelow, Fr. 1858, 645; Pearson v. Concord R. Co. 59 N. H. 85.

Community of interest produces a community of duty, and there is no real difference, on the ground of policy and justice, whether one cotenant buys an outstanding encumbrance or an adverse title to dispossess and expel his cotenant. It cannot be tolerated when applied to a common subject in which the parties had an equal concern, and which created a mutual obligation to deal candidly and benevolently with each other, and to cause no harm to their joint interests.

Van Horne v. Fonda, 5 Johns. Ch. 388; Swinburne v. Swinburns, 28 N. Y. 573; Densmore Oil Co. v. Denamore, 64 Pa. 48; Raker v. Humphrey, 101 U. S. 494, 25 L. ed. 1065; Carpenter v. Carpenter, 131 N. Y. 101; Mitchell v. Reed, 61 N. Y. 123, 19 Am. Rep. 252.

The purchase of the majority of the Northern company's stock imposed a duty upon the Central company, and it was a violation of that duty of which just complaint is made and out of which a court of equity will not allow the party in fault to make a profit.

Menier v. Hooper's Teleg. Works, L. R. 9 Ch. 850; Meeker v. Winthrop Iron Co. supra; Pacific R. Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 111 U. S. 506, 28 L. ed. 496; Pondir v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 72 Hun, 390; Colles v. Troy City Directory Co. 11 Hun, 397; Barr v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 96 N. Y. 444; Cook, Stock & Stockholders, § 659; Woodroff v. Howes, 88 Cal. 184; Gamble v. Queens County Water Co. supra; Hart v. Ogdensburg & L. C. R. Co. 89 Hun, 816; Sage v. Culver, 147 N. Y. 241.

The majority stockholders will not be permitted to mitted to inaugurate or sanction transactions resulting in injury to the interests of the minority stockholders or inconsistent with the original object of the formation of the corporation.

Ervin v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Fed. Rep. 577, 27 Fed. Rep. 625; Menier v. Hooper's Teleg. Works, supra; Meyer v. Staten Island R. Co. 7 N. Y. S. R. 245; Wheeler v. Pullman Iron & S. Co. 143 Ill. 197, 17 L. R. A. 818; Taylor, Corp. 3d ed. § 558, and cases cited; Gamble v. Queens County Water Co. supra; Aultman's Appeal, 98 Pa. 505; Thomp. Corp. § 4484; Waterman, Corp. § 71; Gregory v. Patchett, 33 Beav. 595; Mowrey v. Indianapolis & C. R. Co. 4 Biss. 78.

The Northern company was during the period in which the things complained of occurred under the control of the Central company, and was so dominated by that company that all its acts and omissions during that period were dictated by the Central company, which must be held responsible for them.

Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 115 U. S. 587, 29 L. ed. 499; Porter v. Pittsburgh Bessemer Steel Co. 120 U. S. 649, 30 L. ed. 880; Morris v. Tuthill, 72 N. Y. 575; Hayden v. Official Hotel Red Book & D. Co. 42 Fed. Rep. 875; Angle v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 151 U. S. 1, 68 L. ed. 55.

A party who by his own acts has prevented performance of a contract or brought about a forfeiture or default by another party cannot recover damages or compensation for the non-performance, nor can he complain of or in any way secure any advantage from the forfeiture or default which he has himself created.

Fleming v. Gilbert, 3 Johns. 528; Kidd v. Reiden, 19 Barb. 266; Taylor v. Risley, 23 Hun, 141; 3 Addison, Cont. 798; United States v. Peck, 102 U. S. 64, 26 L. ed. 46; Higgins v. Solomon, 2 Hall, 482; Farnham v. Ros. Id. 167; Young v. Hunter, 6 N. Y. 208; McCreery v. Day, 119 N. Y. 1, 6 L. R. A. 503; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 426; 8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 450; Sanders v. Pope, 13 Ves. Jr. 289; Hill v. Barclay, 18 Ves. Jr. 60; Angle v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. supra; Meeker v. Winthrop Iron Co. 17 Fed. Rep. 48.

The trustee of a railroad mortgage has no individual interest whatever, and only represents the holders of the bonds which such mortgage secures. He has therefore only such rights and equities with regard to the mortgaged property as have the bondholders themselves, and consequently any defense which would be available against the bondholders is equally available against the trustee when bringing an action to foreclose the mortgage for their benefit.

Kenicott v. Wayne County Supers. 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 452, 21 L. ed. 319; Union College v. Wheeler, 61 N. Y. 88; Indiana & I. C. R. Co. v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 756, 26 L. ed. 554; Tillinghast v. Troy & B. R. Co. 48 Hun, 420; 2 Perry, Tr. § 760; Williamson v. New Albany etc. R. Co. 1 Biss. 198.

A monopoly or anything savoring of or tending to promote a monopoly is against the policy of both law and equity.

People v. North River Sugar Ref. Co. 54 Hun, 370, 5 L. R. A. 886; Leslie v. Lorrillard, 110 N. Y. 519, 1 L. R. A. 456; Pennycania

R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 118 U. S. 290, 30 L. ed. 83; Pearson v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 646, 40 L. ed. 838.

The plaintiff had no authority or right to bring this foreclosure suit, it not having received a valid request so to do from a sufficient number of bondholders as contemplated by the mortgage.

While plaintiff had originally the right to bring this foreclosure proceeding without any request whatever, it not having exercised its option so to do, but having adopted the alternative course provided for by the mortgage, namely, to proceed upon the request of the holders of $2,000,000 of such bonds, proof of such request becomes an essential requisite, and the plaintiff is put to the necessity of showing that the request received by it was a valid one and complied with the terms of the mortgage.

Chicago, D. & V. R. Co. v. Foodick, 106 U. S. 47, 27 L. ed. 47.

Messrs. Ashbel Green, David McClure, and Thomas Thatcher, for respondent:

The railroad corporation was the only owner of the property. The shareholder in a corporation has no legal title to its property or profits until a division is made. The property of the corporation is not the property of its stockholders. Its rights are not their rights. They have only an indirect interest therein.

Hyatt v. Allen, 56 N. Y. 553, 15 Am. Rep. 449; Burrall v. Bushwick R. Co. 76 N. Y. 216; Jermoin v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 492; Davenport v. Dows, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 626, 21 L. ed. 938; Humphreys v. McKissack, 140 U. S. 804, 35 L. ed. 478; Porter v. Sabine, 149 U. S. 473, 37 L. ed. 815; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 115 U. S. 587, 29 L. ed. 499; Morgan v. Railroad Co. 1 Woods, 15; Sala v. New Orleans, 2 Woods, 196; Porter v. Pittsburgh Bessemer Steel Co. 120 U. S. 670, 30 L. ed. 838; McMullen v. Ritchie, 61 Fed. Rep. 253; Forbes v. Memphis, E. P. & P. R. Co. 2 Woods, 323.

It is questionable whether in any case where a suit is properly instituted against a corporation a stockholder of that corporation can, even on a suggestion of fraud on the part of its officers, come in by way of intervention as a party to that suit and seek to defend or control the proceedings.

Forbes v. Memphis, E. P. & P. R. Co. supra; Alexander v. Donohoe, 143 N. Y. 210; Little v. Bowers, 184 U. S. 547, 33 L. ed. 1016; Inglehart v. Stansbury, 151 U. S. 68, 33 L. ed. 76.

There is no rule of law or of equity requiring sale of a railroad in parcels. The policy of the law is to treat them as an entirety.

Cook, Stock & Stockholders, 1892, chap. 688, § 5; Muller v. Dows, 94 U. S. 449, 24 L. ed. 209; Hammock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 105 U. S. 77, 26 L. ed. 1111; Columbia Finance & T. Co. v. Kentucky U. R. Co. 60 Fed. Rep. 799, 22 U. S. App. 54; Macon & W. R. Co. v. Parker, 9 Ga. 877.

The trustee represents not only the requesting bondholders but all the bondholders, and when it is called to the attention of the trustees that a default has occurred entitling it to a foreclosure it must act then in behalf of all the bondholders in such a way as seems to it best.

34 L. R. A.

Hollister v. Stewart, 111 N. Y. 644; Shaw v. Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. 100 U. S. 613, 25 L. ed. 759; Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Texas C. R. Co. 137 U. S. 171, 34 L. ed. 625; Guaranty Trust & S. D. Co. v. Green Cove Springs & M. R. Co. 139 U. S. 187, 35 L. ed. 116.

The trustee was requested to foreclose by the holders of $2,000,000 of bonds.

Bowling v. Harrison, 47 U. S. 6 How. 248, 12 L. ed. 425; Smodes v. Bank of Utica, 20 Johns. 872.

There is no fiduciary relation between the Central company as a stockholder and other stockholders preventing it from enforcing the bonds which it held or requiring it to give to other stockholders the benefit of the purchase of bonds or to account to them for the profits.

Bird Coal & I. Co. v. Humes, 157 Pa. 278; Nickles v. Rochester City Bank, 11 Paige, 118, 42 Am. Dec. 103; Russell v. M'Lellan, 14 Pick. 63; Abbott v. Merriam, 8 Cush. 591; Gillett v. Bowen, 28 Fed. Rep. 625; Gamble v. Queens County Water Co. 123 N. Y. 91, 9 L. R. A. 527; Harpending v. Munson, 91 N. Y. 652; Leavenworth County Comrs. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 134 U. S. 688, 33 L. ed. 1064; Central Trust Co. v. Bridges, 57 Fed. Rep. 767, 16 U. S. App. 115; Fitzgerald & M. Constr. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 137 U. S. 110, 34 L. ed. 613.

A director may buy a claim against the company and enforce it for the full amount.

Inglehart v. Thousand Island Hotel Co. 83 Hun, 377.

If he holds a bond secured by mortgage he may purchase at the sale.

Preston v. Loughran, 58 Hun, 210; Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 23 L. ed. 329.

If an officer or director to whom the doctrine as to the dealings by an agent with the property of his principal is said to apply may so act, a fortiori may a stockholder who is under no such relation to the corporation or costockholders.

A mortgagee may buy an adverse claim against the mortgaged property.

Cornell v. Woodruff, 77 N. Y. 203; Porter v. Pittsburgh Bessemer Steel Co. 120 U. S. 670, 30 L. ed. 838; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 115 U. S. 587, 29 L. ed. 499.

Even a mortgagee cannot reform a mortgage which through mistake covers more property than was agreed to be covered. The money must be paid and thus the maxim be fulfilled that he who asks equity must first do equity.

Ames v. New Jersey Frankline Co., 12 N. J. Eq. 66, 72 Am. Dec. 385; Williams v. Fitzhugh, 37 N. Y. 451; Lewis v. Mott, 36 N. Y. 402; Halstead v. Schwartz, 1 Thomp. & C. 562; Morris v. Tuthill, 72 N. Y. 575.

A stockholder does not occupy a fiduciary relation so as to be accountable for profits of contracts made with the corporation.

Bird Coal & I. Co. v. Humes, 157 Pa. 278.

The purpose with which the bonds are held makes no difference as to the rights under the mortgage.

Morris v. Tuthill, supra.

A party is not debarred from the vindication of legal right because he is actuated by an improper motive.

Phelps v. Nowlen, 72 N. Y. 89, 28 Am. Rep.

33; Chenango Bridge Co. v. Paigs, 88 N. Y. 188, 38 Am. Rep. 407; Ramsey v. Erie R. Co. 8 Abb. Pr. N. S. 174; Ervin v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Fed. Rep. 579.

That the suit may work hardship is of no consequence.

Clinton v. Myers, 46 N. Y. 515, 7 Am. Rep. 373; Oglesby v. Attrill, 105 U. S. 605, 26 L. ed. 1186; Simpson v. Dall, 70 U. S. 3 Wall. 476, 18 L. ed. 267; Adler v. Penton, 65 U. S. 24 How. 407, 16 L. ed. 696.

The defendant Pick is a very recent holder of stock purchased presumably in order to defend this action and bound by the acquiescence of former holders of his shares.

Parsons v. Hayes, 18 Jones & S. 29; Mann v. Currie, 3 Barb. 294; Re Syracuse, C. & N. Y. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 1; Dimpfel v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 110 U. S. 210, 28 L. ed. 123.

The affairs of the Northern company were managed by its directors who were alone authorized to deal with the application of its earnings.

Beveridge v. New York Elev. R. Co. 112 N. Y. 1, 3 L. R. A. 648; Leslie v. Lorillard, 110 N. Y. 519, 1 L. R. A. 456; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 115 U. S. 587, 20 L. ed. 499.

The law does not presume that the board of directors or a majority of them will be unfaithful because they were elected by a person owning a majority of the stock.

Allen v. Wilson, 23 Fed. Rep. 678.

If the purchase were ultra vires that would not prevent title to the bonds from passing.

Holmes & G. Mfg. Co. v. Holmes & W. Metal Co. 127 N. Y. 252.

This defense is that the alleged owner has not legal capacity to hold. This is no business of the defendant mortgagor or any of its stockholders and no defense to the foreclosure.

Silver Lake Bank v. North, 4 Johns. Ch. 370; Steam Nav. Co. v. Weed, 17 Barb. 378; Humbert v. Trinity Church, 24 Wend. 630; Bogardus v. Trinity Church, 4 Sandf. Ch. 758.

The trial judge is only required to find upon material questions of fact submitted to him and involved in the evidence.

Callanan v. Gilman, 107 N. Y. 372; Stewart v. Moras, 79 N. Y. 629; Baldwin v. Doying, 114 N. Y. 455.

Mr. Sherman Evarts for respondents New York & Northern Railway Company et al.

Martin, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

That the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company purchased a majority of the second mortgage bonds and a majority of the stock of the New York & Northern Railway Company, for the sole purpose of obtaining control of the property of the latter, is clearly established by the proof contained in the record. Indeed, such was the avowed purpose of its purchase. The record renders it equally clear that the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company was the actual and beneficial owner of such bonds and stock for several months before the commencement of this action. They were retained in the hands of Drexel, Morgan, & Co., not as owners or holders in their own right, but as agents or naked trustees for the New York & Northern Railway Company.

Central & Hudson River Railroad, and were clearly subject to the order and control of the latter. Moreover, the request that Drexel, Morgan, & Co. made to the plaintiff to commence this action was not only based upon the bonds owned by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company and others it had contracted to purchase, but the sole purpose of that request was to procure a foreclosure, and thus enable the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company to acquire control of the property and franchises of the New York & Northern Railway Company for its own benefit, as set forth in the circular letter sent to the stockholders of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company. The president of the latter company himself testified that that was the object and purpose which induced the sending of the notice requesting the commencement of this action. The notice given by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company to its stockholders states the fact that on March 18, 1893, agreements had already been made in respect to the purchase of a controlling interest in the New York & Northern Railway Company, subject to the approval therein asked for. The letter of Drexel, Morgan, & Co. to the treasurer of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, dated April 5, 1893, shows that the majority of the stock and bonds mentioned therein was held by them, subject to the order of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, and that they had received the note of that company in payment therefor. Thus, it is obvious that this action was procured to be commenced by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, while it owned a majority of the stock and bonds of the New York & Northern Railway Company, for the sole and avowed purpose of obtaining control of its property and business, regardless of the rights of the minority stockholders or the owners of the remainder of the bonds. The appellants contend that the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, as such majority stockholder, also acquired the entire control of the affairs of the New York & Northern Railway Company through its board of directors, who were willing to serve the interests of those owning a majority of the stock, as was indicated by the resignation of three of the directors, the appointment of others in their places, by the resignation of two officers who occupied important positions in the affairs of that company, and by the appointment of two officers in their places, who were in the employ of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, to discharge the duties of such officers, and compensated for their services by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company. While the proof upon that question was not perhaps conclusive, yet the circumstances developed by the evidence plainly indicate that, after it became the owner of a majority of the stock and bonds, the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company dictated and governed the action of the board of directors, and controlled the management of the affairs of the New York & Northern Railway Company.

The facts already referred to are strong proof that the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company was in the control of the affairs of the New York & Northern Railway Company. It is hardly to be supposed that a board of directors which was not under the control of another corporation would appoint three of the friends of the president of that corporation as directors of the company, and place the officers of that company in control of its financial affairs, especially when it was the owner of competing lines of railroad. The clear and legitimate inference to be drawn from the circumstances proved in this case is that, after the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company purchased a majority of the stock and bonds of the New York & Northern Railway Company, it controlled its officers and directors as fully and completely as though they had been elected by its votes. All the facts and circumstances, so far as the defendants were permitted to prove them, tend to show that such was the situation. Indeed, it is a matter of common knowledge that, where the ownership of a majority of the stock of such a corporation changes, the board usually changes, unless its members are already in harmony with the policy of the purchasers.

On the trial the appellants sought to prove that after the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company became the owner of such stock and bonds, and while its officers were in substantial control of the New York & Northern Railway Company, they declined to accept traffic from other roads that would have produced a fund with which to pay the interest due on the bonds in question; that the income of the road which should have been employed to pay such interest was used for other and improper purposes; and that such action caused the inability of the New York & Northern Railway Company to pay the interest, and thus cure its default. This evidence was rejected as immaterial, and the appellants duly excepted.

In determining the correctness of the rulings made by the trial court, it becomes necessary to determine incidentally whether a corporation, purchasing a majority of the stock of another competing corporation, may thus obtain control of its affairs, cause it to divert the income from its business, or to refuse business which would enable it to pay the interest for which it was in default, and then institute an action in equity to enforce its obligations, for the purpose of obtaining control of its property at less than its value to the injury of the minority stockholders, and they have no remedy; or, in other words, whether a court of equity, with those facts established, would lend its aid to such a stockholder, by enforcing the mortgage and decreeing a foreclosure and sale of the mortgaged premises, at its request, in its behalf, and to accomplish such a purpose. If it would, then the rulings of the trial court were proper; if not, then the appellants were entitled to prove those facts, and it was error to reject the evidence.

In Gamble v. Queens County Water Co. 123 N. Y. 91, 9 L. R. A. 527, in discussing a similar question, Judge Peckham, in effect, said that, although it is not every question of mere administration or of policy upon which there might be a difference of opinion that would justify the minority in coming into a court of equity to obtain relief, yet, where the action of a majority of the stockholders of a corporation is fraudulent or oppressive to the minority shareholders, an action may be maintained by the latter, where the contemplated action of the majority is so far opposed to the interests of the corporation as to lead to a clear inference that such action is with an intent to serve some outside purpose, regardless of the consequences to the company and inconsistent with its interests. In Pondir v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 72 Hun, 385, 389, where the Erie Railroad Company, through the action of the Buffalo, Bradford, & Pittsburgh Railroad Company, whose directors were elected and controlled by the Erie Company, without consideration, obtained the property of the latter corporation, and so arranged its affairs as to render all the shares of its stock, other than those held by the Erie Company, valueless, it was held that a stockholder of the Buffalo, Bradford, & Pittsburgh Railroad Company might maintain an action to redress the wrong done to his company. In that case Mr. Justice Follett said: "This was a fraud on the Buffalo, Bradford, & Pittsburgh Railroad Company and its shareholders. Such frauds are not uncommon in the management of corporations, and when they are exposed should be condemned by the courts and a heavy hand laid upon all who participate in them." In Barr v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 96 N. Y. 444, where the officers of another corporation had leased the property of the first corporation, controlled a majority of its stock, and conspired to compel the minority to sell its stock by refusing to pay the rent due, it was held that a court of equity, on the application of the minority, would compel the payment of the rent; and that, where the majority of the stockholders of a corporation are illegally pursuing a course which is in violation of the rights of the other stockholders, an action to obtain equitable relief may be maintained by an aggrieved stockholder. Sage v. Cutver, 147 N. Y. 241, is to the effect that, when it can be fairly gathered that the officers and directors of a corporation have made use of relations of trust and confidence to secure or promote some selfish interest, it is enough to set a court of equity in motion, and to require them to explain such a transaction which there is a presumption against in equity. In Meyer v. Staten Island R. Co. 7 N. Y. S. R. 245, it was held that a majority of the stockholders of a corporation would not be permitted to sanction a transaction which is the outcome of a scheme, dishonest or fraudulent in its inception, and that the minority stockholders have rights which under such circumstances must be recognized; that the majority may legally control the company's business, but, in assuming such control, they take upon themselves the correlative duty of diligence and good faith; and that they cannot manipulate the company's business in their own interests, to the injury of the minority stockholders. In Ervin v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 27 Fed. Rep. 630, it was held that when a number of stockholders combine to constitute themselves a ma-majority, to control the corporation as they see fit; they become, for all practical purposes, the corporation itself, and assume the trust relation of the corporation towards its stockholders; and if they seek to make profit out of it, at the expense of those whose rights are the same as their own, they are unfaithful to the relation they have assumed, and guilty, at least, of constructive fraud, which a court of equity will remedy. In Wright v. Oroville Gold, S. & C. Min. Co. 40 Cal. 20, it was, in substance, held that in dealing with the relations between a corporation and its officers, on one hand, and the stockholders, upon the other, in the management of the corporate affairs, courts of equity will look beyond the mere observance of the forms of law, and inquire if the authority has been in good faith exercised to promote the interests of the stockholders; and that a court of equity will, at the instance of a stockholder, control the corporation and its officers, and restrain them from doing acts even within the scope of the corporate authority, if such acts would amount to a breach of the trust upon which the authority had been conferred. In Meeker v. Winthrop Iron Co. 17 Fed. Rep. 48, it was held that a majority of the holders of the capital stock of a corporation could not, by their votes in a stockholders' meeting, lawfully authorize its officers to lease its property to themselves, or to another corporation formed for the purpose, and exclusively owned by them, unless such lease was made in good faith, and supported by an adequate consideration; and that in a suit, properly prosecuted, to set aside such a contract, the burden of proof, showing fairness and adequacy, is upon the party or parties claiming thereunder. In Goodin v. Cincinnati & W. Canal Co. 18 Ohio St. 169, a railroad company purchased a majority of the shares of stock in a canal company, elected for the latter a board of directors who were in the interest of the railroad company, and then, with the assent of such board, appropriated the entire canal and property of the canal company as a railroad track, paying therefor a price or compensation which was agreed upon by the directors of the two companies, but which was far below the actual value of the property. Under those circumstances the court held that, although the stockholders and creditors of the canal company could not, after the road had been completed, reclaim the property, or enjoin its use, yet they were not concluded by such agreement as to the price of the property, but might compel the railroad company to account for its additional value. In Jackson v. Ludeling, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 616, 23 L. ed. 493, it was held that the managers and officers of a company where capital is contributed in shares are in a very legitimate sense trustees, alike for its stockholders and its creditors, though they may not be trustees technically and in form. They, accordingly, have no right to enter into or participate in any combination the object of which is to divest the company of its property, and obtain it for themselves at a sacrifice. They have no right to seek their own profit at the expense of the company, its stockholders, or even its bondholders. In case of embarrassment to the company, and any necessity to sell the estates of the company, it is their duty to the extent of their power, to secure for all those whose interests are in their charge the highest possible price for the property which can be obtained. In Menier v. Hooper's Teleg. Works, L. R. 9 Ch. 350, it was held that, where a majority of a company proposed to benefit themselves at the expense of the minority, the court might interfere to protect the minority, and that in such a case the bill is rightly filed by one shareholder on behalf of the others, and against the company. In Gregory v. Patchett, 33 Beav. 595, where the only available property of a company was transferred to two shareholders in lieu of their shares, and the company was thereby practically put to end, and this was sanctioned by a majority of the shareholders at a general meeting, it was held that a majority could not bind the minority in such a transaction; that where measures were adopted which were plainly beyond the powers of the company, and inconsistent with the objects for which the company was constituted, the court, at the instance of the minority, would interpose to prevent the performance of such an act.

While the opinions in the cases cited are instructive, and have an important bearing upon the question under consideration, still, within the limits of this opinion, we have found it impracticable to quote from the language of the courts in those cases. "The law requires of the majority of the stockholders the utmost good faith in their control and management of the corporation as regards the minority, and in this respect the majority stand in much the same attitude towards the minority that the directors sustain towards all the stockholders. Thus, where the majority are interested in another corporation, and the two corporations have contracts between them, it is fraudulent for that majority to manage the affairs of the first corporation for the benefit of the second. A court of equity will intervene and protect the minority, upon an application by the latter." 2 Cook, Stock & Stockholders, 8d ed. § 662, p. 945. The same principle is stated in 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 2d ed. § 529; 1 Beach, Priv. Corp. § 70; 2 Bigelow, Fr. § 645, and Beach, Mod. Eq. Jur. §§ 182, 686. Hackettstown Nat. Bank v. D. G. Yuengling Brewing Co. 20 C. C. A. 827, 74 Fed. Rep. 110, is to the effect that every delegation of power implies that it will be honestly exercised, and in that case it was held that the evidence offered upon the trial presented a question of fact for the jury whether a consent, given in pursuance of a resolution passed by a majority of the bondholders of a corporation, extending the time of payment of the principal and interest of its bonds, was given in good faith, in the common interest of all, or amounted to an unwarranted exercise of the power of the majority, because given in the interest of one bondholder, with a view of enabling him to compel the minority bondholders to sell their bonds on such terms as he might dictate. While the question in some of the cases cited arose between stockholders and the directors and officers of a company who, as such, held a position of trust as to the former, still where, as in this case, a majority of the stock is owned by a corporation or a combination of individuals, and it assumes the control of another company's business and affairs through its control of the officers and directors of the corporation, it would seem that for all practical purposes, it becomes the corporation of which it holds a majority of stock, and assumes the same trust relation towards the minority stockholders that a corporation itself usually bears to its stockholders, and therefore, under such circumstances, the rule stated in the Sage Case and other similar cases applies to majority stockholders who control the affairs of the company, as well as to its directors or officers. It is a controlling maxim that a court of equity will not aid parties in the perpetration or consummation of a fraud, nor give any assistance whereby either of the parties connected with the betrayal of a trust can derive any advantage therefrom. Farley v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 4 McCrary, 188, 14 Fed. Rep. 114. "It is a sound principle that he who prevents a thing being done shall not avail himself of the nonperformance he has occasioned." Fleming v. Gilbert, 3 Johns. 528, 531; United States v. Peck, 102 U. S. 84, 26 L. ed. 46; Dolen v. Rogers, 149 N. Y. 491.

The principle of these authorities renders it quite obvious that a corporation, purchasing a majority of the stock of another competing one, cannot obtain control of its affairs, divert the income of its business, refuse business which would enable the defaulting company to pay its interest, and then institute an action in equity to enforce its obligations, for the avowed purpose of obtaining entire control of its property, to the injury of the minority stockholders. Such a course of action is clearly opposed to the true interests of the corporation itself, and plainly discloses that one thus acting was not influenced by any honest desire to secure such interests, but that its action was to serve an outside purpose, regardless of consequences to the debtor company, and in a manner inconsistent with its interest and the interest of its minority stockholders.

The respondents, however, contend that the doctrine of the authorities cited is not controlling in this case, but that the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company had a right to purchase a majority of the stock and bonds of the New York & Northern Railway Company, for the express purpose of obtaining control of the affairs of the latter for its own use and benefit, and to thus acquire its property at less than its actual value, to the injury of the minority stockholders; and that such stockholders had no remedy, in law or in equity, to protect themselves against such action of the majority stockholders, although it diverted the income which should have been applied to the payment of such interest to other and improper purposes, and refused business which would have enabled the defaulting company to pay its interest. In other words, the claim of the respondents is, and the general term in effect held, that the purpose for which the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company obtained a majority of the stock and bonds of the New York & Northern Railway Company is entirely immaterial, and that, notwithstanding the existence of such a purpose, a court of equity will aid them in enforcing the mortgage. To sustain this contention, they cite Morris v. Tuthill, 72 N. Y. 575; 34 L. R. A.

Phelps v. Nowlen, Id. 89, 28 Am. Rep. 93; Chenango Bridge Co. v. Paige, 83 N. Y. 178, 88 Am. Rep. 407; Ramsey v. Erie R. Co. 8 Abb. Pr. N. S. 174; Clinton v. Myers, 46 N. Y. 511, 7 Am. Rep. 373; Simpson v. Dall, 70 U. S. 8 Wall. 476, 18 L. ed. 267; Oglesby v. Attrill, 105 U. S. 605, 26 L. ed. 1186; Adler v. Fenton, 65 U. S. 24 How. 407, 16 L. ed. 696; and Beveridge v. New York Elec. R. Co. 112 N. Y. 1, 2 L. R. A. 648. In Morris v. Tuthill the action was to foreclose a mortgage brought by an assignee. There was no question or principle of trust involved in that case. The plaintiff owed the defendant no duty, and hence it was held that under such circumstances the plaintiff had a right to maintain an action for the foreclosure of the mortgage, although he took title to it from motives of malice, and the assignor assigned the mortgage to him from a like motive. That that case was correctly decided we have no doubt, but it is clearly distinguishable in principle from the case at bar, and has no bearing whatever upon the question under consideration. In the Phelps Case it was held that a party was not liable for the consequences of an act done upon his own land, lawful in itself, which did not infringe upon any lawful right of another, simply because he was influenced in doing it by wrong and malicious motives, and that courts would not inquire into the motives actuating a person in the enforcement of a legal right. How the doctrine of that case is applicable to the question involved in this it is difficult to perceive. In that case the party simply exercised a lawful right, and the court held that no liability arose from his having done so. There the plaintiff owed the defendant no duty, and sustained no relation of trust towards him, and hence it is clearly distinguishable from the case at bar. The same may be said of Chenango Bridge Co. v. Paige, Ramsey v. Erie R. Co., Clinton v. Myers, Simpson v. Dall, Oglesby v. Attrill, and Adler v. Fenton. We do not think these cases in any way aid the respondents. In the Beveridge Case this court held that all the powers conferred upon a corporation, unless otherwise expressly prescribed, must be exercised by its directors, who are constituted by law the agency for that purpose; that the consent or ratification by its stockholders was unnecessary, unless required by statute or its by-laws, and therefore that contracts which a corporation may legitimately make may be made by its board of directors, and, in the absence of fraud or collusion on the part of the directors, they are binding upon the corporation; that an appeal to equity on the part of the stockholders to be relieved from the acts of the directors, where they were within their powers, and apparently uninfluenced by corrupt motives or personal interests adverse to those of the stockholders, should, at least, be justified by some showing that the acts were improper, within the belief of a fair proportion of the stockholders. The principle enunciated and the decision made in that case are undoubtedly correct; but the question as to the right of a majority of the stockholders of a corporation to enforce its obligations as against the minority stockholders to their injury, by reason of a default caused by the wrongful act or omission of the majority, was not considered or in any way involved. It, however, seems to recognize the principle that, where there is fraud or collusion, corrupt motives, or personal interest adverse to the stockholders, another rule would apply. As we have already seen, there are circumstances under which the majority stockholders occupy substantially the same relation of trust towards the minority as the board of directors would occupy towards the stockholders it represents, and hence, where there are corrupt motives, personal interest, or fraud, the case cited is an authority to sustain the conclusion which we have already reached.

That any person or corporation authorized to do so might have purchased the bonds of the New York & Northern Railway Company, and have rigorously enforced them by a sale of its property, there can be no doubt. They might also have purchased the stock of the company, and thus have become the owners of both, and, while such owners, might have enforced the liability of the company upon its bonds, so long as they acted in good faith and their purpose was proper. But when the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company purchased the stock and bonds in question, thus obtaining a controlling interest in the affairs of the New York & Northern Railway Company, for the avowed purpose of destroying it, to serve a purpose entirely outside of that for which it was organized, and in hostility to it, it becomes clear that, as such stockholder, it owed a duty to the minority stockholders; that the law implied a quasi trust upon its part; and that a court of equity will not aid it in the destruction of that corporation, and a confiscation of its property, although it held a majority of its stock and the required amount of its bonds. Hence we are of the opinion that the court erred in rejecting, as immaterial, evidence offered by the appellants to show that after the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company became the owner of a majority of the stock and bonds of the New York & Northern Railway Company, and while its officers were in control of the latter corporation and its affairs, it declined to accept traffic from other roads, which would have produced a fund with which to pay the interest that was due; that the income of the road, which should have been employed to pay such interest, was used for other and improper purposes; and that such action upon the part of the majority stockholder occasioned the inability of the company to pay the interest and cure the default. To the rejection of this evidence the defendants excepted. We think many of these rulings were erroneous, and that the appellants had the right to make the proof offered, so far as it related to the transaction of the business of the New York & Northern Railway Company during the time the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company owned a majority of its stock, and controlled its affairs; and for the error in those rulings the judgment should be reversed.

On the trial the learned trial judge refused to find various facts, upon the ground that they were immaterial. It is manifest from an examination of the appellants' requests to find, and the rulings of the court thereon, that it refused to find many facts that were material to sustain the appellants' defense, and which were established by the undisputed evidence in the case. This, we think, constituted error, as it is the duty of a trial judge to find upon every material question submitted to him and involved in the evidence. Callanan v. Gilman, 107 N. Y. 860, 372.

The respondent claims that, by virtue of the provisions of § 40 of the stock corporation law, the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company had the right to acquire the stock of the New York & Northern Railway Company. We do not deem it necessary to either discuss or decide that question, for, if it be admitted that the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company was authorized to purchase such stock and bonds, still nothing will be found in the statute which authorizes it to employ them for the purpose of destroying the property of the New York & Northern Railway Company, to the injury of its minority stockholders. If we are correct in our conclusion that a corporation cannot acquire the majority of the stock of another corporation, obtain control of its affairs, divert the income of its business, refuse business which would have enabled the defaulting company to pay its interest, and then institute an action in equity to enforce its obligations against such company, with the avowed purpose of obtaining control of its property at less than its value to the injury of the minority stockholders, then it follows that this question is entirely immaterial. If the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company had a right to purchase the stock and bonds of the New York & Northern Railway Company, it obtained no better title and secured no greater right than any other stockholder would have acquired under a similar purchase. The right to purchase, even if given by statute, conferred upon the purchaser no authority to employ the stock and bonds for purposes condemned by the principles of equity.

The appellants also contend that the plaintiff had no authority or right to bring this action in the form in which it was brought, as it had not received a valid request to do so from a sufficient number of bondholders. The mortgage provides: "In the event of any of the defaults mentioned in the next preceding article, the party of the second part may, and, upon the written request of the holders of $2,000,000 in amount of said bonds then outstanding and unpaid or unredeemed, the party of the second part shall apply to any court having proper jurisdiction in the premises for a foreclosure and sale of the mortgaged premises." The plaintiff, in its complaint, alleged that it had received a written request, signed by the holders of more than $2,000,000 in amount of said bonds outstanding and unpaid or unredeemed, requesting it to bring proceedings for the foreclosure and sale of the property and premises covered by this mortgage. The only request which was made to the trustee was that made by Drexel, Morgan, & Co., who stated therein that they were the holders of $1,700,000, and represented the owners of $896,000 of such bonds. It was upon this request alone that the action was instituted. The proof tends to show that, although bonds to the amount of $1,700,000 were in their hands, yet that they were not in fact the owners of such bonds, but they belonged to the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company. The proof also tends to show that the other bonds which they claimed to represent were not owned by Drexel, Morgan, & Co., but were bonds which the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company had made a contract to purchase. Thus, we have a request for foreclosure by a firm who, in fact, was not the owner of any portion of the bonds upon which the request was based. It is true that $1,700,000 of the bonds were in their possession, but it clearly appears from the evidence they had been purchased and paid for by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, and were held by them subject to its order. It is also true that the contract with the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company for the purchase of the other bonds referred to in such request contained a provision that they might be used by Drexel, Morgan, & Co. for the purpose of reorganizing the New York & Northern Railway Company. Without any lengthy discussion of this question, it would seem that the purpose of this provision in the mortgage was to prevent the trustee from being compelled to foreclose the mortgage except upon the request of the owners of $2,000,000 in amount of the bonds. If such was its purpose, and such is a proper construction of that provision of the mortgage, then, manifestly, the request was insufficient, as it was not thus made.

It is, however, contended that, inasmuch as the plaintiff had the right of its own motion or in its discretion to commence this action without any request whatever, it follows that the action, having been commenced, was properly begun, and the appellant's contention cannot be sustained. The mortgage provides for two cases in either of which the action might be properly commenced. The trustee might act upon its own motion, and exercise its own judgment and discretion upon the question whether it was for the interest of the bondholders and all concerned to have the mortgage foreclosed; and, if it so determined it might institute an action for its foreclosure, although no request whatever was made. On the other hand, it might be required to institute such an action upon the written request of the owners of $2,000,000 of the bonds, notwithstanding the fact that it might be opposed to such a course, and it was contrary to its judgment. One provision is permissive only, while the other is mandatory. It does not necessarily follow, because the plaintiff might have instituted this action in the exercise of its discretion, but was induced to bring it, relying upon a request that was invalid, that it may now be upheld upon the ground that it possessed a discretion which it never exercised. The action was brought upon the theory that the holders of $2,000,000 of the bonds had made a proper written request upon the plaintiff to commence it. Such having been the original character of the action, as indicated by the complaint, can it now be said that, although no proper request was made, yet the action may be maintained, because the plaintiff might, in its discretion, have determined to bring the action, although there had been no request. It would seem that under the provision of the mortgage permitting the plaintiff to bring this action, to some extent, at least, the question whether or not it would foreclose the mortgage, and declare the whole amount due, was one of judgment and discretion to be exercised by it before the commencement of the action. Not having voluntarily sought to thus enforce the obligations of the company, but having had served upon it a request which purported to be signed by the holders of $2,000,000 of the bonds, and having commenced the action in pursuance of that request, we regard it as at least doubtful if it can now be maintained upon the ground that it was voluntarily commenced by the plaintiff if the request was invalid. But it is, perhaps, unnecessary to determine that question.

84 L. R. A.

There are several other questions raised by the appellants, but, as the judgment must be reversed for the errors already pointed out, it is unnecessary to discuss or determine them.

The consideration of the questions involved in the case has led us to the conclusions that the learned trial judge erred (1) in refusing to find material facts upon the ground that they were immaterial; (2) in declining to find other facts which were material, and established by the uncontradicted evidence; (3) in rejecting as immaterial evidence offered by the appellants tending to show that the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, while in control of the affairs of the New York & Northern Railway Company, declined to accept traffic from other roads, which would have produced a fund with which to pay the interest due upon the bonds in suit; and (4) in rejecting as immaterial evidence to show that the income of the road, which should have been employed to pay the interest on such bonds, was used for other and improper purposes.

We think the judgment should be reversed, and a new trial granted, with costs to abide the event.

All concur, except Andrews, Ch. J., and Gray, J., not voting.

FLORIDA SUPREME COURT.

Mathew PRINE, Appt.,

v.

Lucy PRINE.

(36 Fla. 576.)

*1. Our statute in reference to the allowance of alimony to a wife in cases where she is a party defendant refer exclusively to cases of divorce. Where the suit is brought by the putative husband to obtain a decree declaring the marriage void ab initio, a court of chancery has power to grant alimony to the putative wife, independent of the statute, and as incident of the jurisdiction of the court in such cases.

*2. In a suit brought by a husband against a putative wife to annul the marriage relation, where the fact of marriage is prima facie established, and the husband has means wherewith to live and to litigate, and the wife is destitute, the husband must furnish the wife the means of subsistence while the suit is pending, and to enable her to maintain her defense. The allowance in such a case upon a proper showing, of temporary alimony, counsel fees, and suit money to the wife while the suit is

*Headnotes by LIDDON, J.

NOTE.—Effect of intoxication on marriage.

The rule laid down in the principal case, that a marriage by one who at the time is so much intoxicated as to be non compos mentis, and does not know what he is doing, and is for the time deprived of reason, is invalid, but is valid if the intoxication is of a less degree, though perhaps more strict than the doctrine applicable to contracts in general as affected by intoxication, is not unsupported by authority, a number of cases requiring intoxication to amount to or be equivalent to actual insanity to invalidate a marriage.

Thus, the intoxication which will invalidate a marriage must have been such as to deprive the party of all sense of volition and to render him incapable of knowing what he is about. Roblin v. Roblin, 28 Grant, Ch. (U. C.) 490.

And insanity which does not render the party non compos does not disqualify him for marriage. Leggett v. O'Brien, Milw. Eccl. Rep. 323.

So, insanity from delirium tremens at the time is sufficient to avoid a contract of marriage. Clement v. Mattison, 3 Rich. L. 98.

And the question whether a party to a marriage was really insane from delirium tremens, or only intoxicated, in an action involving the validity of the marriage, is a question of fact for the jury. Ibid.

But a marriage is valid, though the husband was suffering from delirium tremens at the time, when it took place during a lucid interval and he was able to discuss and arrange the terms of the marriage settlement. Scott v. Paquett, 17 Low. Can. R. 238.

And the drunkenness of a party to a marriage, though induced by persons having an interest, by discreditable arts, and even though of such a degree as to render him unable to comprehend and understand the nature and obligation of the engagement and relation he was entering into, is not insanity within the meaning of the provision of the Delaware Revised Code, giving the superior court sole cognizance to decree marriages null and void when either of the parties was at the time insane. Elzey v. Elzey, 1 Houst. (Del.) 308.

So, a marriage is not rendered invalid by the fact pending in the appellate court, is not an exercise of original jurisdiction, but is essential to the proper and impartial administration of justice in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction.

*3. In order for an appellate court to make an allowance of alimony, counsel fees, and suit money while the case is pending in such court, it should have some other proof than that taken in the court of original jurisdiction, when a similar application was made to and granted by such court. Such relief in an appellate court is not a matter of course, and can only be granted upon proof made in such appellate court showing the continuance of the necessities of the wife, and also the ability of the husband. (Liddon, J., agreeing to this headnote so far as it relates to counsel fees and suit money, but not as to alimony.)

*4. This court will not reverse the decree of the circuit court as being against the evidence where the evidence is conflicting upon the subject of the mental capacity of one who enters into a marriage contract, where there is sufficient evidence, if believed, to show that the party was not deprived of the use of his reasoning faculties at such time, and where the uncontradicted evidence shows that the party has repeatedly since the marriage ratified the same by cohabitation with the other party thereto.

that the husband had been found an habitual drunkard by inquisition and a committee of his estate appointed, though a contract for the payment of money in consideration of the marriage would be thereby invalidated. Imhoff v. Witmer, 31 Pa. 243.

And an adjudication of the probate court that a person was incapable of taking care of himself or of his property by reason of intemperance or habitual drunkenness, appointing a guardian of his person and property, is prima facie only, and not conclusive, evidence of his want of capacity to contract marriage. McCleary v. Barcalow, 6 Ohio C. C. 481.

And one who relies upon insanity of a temporary nature, like intoxication which comes and goes with the exciting cause, to invalidate a marriage, must show its existence and operation at the very time the ceremony is pronounced. Leggett v. O'Brien, supra.

In Johnston v. Brown, 2 Shaw & D. 437, however, it was held that a marriage is invalid and will be set aside where it is proved that the woman married was in such a state of stupefaction, occasioned by intoxication, at the time as to be incapable of giving a rational consent, or of understanding what she did.

But a marriage entered into while the man was so intoxicated as to be incapable of understanding what he was about is voidable only and not void, and may be ratified and confirmed. Roblin v. Roblin, 28 Grant, Ch. (U. C.) 490.

And a memorandum indorsed on the record by the defendant, in an action brought for necessities furnished to a woman alleged to be his wife, for expenses incurred in the burial of her child, in which the validity of the marriage was put in issue, in which he admitted its existence and validity and consented to a verdict for the plaintiff, is a sufficient ratification and confirmation of the marriage claimed to have been invalid on the ground of his intoxication at the time. Ibid.

The effect of intoxication as a ground of divorce from a marriage which was valid when made is not here considered, but will be treated in a separate note.

F. H. B.

5. If a party at the time of entering into a marriage contract is so much intoxicated as to be non compos mentis, and does not know what he is doing, and is for the time deprived of reason, the marriage is invalid; but is not invalid if the intoxication is of a less degree than that stated.
6. A marriage invalid at the time for want of mental capacity of one of the parties thereto may be ratified and made valid afterwards by any acts or conduct which amount to a recognition of the same.

(December 19, 1893.)

A PPEAL by complainant from a decree of the Circuit Court for Duval County in favor of defendant in a proceeding to annul a marriage. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Henderson & Raney for appellant.

Mr. M. C. Jordan for appellee.

Liddon, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant filed his bill in chancery against the appellee in the circuit court to set aside a marriage between them. The grounds upon which the said marriage was sought to be nullified were, that on the 14th day of February, A. D. 1893, the day when the marriage ceremony was performed, and for some days previous thereto, the complainant was and had been in a state of intoxication from the use of ardent spirits; that he was deprived of his reason, and in such mental condition that he did not know what he was about, and was to all intents and purposes non compos mentis, and that the defendant took advantage of his condition and proceeded to have the marriage ceremony performed; that complainant repudiated the transaction as soon as he became sober enough to realize what had happened, and has ever since refused in any manner, shape, or form to recognize it, and has never since lived or in any manner cohabited with the defendant, and would never cohabit with her because she had for years previous to said marriage been a person of notorious bad character and reputation. The prayer of the bill was, that such marriage be declared null and void ab initio.

The answer of the defendant admitted the marriage, and emphatically and specifically denied all the allegations of the bill as to the intoxication of complainant and his mental condition at the time of the marriage ceremony, and that defendant took any fraudulent or unfair advantage of him, or that he was in any such condition that defendant could have taken any such advantage of him in having the marriage ceremony performed. The answer alleges that at the time of the marriage ceremony the complainant was perfectly sober and compos mentis; that she did not procure the performance of said marriage ceremony, but remained passive while the complainant procured the same. The answer alleges that the complainant knew before and at the time of the marriage that the defendant had not been of chaste character, and sets out in considerable detail the circumstances of the courtship and marriage of the parties. The answer also emphatically denied that the complainant had refused to recognize the marriage, or had repudiated the same; but, on the contrary, expressly alleged that the defendant had in many ways ratified such marriage and consummated the same by cohabitation. The details of acts constituting such ratification and cohabitation were fully set out in the answer. Among other things upon these points it is alleged that after the marriage the complainant took the wedding party to a dwelling house owned by him, and asked defendant how she would like it for a home, and after her inspection of the house and expressing satisfaction, gave her the keys, and instructed her to move her household goods at once to the same, which should be their future home, and during the same day in company with defendant and the wedding party of four persons all told went to his bank where he drew $25 and gave to the defendant to defray the expenses of such removal; that the wedding party rode around in a carriage and enjoyed themselves until it was too late to remove to the house agreed upon on the day of the marriage but complainant and defendant agreed that such removal should take place the next day. The answer alleges that the complainant cohabited with and spent the night succeeding the day of the marriage and the next afternoon with the defendant, and that on the night of the 16th of February, two days after the marriage, the parties cohabited and spent the night, or the greater part of the same, together in the house of one Carrie Williams. The answer also alleges that the defendant when she married "then and there resolved and determined to make the complainant a good and faithful wife, and turning her back to the past, to live a better life," and that she is in destitute circumstances, poor and without the means of subsistence, unable to obtain any employment or earn anything by her own labor, as all lawful avenues for a livelihood are barred against her, and that it seems to be the purpose of complainant to drive her into the paths of evil and vice by starvation, neglect, and cruelty; that complainant was possessed of considerable property, both real and personal, from which he derives an income of about $500 per month; that defendant has no means of employing counsel or defraying the expenses of maintaining her defense; that she relies upon the court to award her temporary alimony and suit money, including counsel fees, to enable her to meet the complainant upon equal ground.

To this answer complainant filed a general replication. Further proceedings were had in which the case was referred to a master to take testimony and report as to the amount proper to be allowed the defendant as temporary alimony and counsel fees. The report was filed and exceptions thereto overruled, the master's recommendations adopted, and defendant allowed $15 per week alimony pendente lite, and $100 counsel fees. No argument is made upon this matter, and greater detail of statement of it need not be given. Voluminous evidence upon this subject, of reasonableness of attorney's fees, and the issues in the case, appear in the record. The final decree of the court dismissed complainant's bill at his costs, and directed that the complainant pay the defendant $300 for the services of her solicitor in defending said cause in her behalf. From this decree complainant appealed.

After the case was brought here upon appeal the appellee filed her petition and motion thereon for an order requiring appellant to pay her the sum of $15 per week as temporary alimony, as was decreed in the lower court to be reasonable, and such other sum as the court should deem reasonable, and also to pay her costs of said motion and other costs and solicitor's fees. The petition for reasons why the relief prayed for should be granted, in substance, alleged that appellee was without means of support; that she had no property or resources by which she could maintain herself or employ counsel during the pendency of the cause in this court; that in the circuit court an order was made, after testimony taken on both sides by a special master, allowing her $15 per week for alimony, and counsel fees; that by reason of the appeal to this court only a portion of said alimony and counsel fees had been paid; that the appellee, as will appear by the testimony taken in the cause, and in the record in this court, is a man possessed of large means and resources, and is amply able to support her, and to pay a reasonable solicitor's fee to enable her to maintain her defense in this case. The appellant filed an answer resisting the petition upon the ground alleged, that the appellee has ever since the rendition of the final decree by the circuit court on the 23d of February, 1893, and still continues to lead, a lewd life, and has supported and still continues to support herself through and by means of such lewdness. The answer also alleged that the allowance by the circuit court of alimony and counsel fees was excessive and should not be taken as a basis for allowances pending the appeal. To this answer the appellee filed a replication emphatically denying all the material allegations of the answer as to her lewdness. This replication also alleged the great want and destitution of appellee, and contained recriminatory allegations to the effect that the complainant had, ever since his appeal was taken to, this court, vigorously endeavored to prevent the appellee from living an honest and virtuous life, and constantly pursued her with designs of driving her into a life of prostitution. The details of such general allegations are set out in the replication, but are unnecessary to be stated here. At the time of filing the replication, appellee also filed an affidavit alleging her destitution, and denying that she leads, or has lead, a lewd life as alleged in the answer.

The petition for alimony, being preliminary and ancillary to the main suit, is pressed by appellee so that it in natural order would come on for disposition before the main suit is reached upon the docket. As it seemed to us necessary, in order to properly dispose of this branch of the case, to examine the whole record, we have determined to dispose of the whole case in one opinion—the appeal as well as the petition for alimony and counsel fees. We are of opinion that the decree of the court below should be affirmed, but a majority of the court think that alimony pendente lite should not be granted in this court. Least there be some misapprehension of our position in the matter, we will state as briefly as the novelty and importance of the questions will admit those conclusions upon which the court is united, as well as those upon which it is divided. We are agreed upon all propositions announced except when otherwise expressly stated. We will first touch upon the power of the court to grant alimony in a nullity suit. Neither party to the record disputes such power. Yet, as the allowing of alimony in such cases cannot be justified under our statutes, which, in proceedings where the wife is a defendant, refers exclusively to cases of divorce, and as the question has never before arisen in this state, we think it best to refer to the principles of law controlling such cases, and cite some authorities in support of the same. In a number of cases it has been held that independent of statutory authority the courts have power to grant alimony and suit money in such cases brought by the putative husband. Where the form of relief prayed for in such cases is for a divorce on the ground of the nullity of the marriage, it has been held that statutory provisions in reference to alimony similar to ours applied only to divorces for causes arising after the marriage, but that in actions for divorce on the ground of nullity, the power exists independent of statute as an incident to the jurisdiction of the court in such cases. O'Dea v. O'Dea, 31 Hun, 441; Griffin v. Griffin, 47 N. Y. 184; Brinkley v. Brinkley, 50 N. Y. 184, 10 Am. Rep. 460. The case of Griffin v. Griffin, supra, in the relief sought, was very much like the present. The court said: "It is conceded that there is no statute in terms authorizing the order, and that, if sustained, it must rest upon the incidental powers formerly vested in the court of chancery, in cases of this description, and to which the supreme court has succeeded. . . . Yet it has been the constant practice of the court of chancery, both before and since the Revised Statutes, to make equitable provision for all these matters; and in so doing, it has been guided by the decisions of the ecclesiastical courts of England in similar cases," citing a number of English authorities. "This has not been done upon the theory that the court of chancery of this state was vested with the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts of England in matrimonial cases, or that . . . it ever possessed any jurisdiction in cases of divorce other than that which was conferred by our own statutes; but upon the ground of the general equitable jurisdiction of the court, and also that when our statutes did confer jurisdiction upon the court of chancery, in those actions for divorce which by the English law are solely cognizable in the ecclesiastical courts, the grant of that jurisdiction carried with it by implication the incidental powers which were indispensable to its proper exercise, and not in conflict with our own statutory regulations on the same subject." To same effect is Lee v. Lee, 66 How. Pr. 207. 2 Bishop, Mar. Div. & Sep. § 725; note to Methvin v. Methvin, 60 Am. Dec. 676, citing various authorities.

The appellant has not disputed our power to grant the alimony and suit money pending proceedings here, yet, as this question is a new and novel one, this being the first application of the kind ever addressed to this court, and as there is conflict in the authorities, we have thought it best to give some expression of opinion and reference to the state of the law upon the subject. This court, under our Constitution, has only appellate jurisdiction in cases in equity originating in the circuit court. The question which caused us some difficulty was whether the allowance of alimony in this court would not be an exercise of original, instead of appellate, jurisdiction, and beyond our constitutional powers. In examining the question we ascertain that a number of appellate courts have granted alimony and suit money, while the case was pending in such courts on appeal. In many of these the question of the power to make the order was not discussed. The court assumed the power as a matter of course, and it seems no objection was made thereto. In other cases the relief has been refused upon the merits, the court assuming that it had jurisdiction and power to grant the relief if a proper case had been presented, and in some cases the power is expressly asserted. Vanduser v. Vanduser, 70 Iowa, 614; Krause v. Krause, 88 Wis. 354; Wagner v. Wagner, 86 Minn. 239; Chaffee v. Chaffee, 14 Mich. 463; Van Voorhis v. Van Voorhis, 90 Mich. 276; Day v. Day, 84 Iowa, 221; Browne, Divorce & Alimony, p. 248; Zeigensfuss v. Zeigensfuss, 21 Mich. 414; Lake v. Lake, 16 Nev. 363; Weishaupt v. Weihaupt, 27 Wis. 621; Disborough v. Disborough, 51 N. J. Eq. 806.

The question of the jurisdiction of an appellate court to grant the relief was expressly raised and decided in Goldsmith v. Goldsmith, 6 Mich. 285. The husband in that case objected to the allowance being made by the appellate court upon the ground that the jurisdiction of such court only authorized it to review and pass upon the decree and proceedings appealed from. The court overruled the objection and held that it had power to award the alimony pending appellate proceedings. The fullest discussion of the subject we have seen is in Lake v. Lake, 17 Nev. 280. In that state the constitutional grant of jurisdiction to the supreme court, in so far as it affects the point under consideration, is identical in terms with the section of our Constitution regulating the jurisdiction of this court. An application for suit money was made in the supreme court, and resisted on the ground that it would be an exercise of original jurisdiction. The court held otherwise and made an allowance for counsel fees and costs, and fortified its position by elaborate argument and citation of authorities. In that case the wife was defeated in the court below, and was the appellant. The gist of the conclusion of the court is stated as follows: "The law gives appellant in this case the right to appeal from that part of the judgment disposing of the property, and accords to her every privilege granted to other litigants in this court. Upon her rests the burden of showing error in the court below. Among all the rights to which she is entitled, there is no one more important to her and the court than that of having the aid of counsel learned in the law and acquainted with her case. Without such aid the court must perform the double and inconsistent functions of court and counsel, or she with no knowledge of the principles, or experience in the practice of the law, must cope with counsel of ability in a profession which, most of all, requires a familiarity with all knowledge, and most of all offers success to him who knows best how to put in practical use the knowledge he possesses. Without counsel the statute of the state and the rules of the court cannot be complied with. Without them the good order and wellbeing of the court would be disturbed, and it would be deprived of one of the usual, proper, and necessary means of exercising its appellate jurisdiction."

In the case before us the merits of the application are much greater. Here the wife has won in the court of original jurisdiction, and prima facie the merits of the controversy are with her. To grant her alimony and suit money would certainly be in accordance with the principle universally prevalent, that where the fact of marriage is prima facie established, and a suit, especially a suit by the husband, is brought to annul the marriage or the marriage relation, and the husband has means wherewith to live and to litigate, and the wife is destitute, the husband must furnish the wife the means of subsistence while the suit is pending, and to enable her to maintain her defense. We do not believe it would be under such circumstances an exercise of original jurisdiction for us upon a proper showing to grant the wife the means of subsistence, while her case is pending in this court, but that such an allowance is essential to the proper and impartial administration of justice in the exercise of our appellate jurisdiction. If she has not the means to live and to employ counsel to present her case to the court, so that it may be fully advised as to the merits of her side of the controversy, how can it be said that there is a fair, even-handed, impartial administration of justice between her and the appellant, who has abundance of means of support, and to employ able and ingenious counsel to present his case in its most favorable aspects.

We have been able to find only two cases in which appellate courts have refused such applications for relief, without reference to the merits of the case. In one of these cases, Hunter v. Hunter, 100 Ill. 477, no reason was given for refusing to entertain the application, except that it had not been the practice of the court, "at least for many years," to entertain such applications, and that such applications were left to the court from which the appeal was taken. The case, however, of Reilly v. Reilly, 60 Cal. 624, emphatically determined that the appellate court had no jurisdiction to make an order for alimony pending appeal; that the jurisdiction invoked by the application was original instead of appellate. This case also decided that the jurisdiction to grant such alimony, even pending appeal, was vested in the court from which the appeal was taken. As to the jurisdiction being vested in the court from which the appeal was taken, the contrary doctrine is established in this state in the case of State, Shrader, v. Phillips, 33 Fla. 408, where this court held that pending an appeal, with supersedeas, the circuit court was without power or jurisdiction to entertain proceedings for alimony and suit money. The reasons given for the action taken in Hunter v. Hunter, and Reilly v. Reilly, supra, have no application to this state, and we do not regard them as of great weight or value in determining the matter. Therefore if this court has not the power to entertain proceedings under such circumstances, no such power is vested in any court, and a great and humane principle of the law would, so far as it relates to cases pending on appeal, be practically abolished in this state.

Recurring, then, to the merits of the application for alimony, the majority of the court are of the opinion that no alimony and counsel fees and suit money can be allowed on this application, other than court costs, for the reason that the appellee has not furnished us with proof of her own necessities for support, as well as the means and ability of the appellant to contribute to such support during the pendency of the case here, the period for which alimony is asked. Neither has she offered any proof as to the value of services of her solicitor in the necessary proceedings here, or as to what would be reasonable suit money in this court. They are of the opinion that we cannot take judicial notice of the value of the services of her solicitor, nor of the amount necessary for suit money, and that in order to make an allowance for alimony here we should have other proof than that taken in the circuit court when a similar application was made to that court and granted; that such relief is not a matter of course, but can only be granted upon proof made here showing the continuance of the necessities of the wife and also the ability of the husband.

The member who prepares this opinion agrees with the other members in declining to allow counsel fees and suit money, but thinks the temporary alimony should have been allowed. The reasons impelling him to this view are that the necessary amount of such alimony was ascertained by a master and approved by the circuit court after the taking of testimony. The petition sets this matter up. The appellant does not allege that there has been any change whatever in the circumstances of either party since the circuit court made the order allowing $15 per week temporary alimony. The allowance by the circuit court is alleged to be excessive, but no reasons are given upon which the allegation is predicated. He thinks that there is sufficient in the petition, answer, and record to show what would be a proper amount for such temporary alimony, and that an allowance of same should be made.

In this case an issue was made upon the answer of appellant to the petition for alimony. No testimony has been taken or any affidavits or proofs whatever offered by either party except an affidavit of appellee referred to. No question as to the proper practice as to taking of testimony in such cases has been presented to us, and we therefore do not attempt to decide what practice should be pursued in obtaining and offering evidence in such cases in an appellate court.

We come now to the consideration of the merits of the appeal. Several assignments of error are filed, but the only one argued is, that the court erred in rendering the final decree in the case. We will not attempt to set out the testimony taken in the case. To do so would require much space, time, and labor, and not greatly subserve any very useful purpose. Upon the subject of the intoxication of the complainant at the time of the marriage ceremony, the evidence was extremely conflicting. There was certainly testimony which, if believed, proved that the complainant was so much under the influence of intoxicants as to be wholly incapable of entering into any contract. This evidence, however, was contradicted by other evidence which, if true, showed, if the complainant was intoxicated at all, it was to a very slight extent and not sufficient to deprive him of the use of his reasoning faculties. Upon this point we cannot say that the decree of the court was against the weight of evidence. Repeated acts of cohabitation when the complainant was sober, subsequent to and ratifying the marriage, were proved upon the part of the appellant, and he made no effort whatever to contradict the same. The amount of solicitor's fees allowed by the decree was less than was shown to be reasonable and proper by the undisputed testimony of members of the bar. The decree was in all respects in accordance with the evidence in the case. As to the law applicable to the facts, it cannot be doubted that if the party at the time of entering into the contract was so much intoxicated as to be non compos mentis, and does not know what he is doing, and is for the time deprived of reason, the marriage is invalid; but is not invalid if the intoxication is of a less degree than that stated. 1 Bishop, Mar. Div. & Sep. §§ 607 et seq.; Browne, Divorce & Alimony, p. 197. On the other hand, it is equally well established that a marriage invalid at the time for want of mental capacity, may be ratified and made valid afterwards by any acts or conduct which amount to a recognition of its validity. A lunatic on regaining his reason may affirm a marriage celebrated while he was insane, and this without any new solemnization. Cole v. Cole, 5 Sneed, 57, 70 Am. Dec. 275; Sabatot v. Populus, 31 La. Ann. 854; 1 Bishop, Mar. Div. & Sep. §§ 614, 624; Browne, Divorce & Alimony, pp. 206, 207.

The appellant, in view of what he calls his unfortunate situation, asks us to take the most favorable view which the law as applied to all the testimony shown by the record will permit to be given his case. This we have been inclined to do, but have not been able to reach a different conclusion from that announced by us, without doing violence to the law and the testimony. The situation of the appellant is indeed a peculiar one. He is married to a woman who, the evidence clearly shows, before her marriage was a public prostitute. The appellant was fully acquainted with her and her character and reputation. The large allowance against him for alimony and suit money, and the costs decreed against him, make him pay dearly for his folly. By his own rash and reckless conduct he has placed himself in a position from which we, upon this record, have no power to extricate him. The appellant is ordered to pay both the costs of the application for alimony and the costs of appeal.

The petition for alimony, counsel fees, and suit money, except as to court costs, is denied.

The decrees of the Circuit Court dismissing the bill of complaint and awarding counsel fees against appellant are affirmed.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT

Borough of DU BOIS, Appt.,
v.
DU BOIS CITY WATERWORKS COM-PANY et al.

(176 Pa. 430.)

1. The cancelation of a contract by a municipality for a water supply will not be made by a court of equity merely because of the inadequacy of the supply, for which the water company is not in fault but which is due to the inadequate capacity of the springs which the contract requires the supply to be obtained from.

2. A reformation of a contract for a municipal water supply because of a mutual mistake of the parties as to the adequacy of the stipulated source of supply is within the power of the court under act of April 29, 1874, § 84, cl. 3, giving power on a bill filed by any citizen to make such order as may seem just and equitable for the correction of the alleged impurity or deficiency of the water supply.

(July 15, 1896.)

A PPEAL by defendants from a decree of the Court of Common Pleas for Clearfield County canceling a contract for the furnishing of a water supply. Reversed.

The borough of Du Bois entered into a contract with the United States Waterworks Company, Limited, by which the company agreed to furnish the borough with the water supply as specified in the contract. This contract was assigned to defendant, the Du Bois City Waterworks Company. The borough filed a bill to have the contract annulled upon the ground that the company had failed to carry out the provisions of its contract.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Mr. A. L. Cole for appellant.

Messrs. W. C. Pents and George A. Jenks, for appellee:

The contract in this case is executory.

So long as a contract continues executory, it may not only be impeached for fraud or mistake, but any invalidity which would be a defense at law would, in general, be ground for cancelation in equity.

Nace v. Boyer, 30 Pa. 99; Simes v. Everson, 46 Pa. 304.

A mistake on one side may be a ground for rescinding a contract, or for refusing to enforce its specific execution, but it cannot be a ground for altering its terms.

Schettiger v. Hopple, 3 Grant, Cas. 55; Adams, Eq. 411; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 643.

The courts are not powerless to give relief in this case.

Wilson v. Getty, 57 Pa. 266.

"A defective, negligent, and worthless performance is the same as no performance at all."

Miller v. Phillips, 31 Pa. 218.

Whenever a deed or other instrument exists which may be vexatiously or injuriously used against a party, a court of equity will afford relief by directing the instrument to be delivered up and canceled, or by making any other decree, which justice or the rights of the parties may require.

Dull's Appeal, 118 Pa. 510; Kay v. Seates, 87 Pa. 31, 78 Am. Dec. 899; Stewart's Appeal, 78 Pa. 88; Martin v. Graves, 5 Allen, 601; 3 Dan. Ch. Pr. & Pl. p. 1961, note 1; Pom. Eq. Jur. 2d ed. vol. 1, § 221, p. 288, and note 1, also vol. 2, § 870, pp. 1218, 1214; 8 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1309, pp. 2148, 2149.

Mitchell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The power of a court of equity to compel the cancelation of a contract, though well established, is very exceptional in its character. Its purpose is never to interfere with the freedom of contract, or with proper legal liability, even for bad bargains, but only to supplement the powers of courts of law where there is exceptional equity of a settled and recognized kind. Hence it is never to be exercised except in very clear cases and for definite cause. The causes which will justify it were stated as long ago as Delamater's Estate, 1 Whart. 362, and experience and the amplification of equity powers in sixty years have not furnished any instance of their enlargement. In that case Chief Justice Gibson said: "The grounds on which equity interferes for rescission, are distinctly marked, and every case proper for this branch of its jurisdiction is reducible to a particular head. They are principally fraud, mistake, turpitude of consideration, and circumstances entitling to relief on the principle of quia timet." In Yard v. Patton, 13 Pa. 278, this language was quoted as authoritative, and it was added that each of these causes should be established by positive and definite proof. In Graham v. Pancoast, 30 Pa. 89, it was said by Strong, J.: "Inadequacy of price, improvidence, surprise, and mere hardship, have each been held sufficient to stay the active interposition of a chancellor. Yet no one of these, nor all combined, furnishes an adequate reason for a judicial rescission of a contract. For such action something more is demanded, —such as fraud, mistake, or illegality." In Rockafellow v. Baker, 41 Pa. 319, 80 Am. Dec. 624, it was said: "Our interposition is invoked, not to carry out and accomplish what the parties have begun, but to undo what the parties have accomplished. How narrow the grounds are upon which a court of equity will interpose for such a purpose, and how cautious and reluctant its steps will be in that direction, were fully shown in Graham v. Pancoast, 30 Pa. 97, and Nace v. Boyer, Id. 109. Nothing but fraud or palpable mistake is ground for rescinding an executed contract." And in Stephen's Appeal, 87 Pa. 202, it was said: "No fraud or mistake, or turpitude of consideration and circumstances entitling her to relief on the principle of quia timet, are proved. Nothing less than one of these clearly established would justify the court in ordering the rescission of an executed contract." No case has gone beyond these; and while we do not say that a wilful and obstructive refusal to perform a contract, under circumstances which practically prevent the party aggrieved from entering into another, may not afford ground for equitable cancellation, yet some such special grounds must appear in order to take the case out of the general rule that remedy for mere breach must be sought at law.

NOTE.—As to the forfeiture of the charter of a water company for failure to make proper supply of water, see Capitol City Water Co. v. State, MacDonald (Ala.) 29 L. R. A. 743; and State, Mylrea, v. Janesville Water Power Co. (Wis.) 38 L. R. A. 891.

34 L. R. A.

As to the liability for loss of property by fire on account of deficient water supply, see Howson v. Trenton Water Co. (Mo.) 23 L. R. A. 146, and note; also Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Keeseville (N. Y.) 30 L. R. A. 660.

Tested by these settled principles, there is no case here at all for the court's interference. Neither the bill nor the findings of fact under it charge any fault to the defendants. They show a want of strict performance, but they also show that strict performance was impossible, not from any lack of effort on the part of the defendants, but because the contract limits the source of supply to springs on the Du Bois land, and those springs are inadequate to furnish the needed quantity of water. The utmost that is made out by the bill and the evidence is that the contract calls for the performance of an impossibility by reason of a mistake of fact as to the capacity of the stipulated source of supply. But this mistake was no more the fault of defendants than of plaintiff, and the parties cannot be put back in statu quo. If the defendants have, to their misfortune, made a contract whose full performance is impossible, they may be unable to recover the stipulated rental, either in whole or in part. But this is a matter of defense in an action at law, and affords no ground for the cancellation of the contract. Certainly there is no equity in putting the entire loss arising from a mutual mistake upon one party, with no consideration for the injury to its plant and franchise, and no allowance for the money already expended thereon without fault. The case is pre-eminently one for mutual concession and amicable adjustment on a fair basis, either by reduction of the rental or by enlargement of the permitted source of supply. But, failing this action by the parties themselves, equity will not help one of them to put the whole loss on the other, but will leave them to such remedies as they may have in a court of law.

Reference was made in the court below and here to the act of April 29, 1874, § 84, cl. 8 (Pub. Laws, 94; Brightly's Purd. Dig. [12th ed.] p. 955, pl. 4), relating to gas and water companies, by which the courts of common pleas are authorized, on bill filed by any citizen using the water, alleging impurity or deficiency, to compel the water company to correct the evil complained of, and to make "such order in the premises as may seem just and equitable." The learned judge below was of opinion that this remedy did not apply to cases of contract, but only to water rights acquired by eminent domain under the act of 1874, and it has been argued here by appellees, citing Lehigh Water Co.'s Appeal, 102 Pa. 515, and Freeport Waterworks Co. v. Prager, 129 Pa. 606, that this section applies only to private citizens and does not include municipal corporations. Both these views, however, are erroneous. What was decided in those cases was that the exclusive privilege of furnishing water, given by the act to the first company erecting works, does not prevail against a city or borough building waterworks in its municipal capacity and under its general powers. In the present case the borough is not the builder or owner of waterworks, but a mere consumer under contract, and stands upon the same basis as any private citizen in regard thereto. The remedy given by the act is intended to be adequate, and we see no reason why it may not be made so. The whole subject is put under the control of the court in the broadest terms, and, being one which concerns the public interests, may be treated with regard thereto, to the extent necessary, even to the reformation of the contract upon a basis just and equitable to both parties, where, as here, it was made in mutual mistake as to an essential fact, and a remedy for the difficulty may be found without violation of the main intent of both parties in the original instrument.

Decrees reversed, and bill dismissed, with costs.

William R. KLEIN, Appt.,

LIVINGSTON CLUB.

(177 Pa. 224.)

1. An injunction against the sale of intoxicating liquors by an incorporated club to its members in pursuance of a resolution of the club may be granted in favor of a member whose property rights would be damaged thereby, if the sale would be illegal, although it might be punishable by indictment.
2. The distribution of intoxicating liquors by an incorporated club to its members without any profit to the club, but on payment by each member for what he receives in the same way as he pays for any food or drink obtained there, does not constitute a sale within the meaning of the license act of May 13, 1887.

(Williams, J., dissents.)

(October 5, 1896.)

APPEAL by complainant from a decree of the Court of Common Pleas for Lehigh County refusing to enjoin defendant from proceeding to procure liquors for distribution among its members. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James B. Dëshler, for appellant:

The furnishing of liquor by the steward of an unlicensed club to a member was a sale.

Com. v. Tierney, 1 Pa. Dist. R. 17; Com. v. Steffner, 2 Pa. Dist. R. 152.

The following authorities maintain that such a transaction is a sale by the club to its members:

State, Newark v. Essex Club, 53 N. J. L. 99; People v. Sinell, 84 N. Y. S. R. 898; State v. Easton Social L. & M. Club, 73 Md. 97, 10 L. R. A. 64; People v. Bradley, 33 N. Y. S. R. 562; Kentucky Club v. Louisville, 93 Ky. 309; Nogales Club v. State, 69 Miss. 218; State v. Lockyear, 95 N. C. 633, 59 Am. Rep. 287; State v. Neis, 108 N. C. 787, 12 L. R. A. 412; People v. Soule, 74 Mich. 250, 2 L. R. A. 494; Martin v. State, 59 Ala. 84; Hunter v. State, 60 Ark. 812; 14 Crim. L. Mag. 541.

If such transactions are not sales they are gifts and come within the prohibition of § 18 of the act in question. If the club here in question, desiring to change its quarters, should sell the club building to one of its members, he would be surprised to find it suggested that the transaction was not a sale because the corporation was not one for profit, and because as a joint owner the purchaser was also one of the vendors.

Com. v. Tierney, 1 Pa. Dist. R. 17.

The act of May 13, 1887, has been construed strictly.

Com. v. Reyburg, 122 Pa. 299, 2 L. R. A. 415; Com. v. Sellers, 130 Pa. 82; Re Carlson's License, 127 Pa. 330; Com. v. Zelt, 138 Pa. 615, 11 L. R. A. 602.

The language of the act of May 13, 1887, indicates an intention to restrict and prohibit what earlier laws permitted.

NOTE.—For sale of intoxicating liquors by clubs, see also People v. Adelphi Club (N. Y.) 81 L. R. A. 510, and cases cited in footnote thereto. 84 L. R. A.

Messrs. Edward Harvey, R. E. Wright, and M. L. Kauffman, for appellee:

No legislation was ever passed forbidding the distribution of liquors among members of social clubs. Was it therefore the intent of the legislature to prohibit such a custom when the act of 1887 was enacted? The statute is penal and requires a strict construction.

Com. v. Carey, 151 Pa. 373; Com. v. Fraim, 16 Pa. 168; Hart's Appeal, 96 Pa. 355; Big Black Creek Imp. Co. v. Com. 94 Pa. 455.

It is the nature and intent of the act, not the place where it is done, that determines its character as lawful or otherwise.

Com. v. Heckler, 168 Pa. 578

The provisions of the act of 1887 are not directed against the use of liquors by the individual citizen, and they do not interfere with his right to supply his table with them or furnish them to his family or his guests.

Allenburg v. Com. 126 Pa. 603, 4 L. R. A. 543.

Graff v. Evans, L. R. 8 Q. B. Div. 373, is a leading authority on the question involved here.

If the liquors really belonged to the members of the club, and had been previously purchased by them or on their account of some person other than the defendant, and if he merely kept the liquors for them and to be divided among them according to a previously arranged system, these facts would not justify the jury in finding that he kept and maintained a nuisance within the meaning of the statute under which he is indicted.

Com. v. Smith, 102 Mass. 144; Com. v. Pomphret, 137 Mass. 564, 50 Am. Rep. 340; Com. v. Ewig, 145 Mass. 119; Barden v. Montana Club, 10 Mont. 330, 11 L. R. A. 593; Com. v. Geary, 146 Mass. 139; Tennessee Club v. Dwyer, 11 Lea. 452; Piedmont Club v. Com. 87 Va. 540; Koenig v. State, 33 Tex. Crim. Rep. 387; State, Bell v. St. Louis Club, 125 Mo. 308, 26 L. R. A. 573.

The distribution of liquors by a bona fide club among its members is not a sale within the inhibition of a liquor law, even though the person receiving the liquor gives money in return for it, and the law prohibiting the sale of liquor on Sunday does not apply to such a club.

11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 727.

People v. Andrews, 115 N. Y. 427, 6 L. R. A. 128, belongs to the class where the methods of the club are a device to evade the law.

Rickart v. People, 79 Ill. 85; State v. Mercer, 32 Iowa, 405; State, Robinson v. Bacon Club, 44 Mo. App. 86; Martin v. State, 59 Ala. 34.

State v. Easton Social L. & M. Club, 73 Md. 97, 10 L. R. A. 64, was ruled by the construction of the local option law in force in the place where the club was located.

DEAN, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff is a member in good standing of the Livingston Club of Allentown, Lehigh county. The club was duly incorporated April 7, 1890. Its purpose, as declared by its articles of association, is the social enjoyment of its members by friendly intercourse. It is the owner of a lot in the city, on which is erected a valuable brick building, containing parlors, reception room, library room, banquet hall, dining rooms, kitchen, committee rooms, billiard rooms, and private rooms occupied by the club steward and servants. The cost of the buildings and grounds was $23,000. The membership is limited to 100 residents of the city, or resident not exceeding 1 mile beyond, and all must be over twenty-one years of age. There are no sleeping rooms in the building for members or guests, but some of the members, not having families, make the club their home during club hours. No games of chance are permitted. The affairs of the club are controlled by a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, and twelve governors, known as the "governing committee." Immediately before the filing of this bill, this committee adopted this resolution: "Resolved, that the steward be directed to purchase a stock of spirituous and malt liquors, etc., and furnish the same to the members of this club, and receive pay therefor from them, only, and turn over the moneys so received to the treasurer of said club, which money shall be again used to replenish the liquors, etc., so furnished to its members, and in the purchasing of eatables, cigars, etc., and also for the defraying of the expenses connected therewith." Plaintiff admits in his bill that the club receives no profit on liquors so furnished, but he avers that the steward is about to carry out the directions of the resolution; that the proposed action will be a violation of the license laws of the commonwealth, thus putting in peril the charter of the club, which may be forfeited, and, in consequence, he, as a member having an interest in the club property, will be thereby damaged. He therefore prays for an injunction restraining the steward and the governors from carrying out the resolution.

The purpose of the bill is to enjoin defendant from the commission of an alleged indictable misdemeanor, because the misdemeanor, if committed, will probably damage his property rights. A bill having for its sole purpose an injunction against crime or misdemeanor, it is well settled, does not lie; but it is just as well settled that equity will interfere if the alleged criminal acts go further, and operate to the destruction of or diminution of value of property. This case and that of Manderson v. Commercial Bank, 28 Pa. 379, are alike in their essential facts. In the bank case the law authorized the directors to discount paper at a rate not exceeding $\frac{1}{4}$ of 1 per cent a month. Manderson, a stockholder, averred that the president and cashier were in the habit of meeting after banking hours, and passing paper for discount at a rate exceeding the lawful rate; thus violating the usury laws, and subjecting the bank to the penalty therefor, and putting in peril the bank's charter. Therefore his property interest in the bank was endangered. It was decided that a stockholder had the right to prevent by injunction a practice which might produce such injury to him, and the writ was awarded. In Sparhawk v. Union Pass. R. Co. 54 Pa. 401, the writ was refused by a majority of the court, because the sole purpose of the bill was to prevent an alleged violation of the act of 1794, in which question the complainant had no other interest than that of the public generally. If either the commission of the act here alleged or its criminality depended on the evidence of witnesses, we might well leave it to the proper criminal court for determination. The hand of a chancellor would not be put forth to restrain the commission of what might not be intended as, or what, if actually done, might not be, criminal, because of the absence of criminal intent. But here the declared purpose to commit the act complained of is admitted. Whether it be criminal if committed, is a pure question of law, for defendant's only plea is that the proposed act is not in violation of law.

Would the act, when committed, be a sale of liquor? That is the only question, for it is not alleged that it is the purpose of defendant to furnish liquor to persons of intemperate habits, to those visibly intoxicated, or to minors. The act of May 18, 1887, known as the "Brooks Law," is entitled "An Act to Restrict and Regulate the Sale of Vinous and Spirituous, Malt or Brewed Liquors, or Any Admixture thereof." This is a license act, and prohibits the keeping of any house, room, or place, inn, or tavern for sale of liquors, without a license first had and obtained. It further prescribes the mode of procedure, in all its details to obtain license to sell, and prohibits the sale or gift either by licensed dealers or unlicensed dealers on certain days and to certain classes. Our Brother Williams, in Com. v. Carey, 151 Pa. 371, referring to the title of the act and the body of it, has so clearly stated its purpose that his reasoning and conclusion are almost as demonstrative of the truth as the solution of a problem in geometry. He says: "There is no hint of a purpose to restrain and regulate the use of them by private citizens in their own dwellings. We look next into the body of the act, and there we find a comprehensive license system. We have, first, a restriction of the sale to persons holding licenses, and punishments prescribed for sales by unlicensed persons; next, the proceedings to obtain a license; third, provisions regulating the exercise of judicial discretion in granting or refusing licenses; fourth, penalties for violations of the law by licensed dealers; fifth, exceptions from the power to sell conferred by a license, as to certain days and certain classes of persons. The 17th section belongs to this class of provisions. To the excepted classes and upon the excepted days no man can lawfully sell or furnish for use as a beverage any intoxicating liquors. The unlicensed cannot, for the traffic is wholly forbidden to him. The licensed cannot, for an express exception as to these is made in the law under which the license is granted. If, notwithstanding the prohibition, any person does sell or furnish contrary to the 17th section, his conduct is a misdemeanor, and the house, room, or place kept or maintained by him for such unlawful sales or furnishings may be abated as a public nuisance, under the provisions of the 18th section. These provisions are not applicable to the table or the personal habits of citizens within the precincts of their own homes, and they cannot be extended by any known rule of interpretation so as to include them. The furnishing of liquors on Sunday, or to any of the excepted classes, that is made punishable, is a furnishing in evasion of the law forbidding sales. It would be of little avail to close the bars on election days if candidates might open rooms near the polls, and furnish liquors free to voters. It would not help the cause of good morals if those who were forbidden to sell on Sunday could, under some specious pretext, profess to supply their customers without charge on that day. But if, for reasons of health or habit, one chooses to supply his own table with his own liquors, for use by himself, his family, or his guests, on Sunday, there is not now, and, so far as I am aware, there has never been, in this state, any statute forbidding him to do so."

The Brooks law only reduced to a comprehensive system all the features of all the license laws at its date on our statute books. There is not in it, nor in any of the statutes which it replaces, a prohibition of the use of liquors in clubs, any more than there is a prohibition of its use in a family. No indictment for furnishing liquors to members of a club could be sustained unless the evidence showed beyond reasonable doubt such furnishing constituted a sale. The statute being penal, it must be subject to a strict construction. We cannot extend it beyond its letter. If we, in construing the Brooks statute, adopted the settled rule of construction, considered the old law, the mischief and the remedy, then we have these questions: The old law regulating and restraining the sale of liquors was disjointed or fragmentary, because it was made up of separate statutes passed at intervals of years, not seldom presenting conflicting provisions, and often provisions in conflict with special local laws. At the same time, there was a settled conviction in the public mind that the license law did not produce the revenue that ought to have been exacted for the privilege of selling liquor. In view of the ineffectiveness of the old law, and the smallness of the revenue produced by it, the Brooks law was enacted. Its intention was to stop what, in the interests of good order, ought to be unlawful sales of liquor, and to exact a larger revenue from those sales made lawful by license. Probably, at the date of this act, club organizations wherein liquor was furnished, as here, had been in existence in large towns and cities for fifty years. The legislature was not ignorant of the fact. If such use tended to disorder or bad morals, the legislature knew it. If such use was not of immoral tendency, yet was a luxury or privilege that would bear taxation and yield revenue, they knew that fact. Yet there are no words in the act which, by any possible construction, can be stretched into a prohibition of the use of liquor in clubs, or that can be deemed as requiring they shall be licensed. There is, in fact, no express legislation concerning this distinctive, open, notorious, long existing use of liquor. The plain implication is that the consumption of liquor in clubs, as known to the legislature, was not deemed a sale. The general words of the law, however, make the sale of liquor without license illegal every where in the commonwealth; and whether this be a sale is now a judicial, and not a legislative, question.

The bill admits the club will receive no profit on the liquors bought and consumed by the members, so that, as concerns this usual incident of a sale, it is not present. The club buys the liquors, and distributes them to the members. Those who drink them pay in proportion to the quantity drank. The money for the purchase of the liquor in quantities from the liquor dealer comes out of the treasury of the club. Nothing in the shape of food or drink is distributed equally to the members. There is an equal distribution of light and heat. Members have like access to the reading rooms and library, but, when it comes to food and drink, each contributes to the common fund in proportion as he consumes. Some eat of terrapin and game, while others prefer less costly and plainer food. The member who is fond of terrapin contributes to the club the cost of it. It would be inequitable that the member who does not touch it should share in paying for it by an equal contribution. The same rule is enforced in regard to liquors. Some do not touch them. They pay nothing. Those who drink them pay. The purpose of the whole system is to distribute the advantages, comforts, and luxuries of the club among the members, so that there shall be no unequal contributions to the treasury which purchases them. They are all owners of the property when purchased in equal shares, and, if a division were then made, each would be entitled to an equal share of the liquor; but one consumes his share and that of others who do not drink liquor, and he puts back into the common treasury the value of the others' shares. Therefore, although by consumption the division is not equal, yet it is made equal by the contribution to the treasury. That has neither lost nor gained. Consequently, the distribution is equitable. Does this constitute a sale? We think not. There is no element of bargain, only a method of distribution of the common property. We are aware there is and has been much difference of opinion among courts on the question. In England the transaction has been held no sale. Graff v. Evans, L. R. 8 Q. B. Div. 373. In a recent case in Missouri (State, Bell v. St. Louis Club, 125 Mo. 308, 26 L. R. A. 578), the opinion contains a review of all the cases on the subject, and it is held to be no sale. In the still more recent case in New York court of appeals (People v. Adelphe Club, 149 N. Y. 5, 81 L. R. A. 510, decided 7th of April last, and not yet officially reported in the books), all the judges concurred in pronouncing it no sale. The act then in force, and under which the indictment was framed and conviction had, prohibited the sale of spirituous liquors to be drank upon the premises. There was no question as to the fact that, under substantially the same club rules as here, spirituous liquor was distributed to the members, and by them drank upon the club premises, those drinking returning to the treasury the cost of the liquor. Black on Intoxicating Liquors (§ 142), after citing the authorities from many states, comes to this conclusion: "Upon the whole, therefore, notwithstanding some conflicting rulings, the rational conclusion is that the intent must govern. On the one hand, if the object of the organization is merely to provide members with a convenient method of obtaining a drink whenever they desire it, or if the form of membership is no more than a pretense, so that any person, without discrimination, can procure liquor by signing his name in a book, or buying a ticket or a chip, thus enabling the buyer to conduct an illicit traffic, then it falls within the terms of the law. But, on the other hand, if the club is organized and conducted in good faith, with a limited and selected membership, really owning its property in common, and formed for social, literary, artistic, or other purposes, to which the furnishing of liquor to its members would be merely incidental, in the same way, and to the same extent, that the supplying of dinners or daily papers might be, then it cannot be considered as within either the purpose or letter of the law." As before noticed, there could have been no special intent on the part of the legislature to prohibit the act here complained of. There was a general intent to restrain the use of intoxicating liquor by prohibiting unlicensed sales thereof. If this were an unlicensed sale, under the guise of a club distribution, it would clearly be unlawful. The law would look through all disguises, and so pronounce it. But as, on the undisputed facts, we are of the opinion the act apprehended by plaintiff is not a sale, there can be no violation of law which will imperil his property rights.
34 L. R. A.

It has been argued that the effect of our decision, if against plaintiff, will be to deprive the licensed hotels of patronage to which they are impliedly entitled, by payment of heavy license fees under the Brooks law; that members of clubs will consume such liquors as they desire in their club rooms, instead of at licensed bars. This is not without force, but it should be addressed to the legislature, who seem for fifty years, in all the legislation on the liquor question, to have carefully refrained from prohibiting the furnishing of liquor to club members by their clubs, as well as neglected to impose on them license fees.

The decree is affirmed.

Williams, J., dissents.

NORTH DAKOTA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of North Dakota, ex rel. J. B. WINEMAN,

v.

O. M. DAHL.

(.....N. D.)

1. The recommendation of a constitutional convention, and the submission of a proposal therefor to popular vote, are properly made by the legislature in the form of a joint resolution, and not in that of an ordinary law.
2. The submission to popular vote of a proposal to hold a constitutional convention is properly made by the legislature, although the legislature has the power to take the initiative with respect to the calling of such convention.

(October 8, 1896.)

APPPLICATION for a writ of mandamus to compel defendant, as Secretary of State, to certify to the county auditors of the various counties for submission at a coming election of the question whether or not a constitutional convention should be held in accordance with a joint resolution of the legislature. Granted.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. J. B. Wineman and Burke Corbett for plaintiff.

Mr. John F. Cowan, Attorney General, for defendant.

Corliss, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

An alternative writ of mandamus having been issued by this court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction, the defendant appeared and answered the writ. A demurrer having been interposed to such answer, the case presents to us only questions of law. The object of this proceeding is to compel the defendant, as secretary of state, to certify to the county auditor of each county a certain joint resolution adopted at the last session of the legislature. It is in the following words:

"Concurrent Resolution. Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the state of North Dakota, the Senate concurring therein, that, in the opinion of the legislative assembly, the best interests of the state require that a constitutional convention be called at some future date, for the purpose of revising the Constitution. Therefore, it is hereby recommended to the electors of the state of North Dakota that at the next general election, to be held on the 1st Tuesday after the 1st Monday in November, 1896, that they vote for or against a convention to revise the Constitution of the state."

Section 88 of the Constitution declares that the powers and duties of the secretary of state shall be as prescribed by law. One of these duties is to certify to the county auditors propositions or other questions to be submitted to the people. Rev. Code, §§ 491, 509. It is obvious that the body which is vested with power to designate the question to be submitted to the people is the legislature. This proposition is not controverted, nor is it disputed that that body has expressed its will that there should be submitted to the people the question whether a constitutional convention should be called to revise the Constitution. But it is insisted that this expression of sover-elgn will is not in constitutional form, and is therefore without legal effect. That it did not take the form of an ordinary law is too clear for controversy. The joint resolution has no title. Its enacting clause is not couched in the language prescribed by the Constitution to be employed in the enactment of ordinary laws; nor was it ever submitted to the governor for approval. Whenever it is necessary that the expression of sovereign will should take the form of ordinary legislation, these requirements must be strictly observed. But, in declaring its purpose that a specific proposition should be submitted to the people for their approval or disapproval, the legislature is not discharging the ordinary function of enacting laws. In cases of this kind it has been the established usage to employ a joint resolution as the mode of expressing sovereign pleasure. There is nothing in our Constitution indicating a purpose to abrogate this settled practice. It is a simple and very satisfactory form in which to embody the will of sovereign power; and there is nothing in the nature of such an expression of legislative purpose which renders it necessary that the checks and safeguards which surround ordinary legislation should be applicable in cases of this character. No permanent general rule is thereby established. The whole force of the resolution is spent upon those officers whose duty it is to see that the proposition therein specified is submitted to the people. When they have performed their duty, there is nothing left but a mere recommendation to the people to express their views on the particular questions submitted, to the end that the verdict of the public upon that proposition may furnish a guide to future legislative action. It is not the resolution in this case which imposes any duty on the secretary of state. The duty he is required by this court to perform is imposed upon him by a law passed with all the formalities and solemnities essential to a valid enactment. That law declares that he must certify to the county auditors such question or proposition as is to be submitted to the people; and the body which has power to designate the proposition or question to be submitted is, as we have already asserted, the body in which inheres sovereignty. By the joint resolution, that body has designated the question to be submitted, and the law prescribes what the secretary of state shall do towards carrying out its legally expressed will.

NOTE.—For proceedings to amend Constitutions, see also Seneca Min. Co. v. Secretary of State (Mich.) 9 L. R. A. 770; State, Torreyson, v. Grey (Nev.) 19 L. R. A. 124; Worman v. Hagan (Md.) 21 34 L. R. A.

L. R. A. 716; Livermore v. Waite (Cal.) 25 L. R. A. 312; State, Woods, v. Tooker (Mont.) 25 L. R. A. 500; and Edwards v. Lesueur (Mo.) 31 L. R. A. 518.

There is eminent authority for the proposition that it is not necessary that the legislative will that the Constitution should be amended should assume the form of an ordinary law, and be submitted to the executive for approval. This was held by the Federal Supreme Court in Hollingsworth v. Virginia, 3 U. S. 8 Dall. 378. 1 L. ed. 644. The argument in support of the proposition that the President must approve a proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution is much stronger than the argument in this case that the governor must approve the action of the legislature in declaring that a particular question shall be submitted to the people. The Federal Constitution (art. 1, § 7) provides that "every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary shall be presented to the president of the United States," etc. Yet, despite this provision of the Constitution, the court ruled that the 11th Amendment had been lawfully adopted, although the resolution embodying the amendment had not been submitted to the President for approval. This was in 1794. The amendments which were made in 1789, 1803, and 1865 were carried through without the action of the President. In 1865 the slavery amendments were inadvertently submitted to the Executive, and approved by him. On discovering this fact, Senator Trumbull, of Illinois, chairman of the judiciary committee, introduced a resolution declaring its submission to him to have been an inadvertent act, and that his approval was unnecessary and of no effect. The resolution also asserted that that case should not constitute a precedent for the future. It was adopted without division. But it is unnecessary to pursue this line of discussion any further. Under many state Constitutions containing provisions with regard to the enactment of statutes similar to those found in the organic law of this state, it has been, and is, customary to express by joint resolution the will of the legislature on matters not falling within the category of ordinary legislation. Such course has not, so far as we have been able to discover, ever been successfully challenged as being repugnant to the supreme law. Our Constitution plainly recognizes the legality of the expression of sovereign will by joint resolution. See § 66. This section declares that the presiding officer of each House shall sign all bills and joint resolutions. We do not think that it was the purpose of the people to interfere with this settled and convenient usage of expressing sovereign pleasure by joint resolution in all cases not falling within the domain of ordinary legislation. We cannot bring ourselves to believe that they intended to require all the forms and procedure essential to a valid law, in cases where the legislature merely desires to express its wish that the people would at the polls inform their servants of their sentiment touching some question of public interest. Whether aught will come of an affirmative vote on this question is immaterial. It is no concern of the secretary of state whether it is wise or unwise to submit to the people the proposition specified in the resolution,—whether it will lead to practical results or be only an idle form. The sovereignty of the people, speaking through its representatives, is the final judge whether the sense of the people on a grave issue shall be taken at the polls. The secretary of state has naught to do but obey the law, and certify such question to the proper officers, that it may be submitted to the people for their approval or disapproval.

Nor can it be said that it is an empty form to leave to popular vote the grave question whether the people shall assemble in convention, and revise their fundamental law. True it is that the power to take the initiative with respect to the calling of a constitutional convention resides in the legislature. In the absence of any provision in the Constitution on the subject, that body alone can give legality to such a convention. If its foundation is in the spontaneous action of the people, without permissive legislative authority, the movement is revolutionary, although no blood be spilled or violence accompany the rising of the people to assert their reserve power of revolution. There was a time in the earlier history of this country when in certain quarters the view was entertained that the people could legally assemble in convention, and revise their Constitution, without the sanction of legislative action. See Jameson, Const. Conv. pp. 383-387, 663-666. But this opinion no longer prevails. Jameson, Const. Conv. §§ 219, 394-403, 570, 571, 574A. Judge Jameson says: "The making of provision for the assembling of conventions, and the hedging of them about with the restrictions needed, as well for their efficiency as for the safety of the commonwealth, is emphatically a matter of legislation. It is, moreover, a matter of legislation not fundamental in character, but of that species which our Constitutions apportion exclusively to the legislative departments created by them. The legislation necessary to initiate and to temper the operations of a convention no department of the government is competent to effect but the legislature. The sovereign itself could not do it, nor the electors,—bodies whose organization is such as to make deliberation upon the details of laws impossible. Nor is it true, as intimated by the judges in the opinion, that the giving to the legislature, in a Constitution, express power to recommend specific amendments to that instrument, involves, by implication, the denial to that body of power to call conventions for a general revision of it. We shall see in a subsequent part of this work that such a grant is applicable only to disconnected and unimportant amendments. It is obvious that a grant of power to propose such amendments in a summary manner, and without the formalities ordinarily attending the enactment of fundamental laws, cannot be considered as an implied prohibition to effect a general revision of a Constitution in the only appropriate and practical way,—by a convention. If it be not in the power of a legislature to call a convention, that fact is not to be inferred from the positive authority to effect a different object in a different way." But while the power resides in the legislature, and that body only, to call a constitutional convention, it is obvious that the agents of the people, who have not been selected on that particular issue, should not take upon themselves the responsibility of burdening the people with the expense of such a movement, without first submitting to them the question whether they desire such a convention to be called. The argument against the taking of the initiative by the legislature in such cases, without first ascertaining public sentiment on the question, is so strong, and lies so plainly on the surface, that in many states the Constitution, in terms, requires the submission of the proposition to popular vote, and a majority vote in its favor, before the legislature can legally summon the people to meet in convention to revise their organic law. See Jameson, Const. Conv. pp. 669-671. In 1820 the council of revision of New York returned to the assembly a bill calling a constitutional convention, with objections to its passage. The ground of these objections was the fact that the legislature had not taken the sense of the people on the subject. In those objections the conclusion of the council was stated in the following language: "The council therefore think it the most wise and safe course, and most accordant with the performance of the great trust committed to the representative powers under the Constitution, that the question of a general revision of it should be submitted to the people in the first instance, to determine whether a convention ought to be convened. The declared sense of the American people throughout the United States on this very point cannot but be received with great respect and reverence; and it appears to be the almost universal will, expressed in their constitutional charters, that conventions to alter the Constitution shall not be called at the instance of the legislature without the previous sanction of the people, by whom those Constitutions were ordained." It was therefore a very proper step for the legislature to take to declare that the people should be allowed to be heard on this question before final legislative action.

44 L. R. A.

It is unnecessary for us to express any opinion on the question whether § 202 of the Constitution, prescribing the mode of amending the same, prevents the lawful assembling of a constitutional convention in this state to revise the fundamental law. The decided weight of authority and the more numerous precedents are arrayed on the side of the doctrine which supports the existence of this inherent legislative power to call a constitutional convention, notwithstanding the fact that the instrument itself points out how it may be amended. See Jameson, Const. Conv. §§ 570-574d. But see Re Constitutional Convention, 14 R. I. 649; Opinion of the Justices, 6 Cush. 573.

The peremptory writ will issue as prayed for.

All concur.

VERMONT SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Vermont
v.
A. E. HARRINGTON.

(88 Vt. 623.)

1. A statute requiring itinerant vendors who go from place to place and temporarily occupy rooms for the exhibition and sale of goods to pay a state license of $25 and deposit $500 with the state treasurer as security, and then to pay in addition a local license fee in each place in which they sell goods, amounting to a tax on the value of their stock of goods according to the rate of the last preceding assessment of taxes in that place, is not unconstitutional, although it is oppressive.
2. The legislature must be the judge as to whether or not there is reason to apprehend fraud in the sale of goods by itinerant vendors when it enacts a stringent license law for the prevention of fraud in such sales.
3. The police power of the state is the power to govern men and things within the limits of its dominion, and is not limited to the protection of health, peace, morals, education and good order, but comprehends all those general laws or internal regulations necessary to secure peace, good order, the health and comfort of society, and the regulation and protection of all property in the state.
4. The state has authority to make extensive and varied regulations as to the time, mode, and circumstances in and under which parties shall assert, enjoy, or exercise their rights without coming in conflict with any of those constitutional principles which are established for the protection of private rights or private property.
5. Requiring itinerant vendors to deposit $500 with the state treasurer, to be returned on the surrender of the license, less the amount of any fines and costs that may have been imposed, does not deprive the licensee of property without due process of law.
6. A license tax cannot be deemed unequal because it reaches one occupation only, if it reaches all who follow that occupation.
7. An oppressive and unjust law is not void unless it contravenes some provision of the state or Federal Constitution.
8. The reasonableness of license fees in respect to their amount when imposed, not by municipal ordinance without legislative authority, but by the state through legislative enactment, is conclusively established by the statute, and cannot be reviewed by the courts.

(Tuft, J., dissents.)

(August 4, 1894.)

EXCEPTIONS by defendant to a ruling of the Orange County Court overruling a demurrer to an information charging defendant with a violation of the law requiring itinerant vendors to procure licenses. Ruling affirmed.
The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—For the numerous authorities on the limit of the amount of license fees, see note to State, Tol. v. French (Mont.) 80 L. R. A. 415.
84 L. R. A.

Messrs. Darling & Darling for respondent.

Messrs. D. C. Hyde, State's Attorney, and John H. Weston for the State.

Tyler, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The information is based upon No. 59, Laws 1894, in which the words "itinerant vendors" are construed to mean and include all persons who engage in a temporary or transient business, either in one locality or in traveling from place to place selling goods, wares, and merchandise, and who, for the purposes of carrying on such business, hire, lease, or occupy any building or structure for the exhibition and sale of such goods, etc. The law excludes from its provisions sales made to dealers by commercial travelers and selling agents in the usual course of business, and bona fide sales of goods, etc., by sample, for future delivery; to hawkers on the streets and peddlers from vehicles. It requires that every itinerant vendor who proposes to do business in this state shall deposit $500 with the state treasurer, after which deposit, upon application in prescribed form, and the payment of $25 as a state license fee, he is entitled to an itinerant vendor's license from the state treasurer, authorizing him to do business in this state for one year. He may then apply to the clerk of the city or town where the goods are kept for sale for a local license. With his application to such clerk he must file a true statement, under oath, of the average quantity and value of his stock. The clerk submits the statement to the listers for their valuation. Their certificate of valuation is then submitted to the board of aldermen or selectmen, "who must forthwith act upon such application, and if, in the judgment of such board, such application should be granted, such city or town clerk may be authorized to issue a license to such applicant," who shall pay therefor a sum ascertained by the clerk by a computation based upon the valuation of the listers, in the ratio and at the rate of the last preceding assessment of taxes. It is provided that every itinerant vendor who sells, exposes, or advertises for sale, goods, wares, and merchandise, without a state and local license, shall be liable to fine or imprisonment, or both. The local license, in any event, expires on the last day of the next March. The deposit of $500 is subject to the payment of all fines and penalties that may be incurred by the licensee through violations of the law. Upon the expiration of the state license the state treasurer returns to the licensee the remainder of the deposit, after deducting all fines and penalties. The case comes here upon the sole question of the constitutionality of the law.

The respondent's counsel contend that the law is in violation of both the state and Federal Constitution; that it is an encroachment upon the natural, inherent, and inalienable right of citizens to acquire and possess property through the agency of labor; that it discriminates between itinerant vendors and resident vendors, and between classes of itinerant vendors, and thus violates that portion of chap. 1, art. 7, of the Constitution which declares that "government is, or ought to be, instituted for the common benefit, protection, and security of the people, nation, or community, and not for the particular emolument or advantage of any single man, family, or set of men, who are part of that community;" that it is in conflict with the inhibition of the Federal Constitution that "no state shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws;" that the requirement of a deposit of $500 deprives an itinerant vendor of his property without due process of law; that it violates the 14th Amendment of the Federal Constitution, which commands that "no state shall make or enforce any laws which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States;" that the requirements of the law are unjust and oppressive, and violate the natural as well as the constitutional rights of the citizen.

The legislature had in view the class of persons who go from place to place, and temporarily occupy rooms for the exhibition and sale of goods, and enacted the law in the apprehension that there was fraud in such sales. Its title is, "An Act to Prevent and Punish Fraud in the Sales of Goods, Wares, and Merchandise at Public or Private Sale by Itinerant Vendors, and to Regulate Such Sales." It seems to have been passed as a police regulation, though the local license fee is equivalent to taxation upon the grand list in each town in which such license is taken. The police power of a state extends beyond the protection of health, peace, morals, education, and good order. It is the power to govern men and things within the limits of its dominion. It comprehends all those general laws of internal regulation necessary to secure peace, good order, the health and comfort of society, and the regulation and protection of all property in the state. Its power in these respects is supreme. Desty, Taxn. 1877, and cases cited; Cooley, Const. Lim. 704. "Rights of property, like all other social and conventional rights, are subject to such reasonable limitations in their enjoyment as shall prevent them from being injurious, and to such reasonable restraints and regulations established by law, as the legislature, under the governing and controlling power vested in them by the Constitution, may think necessary and expedient."

The power we allude to is rather the police power, the power vested in the legislature by the Constitution, to make, ordain, and establish all manner of wholesome and reasonable laws, statutes, and ordinances, either with penalties or without, not repugnant to the Constitution, as they shall judge to be for the good and welfare of the commonwealth, and of the subjects of the same. It is much easier to perceive and realize the existence and sources of this power, than to mark its boundaries, or prescribe limits to its exercise." Chief Justice Shaw in Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 53. The law is clearly stated by Redfield, Ch. J., in Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 27 Vt. 140, 63 Am. Dec. 625. "This police power of the state extends to the protection of the lives, limbs, health, comfort, and quiet of all persons and the protection of all property within the state. According to the maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas, which being of universal application, it must, of course, be within the range of legislative action to define the mode and manner in which everyone may so use his own as not to injure others." "The power of the state to impose restraints and burdens upon persons and property in conservation and promotion of the public health, good order, and prosperity, is a power originally and always belonging to the states, not surrendered by them to the general government nor directly restrained by the Constitution of the United States, and essentially exclusive." Wilkerson v. Rahrer ("Re Rahrer"), 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572.

The question is whether this law is within the scope either of the police or taxing power of the state. If it is beyond such scope, and unconstitutional, it is in respect to the licenses, or the special deposit with the state treasurer, or the authority conferred upon the board of aldermen or selectmen to grant or refuse local licenses according to their judgment. Citizens have not an inherent and inalienable right to acquire and possess property, without the legislative restraint of taxation. It is also true that the property alone is not liable to taxation. A tax may be assessed on the privilege of carrying on a particular business, and, when it takes this form, convenience in collecting will commonly require payment of a license fee, as a condition to the right to carry on the business. Cooley, Taxn. 384 et seq.; License Tax Cases, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 472, 18 L. ed. 501. "The mode of levying, as well as the right of imposing taxes, is completely and exclusively within the legislative power, which, it is to be presumed, will always be exercised with an equal regard to the security of the public, and individual rights and convenience." Coulter v. Brittain, 2 Hawks (N. C.) 204. Judge Cooley remarked in Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 406, 20 Am. Rep. 654, that while a statute might have revenue for one object, the exercise of the police power of the state might be another. So, if this law were to be considered as a mere revenue law, it must be in the light of the settled rule, as laid down by all writers upon taxation, that everything to which the legislative power extends may be the subject of taxation, whether it be person, property, franchise, privilege, occupation, or right; that not only is the power unlimited in its reach as to subjects, but, in its very nature, it acknowledges no limits, and may be carried to any extent which the government may find expedient. It may therefore be employed again and again upon the same subjects, even to the extent of exhaustion and destruction and thus become, in its exercise, a power to destroy. Cooley, Taxn. 384, and cases cited in notes; Nathan v. Louisiana, 49 U. S. 8 How. 78, 13 L. ed. 993; License Tax Cases, supra; Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787; New Orleans v. Great Southern Teleph. & Tele. Co. 40 La. Ann. 41.

No employment is exempt from taxation. The state has an undoubted right to determine what employments shall be permitted, and to forbid those which are deemed prejudicial to the public good. Rules for the conduct of the most necessary and common occupations are prescribed, when from their nature they afford peculiar opportunities for imposition and fraud. The state has authority to make extensive and varied regulations as to the time, mode, and circumstances in and under which parties shall assert, enjoy, or exercise their rights, without coming in conflict with any of those constitutional principles which are established for the protection of private rights or private property. Cooley, Const. Lim. 742 et seq. That all occupations may be taxed, when no restraints are imposed by the Constitution, is settled beyond controversy. It is no valid objection to a tax on business that its operation will not be uniform, but it must operate uniformly upon each class taxed. Cooley, Const. Lim. 609, note. A license tax cannot be deemed unequal because reaching one occupation only, if it reaches all who follow that occupation. It would be only when individuals of the class were singled out for exemption that the inequality would be manifest. Cooley, Taxn. 128. It was said by Judge Cooley in Youngblood v. Sexton, supra, that occupation taxes are no violation of the rule of uniformity. Worth v. Petersburg E. Co. 89 N. C. 301. Desty, Taxn. p. 1883, says: "Municipal corporations may tax a business or occupation of one class and omit to tax that of another class, and may classify merchants, and tax each class in its discretion; but a tax on any occupation must reach all who follow it,—all of a class of persons or things." The court said in Picklen v. Shelby County Tax. Dist. 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 601, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 79: "No doubt can be entertained of the right of a state legislature to tax trades, professions and occupations, in the absence of inhibition in the state Constitution in that regard. . . ." Quoting again from Youngblood v. Sexton: "A particular business may be taxed while others are spared, not only because for any reason it can best bear the burden, but also because such surroundings attach themselves to the business taxed as to render the discouragement and discipline of heavy taxation wise and politic." He instanced the taxing of state banks out of existence, which was sanctioned in Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 583, 19 L. ed. 482. It is laid down in 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 793, that the usual provisions in the Constitutions of the different states concerning taxation do not prohibit the legislatures from imposing, or authorizing municipal corporations to impose taxes upon trades, special professions, and occupations, and that authority to tax all persons exercising any profession may be executed, to the extent of taxing each member of a firm separately. The right of the legislature to impose a license tax upon peddlers was recognized in State v. Hodgdon, 41 Vt. 189, and State v. Pratt, 59 Vt. 590, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 299. In the latter case that part of § 8951, Rev. Laws, which required a license of a person peddling tea of foreign growth, was held in conflict with the Federal Constitution, as attempting to regulate commerce between the states. "The legislature, if it does not make discriminations in violation of the state Constitution, may authorize municipal corporations to tax transient traders or itinerant dealers and peddlers; and such tax is not in violation of the Constitution of the United States, although the property be brought from another state, provided, it must be added, it does not unlawfully discriminate in favor of the resident, and against the non-resident, citizen." 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 744; Ward v. Maryland, 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 418, 20 L. ed. 449; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 847; Webber v. Virginia, 108 U. S. 344, 26 L. ed. 565, and numerous other cases cited in note. It was held in Wilmington Comrs. v. Roby, 8 Ired. L. 250, that a license may be imposed on all transient persons keeping "stores" in the town, imposing it as a police regulation, though called a tax in the statute. State, Toi, v. French (Mont.) 80 L. R. A. 415, and State v. Wheelock (Iowa) 80 L. R. A. 429, have exhaustive and valuable notes upon this subject. In the former case the question was whether imposing the payment of license fees upon laundrymen violated the uniformity clause in the state Constitution in respect to taxation. It was held that a license fee was not a tax, within the constitutional restrictions. In the latter case a license fee of $100 per annum, charged itinerant vendors of drugs who professed to cure or treat all diseases, was held reasonable, and not an unconstitutional interference with interstate commerce, though the drugs were in original packages, brought from other states. In the annotations to these cases these general rules are deduced: That "the power of a sovereign state to fix license fees at such figures as it may see fit would appear to be unlimited, except in cases in which its exercise would conflict with some constitutional provision. . . ." That "statutory and charter restrictions upon the power to tax, like constitutional ones, do not apply to license fees required for the purpose of regulation." Among the notes of cited cases are the following: The legislature of a state may impose such license taxes upon privileges as it may choose. Columbia v. Beasley, 1 Humph. 282. And it may, in regulating any matter which is a proper subject for the police power, impose such sums for licenses as will operate as a partial restraint on the business, or on the keeping of a particular kind of property. Tenney v. Lenz, 16 Wis. 566. And a requirement of a license fee from peddlers, classifying them as foot peddlers, peddlers with one-horse cart or wagon, and peddlers with two-horse cart or wagon, charging a different rate for each, is a police requirement, and a valid exercise of a power to regulate, and not in conflict with a constitutional requirement of uniformity of taxation upon all of a class. Kneeland v. Pittsburgh (Pa.) 10 Cent. Rep. 421. The constitutional requirement as to uniformity of taxation does not prevent a municipality from discriminating in fixing rates for licenses for the transaction of different classes of business, and imposing a higher rate upon one class than upon another. Ex parte Hurl, 49 Cal. 557. A license tax upon different industries, varying in amount upon each, but being the same upon the subjects of the same class, is not unconstitutional for want of uniformity. Hadtner v. Williamsport, 15 W. N. C. 188. And a license tax imposed by a municipality endowed with discretion on the subject will not be declared unreasonable by the courts merely because they deem it unwisely large. Cooper v. District of Columbia, 4 MacArth. 250. And when the legislature confers upon a municipal corporation the power to pass ordinances of a special and defined character, if the power thus delegated be not in conflict with the Constitution, an ordinance passed in pursuance thereof cannot be impeached as invalid because it would have been regarded as unreasonable if it had been passed under the incidental powers of the corporation, or under a grant of power general in its nature. Ex parte Chin Yan, 60 Cal. 78. So, a license fee of $200, imposed upon the business of vending butcher's meats, is not unauthorized, oppressive, or in restraint of trade, when required under a statute empowering municipal ties to fix the fee for licenses at from $5 to $500. St. Paul v. Colter, 13 Minn. 41 (Gil. 16), 90 Am. Dec. 278. Cases are cited in these notes where municipal ordinances have been held unconstitutional and void on account of the excessive amount of license fees imposed, but few, if any, cases are cited where statutes have been declared unconstitutional for this reason. The imposition of license taxes is, upon abundant authority, within the constitutional authority of the legislature, though it may interfere, as the payment of all taxes directly does, with the acquisition of property. The law is not a "class" law, for all persons of the class of itinerant vendors, whether resident or nonresident, are subject alike to its requirements. Peddlers, hawkers, and drummers are not of this class. The occupation of itinerant vendors, from the manner in which it is conducted, is as distinct from that of resident vendors as is that of peddlers and auctioneers. It imposes no burden upon interstate commerce, as the occupation licensed is not directly concerned therein. It makes no discrimination between our own citizens and citizens of other states, and therefore does not violate the command of the Federal Constitution that "no state shall make or enforce any laws which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States." The law could not be deemed oppressive in respect to licenses if only the state and one local license fee were required for the year, but it must be remembered that each local license fee is for the privilege of doing business in the town in which it is payable.

The money deposited with the state treasurer is returnable to the licensee, upon his surrender of the license, less the amount of fines that may have been imposed and costs, so it cannot be held that he is deprived of property without the process of law. The requirement of this deposit is not more oppressive than a requirement of a statute of Illinois that operators of butter and cheese factories on the co-operative plan shall file with the circuit clerk a bond in the sum of $8,000, with two sureties, conditioned that the company shall make monthly statements of the amount of the product and sales, prices received, and dividends earned. This was held to be a proper exercise of police power; that the fact that the law regulates trade, or in some degree operates as a restraint upon trade, does not render it obnoxious to any constitutional provision; that a statute is not subject to the objection that it is not general, because it applies to a class of persons, if it applies to all persons similarly engaged. An ordinance of the city of Chicago which requires auctioneers to pay an annual license fee of $200 and to give a bond in the penal sum of $1,000, with two sureties, to be approved by the mayor, conditioned for the due observance of the ordinance, was held reasonable and valid as a police regulation. Wiggins v. Chicago, 68 Ill. 372. The statute of a state relating to oleomargarine, its manufacture and sale, was held to belong to the police power of the state for the prevention of fraud, in Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253. See notes to State v. Goodwill (W. Va.) 25 Am. St. Rep. 870.

Our statute is nearly an exact transcript of the Massachusetts act of 1890. The only material difference is that under the latter the city or town clerk, on application, after ascertaining the value of the stock of goods, and the amount to be paid for the license according to the rate of the last preceding tax levy in his city or town, "shall issue" a license upon payment to him of the amount so ascertained. The supreme court, in Com. v. Crowell, 156 Mass. 215, upheld the law as a proper police regulation. Connecticut has a statute providing that city and town authorities may issue licenses to such persons as they find proper to engage in a temporary or transient business, for the sale of goods, wares, and merchandise, for a term not exceeding a year, on the applicant paying a fee not less than $1, nor more than $100, as the authorities may direct, except in the sale of farm and sea products, making it a misdemeanor to engage in such business without a license. The supreme court, in State v. Conlon, 65 Conn. 478, 81 L. R. A. 55, declared the act void because, as it said, "it permits the local authority to grant a license to one, and to refuse it to another, in pursuance of a discretion unguided and unrestrained by law," and "the absolute power to fix the license fee at $1 for one year, or $100 for one day, . . . thus making it nominal or prohibitive at pleasure. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, is authority for this holding, though it is not cited in the opinion. In that case an ordinance conferred upon supervisors arbitrary power, at their own will, and without the exercise of discretion, in the legal sense of the term, to give or withhold consent to the carrying on of laundry business within the limits of the city and county of San Francisco, and make it unlawful to carry on such business without such consent. This was held unconstitutional. The court said that "the very idea that one man may be compelled to hold his life, or the means of living, or any material right essential to the enjoyment of life, at the mere will of another, seems to be intolerable in any country where freedom prevails. . . ." The Connecticut court states the general rule that "the legislature has power to require a license for the transaction of any business, either for the purpose of raising a revenue, or for the purpose of regulating the conduct of such business, as public interests may demand." It admits the power in the legislature—"First, to regulate the conduct of all business, or of any particular business, harmless in its nature and which every citizen has the right to carry on; and second to regulate, even to the extent of prohibition, any business in its nature injurious to the public." But the court says that "... the exercise of that power in the two cases is governed by different principles. In the latter case the controlling object is giving to the public that protection from danger which the state is bound to give, and ordinarily the legislature must be the judge of the degree of danger, and of the required protection. It may restrict the business by requiring large license fees, or by other protective regulations." The court makes the point that the act draws no line of distinction, except between a business that is temporary, and a business that is not temporary, without defining the former or showing that it is more dangerous to the public than the latter. The information was for the sale of boots and shoes without license, and the court construed the act to deal with temporary or transient business, for the purpose of regulating an ordinary and lawful business, in which all citizens have a right to engage, and held the act to be in violation of Bill of Rights, § 1, declaring all men equal in rights, and that no man or set of men is entitled to exclusive privileges, which is substantially like the constitutional provision of Massachusetts and of this state. The court conceded the full legislative power to license and regulate a lawful business, as well as a business which in its nature is dangerous to the public, though its regulations must be governed by different principles in the two cases. Therefore, had the Connecticut statute, like ours, defined "temporary or transient business," granted no exclusive privileges to any persons of the class of transient dealers, and referred the granting of licenses to the legal discretion, instead of the mere caprice, of the local authorities, possibly it might have been held constitutional. At all events, that statute differs from ours in important particulars. Section 6 provides that, upon such vendor's filing his sworn application, depositing $500, and paying $25, the state treasurer shall issue a license to him; and § 9 provides that the city or town clerk, when authorized by said board, and upon payment of the license fee, shall issue a license. But it provides that, though such vendor has complied with every requirement of the law down to the time the aldermen or selectmen "act upon such application," they may then refuse the license, if in their judgment it should not be granted. The act does not confer upon this board authority to grant or refuse licenses at their mere option, as in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, and in State v. Conlon, supra. Here the board are required to act forthwith upon the application, and to exercise their judgment whether a license should or should not be granted. If they should refuse to act in any case, they could doubtless be moved by mandamus. When they have acted, and passed their judgment upon the application, resort to mandamus cannot be had, because they are invested with quasi judicial power, and the legal presumption is that they have acted judiciously. No point is made in the respondent's brief that it is not competent to leave the granting of licenses to the judgment of the board of aldermen or selectmen. Discretion should be reposed in some person, otherwise books, pictures, and other merchandise of an immoral character might be offered for sale. Whether there is reason to apprehend that vendors who go about from place to place, disposing of goods by auction and private sale, will deceive and defraud the public as to the quality of the goods sold the legislature, as was said by the court in State v. Conlon, must be the judge.

24 L. R. A.

It must be conceded that the requirements of this law are oppressive upon the class of persons known as "itinerant vendors," in respect to the deposit of $500, and in the payment of a license fee in each town where business is transacted. But the question is not whether the law is oppressive or unjust, but whether it contravenes any provision of the state or Federal Constitution. If it does not, the court has no right to declare the act void, for the Constitution alone is the boundary of the power of the legislature. Cooley, Const. Lim. 10, says: "The government of the United States is one of enumerated powers; the national Constitution being the instrument which specifies them, and in which authority should be found for the exercise of any power which the national government assumes to possess. In this respect it differs from the Constitutions of the several states, which are not grants of powers to the states, but which apportion and impose restrictions upon the powers which the states inherently possess." It is not sufficient to say that the law violates the spirit of the Constitution. "Courts are not at liberty to declare a statute unconstitutional because in their opinion it is opposed to the fundamental principles of republican government, unless those principles are placed beyond legislative encroachment by the Constitution; or because it is opposed to a spirit supposed to pervade the Constitution, but not expressed in words." State v. Corbett, 57 Minn. 345, 24 L. R. A. 498, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 684. It was said in Youngblood v. Sexton that courts cannot annul tax laws because of their operating unequally and unjustly; that, if they could, they might defeat all taxation. See Cooley, Const. Lim. 200, 587, 706, and notes.

We are unable to find that the law in question, as a police regulation, is in contravention of any constitutional provision. We have incidentally considered the authority of the legislature in respect to taxation, but it will be borne in mind that this law imposes a license fee, and not a tax. The distinction will also be observed between the cases where license fees have been imposed by municipal ordinances without charter or other legislative authority, and those where such fees are imposed by the state through legislative enactment. In the latter case the reasonableness of the fees, in respect to their amount, must be left with the sovereign state.

The judgment overruling the demurrer and adjudging the information sufficient is affirmed. The judgment that the respondent is guilty is pro forma reversed, and cause remanded.

Taft, J., dissents.

VIRGINIA SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS.

NORFOLK & WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, Ptff. in Err.,

COMMONWEALTH of Virginia.

(.....Va.....)

1. A train composed of empty coal cars, although destined for a point in another state to procure a load, is not engaged in transporting articles of interstate commerce so as to be beyond the control of state laws.

2. State laws prohibiting the running of railway trains on Sunday, if enacted in good faith for the preservation and protection of the health and morals of the people, and without discrimination against interstate or foreign commerce, are not in conflict with the Constitution of the United States.

(June 11, 1904.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Appomattox County to review a judgment convicting defendant of running trains on Sunday in violation of a statute. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Thomas J. Kirkpatrick, William H. Mann, and F. S. Kirkpatrick, for plaintiff in error:

It has been held by this court that just such a train on its way to Lambert's Point, loaded with coal, was engaged in interstate commerce.

Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 88 Va. 95, 13 L. R. A. 107.

To forbid the return of these empty cars on any given day in the week will impose a burden which will not simply diminish defendant's capacity to do its business by one seventh, but it will cause a disarrangement and congestion of the whole system which will cripple defendant in its coal trade to a much larger extent. This coal trade as a whole and complete transaction is an interstate matter.

Commerce in the sense employed in the Constitution of the United States certainly includes the transportation and all the instrumentalities of shipment or carriage between states.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 22 U. S. 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708; United States v. E. O. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325.

The Virginia statute prohibiting the running of Sunday trains cannot be defended upon the ground that it is within the police power reserved by the state.

Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Leisy v. Hardin, 185 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 86; Brimmer v. Reiman, 188 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485; Voight v. Wright, 141 U. S. 63, 35 L. ed. 688; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823; Minnesota v. Barber, 186 U. S. 818, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters.

Com. Rep. 185; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196 29 L. ed. 158; Coolington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 186 U. S. 114, 34 L. ed. 894, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 178; The Daniel Ball v. United States ("The Daniel Ball"), 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 999; Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547.

Mr. R. Taylor Scott, Attorney General, for defendant in error:

The statute, belonging to the class called by the courts and text-writers "Sunday laws," was enacted by the legislature in the exercise of its police power. This power is unaffected by the Federal courts over and above it, and cannot be taken from the state or exercised in whole or in part by Congress.

United States v. De Witt, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 41, 19 L. ed. 598; Cooley, Const. Lim. 725; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205; Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 31 L. ed. 795.

There is no doubt that the state may control the operation of railroads running only within its limits; but whether a statute prohibiting the running of all trains within the state on Sunday can be upheld is a question on which courts have taken opposing views.

24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 581; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. of Massachusetts, 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. ed. 628; State v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 24 W. Va. 788.

Laws enacted to prevent desecration of the Sabbath are not unconstitutional as a restraint upon trade and commerce.

Such laws may be supported as regulations of police.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 725; Specht v. Com. 8 Pa. 312, 49 Am. Dec. 518; Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 387. Ex parte Andrews, 18 Cal. 678; Ex parte Bird, 19 Cal. 180.

The states of the Union may tax common carriers engaged in interstate commerce, and although the law incidentally may and does affect commerce and its agencies the law is valid.

Picklen v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 601, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 79; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, and Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. of Massachusetts, supra; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. ed. 311.

Buchanan, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error was indicted in the county court of Appomattox county for violating § 3801 of the Code, which is as follows:

"No railroad company, receiver, or trustee controlling or operating a railroad, shall, by any agent or employee, load, unload, run, or transport upon such road on a Sunday, any car, train of cars, or locomotive, nor permit the NOTE.—This case overrules the case of the same name in 13 L. R. A. 107. The present decision accords with that of the United States Supreme Court in Henington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 229, 41 L. 34 L. R. A.

ed. 103. Since the question involved arises under the Constitution of the United States, the decision of the Federal Supreme Court is, of course, controlling.

same to be done by any such agent or employee, except where such cars, trains, or locomotives are used exclusively for the relief of wrecked trains, or trains so disabled as to obstruct the main track of the railroad; or for the transportation of United States mail; or for the transportation of passengers and their baggage; or for the transportation of live stock; or for the transportation of articles of such perishable nature as would be necessarily impaired in value by one day's delay in their passage; provided, however, that if it should be necessary to transport live stock or perishable articles on a Sunday to an extent not sufficient to make a whole train-load, such train-load may be made up with cars loaded with ordinary freight."

Sec. 3802: "The word 'Sunday' in the preceding section shall be construed to embrace only that portion of the day between sunrise and sunset; and trains in transitu having started prior to 12 o'clock on Saturday night, may, in order to reach the terminus or shops of the railroad, run until 9 o'clock the following Sunday morning, but not later."

The case was tried upon the following agreed state of facts: "That the train composed of empty coal cars, which are used exclusively in the coal business, as described below, passed through Appomattox county, and by Appomattox station, between 9 o'clock A. M. and 8 o'clock P. M. of Sunday, April 2, 1893, going from Crewe to Roanoke; said points being divisional terminal points on the Norfolk & Western Railroad. That when the train arrived at Roanoke it would be broken up in the company's yard, and, as soon as practicable, would be put into another train, with another engine and crew, and sent by way of Bluefield, in West Virginia, to the coal mines at Pocahontas, in Virginia, and to others in West Virginia. At these mines the cars would be loaded, and sent by way of Bluefield, in West Virginia, to Lambert's Point, in Virginia. The coal so shipped would be coal sold to parties out of the state of Virginia before it leaves Bluefield, and to be conveyed to the purchasers outside of Virginia by way of Bluefield, West Virginia, and Lambert's Point, Virginia."

"That said train was not one of those included in the exemptions in § 3801, Va. Code 1887."

The plaintiff company was found guilty and fined, and the judgment of the county court was affirmed by the circuit court. The action of the circuit court in affirming the judgment is complained of, and is before us for review in this case.

In the case of Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com., reported in 88 Va. 95, 13 L. R. A. 107, this court held that the statute under which the indictment in this case was made was inconsistent with the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, in so far as it applied to trains running between different states, or engaged in transporting interstate commerce, and therefore void.

The counsel for the plaintiff company insists that the principle decided in that case is the same that is involved in this, and conclusive of it. On the other hand, the attorney general, for the commonwealth, contends that the questions involved in the two cases are different, and, if they were the same, that the decision relied on as controlling this is erroneous, and ought not to be followed.

The train which the plaintiff company was indicted for running in violation of § 3801 of the Code was made up entirely of empty cars, which, it is agreed, were used exclusively in carrying articles of interstate commerce.

The fact that they had been so used in the past, and were intended to be so used in the future, does not show that they were, at the time when the act was done for which the plaintiff company was indicted, engaged in interstate commerce.

It was held by the Supreme Court of the United States in Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 525, 29 L. ed. 715, 718, that "when the products of the farm or the forest are collected and brought in from the surrounding country to a town or station serving as an entrepôt for that particular region, whether on a river or line of railroad, such products are not yet exports, nor are they in process of exportation, nor is exportation begun until they are committed to the common carrier for transportation out of the state to the state of their destination, or have started on their ultimate passage to that state. Until then it is reasonable to regard them as not only within the state of their origin, but as a part of the general mass of property of that state, subject to its jurisdiction, and liable to taxation there, if not taxed by reason of their being intended for exportation, but taxed without any discrimination, in the usual way and manner in which such property is taxed in the state."

If this be the true rule by which to determine when the products of the mine become articles of interstate commerce, and cease to be controlled entirely by the laws of the state, why is it not the correct rule to determine when the carrier of such products becomes engaged in transporting interstate commerce, and is protected and governed by the laws of the United States? In the one case the miner may intend to ship a particular product to another state, and may be preparing the article for shipment, yet it is not an article of interstate commerce until it starts upon its final destination to that state, and until that time is subject to the laws of the state alone, and has none of the rights of an article of interstate commerce. In the other case the carrier may be preparing certain cars upon which to transport the products of the mine to the foreign state, and they may be on their journey to the place from which they are to be shipped, yet why should those cars be considered as engaged in interstate commerce until they are loaded with articles committed to the carrier to be transported to another state?

The reason given for the rule that goods do not become an article of interstate commerce until actually put in motion for some place out of the state, or committed to the carrier for such transportation, is that until that time the article, though intended for exportation, may never be exported, as the owner has the perfect right to change his mind at any time.

The common carrier has the same right to change his mind, and ship on other cars than those which he may have provided for that purpose, and the cars which were intended for that purpose may never be used.

The rule fixed by the supreme court in the one case seems equally applicable to the other. Applying that rule to the facts of this case, it would seem that the train which the plaintiff company was indicted for running was not when so running engaged in transporting articles of interstate commerce, and was therefore controlled exclusively by the laws of the state.

But if this be not the correct view, and it be held that the plaintiff, in running the train, was engaged in the business of interstate commerce, was the legislation in question within the powers reserved to the state, and not in conflict with the Constitution of the United States?

The right of the state to enact laws to protect the lives, health, and property of its citizens, and to preserve good order and the public morals, is a matter of so much consequence, and so far-reaching in its effects, that its courts ought not to hold that the statutes made for that purpose are inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States, unless they are plainly and clearly so.

"Questions of this nature," as was said by Mr. Justice Story in Houston v. Moore, 18 U. S. 5 Wheat. 1, 5 L. ed. 19, at an early day in our judicial history, "are always of great importance and delicacy. They involve interests of so much magnitude, and of such deep and permanent public concern, that they cannot but be approached with uncommon anxiety. The sovereignty of a state in the exercise of its legislation is not to be impaired, unless it be clear that it has transcended its legitimate authority; nor ought any power to be sought much less to be adjudged in favor of the United States, unless it be clearly within the reach of its constitutional charter."

And in the very recent case of Plumley v. Massachusetts, decided at the last term of the same court, and reported in 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 238, the court, speaking through Mr. Justice Harlan (at pages 479, 480, 155 U. S., and pages 229, 230, 39 L. ed.), said: "We are not unmindful of the fact—indeed, this court has often had occasion to observe—that the acknowledged power of the states to protect the morals, the health, and safety of their people, by appropriate legislation, sometimes touches, in its exercise, the line separating the respective domains of national and state authority. But in view of the complex system of government which exists in this country, 'presenting,' as this court, speaking by Chief Justice Marshall, has said, 'the rare and difficult scheme of one general government whose action extends over the whole, but which possesses only certain enumerated powers, and of enumerated state governments which retain and exercise all powers not delegated to the Union,' the judiciary of the United States should not strike down a legislative enactment of a state,—especially if it has direct connection with the social order, the health and morals of its people,—unless such legislation plainly and palpably violates some right granted or secured by the national Constitution, or encroaches upon the authority delegated to the United States for the attainment of objects of national concern."

34 L. R. A.

As the Supreme Court of the United States is the final arbiter of questions of this nature, we must look to its decisions for guidance in determining the question. Neither the counsel nor the court have been able to find any decision of that court upon the particular question involved in this case; in fact, counsel admit that there is no such decision.

Numerous decisions have been made by that court, however, in which the powers delegated to the United States by the commerce clause of the Constitution, and the police powers reserved by the states, have been considered; and, while these decisions are not altogether consistent and harmonious, yet from them are to be gathered the principles which must govern us in the decision of this case.

Chief Justice Marshall, in the leading case of Gibbons v. Ogden, 23 U. S. 9 Wheat. 203, 6 L. ed. 71, which involved the inspection laws of one of the states said: "They form a portion of that immense mass of legislation which embraces everything within the territory of a state not surrendered to the general government, all of which can be most advantageously exercised by the states themselves. Inspection laws, quarantine laws, health laws of every description, as well as laws for regulating the internal commerce of a state, and those which respect turnpike roads, ferries, etc., are component parts of this mass. No direct general power over these objects is granted to Congress; and consequently they remain subject to state legislation."

Mr. Justice Grier, in the Passenger Cases, 48 U. S. 7 How., at page 457, 13 L. ed. 775, in discussing the police power of the state of Massachusetts, said: "This right of the states has its foundation in the sacred law of self-defense, which no power granted to Congress can restrain or annul. It is admitted by all that those powers which relate to merely municipal legislation, or what may be more properly called 'internal police,' are not surrendered or restrained; and that it is as competent and necessary for a state to provide precautionary measures against the moral pestilence of paupers, vagabonds, and convicts as it is to guard against physical pestilence which may arise from unsound and infectious articles imported."

In the Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U. S. 16 Wall., at page 62; 21 L. ed. 404, Mr. Justice Miller, speaking for the court, said:

"The power [police] here exercised by the legislature of Louisiana is, in its essential nature, one which has been, up to the present period in the constitutional history of this country, always conceded to belong to the states, however it may now be questioned in some of its details." Again he says: "This power is, and must be, from its very nature, incapable of any very exact definition or limitation. Upon it depends the security of social order, the life and health of the citizen, the comfort of an existence in a thickly populated community, the enjoyment of private and social life, and the beneficial use of property." He then quotes with approval the language of Chief Justice Redfield in the case of Thorpe v.

Rutland & B. R. Co. 27 Vt. 140, 62 Am. Dec. 625, as follows: "It extends," says another eminent judge, "to the protection of the lives, limbs, health, comfort, and quiet of all persons, and the protection of all property, within the state; . . . and persons and property are subjected to all kinds of restraints and burdens in order to secure the general comfort, health, and prosperity of the state. Of the perfect right of the legislature to do this, no question ever was, or, upon acknowledged general principles, ever can be, made, so far as natural persons are concerned."

It was said by Mr. Justice Davis in Pests v. Morgan, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 581, 582, 22 L. ed. 201, 202: "That the power to establish quarantine laws rests with the states, and has not been surrendered to the general government, is settled in Gibbons v. Ogden. The source of this power is in the acknowledged right of a state to provide for the health of its people, and although this power, when set in motion, may, in a greater or less degree, affect commerce, yet the laws passed in the exercise of this power are not enacted for such an object. They are enacted for the sole purpose of preserving the public health, and, if they injuriously affect commerce, Congress, under the power to regulate it, may control them. Of necessity, they operate on vessels engaged in commerce, and may produce delay or inconvenience; but they are still lawful, when not opposed to any constitutional provision, or any act of Congress on the subject."

In Sherlock v. Ailing, 98 U. S. 99, 103, 23 L. ed. 819, 820, Mr. Justice Field, in delivering the unanimous opinion of the court, said: "In conferring, upon Congress the regulation of commerce it was never intended to cut the states off from legislating on all subjects relating to the health, life, and safety of their citizens, though the legislation might indirectly affect the commerce of the country. Legislation in a great variety of ways, may affect commerce, and persons engaged in it, without constituting a regulation of it, within the meaning of the Constitution." Approved in Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S., at page 23, 32 L. ed. 351, and Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S., at page 101, 32 L. ed. 354, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 288.

It was said in Hall v. De Guir, 95 U. S., at page 488, 24 L. ed. 548, as quoted with approval by that court in 128 U. S., at page 23, 32 L. ed. 351: "As has been often said, 'legislation [by a state] may in a great variety of ways affect commerce, and persons engaged in it, without constituting a regulation of it, within the meaning of the Constitution,'" unless, under the guise of police regulations, it imposes a direct burden upon interstate commerce, or interferes directly with its function.

In Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 470, 471, 24 L. ed. 527, 529, 530, it was said by Mr. Justice Strong, that "we admit that the deposit in Congress of the power to regulate foreign commerce and commerce among the states was not a surrender of that which may properly be denominated police power. What that power is, is difficult to define with sharp precision. It is generally said to extend to making regulations promotive of domestic order, morals, health, and safety."

84 L. R. A.

In the same case (p. 472, L. ed. p. 531), it is said: "While we unhesitatingly admit that a state may pass sanitary laws, and laws for the protection of life, liberty, health, or property within its borders; while it may prevent persons and animals suffering under contagious or infectious disorders, or convicts, etc., from entering the state; while, for the purpose of self-protection, it may establish quarantine and reasonable inspection laws, it may not interfere with transportation into or through the state, beyond what is absolutely necessary for its self-protection. It may not, under the cover of exerting its police powers, substantially prohibit or burden either foreign or interstate commerce."

In the case of Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 99, 32 L. ed. 352, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 288, it was held that "a state statute which requires locomotive engineers, and other persons employed by a railroad company in a capacity which calls for the ability to distinguish and discriminate between color signals, to be examined in this respect from time to time by a tribunal established for the purpose, and which exacts a fee from the company for the service of examination, does not deprive the company of its property without due process of law, and, so far as it affects interstate commerce, is within the competency of the state to enact, until Congress legislates on the subject."

And in that case the court cites (page 101, 128 U. S., and page 354, 32 L. ed.) with approval Sherlock v. Ailing, 98 U. S. 99, 104, 23 L. ed. 819, 820, in which it was held that state legislation of that character, "relating to the rights, duties, and liabilities of citizens, and only indirectly and remotely affecting the operations of commerce, is of obligatory force upon citizens within its territorial jurisdiction, whether on land or water, or engaged in commerce, foreign or interstate, or in any other pursuit."

In Kimminsh v. Ball, 129 U. S. 217, 32 L. ed. 695, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 407, the court held that a statute of the state of Iowa which provided that any person having in his possession "Texas cattle," under certain circumstances, should be liable for damages which might accrue from allowing them to run at large and thereby spread the disease known as "Texas fever," was not in conflict with the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, although the necessary effect would be to interfere with the introduction into that state of the class of cattle to which the statute applied.

And the court in referring to the case of Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527, in which the statute of Missouri, in a somewhat similar though a much broader statute, was held to be in violation of the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution, said that, while that was true, yet that the court in that case said: "At the same time the court admitted unhesitatingly that a state may pass laws to prevent animals suffering from contagious or infectious diseases from entering within it."

In Wilkerson v. Rahrer ("Re Rahrer"), 140 U. S. 545, 554, 35 L. ed. 572, 574, Chief Justice Fuller said, in delivering the opinion of the court, that "the power of the state to impose restraints and burdens upon persons and property in conservation and promotion of the public health, good order, and prosperity is a power originally and always belonging to the states, not surrendered by them to the general government, nor directly restrained by the Constitution of the United States, and essentially exclusive.

"And this court has uniformly recognized state legislation, legitimately for police purposes, as not, in the sense of the Constitution, necessarily infringing upon any right which has been conferred expressly or by implication to the national government."

In Pumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 471, 39 L. ed. 223, 226, after discussing former decisions of the court, Mr. Justice Harlan, speaking for the court, said: "While in each of those cases it was held the reserved police powers of the states could not control the prohibitions of the Federal Constitution, nor the powers of the government (New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana L. & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516), it was distinctly stated that the grant to Congress of authority to regulate foreign and interstate commerce did not involve a surrender by the states of their police powers."

"In none of the above cases is there to be found a suggestion or intimation that the Constitution of the United States took from the states the power of preventing deception and fraud in the sale, within their respective limits, of articles, in whatever state manufactured, or that that instrument secured to anyone the privilege of committing a wrong against society."

In United States v. E. O. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 11, 39 L. ed. 825, 828, Chief Justice Fuller said: "It cannot be denied that the power of a state to protect the lives, health, and property of its citizens, and to preserve good order and the public morals, 'the power to govern man and things within the limits of its dominion,' is a power originally and always belonging to the states, not surrendered by them to the general government, nor directly restrained by the Constitution of the United States, and essentially exclusive." Again, at page 18, 156 U. S., and page 329, 39 L. ed. in the same opinion, he says: "It is vital that the independence, of the commercial power and of the police power, and the delimitation between them, however sometimes perplexing, should always be recognized and observed, for while the one furnishes the strongest bond of union, the other is essential to the preservation of the autonomy of the states as required by our dual form of government."

I think from the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States in the cases referred to above, and others not cited, this conclusion may be drawn: that the state may, in order to secure and protect the lives or health of its citizens, or to preserve good order and the public morals, legislate for such purposes, in good faith, and without discrimination against interstate or foreign commerce, without violating the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, although such legislation may sometimes touch, in its exercise, the line separating the respective domains of national and state authority, and to some extent affect foreign and interstate commerce.

Was the statute which we are considering passed, in good faith, for the purpose of protecting the health and of preserving the morals of the people of the state?

The experience of mankind has shown the wisdom and necessity of having, at stated intervals, a day of rest for man and beast from their customary labors. It is necessary both for the physical and moral nature of man. The government of the United States, as well as the government of the states of the Union, recognize this requirement for rest in man's nature, and provide for it in their respective jurisdictions.

In Ex parte Newman, reported in 9 Cal., at page 519, Judge Field, now of the Supreme Court of the United States, in his dissenting opinion, which afterwards became the law of that state (Ex parte Andrews, 18 Cal. 676), discussing the necessity and propriety of such a law with much force and learning, says, among other things, that the legislature, in the enactment of such a statute, "has given the sanction of law to a rule of conduct which the entire civilized world recognizes as essential to the physical and moral well-being of society. Upon no subject is there such a concurrence of opinion among philosophers, moralists, and statesmen of all nations, as of the necessity of periodical cessations from labor. One day in seven is the rule founded in experience, and sustained by science. There is no nation possessing any degree of civilization where the rule is not observed, either from the sanctions of the law, or the sanctions of religion. This fact has not escaped the observation of men of science, and distinguished philosophers have not hesitated to pronounce the rule founded upon the law of our race. . . . Its aim is to prevent the physical and moral debility which springs from uninterrupted labor, and in this aspect it is a beneficent and merciful law. It gives one day to the poor and dependent from the enjoyment of which no capital or power is permitted to deprive them. It is theirs for repose, for social intercourse, for moral culture, and, if they choose, for divine worship."

Judge Thurman, in Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St., at page 891, says that "wisdom requires that men should refrain from labor at least one day in seven, and the advantages of having the day of rest fixed, and so fixed as to happen at regularly recurring intervals, are too obvious to be overlooked."

The Supreme Court of the United States said in Soon Hing v. Crowley, 118 U. S. 708, 710, 28 L. ed. 1145, 1147, that "laws setting aside Sunday as a day of rest are upheld, not from any right of the government to legislate for the promotion of religious observances, but from its right to protect all persons from the physical and moral debasement which comes from uninterrupted labor. Such laws have always been deemed beneficent and merciful laws, especially to the poor and dependent to the laborers in our factories and workshops and in the heated rooms of our cities; and their validity has been sustained by the highest courts of the states."

"There can no longer be any question," says Mr. Cooley, "if any there ever was, that such [Sunday] laws may be supported as regulations of police." Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 725 note 8, and cases cited.

It cannot be doubted that such laws are police regulations of the greatest utility for the physical and moral well-being of society. Neither is there any question that the statute under discussion was enacted in good faith for the preservation and protection of the health and morals of the people of this state, and without any discrimination whatever against interstate or foreign commerce, and that its only effect upon such commerce would be to delay it a few hours in its journey from the point of shipment to its destination. The statute provides for the uninterrupted shipment of articles of commerce of such a perishable character that one day's delay in their shipment would impair their value. There is nothing in the character of coal, and other articles of commerce which are not injured by short delays, or in fact of any article of commerce, that requires that the laws of the state enacted and necessary for the preservation and promotion of the health and morals of its people should be struck down in order that they may have a more rapid shipment.

I am of opinion that the statute which the plaintiff company was indicted for violating is not in conflict with the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, and that the judgment of the Circuit Court was right, and should be affirmed. And the case between the same parties, hereinbefore referred to, and reported in 88 Va. and 18 L. R. A., in which a different conclusion was reached, was not correctly decided, and should be overruled.

Harrison, J., who sat in the argument of this case, but was absent when the opinion was delivered, expressed his concurrence by letter.

Since this opinion was written the Supreme Court of the United States has decided that a statute of the state of Georgia, similar to the one under consideration, was not in conflict with the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, but was a valid exercise of the police power of the state. Hennington v. Georgia (decided May 18, 1896) 168 U. S. 299, 41 L. ed. 166.

NEBRASKA SUPREME COURT.

Rachel B. GREENE, Appt.,

v.

Charles GREENE.

(.....Neb.....)

*1. Alimony may be defined to be such sum as is ordered by the court to be paid to the

*Headnotes by HARRISON, J.

NOTE.—Allowance to husband from property held by the wife in divorce cases.

- I. Permanent allowance.
- II. Statutes.
- III. Alimony pendente lite.
- IV. English cases.

I. Permanent allowance.

Where the title to property derived through the husband has been placed in the wife's name, courts in granting a divorce have allowed the husband's claim to a part of the same, and this on the ground of equity, and some on the construction of statutes authorizing such relief; and some have denied such relief where the equity was not established. The conduct of the parties in the procurement of the title and treatment of each other, as well as statutes which are mandatory or permissive, enters largely into the propriety of such a decree.

The claim of the husband against property held in the name of his wife should properly be called an equity, though it has been denominated by some courts a division of property, and by some alimony or a divorce of property. Alimony, technically so called, as a support in favor of a husband out of the wife's property without regard to its source, is generally denied; but the tendency seems to be to place the husband and wife on an equality on this question, as the rights and powers of a wife expand, and the respective rights and powers of the husband contract; and alimony has been given to the husband in some cases. See alimony pendente lite, infra, III.

wife by the husband for her support during the time she lives separate from him, or to be paid by her late husband for her maintenance after divorce from the marriage tie. This latter is a creation of modern law, and is what is known as "permanent alimony."

2. A husband cannot, in this state, whether he or the wife be granted the divorce, recover alimony, to be paid out of the divorced wife's separate estate.

band contract; and alimony has been given to the husband in some cases. See alimony pendente lite, infra, III.

Most of the cases in this note, like the case of GREENE v. GREENE, are attempts by the husband to obtain property held in the name of the wife on the granting of the divorce.

The case of GREENE v. GREENE holds that Neb. Comp. Stat. 1895, chap. 25, § 10, providing that a petition or bill for divorce, alimony, and maintenance may be exhibited by a wife in her own name as well as by the husband, does not authorize a decree for alimony and maintenance in favor of a husband in an action of divorce, but was intended to allow the wife to sue in her own name instead of by "next friend."

The husband claimed alimony, but the court held that there was no authority under the statute for any allowance of alimony. This was a dictum, as it was not allowed in the decree and the appeal by the wife was on another question.

The lower court allowed his claim for property the title of which was in his wife, and this was affirmed because the record did not contain all of the evidence.

A decree of divorce for fault of the wife gave to the husband land held in her name but the title to which was "derived through him," under Wis. Rev. Stat. § 2364, providing for a division of the husband's property, and so much of the estate of the wife as shall have been derived from the hus-

3. Section 10, chap. 25, Comp. Stat., which reads as follows: "A petition or bill of divorce, alimony, and maintenance may be exhibited by a wife in her own name, as well as a husband; and in all cases the respondent may answer such petition or bill without oath; and in all cases of divorce, alimony, and maintenance, when personal service cannot be had, service by publication may be made as is provided by law in other civil cases under the Code of Civil Procedure."—Held, to confer upon the wife the right to commence an action of divorce in her own name, and without the intervention in the suit of a "next friend," as was formerly required, and not to authorize the granting of alimony or maintenance to the husband, to be paid from the estate of the former wife.

4. When it appears from statements in the bill of exceptions that it does not contain all the evidence introduced at the trial of the case, such must be taken to be the fact, in the absence of any other or further proof on the subject than the certificate to the bill to the effect that it contains all the evidence.

5. Where a bill of exceptions does not contain all the evidence adduced at the trial, the evidence will not be examined by this court to ascertain whether it was sufficient to support the finding and decree of the trial court.

6. The record presented to this court did not disclose that any objections were made in the district court to its trial and adjudication in this, an action for divorce, of the alleged rights of a husband in real estate, the title to which rested in the wife. Held, that the questions will not be considered in this court.

(November 5, 1896.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a decree of the District Court for York County granting plaintiff a portion of the property standing in his wife's name in an action by him for divorce. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Harwood, Ames, & Pettis and Sedgwick & Power for appellant.

band, and §2372 providing that no judgment of divorce shall affect the right of the wife in her separate property, "except as provided in this chapter." It was said that the wife's separate property cannot be touched unless the property in her name can be properly said to have been derived from her husband. Gallagher v. Gallagher, 59 Wis. 461.

And a decree of divorce in favor of a wife directed her to convey to her husband land which she entered with the proceeds of property which she had sold belonging to him, and she was allowed to retain land which he had entered in her name with money which she had brought to him on her marriage. Stewartson v. Stewartson, 15 Ill. 148.

So, on a divorce for fault of the husband he was decreed one half of the real estate the title of which was held by her. And Wash. Code, §2007, providing for an equitable division of property on a divorce, applies to her separate property. Webster v. Webster, 2 Wash. 417.

And a husband was decreed an equitable share in the property, where he obtained a divorce on account of the wife's misconduct, and she had obtained the title to all his personal and real estate, and drove him from the premises an old man, houseless, homeless, moneyless, without property and among strangers. Snodgrass v. Snodgrass, 40 Kan. 494.

And the husband, on a divorce for the fault of his wife, was awarded the rents and profits as well as the possession of certain property part of the wife's general estate, and the costs of the case. Milliken & V. (Tenn.) Code, § 3829, provided that where a marriage was dissolved at the suit of the husband, and the husband was the owner of lands, his interest to the land should not be taken away by the dissolution, but should remain as though the marriage had continued. This statute did not create a technical separate estate in the wife, and did not prevent the decree that was made in this case. Brasfield v. Brasfield (Tenn.) 96 S. W. 384.

So, on a divorce for the fault of the husband, he was awarded one fifth of the income of slaves during his life, and a share in the land, which slaves and land had been conveyed to a trustee for the wife by the husband subsequent to the marriage, although Tex. Stat. Art. 849, authorizing a division of property on a divorce, provided that nothing shall be construed to compel either party to divest him or her self of the title to real estate or slaves. The court said this case is an exception to the general rule. The wife derived her property from her husband. By law he was entitled to the management of the separate property of the wife, and to the support out of its proceeds. The husband in this case had stripped himself of everything, and this decree does not infringe the title to the slaves. Fitts v. Fitts, 14 Tex. 443.

In Meldrum v. Meldrum, 15 Colo. 478, 11 L. R. A. 65, where the wife had by protestations of love and affection obtained a large amount of property by gift from her husband, through fraud and deceit, and thereafter procured a divorce from him, in a subsequent suit by him to set aside the deed the conveyance was set aside and he was not precluded by the divorce proceedings in the county court, the court saying, there is no question of alimony here, the wife alone can maintain such an action, and the husband was not required to set up in his cross-complaint in divorce this cause of action.

In Oliver v. Oliver, 5 Ala. 75, where a husband asked on appeal for an allowance out of the estate of the wife for having paid off her debts before marriage to him, and a divorce was granted to her for this fault, it was held he could not have such affirmative relief without a cross bill; but it was said that a court of chancery could properly refuse relief unless the complainant should do equity. In this case after the divorce she released all her interest in a fund settled by the husband on her as separate estate, and the decree of the chancellor was then affirmed.

And on a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, thereafter, "by the agreement of the parties," it was further decreed that C. should have the custody of the three elder children, and that for the support and education of the children C. should receive one third of the rents and profits to which Mrs. C. was entitled. Cheever v. Wilson, 78 U. S. 108, 19 L. ed. 604.

In Wetmore v. Wetmore, 5 Or. 469, it was said that Or. Civil Code, § 495, provides that whenever a marriage shall be declared void or dissolved, the party at whose prayer such decree shall be made, shall in all cases be entitled to the undivided one-third part in his or her individual right in fee of the whole of the real estate owned by the other at the time of such decree, in addition to the further decree for maintenance provided for in § 497.

In Small v. Small, 42 Iowa, 111, it was said that under Iowa Code, § 2223, the court may order either party to pay the clerk a sum of money for the separate support and maintenance of the adverse party and the children, and to enable such party to prosecute or defend the action.

But where a husband asked for a decree of land as alimony, it was held that an action for alimony

Messrs. George B. France and N. V. Harlan, for appellee:

The court has jurisdiction to decree and make a finding upon the dissolution of the marriage contract adjusting the property rights and protecting the husband's equitable interests in the real property and his curtesy in the homestead.

Cochran v. Cochran, 42 Neb. 612.

It is not unusual for the courts to grant alimony to the wife when the husband is granted the divorce.

Brandon v. Brandon, 14 Kan. 842; Graves v. Graves, 108 Mass. 814.

If the husband is entitled to alimony the fact that the divorce is granted to the wife would not govern the court's action in adjusting the same.

A petition or bill of divorce, alimony, and maintenance may be exhibited by the wife in her own name as well as the husband.

Neb. Comp. Stat. 1895, § 2865.

The foregoing statute is sufficient authority for sustaining the action of the court without any other precedent.

Where lands are held by the wife, who applies for a divorce, the court may, upon decreeing alimony, direct that such lands be divided between the parties, and that they execute to each other conveyances to perfect such decree.

Stewartson v. Stewartson, 15 Ill. 146; Wheeler v. Wheeler, 18 Ill. 89; 2 Bishop, Mar. & Div. § 469; Small v. Small, 28 Neb. 843; Brandon v. Brandon, supra; Cole v. Cole, 23 Iowa, 433; Smith v. Smith, 19 Neb. 715; Shafer v. Shafer, 10 Neb. 472; Gallagher v. Gallagher, 89 Wis. 461; Johnston v. Johnston, 54 Kan. 726; Loveren v. Loveren, 106 Cal. 509; Alexander v. Alexander, 140 Ind. 560; Ferry v. Ferry, 9 Wash. 239; Van Brunt v. Van Brunt, 53 Kan. 380; Snodgrass v. Snodgrass, 40 Kan. 494.

cannot be maintained by the husband against the wife. Somers v. Somers, 39 Kan. 122.

And a husband on a divorce for cruel treatment by him, was refused all claim against land bought by him and conveyed to his wife to prevent confiscation by the government during the last rebellion. Goodrich v. Goodrich, 44 Ala. 670.

So, on a divorce for the fault of the husband, property conveyed to the wife by the husband during marriage, to defraud his creditors, where he claimed that she held it on trust and that the conveyance was to be void on a divorce, was decreed to the wife as her separate property, and a decree giving the same to her husband was reversed. Stafford v. Stafford, 41 Tex. 111.

So, a husband was refused a revocation of a settlement of property made by him upon his wife, where a divorce was decreed to her on account of his misconduct, although Ind. Rev. Stat. 1881, § 1045, provided that in considering "alimony" for the wife a settlement made by the husband might be considered to determine what would be a fair award; but in this case the wife abandoned all claim to alimony. In this case the husband claimed that his wife had artfully secured possession of his property by protestations of reconciliation, and then abandoned him and sued for a divorce. This decree was on the ground that a husband should not be awarded a premium for his misconduct. Stults v. Stults, 107 Ind. 400.

A husband on a divorce was refused a decree for a conveyance of property held by the wife, where the investment was made with her money, although the common law in force vested such money in the husband. The investment in her name was regarded as a settlement upon her, and he was guilty of cruel treatment which was the ground of the divorce. Jackson v. Jackson, 91 U. S. 122, 23 L. ed. 258, Reversing Jackson v. Jackson, 1 MacArth. 84, where the husband was allowed a division of property held as separate estate by the wife, procured by joint earnings, and where the divorce was granted on original bill by the wife, and cross bill for divorce was refused, but the cross bill prayed for the restoration of title. Although alimony was not asked, it was germane to the subject-matter of the petition and presented by the cross bill, and D. C. Stat. regulating divorces, § 9, provided that the court allowing a divorce may award alimony to the wife, and dower and reasonable property. When the statute directed an allowance of property to the wife the power was given to divorce the property as well as the parties.

A husband was refused a claim against property settled on his wife bought with joint means, where a divorce was granted the wife for his fault. The District of Columbia statute relating to married woman's estate was changed and now takes away the power claimed in Jackson v. Jackson, supra. A husband cannot rescind a settlement and take back property by procuring a divorce for his fault. Hinds v. Hinds, 7 Mackey, 85.

And a husband was refused a decree setting aside a deed of trust to his wife which was confirmed by a decree of court on a divorce from bed and board, where there was a subsequent decree of divorce a vinculo matrimonii and the husband brought suit to set aside the first decree and to have the property restored. 2 Stant. (Ky.) Rev. Stat. 21, providing that all property remaining in kind obtained by one party through the other during marriage by reason thereof, shall be restored on granting a divorce, did not apply because the property came to her on account of the separation and because she could not live with him and it was in place of alimony. Flood v. Flood, 5 Bush, 160.

And a husband was refused the restoration of title of land, conveyed in trust for the sole and separate use of his wife after they were married, where a divorce a vinculo matrimonii was granted to him. Ky. Rev. Stat. chap. 47, art. 2, § 6, providing that upon final decree of divorce from the bond of matrimony, the party shall be restored to such property, not disposed of, obtained from or through the other before or during marriage, "in consideration or by reason thereof," did not authorize the restoration of this property. The mere existence of the marital relation did not constitute the consideration for the conveyance in the sense in which that term was used in the statute. Phillips v. Phillips, 9 Bush, 183.

Where a trustee holding land for the husband after conviction and sentence of the husband to the penitentiary, conveyed the land to a third party, who reconveyed a part to the wife for her support and that of a child, and she obtained a decree of divorce which directed that she should enjoy for her support the land conveyed to her, the husband could not set aside this conveyance and this decree, after he was pardoned, as the decree only gave her what the statute gave her, and the breach of trust of the trustee in conveying lands to her could not be tried in a motion to set aside the divorce decree. Johnson v. Johnson, Walk. Ch. (Mich.) 309.

In a suit by the wife for divorce from bed and board, where the husband on cross petition asked to be restored to real estate which he had given to her in consideration that she should deport herself as an affectionate and dutiful wife, and which she

Harrison, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was instituted in the district court of York county by the appellee against the appellant; the objects sought being to obtain a divorce from her, and other relief in regard to certain property rights. Appellant's desertion of him was alleged by appellee as the ground for the claim of divorce. It was pleaded in the petition that the parties were married at Johnsonburg, New Jersey, October 13, 1869, and that on or about November 1, 1888, the appellant deserted appellee, and for more than two years had been wilfully absent from him, without just cause or reason. The petition also contained a somewhat extended account of the beginning and course of their married life, and more particularly the business and financial transactions engaged in by the appellee, and reverses therein, and the consequent changes in location, etc. And it is of the statements that appellee purchased a certain tract of 40 acres of land in York county, and near York, and also a lot in York, upon which he claims to have erected a store building; that this property belonged to appellee, but had been placed in the name of Robert Blair, contrary to the wishes, and against or in fraud of the rights, of appellee; that Robert Blair, deceased at the time of this action, made a will in which he devised the aforementioned land and lot to his three daughters,—the undivided one-half interest therein to appellant, and the undivided one-half to the other two. It is pleaded in the answer and shown by the evidence that the two sisters of appellant afterwards conveyed to her the title which they acquired to the aforesaid property. It was further set forth in the petition that there were four children, issue of the marriage, with the care, custody, and education of whom, it was alleged, the had failed to do, a decree in conformity with the petition was reversed, as he could not claim that the consideration had failed, because the promise of the wife was no legal obligation, and Ky. Rev. Stat. chap. 47, § 6, providing for the restoration of property on a decree from the bonds of matrimony, did not apply to a decree of divorce from bed and board. A decree was made giving her a divorce from bed and board and that she should be protected in the use of the property. Orr v. Orr, 8 Bush, 155.

Kentucky Code, § 435, providing that every judgment of divorce shall contain an order of restoration of property, obtained by one party from or through the other, in consideration of and during marriage, did not authorize the enforcement of an order of restoration to the husband, where the decree for the restoration was made after an order was entered discontinuing his claim to the property in the divorce suit. Bennett v. Bennett, 95 Ky. 545.

And a wife was allowed a recovery of her land which the husband had sold after he had obtained a divorce from her. It was held that his title resulting from the marriage ceased with the legal dissolution of that union, the same as though he was dead. Hayes v. Sanderson, 7 Bush, 489.

So, where a wife obtained a divorce a mensa et thoro, and the husband denied her right to recover and enjoy possession of her land, except on condition that she return, she was entitled to recover from him the possession and use of her land. Taylor v. Taylor, 112 N. C. 134.

Massachusetts Gen. Stat. chap. 104, § 44, authorizing the court to grant a share of the wife's estate in the nature of alimony to the husband, only applies to a decree of divorce from the bond of matrimony absolutely and finally severing the marriage tie, and does not apply to a divorce in solido in his favor. Garnett v. Garnett, 114 Mass. 347.

In Highley v. Allen, 5 Mo. App. 521, it was said that the court in its decree could not give to the husband any portion of the property of the wife.

In Abel v. Abel, 89 Iowa, 300, it was held that "the answer of the defendant asks, in case of a decree of divorce, that a part of the property be granted to him. The district court correctly denied such relief. It is not a case where the party in fault is entitled to alimony." This was because the merits of the case did not justify such a decree, as the Iowa Code authorizes alimony to the husband. See Small v. Small, 43 Iowa, 111.

A decree of divorce giving the wife all the husband's property, and "directing her to pay his debts," was unwarranted. There was no precedent for such a decree. Ross v. Ross, 73 Ill. 402.

34 L. R. A.

In Ex parte Spencer, 88 Cal. 400, it was said that it is true that "alimony" in its strict technical sense proceeds only from husband to wife.

II. Statutes.

The following additional statutes give to the husband certain rights in the wife's property, and some of them allow him alimony and maintenance.

New Hampshire Pub. Stat. 1891, chap. 175, § 17, provides that upon a decree of nullity or divorce the court may decree that the husband shall have a part of the estate of the wife in the nature of alimony, as justice may require.

Batt. (N. C.) Rev. chap. 37, § 8, provides that on a divorce from bed and board the court may decree to the party on whose application it was granted alimony not to exceed one third of the net annual income of the other party. Section 14 provides that on a divorce for adultery or impotency the guilty party shall lose all right to courtesy or dower, or to share in the personal property of the other. Section 15 provides that a wife eloping with an adulterer shall forfeit all right to property of her husband settled upon her on the sole consideration of marriage, before or after marriage, if the husband shall have commenced an action for divorce during his lifetime.

Rhode Island Pub. Stat. 1883, chap. 167, § 12, provides that in a case of divorce the court may assign to the petitioner a separate maintenance of the estate or property of the husband or wife, as may be necessary or proper.

Rhode Island Pub. Stat. 1883, chap. 167, § 4, provides that on a divorce for affinity, consanguinity, impotency, idioy, lunacy, or crime, the wife shall have restored to her all her lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and may have restoration of her personal property. Section 5 provides that on a divorce for adultery by the wife, the husband shall hold her personal property forever, and her real estate not secured to her by law during her natural life, if issue is born alive of her body during marriage, otherwise during her natural life only, if he survives her.

Vermont Gen. Stat. 1870, chap. 70, § 83, provides that on a divorce for adultery by the wife, the husband shall hold her personal estate forever, and he shall hold her real estate so long as they both shall live, and shall have tenancy by courtesy if he survives her.

Tennessee Code, § 3329, provides that when a marriage is dissolved at the suit of the husband, and the defendant is the owner in her own right of lands, his rights to the rents and profits of the same shall not be impaired by the dissolution. And he appellant was wholly unqualified to be trusted; that by the will of appellant's father the sum of $125,000 was bequeathed in such manner that she was entitled to receive the income therefrom, amounting to $6,000 per annum; that appellant "is the owner of a large amount of property, as hereinbefore alleged, and the plaintiff is possessed of but little means and has but little annual income, and he is unable to perform manual labor, as he is afflicted with what is commonly known as 'hip-joint disease,' and is unable to support himself by reason thereof, and the defendant absolutely refuses to convey that which is justly due him, or to contribute anything to his support." The prayer of the petition was as follows: "The plaintiff therefore prays that he may be divorced from the defendant, and that he may be given the custody of the said minor children, and that the defendant be decreed to pay him reasonable alimony, and to convey to him each and every part of the lands hereinbefore described, and for such other and further relief as equity may require." In her answer the appellant set forth the purchase of the properties in and near York as having been made with money furnished by her father; that they were so purchased for her, but that the title was taken in the name of her father; that after his death it was discovered that in his will she had been given the one-half interest in them, and her two sisters one-half interest; that the two sisters afterwards conveyed to her all title or interest they had in the properties in York county. And the answer continued: "That prior to the beginning of this action . . . the said plaintiff, by a certain indenture, duly executed, signed, witnessed, acknowledged, and delivered with and to one Thomas Kays as the trustee and agent of this defendant, for a good and valuable consideration, released, relinquished, and conveyed to and for the use of this defendant all his claim, right, title, or interest, or pretended claim, right, title, or interest, in or to several tracts of land, and every of them, and thereby, upon consideration as aforesaid, expressly admitted and acknowledged that this defendant was the true and only owner of all the same, as her own separate estate and property, free from all interest, title, or control of said plaintiff, whereby this defendant avers that this plaintiff is estopped to assert or maintain that he has, or has had since the 24th day of July, 1883, any right, title, claim, lien, or interest in or to said lands, or any of them. All of which matters were shall also be entitled to her personal estate in possession or in action. Section 5531 provides that on divorce for adultery of the wife she cannot alienate any of her lands, and at her death they shall be distributed as though she had died intestate.

New York Rev. Stat. (1896, Birdseye) p. 803, § 18, subs. 3, provides that where an action for divorce is brought by the wife, and the plaintiff is the owner of any real or personal property, or has in her possession any personal property left with her by the defendant or acquired by her own industry, or given to her, or if she may become entitled to any property by the decease of a relative intestate, the defendant shall not have any interest therein. Section 19, subs. 2, provides that when an action is brought by the husband the judgment dissolving the marriage does not affect the plaintiff's interest in and to any real or personal property which the defendant owns or possesses when the judgment is rendered.

Maine Rev. Stat. 1888, chap. 60, § 10, provides that when a divorce is decreed to the husband for adultery of the wife, he may hold her personal estate of which she was seized during marriage, during his life, if they had children born alive during marriage, otherwise during her life only if he survives her; but the court may make an allowance out of her property as is necessary for her subsistence. This does not apply to the wife's property held under chap. 61, which chapter provides for the rights of married women to obtain, acquire, and dispose of property in their own name.

Sayles's Tex. Civ. Stat. art. 2864, provides that on a decree of divorce the court shall order a division of the estate of the parties as shall seem just, but nothing herein contained shall be construed to compel either party "to divest him or her self of the title to real estate."

Arizona Rev. Stat. § 2114, provides that the court in a decree of divorce from the bonds of matrimony, shall order a division of the estate of the parties in such a way as to the court shall seem just and right, having due regard to the rights of each party and their children, if any, provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to compel either party to divest him or herself of the title to separate property.

The following statutes provide for restoration of property, and also fix the status of the wife's property, thus impliedly denying that any claim may be made by the husband against the wife's estate.

Starr & C. Illinois Statutes, chap. 40, § 17, provides that when a decree of divorce is granted, and it shall appear that either party holds the title to property equitably belonging to the other, the court may compel conveyance thereof to be made to the party entitled to the same.

Arkansas Dig. Rev. Stat. 1884, § 2503, provides that in every final judgment for divorce from the bond of matrimony an order shall be made that each party be restored to all property not disposed of at the commencement of the action, which the other party obtained from or through the other during the marriage and in consideration or reason thereof.

Maine Rev. Stat. 1888, chap. 60, § 9, provides that when a divorce is decreed for impotence, or is decreed to the wife for the fault of the husband, the wife's real estate shall be restored to her, and the court may enter judgment for her for so much of her personal property as came to her husband by marriage, as is reasonable.

Maryland Pub. Laws, art. 16, § 37, provides that in all cases where a divorce is decreed, the court shall have full power to award to the wife such property or estates as she had when married, or the value of the same, or of such as may have been sold or converted by the husband, having regard to the circumstances of the husband.

Howell's Mich. Stat. 1882, § 6240, provides that on a divorce from the bonds of matrimony, except that of adultery by the wife, and when the husband shall be sentenced to imprisonment for life, and on a decree from bed and board, the wife shall be entitled to the immediate possession of all her real estate, as if her husband were dead. Section 6237 provides that upon a divorce from bed and board the wife shall have the same rights in respect to her real and personal property as an unmarried woman.

Minnesota Stat. 1894 provides whenever a decree is made of a nullity of marriage or a divorce from the bond of matrimony, for any cause except adultery by the wife, and when the husband is sentenced to imprisonment for life, and upon every divorce from bed and board, the wife shall be en-and are at issue between these same parties in an action pending in the district court of York county, Nebraska, between the same parties as in this action, which other action was pending at the time this action was commenced, and has ever since been and is now so pending, as hereinbefore set forth." One portion of the answer was in the nature of a cross-petition, and contained, among others, allegations of appellee's cruelty toward appellant and his family, and his unfitness to have the custody and control of the children. Appellant asked that she be granted a divorce, that she be awarded the custody of the children, and that the title to the properties in controversy be quieted and confirmed in her, and some other relief, which need not be particularly noticed. To this answer and cross-petition the appellee filed a denial of each and every allegation of new matter therein contained. The appellant filed a supplemental answer, in which it was pleaded that of the action to which reference was made in the former answer as pending in the district court of York county between the parties hereto, and in regard to the title of the lands and property herein involved, there had been a trial, and a judgment therein favorable to appellant, by which she had been awarded the ownership and title of the real estate drawn into controversy, and that the cause of action in that case was the same as in the case at bar. To this supplemental pleading the appellee replied, admitting the other action, and that it had run its course to judgment, but alleged that the sole issue in that case was whether a contract upon which it was predicated had been made by appellant under duress. This reply was further a general denial of the allegations of the supplemental answer, except such as were specifically admitted. Of the issues joined there was a trial. Appellant was granted a divorce and the custody of the children. There were further findings and decree as follows: "The court further finds that the plaintiff has an equitable interest in the following described real estate, which real estate appears on the records as the property of the defendant, to wit, has an interest in lot 11, block 58, in the city of York, York county, Nebraska, according to the original plat of the town of York, and that said interest is of the value of \$1,400. The plaintiff has also an equitable interest in the S. W. $\frac{1}{4}$ of the S. E. $\frac{1}{4}$ of Sec. 31, T. 11 N, of R. 2 W., 6th P. M., in York county, the title to which also appears of record in the name of defendant, titled to the immediate possession of all her real estate and personal property as if her husband was dead.

Indiana Code Civ. Proc. 1043, provides that a divorce decreed on account of the misconduct of the husband shall entitle the wife to the same rights, so far as her real estate is concerned, as she would have been entitled to by his death.

Wyoming Rev. Stat. 1887, § 1585, provides that on a divorce, except for the wife's adultery, the wife shall be entitled to the whole or a reasonable part of her personal estate that shall have come to the husband by marriage, or the value thereof.

1 Mo. Rev. Stat. 1889, § 4509, provides that when the wife shall obtain a divorce from the bonds of matrimony all property which came to the husband by means of the marriage, that is undisposed of at the time of filing the petition, shall revert to the wife and children.

Ohio Rev. Stat. (Glaucque), 7th ed. §§ 5099, 5700, provide that when a divorce is granted for fault of the husband or wife the effect of the judgment shall be to restore to her the whole of her lands, tenements, or hereditaments not previously disposed of. Okla. Code, § 4550, is to the same effect.

Taylor's Kan. Stat. § 4756, provides that on a divorce for fault of the wife the court shall order restoration to her of the whole of her property owned by her before marriage, or separately acquired by her after marriage, and not previously disposed of; and the court may set apart such portion of the wife's property as is necessary for the support of the children. Section 4757 provides that a divorce shall bar the party for whose fault it was granted against any claim in or to the property of the other, except for fraud.

Alabama Civ. Code, § 2837, provides that a divorce deprives the husband of all control over the separate estate of his wife.

Clay's Alabama Dig. 170, § 8, providing that on a decree of divorce the court shall order a division of the estate of the parties, providing that nothing shall be construed to compel either party to divest him or her self of the title to real estate, evidently was repealed, as the same does not appear in the present Code.

34 L. R. A.

III. Alimony pendente lite.

There are but few decisions directly on the question of alimony pendente lite to the husband, although in some of the cases supra alimony generally was claimed. Under some of the statutes supra it seems that on a proper showing, alimony pendente lite would be granted to the husband. In an Illinois lower court case, and in an Iowa case, alimony pendente lite was allowed, although there was no statute to that effect in Illinois, but there was in Iowa.

An order was made directing the wife to pay into court for the use of the plaintiff, to pay his attorney, $25. This was affirmed although the court upon final hearing found against the plaintiff, and in favor of the defendant on her cross-petition, and that she was entitled to a divorce from the plaintiff. The lower court allowed him $300, which included $50 in attorney fees altogether, but this was set aside on appeal except as to the allowance of $25. Barnes v. Barnes, 50 Iowa, 454. (The Iowa Code authorizes such an allowance. See Small v. Small, 42 Iowa, 111.)

In the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, in the absence of any statute, and admitting there was no precedent, an allowance of alimony pendente lite was made to the husband where he was old and a confirmed invalid, unable to support himself, and his wife had an estate from which she derived an income, and she had brought suit for a divorce for his misconduct, the court holding that since the status of married women has been changed, the same rule should be applicable to the wife as to the husband, and both should be placed upon an equality. Groth v. Groth, 28 Chicago Leg. News, 348.

IV. English cases.

Under the various English statutes the court has power to alter settlements on granting divorce, and, where the wife has been guilty of adultery, to give such part of the wife's income to the husband as the court shall see proper.

On a decree nisi dissolving the marriage on account of the wife's adultery, where the wife's income was £1,140 a year from property under the will of her father, and the husband's income was and that the interest of said plaintiff in said premises is of the value of \$3,000, and the said sum of \$1,400 is a valid lien on said lot, and the said sum of \$3,000 is a valid lien on said S. W. $\frac{1}{4}$ of S. E. $\frac{1}{4}$, Sec. 31, T. 11, R. 2 W.

It is further ordered and adjudged by the court that the plaintiff have and recover of the defendant, Rachel B. Greene, the sum of $4,400, the value of his equitable interest in the property hereinbefore described, and that said sum be a lien on said premises in the order named." From this latter portion of the decree this appeal has been prosecuted.

One of the questions presented is, Can alimony be allowed to the husband? "Alimony" is defined in § 351, vol. 2. Bishop, Mar. & Div. 6th ed. as follows: "Alimony, in divorce law, is the allowance which a husband pays, by order of court, to his wife, while living separate from him, for her maintenance; or it may be a like provision ordered for the sustenance of a woman divorced from the bond of matrimony, out of her late husband's estate—the latter branch of the definition denoting a form of alimony known only to the modern law, not to the ancient. It may be for the wife's use during the pendency of a suit, called alimony pendente lite, or after its termination, known as permanent alimony." See also further definition in note 1 on same page. In § 489, in the same volume, the author observes: "If a husband is obliged to seek divorce from his wife, and the property of the two is mainly or entirely vested for her separate use, it will, under special circumstances, be impossible to do justice without transferring to him some of this property. And perhaps there may be statutes in some of our states under which something approximating this can be done. But it cannot generally. Nor, where the common-law rules of property prevail, are the circumstances numerous in which it ought to be; because these rules put what justly belongs to the wife as well as to the husband into his hands, to be used by him for the family support as well as his own. Yet legislation in some of £350 derived from his business, the court ordered her to settle £250 for life on her husband, and £50 on each child, and refused to make the allowance variable according to the possible valuation of the wife's property. 20 & 21 Vict. § 45, provided that on divorce for adultery of the wife, where she had property, the court could order such settlement of such property for the benefit of the innocent party and their children. Midwinter v. Midwinter [1898] P. 93.

And under this statute, where the wife was guilty of adultery, the court allowed to the husband on divorce such a portion of her settled property as would place him somewhat in the status in which he would have been had the union continued. Maroh v. Maroh, L. R. 1 Prob. & Div. 489.

So, a husband who had accepted an allowance under a deed of separation, and subsequently had grounds for dissolution of marriage, was allowed an increased provision out of his wife's income under 22 & 23 Vict. chap. 61, § 5, providing that the court after a final decree of nullity of marriage may inquire into settlements and make such orders as to the court shall seem fit. Benyon v. Benyon, L. R. 1 Prob. & Div. 447, 45 L. J. P. 93, 24 Week. Rep. 950.

On a motion subsequently made in this case to reduce the allowance on account of the depreciation of the securities and estate of the respondent, the court refused to make any change. An order made is not liable to change on account of subsequent circumstances. Benyon v. Benyon, L. R. 15 Prob. Div. 29, 54.

Under 22 & 23 Vict. chap. 61, § 5, the court had power to order a variation of the settlement, where a decree of dissolution of marriage was granted on the husband's petition and there had been a settlement in contemplation of marriage under the Scotch law. Nunneley v. Nunneley, L. R. 15 Prob. Div. 138.

And where a wife refused to obey a decree of restitution of conjugal rights the court ordered her to settle a permanent maintenance on her husband under Mat. Causes Act 1884, § 3, providing that where the application for restitution of conjugal rights is by the husband, and the wife is entitled to property or earnings, the court may order a settlement for the benefit of the petitioner and their children. Swift v. Swift, L. R. 15 Prob. Div. 118.

A marriage settlement was varied allowing the husband £300 a year during the joint lives of the husband and wife, where the wife's income under 34 L. R. A.

a settlement amounted to £1,050 a year. Farrington v. Farrington, L. R. 11 Prob. Div. 84.

And a husband was awarded a settlement out of the wife's income to be held for him and his children, where she was guilty of adultery, but the court held that it could only deal with property to which she was entitled in possession or reversion. Milne v. Milne, L. R. 2 Prob. Div. 295.

And a husband was awarded half the wife's present and reversionary income, for himself and his children, where the marriage was dissolved for adultery of the wife. Noel v. Noel, L. R. 10 Prob. Div. 179.

But the court refused to award the husband the money due to a wife on a settlement out of her father's estate, and gave the property to their children on account of her adultery. After a final decree the court could not make a retrospective order under 22 & 23 Vict. chap. 61, § 5, as to dividends due and payable before the date of the order. Paul v. Paul, L. R. 2 Prob. Div. 93.

And the court refused to change an order of settlement so as to give the husband use of the property settled on the wife, until she should produce their child, which she had abducted, having been permitted access to the child by an order of the court. 22 & 23 Vict. chap. 61, § 5, was not intended to be used for a collateral purpose. Symonds v. Symonds, L. R. 2 Prob. Div. 447.

As to varying marriage settlements where there are no children, 22 & 23 Vict. chap. 61, § 5, was amended (41 Vict. chap. 19, § 3), and under the amendment they may be varied. Yglesias v. Yglesias, L. R. 4 Prob. Div. 71, 40 L. T. N. S. 37, 27 Week. Rep. 423.

The court refused to vary a settlement by amending the clause giving to the wife an income of the settled property, and adding, should be received by the petitioner dum sola et eiusa vixerit. Gladstone v. Gladstone, L. R. 1 Prob. Div. 442, 45 L. J. Prob. 82, 35 L. T. N. S. 330, 24 Week. Rep. 739.

And under 22 & 23 Vict. chap. 61, § 5, providing that after a final decree of dissolution of marriage the court may make such orders in regard to the property settled, either for the benefit of the children of the marriage or their respective parents, as to the court shall seem fit, the court cannot make an order favorable to the husband as to such settlement, where the children are all dead, as when there are no children there can be no parents. Corrance v. Corrance, L. R. 1 Prob. Div. 495.

the states is setting strongly in a direction ultimately to exhibit the spectacle of rich wives supporting poor husbands; and of husbands defrauding their creditors while wealth embraces them in the arms of their wives. This condition of things is for the legislatures, not the courts; but the courts, seeing these things, may also see a reason why they should not feel compunction when, in a proper case, they withhold all allowance of alimony to the wife." "Alimony is allowed the wife in recognition of the husband's common-law liability to support her. Therefore, in the absence of legislation readjusting domestic relations and allowing it, there being no corresponding liability on the wife's part to support her husband, alimony cannot be granted to him. In several of the states, however, alimony, or an allowance from the wife's estate in the nature of alimony, is allowed the husband by statute." 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 92. "An action for alimony cannot be maintained by the husband against the wife." Somers v. Somers, 39 Kan. 132; Nelson, Div. & Sep. § 904.

Unless allowed by our statute, the husband could recover no alimony. It is argued that by virtue of the provisions of § 10, chap. 25, Comp. Stat. 1895, entitled Divorce and Alimony, the right to recover alimony was conferred upon the husband. The section reads as follows: "A petition or bill of divorce, alimony, and maintenance may be exhibited by a wife in her own name, as well as a husband; and in all cases the respondent may answer such petition or bill without oath; and in all cases of divorce, alimony, and maintenance, when personal service cannot be had, service by publication may be made as is provided by law in other civil cases under the Code of Civil Procedure." Before the enactment of this section a wife was obliged to commence the action by a representative, by her next friend, and the evident intent of the enactment was to allow her to commence the suit in her own name, without the interposition of a "next friend," and the addition of the words "as well as a husband" was meant to and does convey no other meaning than that the wife may commence an action in the same manner as a husband; and they do not reach back and connect with the words "alimony and maintenance," and confer upon the husband the right to alimony and maintenance in an action of divorce, either of which, unless given by this section, he could not obtain in the action. The words were but used as a part of the description of the action which the lawmakers gave the wife the right to institute in her own name. It would be a strained construction which would give them the force of raising in the husband the new right to obtain alimony and maintenance in an action of divorce. Wood v. Wood, 8 Wend. 857. The rights of the appellee to receive any of the property, then, could not be predicated upon his claim for alimony and maintenance, but must be derived from such equities as accrued in his favor from the manner of the original purchase of the property and the subsequent improvement thereof, and his participation therein and contributions thereto. In relation to this branch of the case, it is asserted by appellant that there is no evidence, or at least not sufficient evidence, to support the findings and decree of the court. To this attorneys for appellee answer that there was testimony offered and received at the trial in the district court which was not made a part of the bill of exceptions, and is not presented in this court, and that it is the established rule, when such is the extant condition of the record, that the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the findings and judgment will not be examined. The record in this case discloses that the bill of exceptions was prepared and presented to the attorneys for appellee for examination and amendment, and was returned to the attorney for appellant indorsed, "I herewith return this draft of a bill of exceptions in the case of Charles Greene v. Rachel B. Greene, submitted to me on the— day of—, 1893, and propose no amendments thereto." It was said by this court in deciding the case of Cattle v. Haddow, reported in 14 Neb. 59: "Where a bill of exceptions purporting to contain all the testimony is submitted to the adverse party for amendment, and such party certifies that he has no amendments to propose to the same, the court will presume that such bill contains all the evidence, notwithstanding the certificate may not fully so certify." But in Missouri P. R. Co. v. Hays, 15 Neb. 281, it was stated: "Where all of the evidence used on a trial is not before us we cannot say that the finding was unsupported. It is true that the certificate to the bill of exceptions is to the effect that it is complete and contains all the evidence produced on the trial. But we find within the bill itself, in the questions and answers especially, incontestable proof that it does not. Where such is the case the certificate will not be taken as conclusive on that point." In the bill of exceptions we find the following statement: "Plaintiff now reads in evidence depositions of Aaron Kisselbach, Euphremia Cramer, Fanny C. Widenor, Nicholas Harris, Howard Barrow . . ." The depositions which the record refers to are not in the bill of exceptions, and where the fact that evidence was used which is not incorporated in the record appears, as it does here, it must be noticed, notwithstanding the certificate to the bill and the presumption arising from the indorsement of counsel hereinbefore quoted, and, where the bill does not contain all the evidence used on the trial, the objection that the finding and decree of the trial court are not supported by the evidence cannot be considered. That it would not be fair or right to do so is too apparent to need argument in its support. Chamberlain v. Brown, 25 Neb. 484; Aspinwall v. Sabin, 22 Neb. 78; Nelson v. Jenkins, 42 Neb. 188. The record before us does not disclose any objection made to the litigation of the question of the appellee's rights, if any, in the property, in this, an action of divorce. The question was presented by the pleadings, and, as shown in the record, was fully submitted to the trial court; hence we need express no opinion on it at present. Somers v. Somers, 39 Kan. 132; Sherwin v. Gaghagen, 39 Neb. 288, and cases cited.

It is urged by counsel for the appellee that the appeal from the branch of the case in respect to the property by the appellant presents the whole decree here, and that the action of the trial court, in any and all particulars, is open to examination and reversal or modification at the instance of either party to the cause; and he further contends that there was not sufficient evidence to sustain the findings made, on which is based the decree of divorce in favor of appellant. Without discussion or decision of the presentation of this subject at this time, in an appeal which in terms was limited to one branch of the case by the party successful in the portion of the decree sought to be attacked by the opposing party, it will suffice to say that it has developed that the evidence is not all contained in the bill of exceptions, and hence the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings of the trial court is not open to consideration.

It follows from the views hereinbefore expressed, and the conclusions reached, that the decree of the District Court will be affirmed.

MISSOURI SUPREME COURT (In Banc).

Agnes FUCHS, Appl.,

City of ST. LOUIS et al., Respts.

(188 Mo. 168.)

1. The fact that gases form from crude petroleum oil upon its subjection to heat will be judicially noticed by the courts.
2. The fact that a sewer blow up is entitled to consideration upon the question of care on the part of a municipality in respect to its management.
3. The jury must be permitted to pass upon the question of due care by a municipal corporation which in midsummer turns a large quantity of crude petroleum into a public sewer the natural outlet of which is obstructed, and leaves it four days without taking any precautions to avoid a resulting explosion.
4. An oil company from whose premises crude petroleum escapes during a conflagration not shown to be due to its negligence is not liable for injuries caused by an explosion of a public sewer into which the oil was turned by the municipal authorities after it had left the premises of the oil company and without its knowledge, for the purpose of checking the spread of the conflagration.

(Sherwood, Burgess, and Robinson, JJ., dissent.)

(May 28, 1896.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for the City of St. Louis in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover damages for the death of plaintiff's husband, which was alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Reversed as to the city. Affirmed as to the other defendant.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Lubke & Muench, for appellant:

The state has recognized the business of handling petroleum and its products to be dangerous to human life, and has put it under regulation by providing for the appointment of inspectors commonly known as coal oil inspectors.

Rev. Stat. 1889, chap. 8, § 1823; St. Louis County Ct., Jenks v. Fassett, 65 Mo. 418.

When the safety of human life is in question a high degree of care is required in conducting a business in itself lawful. And when in that business pipes are used to carry oil there is a NOTE.—As to negligence in the manufacture or storage of explosives, see Judson v. Giant Powder Co. (Cal.) 29 L. R. A. 718, and note.

34 L. R. A.

constant duty of inspection so that the pipes may be kept in proper condition.

Lee v. Vacuum Oil Co. 54 Hun, 157.

The chief of the fire department is an officer of the city designated by the charter, and is the agent of the city in all matters connected with his department, including the inspection of all buildings which are in the course of construction.

Scheme and Charter, Rev. Stat. 1889, art. 4, §§ 11, 2184.

There is also a sewer commissioner of the city.

Id. Rev. Stat. 1889, art. 4, §§ 36, 2109.

Both of these officers were required by the charter to devote their entire time to the duties of their respective positions.

Id. Rev. Stat. art. 4, §§ 11, 2184.

The municipality is liable like any individual for the negligent use of its property.

Flori v. St. Louis, 8 Mo. App. 231, 69 Mo. 341, 33 Am. Rep. 504; Carrington v. St. Louis, 89 Mo. 212, 53 Am. Rep. 108.

The duty of a city to keep its sewers in proper condition is a ministerial one, and for its breach an action will lie at the instance of the injured party.

2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed. § 1049, and cases cited: Thurston v. St. Joseph, 51 Mo. 510, 11 Am. Rep. 463; Fink v. St. Louis, 71 Mo. 52; Smith v. New York, 66 N. Y. 295; Gilluly v. Madison, 68 Wis. 518, 52 Am. Rep. 299; Krans v. Baltimore, 64 Md. 491; Hitchins Bros. v. Frostburg, 68 Md. 100.

A sewer having been constructed, the duty of maintaining it and keeping it in proper condition and repair is ministerial, and any violation or negligent performance of this duty will render the city liable for damages resulting therefrom.

6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 28, and cases cited in note 1.

There was sufficient evidence to connect the Waters-Pierce Oil Company as a principal with the wrong here complained of. That company owned the dangerous article and knew it was being carried off into the sewer for the better protection and preservation of the company's other property. It received directly the benefit of the wrong done and is a joint tortfeasor with the city.

Cooley, Torts, 1st ed. 127, 186; Canifaz v. Chapman, 7 Mo. 175; Page v. Freeman, 19 Mo. 421; Alred v. Bray, 41 Mo. 484, 97 Am. Dec. 283; McMannus v. Lee, 43 Mo. 206, 97 Am. Dec. 886; Murphy v. Wilson, 44 Mo. 318, 100 Am. Dec. 290.

Mrs. C. P. Johnson and J. D. Johnson, for respondent, Waters-Pierce Oil Company:

The instruction for a nonsuit in favor of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company was correct, because:

1. There was no evidence that it was guilty of the negligence charged in the petition.

Hoag v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 85 Pa. 293, 27 Am. Rep. 653; Sira v. Wabash R. Co. 115 Mo. 127; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Locks, 112 Ind. 404; Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. 78.

2. It does not appear that the oil which was run into the sewer occasioned the explosion.

Mr. W. C. Marshall for respondent, city of St. Louis.

Barclay, J., delivered the following opinion:

This action was brought under the damage act (Rev. Stat. 1889, chap. 49, §§ 4426, 4427) to recover for the death of Mr. Carl E. Fuchs. Plaintiff is his widow, and charges that his death was occasioned by the wrongful act or neglect of the defendants, which charge the defendants deny. The defendants are the city of St. Louis and the Waters-Pierce Oil Company. The case came to trial in the circuit court in St. Louis. At the close of the testimony instructions were given to the effect that plaintiff could not recover against either defendant. Plaintiff took a nonsuit, with leave, etc., and having, without result, duly moved to set it aside, brought the case here by appeal, after the customary exceptions preserving her case for review. The plaintiff's husband was killed by the explosion of a public sewer which was in the possession and control of the city. The question presented by this appeal is whether the facts tend to show a liability for that misfortune, as to either one of the defendants. Mr. Fuchs had for many years owned a building on the east side of Fourth street, between Chouteau avenue and Convent street. In July, 1892, he occupied the lower floor and cellar of this building as a place of business, where he conducted a saloon. The house stood over a public sewer, built there by the city before he acquired the property in 1884. The house was built in that year. The sewer was called the "Mill Creek Sewer." It was a large one, constructed and maintained by the city. It was used to drain an extensive territory, as well as to carry off the surface water and sewage from the public buildings in the central part of the city, including the city hall, the "Four Courts," and the jail. The sewer extended from the west beneath and across Broadway (or Fifth street) and Fourth street, underneath and across Mr. Fuchs' lot; and thence eastwardly, a distance of about four blocks, to the Mississippi river, its outlet. The sewer was provided with several closely covered openings or manholes, which were available for ventilating it. Several of these manholes were located along the line of the sewer near the saloon property, one of them a short distance west of it. The sewer was about 14 feet in diameter, had an arched top and was built chiefly of masonry. July 22, 1892, about noon, a fire broke out on the premises of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, located some ten blocks west, and two or three blocks north, of the saloon. While the fire was in progress, and the city fire engines were throwing streams of water on the burning buildings, large quantities of oil and water ran from the premises of the oil company, and spread out among the railroad tracks adjoining. Then a gang of laborers under direction of the chief of the St. Louis fire department, dug a trench among the railroad tracks, and by that means conducted the oil and water into a drain leading to the Mill Creek sewer. This oil was not burning at the time. The men who did this were not on the premises of the oil company, and no officer of that company present was seen or heard to give them any directions concerning the prosecution of the work, nor was it shown that the workmen were in the employ of the oil company. Nor was the sewer inlet into which this oil was conducted on the premises of the oil company. How much oil ran into the sewer does not clearly appear. But the amount was, at least, 800 or 400 gallons. Four days after the fire the explosion occurred, shortly after 4 p. m. The immediate cause was the act of an employee of a shop on the opposite side of the street from the saloon, who went into the cellar in the course of his business, taking a lighted candle. As he approached the drain or sewer inlet, there was a puff of flame, and an explosion, which knocked him off his feet, stunned him, and set fire to his clothes. He remembered nothing more for some time thereafter, but another man near him took up the story at that point, and testified that the big explosion (which demolished part of the saloon) occurred before you could count ten, after the mishap to the man with the candle. The final explosion made a noise like a cannon, as one witness described it. It tore open the top of the sewer for a long distance, and, among other damage, blew out part of the saloon building, and killed the plaintiff's husband. The drain opening into the cellar where the explosion originated connected with the Mill Creek sewer. The presence of a large body of oil in the sewer at the time and place of the catastrophe was established by the testimony of a witness who was sitting at a table in the saloon with Mr. Fuchs when the explosion took place. This witness was thrown into the sewer, and swept down in it a distance of several hundred feet, but was fortunate enough to escape alive. His evidence showed the presence also of much coal-oil gas in the sewer while he was in it. There was evidence that the conflagration at the oil works was large, and attracted general public attention. A gas engineer, of many years' experience in manufacturing gases from petroleum and its products, testified for plaintiff that crude petroleum, exposed to a temperature of 60 degrees Fahrenheit, in a confined space, gives off inflammable vapors or gases, which will explode when brought into contact with flame; that naphtha is one of the first products of the distillation of the crude petroleum, and is lighter, and the like vapors will form from it speedier than from the crude oil in the same temperature; that these vapors or gases are lighter than the air, and rise, and, although not combustible spontaneously, will explode so soon as a flame comes in contact at any point with the gas. The evidence also indicated that the outlet of the sewer at the river was stopped up by reason of the high stage of water.

There was evidence to show that some of the large manholes or inlets to this sewer in the vicinity of the saloon were not opened after the oil ran into the sewer, and that the cover of a manhole in the street west of the saloon was thrown into the air by the explosion, and broken in pieces. The death of the plaintiff's husband occurred July 26, 1892, the day of the disaster, and this suit was instituted on September 16th following.

1. The first question is whether the case should have gone to the jury on the issue of negligence on the part of the city. Irrespective of any inquiry as to the capacity or construction of the sewer, it is settled law in Missouri that a city is liable for any omission of reasonable or ordinary care in the management of such a property. What is ordinary care depends very greatly on the facts and circumstances of each particular case. In determining what care of property is reasonable, its situation and the objects of its use should be considered. Here was a large sewer, which ran under business buildings in a populous part of the city, and the sewer exploded in the circumstances described. There is not, by the way, the slightest claim or suggestion of any negligence on the part of the deceased. That a large body of inflammable oil had entered the sewer, because of the fire at the oil works, was a fact which the jury might naturally have inferred the city had notice of, after a lapse of four days, as also of the high water in the Mississippi river prevailing at that time, preventing a free discharge of the contents of the sewer in that direction. The fact that gases form from such oils upon subjection of the latter to heat is a matter of ordinary scientific knowledge, of which courts will take judicial notice. It was, moreover, testified to as a fact in the case before us. In view of the conditions existing at the time of the disaster, what was the duty of the city, or rather, what fair inferences may be drawn (from the fact of the explosion and its circumstances) as to the performance or non-performance by the city of the duty of ordinary care towards its citizens living along the line of the sewer? It is in evidence that the large vent or manhole in the street, just west of the saloon, was tightly covered during the four days from the fire to the explosion, and that, when the latter occurred the iron cover of that opening, about 8 feet in diameter, was thrown a great distance by the force of the shock. The time was summer,—the latter part of July; yet nothing whatever appears to have been done by the city authorities, so far as this evidence indicates, towards averting the effects likely to follow the escape of such a large body of volatile oils into a sewer whose natural outlet was obstructed by the high water in the river, as stated. All the facts which made the sewer dangerous might fairly have been found to be within the knowledge of the city officials after the lapse of time following the fire. Vanderstice v. Philadelphia (1888) 103 Pa. 102. Carefully managed sewers do not, according to the common experience of men, usually blow up and scatter destruction and death. Such a performance is of itself entitled to consideration, on the issue of care in respect of such property; or, as some jurists have said, "the thing itself speaks." Koelsch v. Philadelphia Co. 152 Pa. 355, 18 L. R. A. 759, 25 Atl. 522. Had the cover of the large opening west of the saloon been removed, so as to allow the direct escape of the gas at that point, it may be that the disaster would have been avoided. It was not removed; nor do any other steps appear to have been taken in regard to the care of the sewer by the city authorities after the flow of the oil into it on the 22d of July. It is not always consistent with common prudence to await a catastrophe before taking precautions against it. Nor is it conclusive of careful management that a particular disaster has never before occurred. It is often an essential part of reasonable care to guard against those performances which men of ordinary prudence would naturally and reasonably anticipate in dealing with such dangerous agencies as science has contributed to our highly complex civilization. To what extent such foresight is demanded by the duty to use ordinary care it would be very difficult to say. We shall not attempt to generalize on that topic now; and, as the cause at bar should be brought to another trial, we do not propose to go into any further comment on the facts than seems needful to indicate our general view as to their probative force and tendency. It appears to us, on the testimony submitted, that it cannot be declared as a conclusion of law that the city fully performed the full measure of its duty in respect of the sewer property; and hence that the learned trial judge erred in giving the instruction which denied plaintiff the right to go to the jury for a finding of fact as to the alleged negligence of the city.

2. Touching the charge against the oil company, there is no evidence as to the origin of the fire at the works, nor any evidence of any want of care on the part of the company in regard to the flow of oil into the sewer. That flow was caused by the direction of the chief of the city fire department for the purpose of averting the danger of spreading the conflagration. The oil company was not responsible for that action on the facts shown, nor was it responsible for the care of the public sewer which exploded four days later.

We conclude that the ruling and finding as to the oil company should be affirmed; but as to the city the judgment is reversed and the cause remanded for a new trial.

Brace, Ch. J., and Robinson, J., concur. Macfarlane, J., concurs in the result.

The cause having been transferred to the court in banc on March 3, 1896, the following opinion was handed down:

Per Curiam:

The foregoing opinion of Barclay, J., handed down in division No. 1, is adopted as the opinion of the court in banc, Brace, Ch. J., and Gantt and Macfarlane, JJ., concurring therein with him; Sherwood, Burgess, and Robinson, JJ., dissenting. Accordingly the judgment of the circuit court is affirmed as to the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, and is reversed and remanded for new trial as to the city of St. Louis.

Sherwood, J., dissenting:

Action by plaintiff, the widow of Carl E.

Fuchs, deceased, to recover damages for the death of her husband, caused by the explosion of Mill Creek sewer. The petition, after formal and preliminary statements, alleges that the defendant city had built the sewer, and then proceeds to state that a fire broke out on the premises of defendant the Waters-Pierce Oil Company on the 22d of July, 1892, where a large stock of oils was stored by that company; and that such company did cause and permit said oils to escape and run into the above-mentioned sewer, fill the same with oil, and generate gases therein, etc. Having made these allegations, the petition then avers that "under a license from the then owners of said lot [referring to the lot afterwards bought by Carl E. Fuchs in May, 1884] the said sewer was by said city constructed and carried underneath said lot eastwardly towards the said river, and that said sewer was located below the cellar afterwards caused to be built upon said lot by said deceased, Carl E. Fuchs; that when defendant the city of St. Louis obtained said license from said owners it assumed and agreed with the then owners of said lot and their assigns, and became bound, to keep and maintain said sewer in good order, and to care for the said sewer, so that said lot and any improvements which might be put thereon would be free from danger of injury on account of said sewer and the use thereof." The petition then concludes thus: "Plaintiff further alleges that said sewer was provided with openings especially designed to carry off any gases which might arise in said sewer and be liable to combustion and explosion, and that said sewer and the openings thereof aforesaid, on and prior to the said 26th day of July, 1892, were in the sole care and control of defendant the city of St. Louis, its agents and servants, yet the said city, its agents and servants, knowing that said defendant the Waters-Pierce Oil Company had flooded said sewer with oil, neglected to open said vents, and carelessly and negligently failed to take measures and precautions to prevent gases arising and accumulating in said sewer so as to endanger the same; and that between the said 22d and 26th days of July, 1892, gases did arise and accumulate in said sewer in great and very dangerous quantities, and on the date last named, and within six months next before the commencement of this suit, ignited and exploded with great force, throwing open said sewer underneath the property of said Carl E. Fuchs, shattering his said building, and also then and there causing the death of said Carl E. Fuchs," etc. The answer was a general denial by defendant city as well as by defendant company.

The evidence, in substance, so far as necessary to state it, was to this effect: Carl E. Fuchs, deceased, owned the building on the east side of Fourth street, seven or eight doors south of Chouteau avenue, and about four blocks from the river. This section of the city is a valley, and the sewer in question is known as "Mill Creek Sewer." This sewer was formerly a creek, and constituted the natural drainage of a large portion of the city, into which very numerous smaller sewers emptied, and it drained the property in Mill Creek valley from Grand avenue eastwardly, and also drained the City Hall and Four Courts. Fuchs' building was located over this sewer, which was built in 1858 or 1859, in the most solid and substantial manner, the stones composing it being very massive, and it ran through the lot on which the store building of Fuchs was situate in a north westerly and south-easterly direction and crossed Fourth street and Broadway, which converged at that point, and were, in consequence of such convergence, some 200 to 300 feet wide at that point. On July 26, 1892, the sewer exploded about 4:25 P. M., and in consequence of which Carl E. Fuchs died on that day. The explosion tore out the front of the store, except the iron pillars; also the rear wall of the entire building, and the floor of the store; and opened the sewer through the whole length of the building, and extended eastwardly between Second and Main streets, where the entire top arch of the sewer was thrown out for a distance of about 400 or 500 feet. The street west of the store was not disturbed, but the sidewalk on the west side of Broadway was torn up, and also the property next to it. There were covers for the sewer in the middle of the street (where Broadway and Fourth street join) opposite the store, and another on the west side of Broadway, about 150 feet from the store. This cover was blown off,—the one in the street west of the store,—an ordinary-sized man-hole, 3 feet in diameter, with a solid cast-iron lid, about $\frac{1}{4}$ of an inch thick. After the explosion this lid was found broken in pieces, and the contents of the store, barrels, boxes, bottles, shelving, and woodwork, wood floors, joists, plaster, and wainscoting were in the sewer, through which the water was rushing. There was a substance in the cellar which looked like an oily mass, and had a gaseous smell. The Waters-Pierce Oil Company's place of business was between Gratiot street on the south, Twelfth street on the east, the railroad tracks on the north, and Fourteenth street on the west, and was ten blocks west and two or three blocks north of the Fuchs store, and was close to the Mill Creek sewer, where the company had large iron tanks for storing oils, from which they filled sheet-iron wagons for distributing oils to retail dealers in the city, etc. The floor of the cellar of the Fuchs house was composed of a layer of 2 or 3 inches of cinders with a cement top, constructed on the arch of the sewer. The sewer was 14 feet wide, 12 feet high, and with walls 30 to 24 inches thick. At the time of the explosion the river was very high, and filled the cellars and first floors of the buildings on the levee. A fire occurred at the defendant company's works on July 23d, four days prior to the explosion. The witness giving the foregoing testimony was Dr. Fuchs, a son of the deceased. On his cross-examination this witness stated: Generally ordinary sewage is dark and greasy-looking. That he could not tell whether any petroleum oil was mixed with the water in the sewer, but that it had an odor like gas; not like ordinary lighting gas, but a greasy smell like petroleum or gasoline; something like that; though he was not sufficiently versed in chemistry to tell what kind it was. That the smell was not like that emanating from the black liquid which he had seen taken from sewers.

That the smell was different from the ordinary gases from the gas works. That the manhole at the intersection of Broadway and Fourth street was about 100 to 150 feet west of the store. That he knew of no manholes in the sewer east of Fourth street. That after the explosion he saw flat cars, which had fallen into the opening of the sewer which was constructed under the property before his father bought it or built on it, and since that time no repairs on the sewer east of Broadway had been necessary. That there was a slight current to the water in the sewer the day of the accident, but the mouth of the sewer was blocked up by the river. That there was only one sewer inlet at the north end of Market at the junction of Fourth and Fifth streets, and one at the southwest corner of Broadway and Chouteau avenue. That the one at the north end of the Market was reconstructed, and it was made of clay pipe, with a goose neck to it, to prevent the escape of gases into the open air. This was done at the instance of the people in the neighborhood, who complained of the gases and odors thus escaping. That the inlet at the corner of Chouteau avenue and Broadway is intended to drain the surface water from the streets.

Follenius, whose marble works were located at 506 and 510 Chouteau avenue, and who had occupied those premises for about twenty-two years, and who had been familiar with the locality for some twenty-eight years, testified that he remembered the fire which occurred at the oil company's works on Thursday, the 22d of July. There was a manhole at the corner of Broadway and Chouteau avenue, on the west side of the latter. That on Sunday (next before the Monday, the 26th of July, on which the explosion occurred), his place having connection with the sewer he observed a peculiar smell from the sewer. That it seemed as though mixed with sewer gas and coal oil, which was different from the sewer gas smells which were there most all the time. That he was seated at his desk when the explosion occurred, and after that went out into his yard, which looked as if it had been plowed up with a large plow. That large holes were blown in the top of the sewer 3 or 4 feet over, from which issued an odor like he had noticed the day before. That the shock threw the lid off the manhole at the corner, and on going eastward he noticed the same kind of odor issuing at the southeast corner of Broadway and Chouteau avenue; also east of the Fuchs building; and that the smell was unlike coal gas, and different from any smell that had come from the sewer before. That the odors that came from the manhole at the southeast corner of Broadway and Chouteau were there before the sewer was built, but since its building could only be detected on a cloudy, rainy day. He further testified that he saw a colored mass mixed with the dirty water that was flowing down the sewer, of a kind of violet color, but could not say whether it was oil.

Tunstal, another witness, was in the back room of the building when the explosion took place, and Fuchs and Kriebaum were in there with him, and by that explosion he was cast into the sewer, and from which he got out after struggling in the stream a distance of 84 L. R. A.

about 800 feet. There he encountered water from 5 to 6 or 7 or 8 feet deep. That in the sewer were "sawdust and muck and petroleum and coal oil, and everything else that you could think of that was nasty." That there was a little current, enough to carry him along, but none right where the débris from the house dammed up the sewer. That there was a large amount of sawdust in solution, and general muck, more like molasses or tar or something of that kind. That petroleum is a thick fluid, like tar; and that there was coal oil on top of the water. This he recognized in the darkness of the sewer. That there was "gas, either from petroleum or whatever it was that blew up the sewer." "That the explosion didn't ignite all the gas in the sewer. That there were other odors there besides that of gas. That witness was compelled to hold his nose, and get under the water, to keep from being asphyxiated with the gas, which was just like needles going up into his nose." That the defendant oil company's works were located alongside of the Mill Creek sewer, between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets, on the Pacific Railroad; and that this was the only oil mill on that sewer.

Two hours after the occurrence of the explosion, another witness, Dr. Bowler, who was in the second story of the Fuchs building when it occurred, states that a characteristic pungent smell was noticeable arising from the opening in the sewer, such as usually arises from sewers; that after the explosion there was smoke or vapor arising from the sewer, indicating that there had been fire or combustion in the sewer, and that the gas had been consumed; that the ordinary gas which accumulates in sewers from decaying vegetable or animal matter is explosive when ignited under certain conditions; that the density of the gas would have to be sufficient, and also sufficient heat to produce the explosion; that, if all the conditions were favorable, you would get spontaneous combustion or explosion by ignition,—that is, applying a light to the accumulated gas; that sewer gas may explode, under certain conditions, without the presence of petroleum; that he understood the process of manufacturing gas from crude petroleum, which, and coal oil, are explosive when subject to a certain degree of heat; and that under favorable conditions either of the gases mentioned might explode spontaneously.

Schneider, who lived in the next door south of Fuchs, testified: That there were two manholes in the Mill Creek sewer at the junction of Fourth and Fifth streets (the latter of which is usually called Broadway),—one in the middle of the street and the other on the sidewalk on the west side of the street,—and they were kept closed with solid covers. That there were two other openings to the sewer,—one on the corner, and one right in front of the Market,—which were made for water to flow into; and two openings of usual size to the sewer, also open, covered with gratings, in the alley, 144 feet east of the Fuchs property, right behind the property of witness. These openings in the alley are to a sewer connected with the main sewer. That on the evening of the day of the fire (which occurred just a little after noon) the smell from the sewer of coal oil was so strong in his house that they had to close the windows. That his sewer connects with the Mill Creek sewer. That each succeeding night it was the same way, and they could not stand it in the rear of the house, and had to go to the front, because of this smell of coal oil. There was always some odor coming from the sewer, but not so strong as at the time mentioned. That the odor was much stronger after the fire than before. That since the manholes on Fourth and Fifth streets had covered tops they did not suffer so much from the odor. That the branch sewers affording connection from his house with the Mill Creek sewer had no self-acting safety cocks to shut off odors from the sewer in the yard.

Kuntz, a plumber, testified that seven or eight years ago he connected the premises of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company with the Mill Creek sewer at a point on Gratiot street opposite Thirteenth, to drain their yard; that there was a grating at the junction of Fourth and Fifth streets over the main sewer, to let the water flow in.

Hartung, reporter, testified: That he was present at the time the fire of the oil company's works occurred, and was there some three hours. That he saw men who wore overalls, and were laborers, who were acting under the command of Lindsay, chief of the fire department, digging trenches in among the railroad tracks, and thus conducting the oil and water (which was in large quantities in the ground, from 5 to 12 inches deep) to the public sewers. That these men at work were about 15 feet north of the oil company's plant. That it was impossible to tell the proportions of the flowing water and oil. That the men were not firemen. That while the works of the oil company were furiously burning, the oil from the works ran out on the ground and among the railroad tracks on which the cars were standing. That he asked Chief Lindsay "whether there was any danger from that oil that was scattered among the tracks catching fire and damaging the railroad property, and he said, 'No,' he thought not; that the men were leading it into those inlets; and I heard him say, 'Move along,' 'Is it hot?' and questions of that sort." That there was no way to prevent the oil, etc., from escaping and going northward into the Union Depot yards, where there were cars standing, except by turning it into the sewers. That the fire department was playing on the fire at the time the works were burning. That one of the officers of defendant company stated to him that there was naphtha in some of the company's tanks. This witness also testified that there were 800 or 400 gallons of oil flowed into the sewers, and then, after that, 3,000 or 4,000 gallons; and then said he could not estimate the quantity, as he could not tell how thick the oil was on the surface of the water.

Wilson, a policeman, testified that just as he passed the Fuchs place the explosion occurred; that a dense smoke came out of the building; which resembled the scent which arises after the extinguishment of a gasoline stove.

Enger, a gas engineer, who had twenty-one years' experience in making gas from petroleum and its products, had not studied the matter of how gases originate that are formed in a sewer. That gases arise by evaporation. They are not made that way, but are produced that way by simple evaporation. That some of the constituents of the oil would evaporate. That this was the case with all kinds of oil from crude petroleum down to naphtha,—gasoline. That illuminating oil that is sold as kerosene would not give off any vapor under ordinary temperature, nor would it produce any gas. I have tried that many times." That if you poured such oil on the floor, with a lighted candle in the room, the oil would not take fire. That it only explodes or burns by contact. That crude petroleum gives off a vapor under ordinary temperature; that is, any temperature over 60° Fahrenheit, which is inflammable by coming in contact with fire. That it cannot be called a gas, but is a vapor. That if you filled a large vessel with crude petroleum, and put it in a closed room, after a time, depending on the atmosphere, there would be gas enough in the room to make it dangerous to go in there with a light. That there would have to be a great deal of ventilation in a room to prevent it being dangerous. "I would be afraid of it even in any case." That he had given the question of the construction of sewers in a city no attention. That naphtha is one of the first products of distillation of petroleum, and is a very light oil, and vapors form from it much quicker than they would from petroleum alone. That gasoline is the same as naphtha only a little lighter grade. Asked whether sewer gas or marsh gas would not ignite or burn spontaneously, witness said that the former would not, and that ordinary gas would not, to his knowledge. That it would take a very large quantity of crude petroleum to generate enough vapor to cause Mill Creek sewer to explode. That when he spoke of oil evaporating at a temperature of 60°, he referred to oil in an open vessel; such a one as would admit of air. That from his general reading he knew that there was a constant generation of gases from animal and vegetable matter, and was called "sewer gas," which is a mixture of gases. That there is a mixture of sulphureted hydrogen, and maybe some marsh gas. That marsh gas emanates from decaying vegetable matter. That witness believed that it was common in sewers. That the conditions were favorable to it, and that the conditions were more favorable to sulphureted hydrogen being in sewer gas, and more so than ordinary marsh gas. That gas is generated in sewers from human excrements, rotting vegetables, and animal matter. That explosions from sulphureted hydrogen or marsh gas would be about the same in their violence as gas from petroleum vapors. That in the opinion of witness, if the explosion had resulted from crude petroleum or other cause, such sudden ignition would have raised the temperature to about 2,200°, and the heat would have ignited and burned any petroleum in the sewer at the time, and would have ignited the petroleum more readily on the surface of the water than if lying on a dry surface. This witness could not state what the temperature of the sewer was. That tank cars containing hundreds of barrels of oil are constantly being transported all over the country without any protection from the sun, and having on the top of each a cupola top with a manhole in it, and by means of such holes the cars are filled.

Humpert, who did business for Peters at French Market, across the street from Fuchs' place, testified: That on the 28th of July he went down in the afternoon, with a lighted candle, to put some watermelons away in an ice chest in the cellar, when a cloud of fire came right in his face and knocked him on his knees, etc. His place is about 150 feet from Fuchs' place. And that there was a sewer in the cellar which connected with that one in the alley. That there was a manhole in the alley, over the sewer, which is covered by a grate. This was just back of Peters' building.

Kern next testified that he was in front of Peters' place when the explosion happened; that he saw Humpert, who had just come from the cellar with his clothing on fire; that witness took Humpert's shirt off, the fire from his clothes; and in about the time a person could count ten, a loud report was heard, and the front of Fuchs' building came out.

At the conclusion of the testimony the court, at the instance of defendants, gave instructions in the nature of demurrers to the evidence, whereupon plaintiff took a nonsuit, etc.

1. It will have been inferred from the foregoing quotations from the pleadings and the evidence that this cause requires consideration from two points of view; one relative to the pleadings, the other to the evidence.

In the first place there is no evidence to show that the city contracted with the grantors and their assigns or Fuchs to "keep and maintain said sewer in good order, and to care for the said sewer, so that said lot and any improvements which might be put thereon would be free from danger of injury from or on account of said sewer and the use thereof." This being the case, there is no right arising out of contract which could hold the city liable in the premises.

2. And it is patent of record that the other portions of the petition do not state that it was the duty of the city to keep Mill Creek sewer free from noxious or dangerous gases, or free from fluids and substances which would generate such gases. Unless the duty of the city to do this is alleged in the petition, it states no negligence; for duty unperformed is the sole predicate of negligence, and without it the latter cannot exist. Oooley, Torts, 2d ed. 791, 792; Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Stark, 88 Mich. 714; Cole v. McKee, 66 Wis. 500, 57 Am. Rep. 298; 1 Shearn & Redf. Neg. 4th ed. § 8; Hallahan v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 71 Mo. 118. The petition therefore states no facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action,—a fatal defect, which may be noticed in this court for the first time (Smith v. Burrus, 106 Mo. loc. cit. 97, 18 L. R. A. 59, and cases cited), or on which account objection could have been taken in the lower court to the introduction of any evidence (Butler v. Larson, 72 Mo. 227). Other matters in regard to the petition will receive comment in a subsequent paragraph.

3. Inasmuch as the trial court granted instructions in the nature of a demurrer to the evidence, it has been thought proper to make 84 L. R. A.

exhibition and proffer of that evidence somewhat at large. In cases of this sort, as must be obvious, facts are indispensable factors in determining the correctness of the action of the trial court in nonsuiting the plaintiff since those facts must constitute the propositum of plaintiff's action and of the defendant's defense.

From the facts in evidence it appears illuminating oil that is sold as kerosene (coal oil) will not give off vapor nor produce gas under ordinary temperature; that it only explodes or burns by contact; that crude petroleum, if placed in a large, open vessel in a closed room, would after a short time, if subjected to a temperature of about 60° Fahrenheit, give off sufficient vapor—not gas—to cause an explosion if the room were entered with a light. There was no evidence, however, as to what the temperature of the sewer was, nor as to what the effect would be in the way of generating gas or vapor in the sewer, where, according to the testimony, the proportion of the crude petroleum, etc., must have been exceedingly small when contrasted with the vast quantities of water contained in a sewer 16 feet wide, 12 feet high, and from 5 to 6, 7 and 8, feet deep, even if we adopt the bare conjecture that there was as much as 3,000 or 4,000 gallons of oil turned into the sewer. It is true that the testimony shows that naphtha, etc., would give off vapor at a much lower temperature than crude petroleum, but there is no testimony showing what the temperature of the sewer was nor that any naphtha, etc., was turned into the sewer on the day of the fire. So, that, under the testimony, we must put out of view as constituents of the litigated injury naphtha and gasoline, because not shown to have escaped from the tanks, nor to have been conducted into the trenches leading into the sewer; and besides, conceding such escape and such conducting of those fluids, no temperature of the sewer was shown. So that, under the testimony, kerosene or coal oil and crude petroleum must also be excluded from consideration as injury-producing ingredients, because the former does not generate either gas or vapor under ordinary temperature, 60°, nor the latter generate anything but vapor—not gas—under that temperature; and no testimony as to what degree of heat or cold existed in the sewer, and gases—not vapors—are alleged in the petition as the cause of the explosion. These things alone would certainly seem to warrant the ruling of the trial court in giving the instructions complained of.

4. But other inferences are to be drawn from the facts in evidence already related, which, if possible, even more strongly tend to support the conclusion reached by that court. It cannot be known with any plausible degree of probability from the facts developed in evidence what was the cause of the explosion. No one can carefully read the testimony, and, after due deliberation upon it, be enabled to say what gas or combination or commingling of gases produced the unfortunate result which gave origin to this action. The conditions were favorable, as the evidence shows, to the generation of several gases, viz.: Methane, or marsh gas; or carburated hydrogen, formed by the decomposition of vegetable matter under water, also known as fire damp, colorless and inodorous, which is the cause of the explosions which so frequently take place in coal mines, and is given off when the mud in stagnant pools and marshes is stirred; and the indications are of the possibility of making this gas from the elements, since its constituents may be thus formed (Remsen, Organic Chem. 28 et seq.), and which constitutes the most abundant ingredient of coal-gas (Flownes, Elem. Chem. 229). Sulphureted hydrogen, or hydrogen sulphide, also a colorless gas, but by no means inodorous, having the odor of putrid eggs, and being the frequent product of the putrefaction of organic matter, both animal and vegetable. Id. 178. Now, if we say nothing of a gas or gases which might result from an admixture of those aforesaid, and if we admit that the conditions were also favorable to the generation of gas in the sewer from the oils introduced therein, as one of the incidents of the fire, still we are confronted by the rule which declares that where an action is brought for damages which are occasioned by one of two causes, for one of which defendant is responsible and for the other not, the plaintiff is fated to failure if his evidence fails to show that the damages were produced by the former, or if, from the evidence, the probabilities are equally strong that the damages were caused by the one as by the other. Searles v. Manhattan R. Co. 101 N. Y. 661. This principle finds recognition in Priest v. Nichols, 116 Mass. 401, and Smith v. First Nat. Bank, 99 Mass. 606, 47 Am. Dec. 59.

5. Recurring for a moment to the petition, preparatory to a further discussion of the evidence from other points of view, we find that it charges that "said sewer was provided with openings especially designed to carry off any gases which might arise in said sewer, and be liable to combustion and explosion, etc., yet said city, its agents and servants, knowing that said defendant the Waters Pierce Oil Company had flooded said sewer with oil, neglected to open said vents [and carelessly and negligently to take measures and precautions to prevent gases arising in said sewer so as to endanger the same]", etc. The words not included in the brackets are those which allege plaintiff's cause of action, because, where a particular act of negligence is specified as a cause of action, there evidence will not be received to support a general allegation of negligence, but the plaintiff will be confined to the act of negligence specifically assigned (Schneider v. Missouri P. R. Co. 75 Mo. 295; Walsh v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 71 Mo. 514; from which premise it results that no evidence was properly admissible in regard to the words in brackets. Besides, those words were but the statement of a legal conclusion, something not traversable. No issue of fact could be raised upon them. Bliss, Code Pl. 8d ed. §§ 212, 213, 418. Under our Code, the facts in pleading are constitutive, and in order to be proved, must be distinctly alleged. Pier v. Heinrichs, 52 Mo. 833; First Nat. Bank v. Hatch, 78 Mo. 18; McKinzie v. Mathews, 59 Mo. 99; Nichols v. Larkin, 79 Mo. 264; Lanitz v. King, 93 Mo. 518. Taking, then, the facts specifically assigned as negligence, and contrasting them with those offered in evidence in their support, we find that within a radius of 250 feet from Fuchs' place of business there were four openings through which the gases in the sewer could escape, saying nothing of the sewer connections at Peters' store, and at Follenius' marble works; and so the only thing that remains of plaintiff's claim of the city's negligence in this regard is as to the manhole in the center of the street where Fourth and Fifth streets intersect each other, and that at the sidewalk on the west side of Fifth street. Respecting the first one, Dr. Fuchs' testimony shows that it was constructed with a goose neck, so as to prevent the escape of gases, having been changed from a straight pipe, because the people in the locality complained of the odors formerly coming from it; so that, even if the covering had been removed from this manhole, no gases could have escaped, and it will not be presumed that plaintiff intended to include in her petition this manhole, but only those whose covers, if removed, would have given ventilation to the sewer,—that is to say, egress for the gases therein. As to the second manhole cover, it was the only one which could have been removed that was not removed. But did the nonremoval of this one so retard or prevent the escape of gases as to cause the accident? If it did, then the burden is on plaintiff to show that it did. It devolved upon her to "prove facts and circumstances, from which it can be ascertained with reasonable certainty what particular precaution the defendant ought to have taken but did not take" (1 Shearn & Redf. Neg. 4th ed. § 57), which of course would include, as a legitimate corollary therefrom, that, had such particular precaution been taken, the reasonable probability is that the accident would not have occurred. Thus, in Daniel v. Metropolitan R. Co. L. R. 3 C. P. 216, 591, Willes, J., said: "It is necessary for the plaintiff to establish by evidence circumstances from which it may fairly be inferred that there is reasonable probability that the accident resulted from the want of some precaution which the defendants might and ought to have resorted to; and I go further, and say that the plaintiff should also show with reasonable certainty what particular precaution should have been taken." Though the judgment in this case was reversed on another ground, this doctrine was distinctly affirmed in the same volume (page 591) and in the house of lords (L. R. 5 H. L. Cas. 45); and the language employed by Willes, J., has been frequently cited and quoted with approval. Hayes v. Michigan C. R. Co. 111 U. S. 228, 28 L. ed. 410; Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Stebbing, 63 Md. 504; Williams v. Great Western R. Co. L. R. 9 Exch. 157; Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Stout, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 657, 24 L. ed. 745; Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 1008; Lovegrove v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. 18 C. B. N. S. 669.

In the case at bar there was no attempt to make the proof here indicated as necessary; in short, to connect the neglect to remove the cover of the single manhole with the accident. In illustration of this principle it has been ruled, where the jury are told that, if all the evidence satisfied them that there had been negligence on the part of the defendant, although they might not be able to satisfy themselves in what that negligence consisted, they would be authorized to find a verdict for plaintiff, that such a charge was erroneous; that, if the jury could not find any rational ground upon which to impute negligence to defendant, they should give a verdict in its favor. McCaig v. Erie R. Co. 8 Hun, 599; Searles v. Manhattan R. Co. supra.

6. Again, if the city is to be held responsible for failing to keep open the vents to the sewers within its jurisdiction, is it to be held liable also if some person passing while the vents are open casts a lighted match into one of them, or the gas from it rises and catches fire from a street lamp, thereby causing an explosion? Is it possible that the city can be thus held responsible whether it does or does not open vents? And yet, if the position taken by plaintiff as ground for recovery in this action be correct,—that the city is responsible for the gases which breed in its sewers,—then the spectacle will soon be presented of actions for damages against the city because—First, it does not open its sewers, and thereby allow the gases therefrom to escape, thereby causing an explosion; because, second, it does open its sewers, and thereby an explosion is caused; because, third, it opens its sewers to allow the gases to escape, and thereby becomes liable for disease and death scattered by reason of the escape of such gases; because, fourth, it does not pump out the sewage from the sewers, or at least does not use a liberal quantity of disinfectants so as to deodorize the contents of the sewer and thus render them, if not sweet, at least innocuous. Such are the possibilities of municipal liability which present themselves if the present action can be maintained. And if it can, it might be well to suggest that, if the city is thus to be made an insurer, it ought, at least, as some compensation, to be allowed to issue accident policies, and take premiums on the multitudinous risks it is thus compelled to assume. Hitherto it had been supposed that it was the peculiar and exclusive purpose and function of sewers, and that they were adapted, devised, and designed, to conceal and carry off the foulness which accumulates where great bodies of people congregate, and not to disseminate mephitic odors and gases, thus poisoning the atmosphere throughout the city.

7. Furthermore, Mill Creek sewer, as was conceded at the trial, was constructed in a manner that left nothing to be desired. It had been built some thirty-four years, and no accident of the nature now presented had ever occurred in it. Indeed, it does not appear that an occurrence of such sort had ever before happened. Now, it is settled by abundant authorities, and by numerous and frequent adjudications, that it is not negligence to omit a precaution which, if taken, would have prevented the injury, when the injury could not reasonably have been anticipated, and would not, unless in exceptional circumstances, have happened because of the omission. Such instances are assigned to the domain of inevitable accident, for which, no one being negligent, no one is responsible. Thus in Dougan v. Champlain Transp. Co. 56 N. Y. 1, D., plaintiff's intestate, was a passenger upon defendant's boat on Lake Champlain. The forward deck was surrounded by bulwarks 8 or 4 feet high, with gangways upon each side, closed by rails hinged to the bulwarks, and of the same height, and coming down upon stanchions in the center of the gangway, leaving the space beneath open. This deck was not designed for passengers, but they were permitted to come upon it with knowledge of defendant's employees. D. came out thereon. His hat blew off. He sprang to recover it, slipped under the gangway rail, fell overboard, and was drowned. It appeared that all the boats upon the lake were constructed in the same manner; that they had been so run for many years; and there was no proof tending to show that any one had ever before gone overboard in this way, or that such danger had been apprehended. Held, that the evidence failed to show negligence on the part of defendant, and that plaintiff was properly nonsuited. So, too, in Hubbell v. Yonkers, plaintiff was riding along one of defendant's streets, the roadbed of which was 80 feet wide, macadamized, and in good condition. On one side, where the street was graded up about 12 feet, there was a sidewalk 10 feet wide, separated from the roadbed by a curbstone 8 inches high. There was no fence, wall, or other obstruction to guard the outer edge of the sidewalk. The horse attached to the wagon in which plaintiff was riding became frightened and commenced to shy, and, spite of the efforts of the driver, went over the curbstone and sidewalk, and down the embankment, carrying the wagon and plaintiff with him. In an action to recover damages for injuries received by plaintiff it appeared that the street had been in the same condition since its opening, over ten years before, and, so far as appeared, no similar accident had occurred. Held, that defendant was not liable, that the accident was one of a class so rare, unexpected, and unforeseen, defendant could not be charged with negligence for a failure to guard against it. 104 N. Y. 484, 58 Am. Rep. 522. A mule caught its foot in a hole in a railroad track so small that no one could have foreseen such result. Held, no liability. Nelson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 80 Minn. 74. Similar nonliability was announced where a workman was painting by lamplight the inside of a tank with an approved and long-used paint, bought ready for use, and the benzine in the paint caused an explosion. Allison Mfg. Co. v. McCormick, 118 Pa. 519. From some unexplained cause a telegraph wire across a track sagged, and, hitting a brakeman on top of a car, broke, at the same time becoming fastened to the car brake. The end caught a man engaged in business near the depot, and, the wire being drawn along by the moving train, the man was killed. Held to be an accident. "Negligence," says Mitchell, Ch. J., "is not to be presumed from the fact of an occurrence like that involved in the present case, the statement of which suggests its anomalous, exceptional, and extraordinary character." Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Locke, 119 Ind. 404. Like rulings have been announced where accidents have happened from machinery, where their liability to happen is proved only by their actual happening. Richards v. Rough, 58 Mich. 212; Sjogren v. Hall, Id. 274. In O'Malley v. Missouri P. R. Co. 118 Mo. 819, the tunnel had been used for thirteen years, and in an action brought for the death of the plaintiff's husband, employed in the defendant's tunnel, through which it operated locomotives and cars, the petition charged that the tunnel, because the fan that ventilated it was out of repair, was in a dangerous condition, being filled with steam, smoke, and poisonous gases; and that defendant, well knowing this fact, which was unknown to the deceased, negligently ordered him to go into the tunnel, whereby he was choked, strangled, and killed. Held that as there was total failure of the evidence to show that the smoke in the tunnel, when defendant entered, was dangerous to human life, or to show that defendant could have anticipated a condition of the tunnel dangerous to human life, plaintiff could not recover. To the like effect, see Conley, Torts, 91 et seq.; Withers v. North Kent R. Co., 37 L. J. Exch. 417; Loftus v. Union Ferry Co., 84 N. Y. 455, 38 Am. Rep. 533; Cleveland v. New Jersey S. B. Co., 68 N. Y. 306; Butten v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 243; Bishop, Non-Cont. L. §§ 182, 447; Bishop v. Union R. Co., 14 R. I. 314, 51 Am. Rep. 336; Wright v. Wilmington, 92 N. C. 156. The same principle is recognized in Flori v. St. Louis, 69 Mo. 341, 38 Am. Rep. 504, where the city was held not liable to a person for injuries inflicted by the fall of a market house, caused by a wind storm of unprecedented force and violence. It is unnecessary to say here whether the case might not have rested on another ground. It is certainly opposed, in any event, to a recovery by plaintiff.

8. Moreover, the defendant city, in the construction of Mill Creek sewer and in its maintenance, was and is engaged as a governmental agency in the performance of a public, sanitary duty for the public good, and not for its own private advantage or emolument. In such circumstances it is well settled in this state, as well as in many other jurisdictions, that a municipality is not liable in damages for the wrongful or negligent acts of its officers and servants, unless made thus liable by positive law or by inevitable implication. Murtaugh v. St. Louis, 44 Mo. 479; Heller v. Sedalia, 53 Mo. 159, 14 Am. Rep. 444; McKenna v. St. Louis, 6 Mo. App. 330; Armstrong v. Brunswick, 79 Mo. 319; Carrington v. St. Louis, 89 Mo. 212, 53 Am. Rep. 106; Maximilian v. New York, 63 N. Y. 160, 20 Am. Rep. 468; Hill v. Boston, 123 Mass. 344, 23 Am. Rep. 333; Detroit v. Blackaby, 21 Mich. 84, 4 Am. Rep. 450; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 965, 965a, 975-977, 980, and cases cited. Carrington v. St. Louis, supra, while it correctly states the principle applicable to this class of cases, yet its application in that instance suggests an interrogation point, as to which see §§ 58, 60, 210, 974, 975, Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. Besides, if the theory contended for by plaintiff is to prevail, it would result in casting on defendant city a task impossible of performance, as already indicated, and one which, if it could be performed, would subject the city to fresh liabilities by reason of such performance, and, in addition thereto, would defeat and destroy the very purpose and function which a sewer is obviously designed to accomplish, to wit, to prevent the air of the municipality from being contaminated by foul odors and other contagious and infectious gases and emanations. When a city has, as in this instance, built a sewer in a most admirable manner, and has kept such health-preserving conduit free from obstructions, its complete duty, whether considered a public or a corporate one, has been entirely discharged.

9. It only remains to say that there is nothing in the facts in evidence which by any possibility casts any blame or liability on defendant oil company. It cannot be considered as having permitted the oils to escape and run into the sewer, merely because it did not forbid the oils which ran from its premises into the streets and on the railroad tracks from being turned, by means of trenches dug, into the sewer, nor because it did not use force to prevent this from being done. For the foregoing reasons the judgment should be affirmed; and for which reasons I dissent from the majority opinion.

Burgess and Robinson, JJ., concur.

(Division 2).

STATE of Missouri; Appt.,

v.

Alexander McCABE et al., Resp'ts.

(.....Mo.....)

1. The name and signature of a claimant agency subscribed to threatening letters and circulars which are sent in violation of Rev. Stat. 1892, § 3782, is entirely immaterial to the offense of the persons who sent them.
2. The constitutional rights of property do not include the right to send letters or circulars to a debtor, threatening to advertise a claim against him for sale, which constitutes an offense under Rev. Stat. 1892, § 3782, as a threat to injure his credit or reputation.
3. The constitutional guaranty of the right to speak, write, or publish on any subject, does not extend to the sending of letters or circulars to a debtor, threatening to advertise a claim against him for sale, which is a threat to injure his credit or reputation, in violation of Rev. Stat. 1892, § 3782.

(October 7, 1896.)

APPEAL by the state from a judgment of the St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction quashing an indictment for sending threatening letters contrary to the provisions of the statute. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Thomas E. Mulvihill, James L. Hopkins, and Howe & Howe, for appellant.

The information is drawn under § 3782, Rev. Stat. 1892, and is in proper and approved form.

Kelley, Crim. Law & Pr. § 919; State v. Barr, 23 Mo. App. 84.

NOTE.—For libel by bad-debt collection agency, see also State v. Armstrong (Mo.) 13 L. R. A. 419; Muetze v. Tuteur (Wis.) 9 L. R. A. 55.

This is an unlawful threat and was made for the purpose of extorting money through fear that could not be collected by legal process. But if the threat were even ambiguous the state is entitled to introduce parol evidence to explain its contents or meaning, and whether it contained the alleged threat as charged is a question for the jury.

Kelley, Crim. Law & Pr. § 919; State v. Linthicum, 68 Mo. 66; People v. Braman, 80 Mich. 463; State v. Barr, supra.

Mr. Willis H. Clark, for respondents:

Penal statutes are always to be strictly construed for the benefit of the citizens. A statute ought to be so construed that no man who is innocent can be punished or endangered.

State v. McLain, 49 Mo. App. 898; State v. McCance, 110 Mo. 898; State v. Bryant, 90 Mo. 584.

On an indictment for robbery in the first degree, the prosecuting witness gave evidence tending to prove the offense, and the defendants gave evidence admitting taking money from him by force and violence, but showing, if true, that he owed one of them $2, that they demanded it of him, forcibly took a $5 bill and some silver from him, and offered to give him his change over the $2, which he refused. The act committed was within the letter of the statute (§ 8530), but was it within its intention and spirit? This court ruled that if the evidence of defendants was true there was no offense committed and defendants should be acquitted.

State v. Brown, 104 Mo. 365; Brown v. State, 28 Ark. 126; Driscoll v. People, 47 Mich. 418.

One does not commit robbery who by violence compels a debtor to pay him what he owes.

Bishop, Crim. L. § 1162; Reg. v. Hemmings, 4 Fost. & F. 50; Reg. v. Johnson, 14 U. C. Q. B. 569.

The statute against sending threatening letters with a view of extorting money, etc., was intended to embrace only cases where the intent is to obtain that which in justice and equity the writer of the letter is not entitled to receive.

People v. Griffin, 2 Barb. 427; Mann v. State, 47 Ohio St. 556, 11 L. R. A. 656; People v. Thomas, 8 Hill, 169; Rex v. Williams, 7 Car. & P. 354; State v. Hammond, 80 Ind. 80, 41 Am. Rep. 791; Com. v. Jones, 121 Mass. 57, 23 Am. Rep. 257; United States v. Elliott, 51 Fed. Rep. 807; Embry v. Com. 79 Ky. 439.

An injury, legally speaking, consists of a wrong done to a person, or in other words a violation of his right.

Parker v. Griswold, 17 Conn. 803, 42 Am. Dec. 739; Victor Min. Co. v. Morning Star Min. Co. 50 Mo. App. 525; Charles v. Rankin, 22, 566, 66 Am. Dec. 642; Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. 380.

Where a party has a legal right to do a particular act the motive with which he may assert his right will not give a right of action even where malice prompted the act.

Mahan v. Brown, 18 Wend. 261, 28 Am. Dec. 461; Auburn & C. Pl. Road Co. v. Douglass, 9 N. Y. 444; Chatfield v. Wilson, 28 Vt. 49; Occum Co. v. A. & W. Sprague Mfg. Co. 34 Conn. 580; Stevenson v. Newnham, 18 C. B. 285; 1 84 L. R. A.

Wait, Act. & Def. 35, 36; Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. 832.

The letters sent out in the information show that the claimant agency held for a creditor a claim against Post the existence and validity of which claim are not negated in the information, and is therefore confessed.

State v. Hammond, 80 Ind. 80, 41 Am. Rep. 791; Embry v. Com. 79 Ky. 439.

The unpaid and valid claim against Post in the hands of the creditor or his agent or attorney was and is as much property as a horse or a house. Its owner possessed every right and attribute of ownership over it including the right to demand and receive payment or to advertise and sell it, as he might sell any other property and as accounts are daily bought and sold.

Reg. v. Coghlan, 4 Fost. & F. 816; McClair v. Wilson, 18 Colo. 82; Wilson Sewing Mach. Co. v. Curry, 126 Ind. 161.

Depriving an owner of property of one of its essential attributes is depriving him of his property within the meaning of the constitutional provision that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.

State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L. R. A. 257.

Grant, P. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal by the state from a judgment of the St. Louis court of criminal correction, quashing an information against the respondents. On January 17, 1896, an information was filed in said court charging defendants with the offense of sending a threatening letter. It was quashed on motion of defendants. On January 28th an amended information was filed by the assistant prosecuting attorney, in words and figures as follows:

State of Missouri, Plaintiff, vs. Alexander McCabe, Henry S. McCabe, and H.

M. Tileston, Defendants.

In the St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction.

Richard M. Johnson, assistant prosecuting attorney of the St. Louis court of criminal correction, now here in court on behalf of the state of Missouri, amended information makes as follows:

That Alexander McCabe, Henry S. McCabe, and H. M. Tileston, in the city of St. Louis aforesaid, on the 8th day of January, 1896, unlawfully, knowingly, and maliciously did send and deliver to one James Post, by United States mail, inclosed in one envelope, certain letters, writings, printings, circulars, and cards, with the name and signature of "The Claimant Agency" subscribed thereto, directed to the said James Post by the name and description of Mr. James Post, signed on the back thereof, then and there and therein threatening to injure the credit and reputation of the said James Post, which said letters, writings, printings, circulars, and cards were and are in words and figures as follows, that is to say:

"The Claimant Agency (Incorporated), Room 120, Lucile Building, St. Louis, Mo., 1-18, 1896. We are authorized to publish in our

'For Sale' columns the claim we hold against you. You have ignored it so long, the patience of your creditor has become exhausted. The Claimant will contain the same in its next issue. We must also place every month in the houses opposite and adjacent to your residence fifty of the inclosed circulars directed to your address. If you are unable to settle in full, a payment will stop proceedings against you, as well as publication of the debt.

Respectfully,

The Claimant Agency.

"Make settlement direct with this office.

"The claim of $—— we hold against you is yet unpaid. 'Honesty is the best policy.' Call and make arrangements to settle the debt.

"Complimentary. The Claimant Agency, Publishers, Room 120, Laclede Building, St. Louis. Fill out the coupon, and return to us with list of accounts. We will offer for sale ten claims complimentary, and mail copy of the Claimant containing same to each debtor. Before publishing we will endeavor to obtain some money for you on the accounts. The Claimant Agency.

"Collection Department. Our regular membership fee is $10.00 per year, including subscription to the Claimant. Claims 'For Sale' can be inserted therein at the rate of 25 cents per name, per month, by nonmembers.

"FOR SALE—The following judgments: Against Leon D. Boucher, 1049 De Hodiarnot avenue, $24.88, for unpaid grocery bill. Against George W. Ferguson, 5036 Bell avenue, $64.25, for unpaid grocery bill. Against John J. McCann, 1710 Chestnut street, $29.95, for unpaid grocery bill.

"The Claimant Agency (Incorporated), Publishers and Collectors, Room 120, Laclede Building, St. Louis, Mo."

Which said letters, writings, printings, circulars, and cards were sent out and delivered through the United States mails to the said James Post by said defendants, unlawfully, knowingly, and maliciously, for the purpose of, and therein threatening to, injure the credit and reputation of the said James Post, by bringing him into disrespect and disrepute with his friends, neighbors, and associates, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the state.

Richard M. Johnson.

Aast. Pros. Atty. for St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction.

Subscribed and sworn to by James Post, Jan'y. 28, 1896, before the clerk of said court.

On the same day the defendants filed their motion to quash, in the following words: "(1) Said information is not sufficient in law. (2) Said information is not sufficient in substance. (3) Said information is vague, indefinite, and uncertain. (4) Several distinct charges against these defendants are alleged in said information in one count. (5) The acts charged against these defendants in said information are such as these defendants have an inherent right to do, which right is guaranteed to them, and each of them, under and by the Constitution of the state of Missouri, and under and by the Constitution of the United States of America. (6) Said information fails to inform these defendants with certainty as to the nature and cause of the accusation against them, therein violating the provisions of the Constitution of the state of Missouri and the Constitution of the United States of America. (7) Said information is in violation of the provisions of the Constitutions of the state of Missouri and of the United States of America with reference to the deprivation of life, liberty, and property without due process of law. (8) Said information affirmatively shows that neither of these defendants is guilty of any offense against the laws of the state of Missouri such as is charged against them therein. (9) Said information affirmatively shows that neither of these defendants is guilty of any offense against the laws of the state of Missouri. (10) The names of all material witnesses are not indorsed upon said information." This motion also was sustained, and the prosecuting attorney took all proper steps to have said ruling of the court reviewed in this court, on the ground that the decision of the cause involved the construction of the Constitutions of the United States and of this state. Mo. Const. art. 6, § 12.

The information was intended to charge an offense under § 3782, Rev. Stat. 1889, which provides that "every person who shall knowingly send or deliver any letter, writing, printing, circular, or card, with or without a name subscribed thereto or signed with a fictitious name, or any letter, mark, or device, threatening to accuse any person of a crime, or to kill, maim, or wound any person, or to do any injury to the person, property, credit, or reputation of another, though no money or property be demanded or extorted thereby, shall, on conviction, be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor." It will be observed that this section, which was numbered 1526, Rev. Stat. 1879, has been amended by inserting the words "credit or reputation." The St. Louis court of appeals, in State v. Barr, 28 Mo. App. 84, in 1887 held that the sending of a letter threatening to publish a person's name in a "dead-beat" book, whereby his credit would be ruined, was not an offense under § 1526, Rev. Stat. 1879, because "credit and reputation" were not property, within the meaning of the section as it then read. It is obvious that the insertion of "credit and reputation" in the next revision after the promulgation of that decision was intended to cover threats of injury to the credit or reputation, as well as to property or person. The information sufficiently charges that the defendant sent a letter to the prosecuting witness which contained circulars and writings threatening to injure his credit among his neighbors, and fully set out the means and the character of the agencies which would be adopted and employed to effectually destroy his credit and reputation, to wit, by placing every month in the houses opposite and adjacent to his residence fifty of the circulars inclosed, directed to his address.

The point made that there is no allegation as to what the "Claimant Agency" was, or how defendants were connected with it, is without force, for the reason that it is wholly immaterial whether it is a corporation or a firm name, or wholly fictitious. The offense charged is that defendants sent these threatening circulars and writings. They are guilty in lending themselves to this scheme of destroying the credit and reputation of the prosecuting witness. They were fully advised in the information of the nature and character of the offense with which they were charged.

They raise the question of the constitutionality of the law itself. They assert that, conceding they did threaten to ruin the credit and reputation of the prosecuting witness as a business man, they were guilty of no offense under the laws of this state, because they say they had a right to do so. Let us examine this contention. Can it be maintained that the guaranty in the Federal and state Constitutions of life, liberty, and property justifies any citizen in threatening to destroy the credit or reputation of another citizen? If it can, then it amounts to this: that not only are the courts open to him to obtain a judgment for any sum due him, and the process of the law is awarded him to enforce that judgment, but in addition thereto he has the right to threaten the publication of a criminal libel whereby he may destroy his debtor's credit and reputation. More than this, he may avoid the courts altogether, deprive his debtor of all just credits and set off, all lawful pleas in defense, and, through fear of the ruin of his credit, he may even collect an unjust debt, or obtain an unconscionable advantage. The law will not countenance or tolerate this method of collecting debts. The state has provided every needed remedy, both ordinary and extraordinary, to enforce the payment of all just debts through the agency of her courts of justice, and among these remedies is not included the right to threaten to destroy credit and reputation. Such a course is well calculated to produce a breach of the peace. If once permitted and sanctioned by the courts, it will soon degenerate into an intolerable and oppressive wrong. Unjust claims will be extorted from timid debtors. Honest and deserving men will be held up to scorn, and published as dishonest, merely because they have not the means with which to meet their obligations. The position of counsel that, because a man is too poor or unable to meet all his obligations as soon as due, no wrong can come to him by publishing his inability to do so, in the most offensive manner, cannot be countenanced by this court. It is alike unsound in law and morals. The law does not authorize the collection of just debts even by the malicious threatening to injure the debtor in his person, property, credit, or reputation. To deny him the privilege of so doing in no sense deprives him of the protection of his property rights under the Bill of Rights or Constitution.

Does it trench upon that other constitutional right, securing freedom of speech, which guarantees "that every person shall be free to say, write, or publish whatever he will on any subject, being responsible for all abuse of that liberty?" Judge Cooley, in his great work on Constitutional Limitations, 6th ed. p. 518, 84 L. R. A.

says: "The constitutional liberty of speech and of the press, as we understand it, implies a right to freely utter and publish whatever the citizen may please, and to be protected against any responsibility for so doing, except so far as such publications, from their blasphemy, obscenity, or scandalous character, may be a public offense, or as by their falsehood and malice they may injuriously affect the standing, reputation, or pecuniary interests of individuals." The Constitution grants no immunity from punishment for criminal libels. "Libel" is defined by our law as follows: "A libel is the malicious defamation of a person made public by any printing, writing, sign, picture, representation or effigy, tending to provoke him to wrath or expose him to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule, or to deprive him of the benefits of public confidence and social intercourse; any malicious defamation made public as aforesaid designed to blacken and vilify the memory of one who is dead, and tending to scandalize or provoke his surviving relatives and friends." Rev. Stat. 1889, § 3869. As was said in State v. Armstrong, 106 Mo. 385, 18 L. R. A. 419, "The evident purpose and design of the defendant and the association he employed . . . was to publish the prosecutrix as a bad debtor, a dishonest person, who would not pay her honest debts, and to degrade her in the eyes of the public and her employers, and as such was clearly libelous, and within the meaning of the statute." The proposed mode of publishing the threatened libel clearly indicates that it was actuated by malice. There is nothing in the Bill of Rights which would exonerate defendants from responsibility for such a criminal libel, if actually uttered and published, nor to shield them from the offense denounced against sending a letter threatening to so libel him. The reason why libelous publications are public offenses is their direct tendency to provoke breaches of the public peace by the injured parties, and their friends and families to acts of revenge, and the same reason underlies statutes against letters which threaten extortion by means of libel. Such statutes do not infringe the constitutional right of any law-abiding citizen. Communications of this character, with the intention of extorting money, have been the common subjects of legislation both in England and the states of this Union. 3 Archbold, Crim. Pr. & Pl. p. 1060, and notes. And such laws have never been supposed to be obnoxious to freedom of speech, as understood in our free institutions. On the contrary, it is a libel on the Bill of Rights, which guarantees free speech, to assert that it was intended to protect anyone in such despicable practices. State v. Goodwin, 87 La. Ann. 713.

Without further elaboration, we hold that the court of criminal correction erred in quashing the information, and its judgment is reversed and the cause remanded.

Sherwood and Burgess, JJ., concur.

WISCONSIN SUPREME COURT.

Isaac LUND, Respt.,

v.

CHIPPEWA COUNTY et al., Appls.

(.....Wt.....)

1. Counties are municipalities within the meaning of Laws 1895, chap. 138, authorizing municipalities to make donations to the state home for the feeble-minded.
2. Implied power to issue bonds is given to a county by authority to make a donation "of money or other securities" for the benefit of a state home for the feeble-minded.
3. Donations by a county, made merely to secure a site for a state institution for the feeble-minded, and in no way affecting the efficiency and successful operation of the institution when established, are not against public policy.
4. The constitutional rule of uniformity in taxation is not violated by a statute authorizing a county to make a donation to secure the location of a state institution within the county, although that county as well as others will be taxed for its maintenance.
5. The use of county funds to make a donation to a state institution for the feeble-minded in order to secure its location within that county is for a public purpose, and may be authorized by the legislature.

(June 19, 1896.)

A PPEAL by defendants from an order of the Circuit Court for Chippewa County overruling a demurrer to the complaint in an action brought to enjoin the issuance and sale of certain county bonds. Reversed.

Statement by Cassoday, Ch. J.:

It appears from the complaint, and chapter 138, Laws 1895, therein referred to, entitled "An act to Establish a Home for the Custody, Training, and Education of the Feeble-Minded, Epileptic, and Idiotic, and to Appropriate Certain Sums of Money therein Named," and which was published and went into effect April 9, 1895, and which act, among other things, provided in effect that there is hereby created and established, for the care, custody, and training of the feeble-minded, epileptic, and idiotic of this state, an institution to be known as "The Wisconsin Home for the Feeble-Minded." (1) That the state board of control select a suitable site for such a home, and have power to receive proposals for a donation of land to the state for such site, and to receive the same by gift, or to purchase such site; that they may receive proposals for donations of money or other securities, in behalf of this state, for the benefit of such home; that they may locate the same, by and with the consent of the governor of the state, at such point as they, together with the governor, shall deem for the best interests of this state, and receive donations or bequests which may be made for its maintenance and support; that the site selected shall comprise not less than 200 acres of land possessing good facilities for drainage and sewerage, and an abundant supply of pure water; that municipalities of this state are hereby empowered to make the donations herein mentioned for the establishment and building of such a home. (2) That the general supervision and government of the home shall be vested in the state board of control, pursuant to the law creating and defining the duties of said board, and they shall establish a system of government for the institution, and shall make all necessary rules and regulations for enforcing discipline, imparting instruction, preserving health, and for the proper care and training of the persons in said home; that they shall appoint a superintendent, a matron, and such other officers, teachers, and employees as shall be necessary, who shall severally hold their offices or places during the pleasure of the board. (3) That all feeble-minded, epileptic, and idiotic persons, residents of the state, or any such persons found therein whose residence cannot be ascertained, may be admitted to said home, and receive the benefit thereof, free of charge, subject to such rules and regulations as may be made by the said board of control; that they shall adopt and publish a schedule of maximum charges and expenses for such patients as may be placed in the home, but who shall not be entitled to be admitted or kept free of charge; provided, that all provisions of chap. 32, Rev. Stat. relating to the support of insane persons, and the liability of counties therefor, shall also apply, as far as practicable, to persons admitted to the home for feeble-minded. (4) That said home shall be organized into three departments, as follows: First, a school department for the educable grades or classes; second, a custodial department for the helpless and lower types; third, such other departments or colonies as the needs of the institution may require. (5) That as soon as practicable such trades and manual industries as are adapted to these several departments shall be introduced and established by the state board of control. (6) That some time prior to November 19, 1895, the state board of control located said home at Chippewa Falls; that the place of said location is the extreme southerly end of the county; that the board of supervisors for Chippewa county at its regular annual meeting held November 19, 1895, passed an ordinance entitled "An ordinance to provide for the donation of certain money to the Wisconsin Home for the Feeble-Minded, and to provide for the issue of county bonds therefor;" that the ordinance was duly published as required by law November 20, 1895; that pur-

NOTE.—The effect of a gift to the public as bribery, when made to obtain the location of county buildings or to obtain some other public improvement, is the subject of a note to State, North Orange Baptist Church, v. Orange (N. J.) 14 L. R. A. 62. See, in addition, Ayres v. Moan (Neb.) 15 L. R. A. 501. 34 L. R. A.

What are public purposes for which public money may properly be used is the subject of a note to Daggett v. Colgan (Cal.) 14 L. R. A. 474. See, on the same question, Baltimore v. Keeley Institute (Md.) 27 L. R. A. 644.

suant to and by virtue of that ordinance the defendants Firth and Sharp, as county clerk and chairman of the board of supervisors, threatened to, and were about to issue and execute, in their official capacity as such clerk and chairman, in behalf of the county, twelve negotiable bonds of the face value of $1,000 each, and one negotiable bond of the face value of $700, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, payable annually, and the principal sums to be evidenced by such bonds to be made payable five years from that date, and that the treasurer of the county, Henry Goetz, has advertised for sale, and threatened to sell, said bonds, December 5, 1895, at public auction, to the highest bidder; that December 4, 1895, the plaintiff, a resident and freeholder and taxpayer of Chippewa county, commenced this action in behalf of himself and all other taxpayers of that county, against the county, its treasurer, clerk, and chairman of its board of supervisors, and in his complaint alleged, in effect, the facts stated, and giving a copy of said ordinance, and also alleged, in effect, that the county clerk threatened to and would insert $3,750 annually in the tax roll of the county for five years, beginning with 1896, and would, unless restrained, levy the same against all the taxable property of the county for the purpose of paying said bonds; that said ordinance was and is illegal and void; that the appropriation therein contained for the payment of said bonds was and is wholly without authority of law, in that the county board had no legal authority to create an indebtedness of the county for the purposes mentioned; that the plaintiff's taxes, and the taxes of all other taxpayers of the county, would be largely increased by reason of such illegal appropriation; and that they would thereby suffer irreparable loss and injury. The plaintiff prayed judgment that the ordinance, and all proceedings under and by virtue thereof, be set aside and declared null and void; that the defendants named and their successors in office, be perpetually restrained and enjoined from enforcing the same. To such complaint the defendants demurred on the ground that it did not state a cause of action. From the order overruling that demurrer, the defendants bring this appeal.

Messrs. W. R. Hoyt and L. J. Rusk, for appellants:

The county is a municipality within the act. Norton v. Peck, 3 Wis. 714; Eaton v. Manitowoc County Supers. 44 Wis. 489; State v. Hogue, 71 Wis. 384; Bookhout v. State, 66 Wis. 415.

The county board of supervisors had authority to issue bonds.

Mills v. Gleason, 11 Wis. 470, 78 Am. Dec. 721; Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 136; State v. Madison, 7 Wis. 688; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 118; Beach, Mun. Corp. § 885; La Pointe Supers. v. O'Malley, 47 Wis. 332.

The unconstitutionality of the act is sustained by only two decisions.

Livingston County Supers. v. Weider, 64 Ill. 427; Wasson v. Wayne County Comrs. 49 Ohio St. 622, 17 L. R. A. 795.

Livingston County Supers. v. Weider, supra, has been overruled in Burr v. Carbondale, 76 Ill. 455, and Livingston County v. Darlington, 84 L. R. A.

101 U. S. 407, 25 L. ed. 1015; Hensley Twp. v. People, 84 Ill. 544.

In Wasson v. Wayne County Comrs. supra, the court cites as authority to sustain its decisions the cases of State, Board of Edu., v. Haben, 22 Wis. 661; Livingston County Supers. v. Weider, supra; Sleight v. People, Weller Twp. 74 Ill. 47.

The constitutionality of this act is sustained by Livingston County v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 407, 25 L. ed. 1015; Brodhead v. Milwaukee, 19 Wis. 625, 88 Am. Dec. 711; Speer v. Blairsville School Directors, 50 Pa. 150; State, McCurdy, v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 664, 9 Am. Rep. 622; Curtis v. Whipple, 24 Wis. 350; Knott v. Rock County Supers. 9 Wis. 410; Soens v. Racine, 10 Wis. 271; Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 13 Wis. 88, 80 Am. Dec. 718; Whitting v. Sheyboygan & F. du L. R. Co. 25 Wis. 167, 8 Am. Rep. 30.

Mr. T. F. Frawley, with Mr. C. T. Bundy, for respondent:

The court, at the instance of a taxpayer, will enjoin the issue and sale of bonds for an illegal or unlawful purpose or when issued without authority of law; and will enjoin the levy of a tax not authorized by law, or one which violates a constitutional provision.

High, Inj. §§ 1283, 1299; Wright v. Bishop, 88 Ill. 302; Ourlenius v. Hoyt, 87 Mich. 583; Foster v. Kenosha, 12 Wis. 617; Lawson v. Schnellen, 38 Wis. 288; Willard v. Comstock, 58 Wis. 566, 46 Am. Rep. 657.

Chapter 138 of the Laws of 1895, authorizing "the municipalities of this state to make the donations therein mentioned," does not authorize a county to make such donations; a county is not a municipality.

Enc. Britanica, Municipality, 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 22-27; 1 Desty, Taxn. §§ 97-99; Cooley, Const. Lim. §§ 240, 241; Waltham v. Kemper, 55 Ill. 346, 8 Am. Rep. 652; Lorillard v. Monroe, 11 N. Y. 392, 63 Am. Dec. 120; Williamsport v. Com., Bair, 84 Pa. 499, 24 Am. Rep. 208; Norton v. Peck, 3 Wis. 714; Eaton v. Manitowoc County Supers. 44 Wis. 489; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Oconto, 50 Wis. 195, 36 Am. Rep. 840; Smith v. Sherry, 50 Wis. 218; Cathcart v. Comstock, 56 Wis. 609; State, Hiles, v. Wood County Supers. 61 Wis. 280.

Chapter 138, Laws of 1895, contravenes § 1, art. 8, of the Constitution of Wisconsin, and is void.

The legislature has no power to levy a tax on the property of Chippewa county separately from the taxable property of the rest of the state, for a state purpose, without the consent of the people of Chippewa county.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 283; Cooley, Taxn. 140, 142; Dorgan v. Boston, 12 Allen, 223; Hammitt v. Philadelphia, 65 Pa. 146, 8 Am. Rep. 615; Ex parte Marshall, 64 Ala. 266; State, McCurdy, v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 664, 9 Am. Rep. 622; State, Board of Edu., v. Haben, 22 Wis. 660.

The entire taxing power is vested in the legislature, which can, in proper cases and for certain purposes, delegate such power to the political subdivisions of the state. Such political subdivisions have no inherent power to levy a tax for any purpose, but have such only as is delegated to them by the legislature.

1 Deaty, Taxn. 353, 470-475; Cooley, Taxn. 329; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 821; United States v. New Orleans, 98 U. S. 881, 25 L. ed. 225; Justice v. Logansport, 101 Ind. 826; 25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 18; Knowlton v. Rock County Supers. 9 Wis. 411.

The legislature has no power to delegate its taxing power to a municipal corporation or political subdivision, except for local or corporate purposes.

1 Deaty, Taxn. 26, 253, 259, 274; Cooley, Const. Lim. 280; People v. Parks, 58 Cal. 644; Roster v. Kenosha, 12 Wis. 618; Slinger v. Henneman, 38 Wis. 510; Taylor v. Chandler, 9 Heisk. 349; Washington Avenue, 69 Pa. 352, 8 Am. Rep. 255; State, McCurdy, v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 634, 9 Am. Rep. 622; Const. art. 3, § 22; Jensen v. Polk County Supers. 47 Wis. 313.

The legislature cannot delegate any greater power than the state itself possesses, and it must observe the restrictions of the organic law.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 240; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 740, 778; 1 Deaty, Taxn. 259; O'Donnell v. Bailey, 24 Miss. 386; Primm v. Belleville, 59 Ill. 142; Weightman v. Clark, 103 U. S. 256, 26 L. ed. 892; Wasson v. Wayne County Comrs. 49 Ohio St. 622, 17 L. R. A. 795; People, Detroit & H. R. Co., v. Salem Twp. Board, 20 Mich. 474, 4 Am. Rep. 400; Anderson v. Hill, 54 Mich. 487.

The rule of uniformity, provided by § 1, art. 8, of the Constitution, requires that taxation shall be uniform within and for the district for which the tax is levied.

25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 60; Cooley, Const. Lim. 494; Cooley, Taxn. 140, 143, 244; 1 Deaty, Taxn. 175, 176; Livingston County Supers. v. Weider, 64 Ill. 427; Wasson v. Wayne County Comrs. supra; New Orleans v. Fourchy, 30 La. Ann. 912; Dyar v. Farmington, 70 Me. 515; Pleuler v. State, 11 Neb. 547; East Portland v. Multnomah County, 6 Or. 62; Weightman v. Clark, 103 U. S. 256, 26 L. ed. 892; Knowlton v. Rock County Supers. 9 Wis. 411; Hale v. Kenosha, 29 Wis. 603.

A rule of taxation that requires a county to contribute twice to the same burden, while other counties are required to contribute but once, violates § 1, art. 8, of the Constitution and is void.

Cooley, Taxn. 222; State, Nunnemacher, v. Mann, 76 Wis. 498.

If chapter 186 of the Laws of 1895 violates the rule of uniformity it is unconstitutional and void, and the consent of the board of supervisors cannot validate the tax levied under it.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 240; Cooley, Taxn. 143; 1 Deaty, Taxn. 259, 481; O'Donnell v. Bailey, Primm v. Belleville, People, Detroit & H. R. Co., v. Salem Twp. Board, and Wasson v. Wayne County Comrs. supra; Whiting v. Sheboygan & P. du L. R. Co. 25 Wis. 173, 8 Am. Rep. 30; Anderson v. Hill, 54 Mich. 491.

Under chapter 186 of the Laws of 1895, the county board of Chippewa county had no authority to issue the bonds in question.

Mere political bodies, constituted as counties, are for the purpose of local police administration, and, having the power of levying taxes for the purpose of paying all county charges created, have no power to make commercial 34 L. R. A.

paper of any kind, unless such power is expressly conferred upon them or clearly implied from some other power expressly given.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 123, 507; Claiborne County v. Brooks, 111 U. S. 400, 28 L. ed. 470; Police Jury v. Britton, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 566, 21 L. ed. 251; Nashville v. Ray, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 468, 22 L. ed. 164.

The Constitution is a limitation, and not a grant of power.

Bushnell v. Beloit, 10 Wis. 196.

The benefits to be derived by Chippewa county from the location of this institution at Chippewa Falls, are not such as to make a tax levied to establish and maintain it a tax levied for a corporate purpose.

Livingston County Supers. v. Weider, 64 Ill. 427; Wasson v. Wayne County Comrs. 49 Ohio St. 622, 17 L. R. A. 795; State, Board of Edu., v. Haben, 23 Wis. 664; State, McCurdy, v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 604, 9 Am. Rep. 622.

The legislature cannot do indirectly (by delegation) what it cannot, under the Constitution, do directly.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 240; Nevil v. Oliford, 63 Wis. 447; La Pointe Supers. v. O'Malley, 47 Wis. 337.

A tax cannot be apportioned to the benefits or supposed benefits received. This can only be done by "assessments" in cities and in incorporated villages.

Wis. Const. art. 11, § 3; Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 256.

On rehearing.

All the power of taxation is vested in the legislature; all taxes levied by a political subdivision are, in legal effect, levied by the state. The power of the legislature to tax is limited by the Constitution.

Any single individual has a right to insist that the public does not own or control his property for the purpose of donation.

People, Detroit & H. R. Co., v. Salem Twp. Board, 20 Mich. 487, 4 Am. Rep. 400.

Taxes levied by municipal corporations, which are for this purpose instruments of the state, are, in legal effect, levied by the state.

Justice v. Logansport, 101 Ind. 826; Knowlton v. Rock County Supers. 9 Wis. 411.

Can the state, by its legislature or its inferior agents, apportion a tax for a state purpose?

A tax levied for a state purpose must be levied upon all the taxable property within the state, and cannot be apportioned.

Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 256.

If this money was not voted for a local purpose, but for a state purpose, the rule of uniformity was broken.

Wasson v. Wayne County Comrs. 49 Ohio St. 622, 17 L. R. A. 795; State, Board of Edu., v. Haben, 23 Wis. 664; State, McCurdy, v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 679, 9 Am. Rep. 622; Deaty, Taxn. 274; Cooley, Taxn. 140; Knowlton v. Rock County Supers. 9 Wis. 411, Approved in Hale v. Kenosha, 29 Wis. 664.

In respect of public or quasi corporations, such as counties, as distinguished from municipal corporations proper, the general current of authority is against the proposition that, as ordinarily recognized they possess any power to issue negotiable instruments.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 507; Cooley, Const. Lim. 240, 241; Cooley, Taxn. 143; Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 170; Merrick v. Amherst, 13 Allen, 500; State, Board of Edu., v. Haben, 29 Wis. 660; State, McCurdy, v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 664, 9 Am. Rep. 622; Whiting v. Sheboygan & P. du L. R. Co. 25 Wis. 167, 8 Am. Rep. 80; Ellis v. Northern P. R. Co. 77 Wis. 118.

A town cannot assume, nor can the state compel it to assume, as a town charge, a burden which should properly be borne by the whole state. A local assessment for a general benefit is unconstitutional.

Deady, Taxn. 274; Forster v. Kenosha, 12 Wis. 618; Gordon v. Cornes, 47 N. Y. 608; Livingston County v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 407, 25 L. ed. 1015; State v. Nelson County, 1 N. D. 88.

Cassoday, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

It is contended by counsel for the plaintiff that a county is not a municipality, within the meaning of chap. 188, Laws 1895. Properly speaking, municipal corporations are brought into existence at the instance or request of the persons residing therein, for their own local advancement and convenience. On the other hand, counties are local subdivisions of the state, created by its own sovereign power and will, without the particular solicitation, consent, or concurrent action of the citizens thereof, and almost exclusively with a view to the policy of the state at large, for purposes of political organization and civil administration. 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 28. The same learned author says: "The phrase 'municipal corporation' is used with us, in general, in the strict and proper sense just mentioned; but sometimes it is used in a broader sense, that includes also public or quasi corporations, the principal purpose of whose creation is as an instrumentality of the state, and not for the regulation of the local and special affairs of a compact community." Id. § 20. We are constrained to hold that counties are municipalities, within the meaning of the provision of the act which declares that "municipalities of this state are hereby empowered to make the donations herein mentioned for the establishment and building of such a home." Laws 1895, chap. 188, § 2. Thus in Eaton v. Manitowoc County Supers. 44 Wis. 493, it is said: "Towns are often called in common parlance, and sometimes, unguardedly in statutes, 'municipal corporations,' in connection with counties, cities, and villages; but when so called it is in the sense of mere corporations, or quasi corporations, or corporations sub modo, only, and not in the sense of municipalities proper." Cathcart v. Comstock, 56 Wis. 606, 608. The site to be selected was to comprise not less than 200 acres of land, with good drainage and sewerage facilities, and an abundant supply of pure water. It would hardly be expected to find such a site in a city or incorporated village. Besides, the act makes all the provisions of chap. 82, Rev. Stat., relating to the support of insane persons and the liability of counties therefor, applicable, as far as practicable, to persons admitted to the home for the feeble-minded. § 4. Since the chapter of the Revised Statutes so made applicable has little or no reference to cities or villages, but deals throughout with counties, we must conclude that by the word "municipalities," as used in the act in question, the legislature intended to include counties.

2. It is contended that the language of the statute is not broad enough to authorize the proposed issue of the bonds. It is not contended that the county board would have had such power in the absence of chap. 188, Laws 1895. By that act the state board of control was expressly empowered to "receive proposals for donations of money or other securities in behalf of this state for the benefit of such home," and may also "receive any donations or bequests which may be made for its maintenance and support," and the "municipalities of this state" were thereby expressly "empowered to make the donations herein [therein] mentioned for the establishment and building of such a home." § 2. The words, "other securities" are certainly broad enough to include bonds. If the county board had power to issue such "securities," then, under the decisions of this court, they had the implied power to put them in the form of bonds. Mills v. Gleason, 11 Wis. 470, 78 Am. Dec. 731; State v. Madison, 7 Wis. 688; State, Priest, v. Regents of Wis. University, 54 Wis. 170; Gilman v. Milwaukee, 61 Wis. 592, 1 Reid, Corporate Finance, § 8.

3. "The legislature may confer upon the boards of supervisors of the several counties of the state such powers of a local, legislative, and administrative character, as they shall from time to time prescribe." Wis. Const. art. 4, § 22. In construing this provision of our Constitution, this court has held "that, when any subject of legislation is intrusted to said county boards by general words in a statute, they acquire a right to pass any ordinance necessary or convenient for the purpose of disposing of the whole subject so committed to them, and for that purpose have all the powers of the state legislature over that subject, unless the statute restricts the power, or directs its exercise in a certain way." La Pointe Supers. v. O'Malley, 47 Wis. 833; Knight v. Ashland, 61 Wis. 233. The county was expressly empowered by statute "to apportion and order the levying of taxes, as provided by law, and direct the raising of such sums of money as may be necessary to defray the county charges and expenses, and all necessary charges incident to or arising from the execution of their lawful authority." Rev. Stat. § 669, subd. 5.

4. It is contended that the authority thus given to the county by the act in question to donate to the state "money or other securities for the establishment and building of such home" was contrary to public policy, and therefore void. This court has held that "the legislature may impose conditions precedent to the removal of a county seat, in addition to those imposed by the state Constitution." State, Park, v. Portage County Supers. 24 Wis. 49. In that case the act which was held valid provided, in effect, that, after a majority of the votes should be cast in favor of removing the county seat to the city of Stevens Point, yet it should not be so removed until that city should first place at the control of the county board $10,000, with which to build county buildings at that place. To the same effect is Pepin County v. Prindle, 61 Wis. 811-814. Such donations have been sanctioned in several states. Id., and cases there cited; Beham v. Ohio, 75 Tex. 87. The donation here authorized was merely to secure a site for the home, and in no way affected the efficiency and successful operation of the institution when established. Upon the authorities cited, we must hold that the authorizing of such donation was not against public policy.

5. The principal contention is that the authorization of such donations was repugnant to that clause of our Constitution which declares that "the rule of taxation shall be uniform, and taxes shall be levied upon such property as the legislature shall prescribe." § 1, art. 8. This provision manifestly requires such uniformity, in case of a state tax, to extend throughout the state; in case of a county tax, to extend throughout the county; in case of a city tax, to extend throughout the city; and, in case of a town tax, to extend throughout the town. In other words, the rule of uniformity is not broken merely because a town or city or county raises a special tax for local purposes. If the proposed tax to pay the $12,700 in securities donated by Chippewa county may properly be regarded as a county tax, then the question of uniformity is not involved, since there is no pretense that, in levying that tax upon the taxable property in that county, any other than such uniform rule is to be followed. It is sought to bring the case within the condemnation of the constitutional provision quoted, on the theory that the proposed home is to be a state institution; that it is to be governed, controlled, and managed wholly by state officers and agencies; that it is to be established, built, and maintained by all the taxpayers and taxable property throughout the state, including such property and taxpayers in Chippewa county; that the state would have had no power, by direct action, to compel one or more counties of the state, less than the whole, to pay an additional amount for such establishment, building, and maintenance; and hence that the legislature could not, by delegating such authority to such municipalities, do indirectly what, under the Constitution, it could not have done directly. It is certainly to be a state institution; to be governed, controlled, and managed by the state; and to be established, built, and maintained by the state. But it does not follow that the state could not authorize a municipality in which it should be located to do what the state itself could not do directly. In speaking of the twofold character of such municipalities,—as agencies of the state government, and as "corporations endowed with capacities, and permitted to hold property and enjoy peculiar privileges for the benefit of their corporators exclusively,"—Mr. Cooley says: "The legislature may permit the incurring of expense, the contracting of obligations, and the levy of taxes which are unusual, and which would not be admissible under the powers usually conferred. Instances of the kind may be mentioned in the offer of military bounties, and the payment of a disproportionate share of a state burden in consideration of peculiar local benefits which are to spring from it. But it is believed the legislature has no power, against the will of a municipal corporation, to compel it to contract debts for local purposes in which the state has no concern, or to assume obligations not within the ordinary functions of municipal government. . . . The state in such cases may remove restrictions and permit action, but it cannot compel it." Cooley, Const. Lim. 230, 231. We have a good illustration in this state. Our Constitution provides that "the state shall never contract any debt for works of internal improvement, or be a party in carrying on such works," § 10, art. 8. Nevertheless the legislature has, from time to time, commencing with the early history of the state, authorized such municipalities to contract such debts, if not to be a party in carrying on such works, and such legislation has frequently been held to be valid. Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 42, 80 Am. Dec. 718. Cases to such effect are numerous. Atty. Gen. v. Eau Claire, 37 Wis. 400. That the legislature may authorize municipalities to levy taxes for purposes for which it cannot compel them to levy taxes might be illustrated by the citation of numerous adjudications, but it is unnecessary. See, however, Brodhead v. Milwaukee, 19 Wis. 625, 88 Am. Dec. 711; State, McCurdy, v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 664, 9 Am. Rep. 623. This court has held that legislation to the effect that where the cost of a bridge in a town exceeds a certain per cent of all the taxable property of the town, the county may be required to pay one half of the cost thereof, is valid, and does not break the rule of uniformity. State, Baraboo, v. Sauk County Supers. 70 Wis. 485.

6. Since the securities authorized to be donated in the case at bar are securities issued by the county, and since the proposed taxes in payment of the same are to be county taxes, the precise question presented is whether the purpose for which such securities were donated, and for which such taxes are to be raised, is such as to justify the provisions of the enactment in question. This court has sustained the validity of acts of the legislature authorizing municipalities to raise moneys by taxation to pay bounties to volunteers in the United States army. Brodhead v. Milwaukee, and State, McCurdy, v. Tappan, supra. In those cases it was, among other things, in effect, held that while "the legislature cannot create a public debt, or levy a tax, or authorize a municipal corporation to do so, in order to raise funds for a mere private purpose," and while "the objects for which money is raised by taxation must be public, and such as subserve the common interest and wellbeing of the community required to contribute," yet "to justify a court in declaring a tax void, and arresting proceedings for its collection, the absence of all possible public interest in the purposes for which the funds are raised must be so clear and palpable as to be immediately perceptible to every mind;" that "claims founded in equity and justice, in the largest sense of those terms, or in gratitude or charity, will support a tax;" that "the legislature may authorize a town or other municipality to levy taxes therein for public purposes not strictly of a municipal character, but from which the public have received, or will receive, some direct advantage, or where the tax is to be expended in defraying the expenses of the government, or in promoting the peace, good order, and welfare of society, or in paying claims founded upon natural justice and equity, or upon gratitude for public services or expenditures, or in discharging the obligations of charity and humanity." True, in Whiting v. Sheboygan & F. du L. R. Co. 25 Wis. 167, 8 Am. Rep. 30, two of the three members of this court, as then constituted, held that an act authorizing a county to issue its orders in aid of the construction of a railroad therein, and to levy a tax to pay such orders, without becoming a stockholder in the company, was invalid, on the ground that such orders and tax were for a private purpose. But that case was expressly overruled, and the same act of the legislature was held valid, by the Supreme Court of the United States, on the ground that such railroad was a public highway, and hence the purpose of such county orders and county taxes in aid of its construction was for a public purpose. Olcott v. Fond du Lac County Supers. 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. ed. 882. That decision has steadily been adhered to since, and seems to be in harmony with the rule established in most of the states. Humbird v. Jackson County Supers. 154 U. S. 592, 38 L. ed. 1089; Roberts v. Northern P. R. Co. 158 U. S. 17, 39 L. ed. 879, Affirming Northern P. R. Co. v. Roberts, 42 Fed. Rep. 734; Folsom v. Township Ninety Six, 159 U. S. 628, 40 L. ed. 284, and cases there cited. Whatever force may be given by this court to the decision of Whiting v. Sheboygan & F. du L. R. Co. it is manifest that it ought not to be extended. Counsel cite State, Board of Edu., v. Haben, 22 Wis. 660, where it was held that "money raised in a city, by taxation, for the purpose of erecting a high-school building, cannot be diverted by an act of the legislature, without the assent of the city or its inhabitants, to the purchase of a site for a normal school in said city." That decision does not tend to invalidate the act in question, but rather tends to support it. This is apparent from two extracts from the opinion of Dixon, Ch. J., in that case, where he said: "To say that the legislature can, without the assent of the proper municipal authorities or of the inhabitants, take the money of the city of Oshkosh, and appropriate it to the establishment of a state normal school, is to say that it can take the money of any municipal corporation, and apply it to any general state purpose. . . . The advantages incidentally accruing to the citizens of Oshkosh from the establishment of a state normal school at that place, though sufficient, with the consent of the legislature, to justify the citizens themselves, or the proper municipal officers, in levying a tax to aid in the purchase of a site or the erection of buildings, do not change the nature of the question here presented." See Gordon v. Cornes, 47 N. Y. 608. In Curtis v. Whipple, 24 Wis. 350, the act to empower the town to raise money by taxation for the benefit of Jefferson Liberal Institute, a private corporation, was held invalid by two members of the court on the ground that it was "essentially a private educational institution," and by the other member of the court "mainly on the ground that the constitutional provisions for public schools of every grade" were exclusive. To the same effect, Cole v. La Grange, 118 U. S. 1, 28 L. ed. 896. In Livingston County v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 407, 25 L. ed. 1015, an act of the legislature of Illinois establishing a state reform school, and authorizing municipal corporations to donate money to secure the location of the same within their limits, was sustained and held valid, there being no settled or uniform decision to the contrary by the supreme court of that state. In Indiana, legislation authorizing counties to make donations for the purpose of securing the location of an agricultural college within their jurisdiction was held valid; and it was there further held that an obligation by the county for such purpose was "solely a county purpose, local in its nature, and properly assessed and collected as are taxes for other county purposes." Marks v. Purdue University, 87 Ind. 155, 16 Ind. 288. So it has been held in Massachusetts that the legislature have power to pass an act authorizing a town to raise money for the establishment of an agricultural college therein. Merrick v. Amherst, 12 Allen, 500. See also State v. Nelson County, 1 N. D. 88; Cooley, Const. Lim. 230, 231.

34 L. R. A.

In the case at bar it must be conceded that the establishment and building of the Wisconsin Home for Feeble-Minded was and is a public purpose. It must also be conceded that there are peculiar and special benefits which will naturally spring from such location. This is manifest from the fact that numerous such municipalities, by a tender of such donations, entered into competition for such location. The right of convenient visitation by friends of the unfortunate inmates is of itself a valuable right. Without further specification or discussion, we must hold the provisions of the act in question to be valid.

The order of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the cause is remanded, with direction to sustain the demurrer, and for further proceedings according to law.

Rehearing denied.

ALABAMA SUPREME COURT.

ANNISTON TRANSFER COMPANY,
Appl.,
v.

S. M. GURLEY.

(107 Ala. 600.)

The contract of a baggage transfer company to transport baggage from a residence to a railroad depot is fully performed so that its responsibility ceases when the baggage is delivered to the agent of the railroad company at the depot.

(June 22, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the City Court of Anniston in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover the value of a trunk and contents which had been delivered to defendant for transportation. Reversed.

Defendant was engaged as a transfer company in transporting baggage about the city of Anniston. It was employed by plaintiff's agent to take a trunk from a residence to the Georgia Pacific Railway depot. The trunk was delivered to a driver of one of defendant's wagons and carried to the depot.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Knox, Howie, & Pelham for appellant.

Messrs. Methvin & Kelly for appellee.

NOTE.—Liability of baggage transfer companies.

- I. As common carriers.
- II. When liable.
- III. Limitation of liability.
- IV. When not liable.
- V. The effect of a custom.

The question of the liability of baggage transfer companies rests upon the same principles as that of other common carriers, and is determined in like manner. They are liable according to the manner in which they hold themselves out and transact their business.

The holding of the court in the principal case of ANNISTON TRANSFER CO. V. GURLEY, is in harmony with the prior decisions.

I. As common carriers.

The question whether a baggage transfer company is or is not a common carrier must be determined by the following general principles laid down in cases wherein the question has been discussed.

A person who makes it a business to solicit from the public the carriage of trunks and packages from place to place for hire is to all intents and purposes a common carrier. Robinson v. Cornish, 24 N. Y. S. R. 695.

The test is, whether he holds out, either expressly or by a course of conduct, that he will carry for hire the goods of all persons indifferently who send them to him. Ibid.

A truckman who transfers from place to place the goods of all choosing to employ him is a common carrier, even though his charges be not fixed as to the amount. Jackson Architectural Iron Works v. Harburt, 15 Misc. 98. In this case the court followed the ruling in the earlier cases of Richards v. Westcott, 3 Bosw. 589, and Allen v. Sackrider, 27 N. Y. 341, and although it was not one in which baggage was transported, yet it is here cited as showing a bearing upon the question in hand.

But if the defendant or party hired to carry does not follow such calling as a general or habitual business, but carries the articles in question under a special contract, he will not be liable as a common carrier, but only upon his contract. Fish v. Chapman, 2 Ga. 349, 46 Am. Dec. 393.

In Richards v. Westcott, supra, it was proved that the trunk was delivered to the defendant company, who carried trunks for hire between the depots in the city, to be carried to the passenger depot of the railroad company to accompany the plaintiff's agent on his journey, and that by reason of the defendant's negligence the trunk was not delivered at the depot. It was held that the defendants were common carriers and liable as such.

34 L. R. A.

In Robinson v. Cornish, supra, the defendant, a city expressman having a license to carry on such business in the city of New York, had a parcel delivered to him by the plaintiff for carriage between points in said city, which package was received by his driver and was lost or stolen from his wagon. Upon suit brought to recover its value it was held that he was liable as a common carrier, or if not as such, he was still liable as a private carrier, or as a bailee for hire, on the theory of negligence.

Where a railroad passenger on arriving at his destination entered into a contract with a transportation company for an agreed price to procure his baggage from the railroad company's depot and haul it to his residence, and surrendered his baggage checks to such company, it was held that the transportation company was liable for the safe keeping of the baggage and for its safe delivery, a contractual relation existing between the parties which the passenger might enforce by action and sequestration. De Ponte v. New Orleans Transfer Co., 42 La. Ann. 699.

The case of Parmelee v. Lowitz, 74 Ill. 116, 24 Am. Rep. 273, was an action to recover the value of articles in a trunk delivered by the appellee to the appellant to be carried for hire from the depot to the appellee's residence. In affirming the judgment of the court below in favor of the appellee, the court held that the appellant was a common carrier and as such was bound to carry the trunk and its contents safely, though it was not such as was usually carried by him as baggage, there being no fraud or deception practiced by the appellee as to the contents of the trunk, the appellant not inquiring as to such contents, and the appellee not being under a special obligation to make the contents known.

And although hotel proprietors and innkeepers are not generally carriers, yet in cases where they have engaged to carry or transport the baggage of their guests from their premises to the depots the courts have looked upon them as such.

In Dickinson v. Winchester, 4 Cush. 114, 50 Am. Dec. 760, an innkeeper who, by public notice, engaged to carry all guests and their baggage free from the depot to his house, and vice versa, was held liable for the baggage of a guest lost by the negligence of the driver of the hack, the court basing its opinion upon the principles of the doctrine of estoppel, the innkeeper by reason of his notice being looked upon as making the driver his agent or servant. In this case, however, the question as to whether or not the innkeeper was to be held responsible by reason of his having engaged in such business, or whether he was responsible as a common carrier, was mooted but not decided by the court.

In Dibble v. Brown, 12 Ga. 217, 56 Am. Dec. 460,

Head, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

We are satisfied, from the testimony, which is practically without dispute on this point, that the contract between the parties was that the defendant company should carry the plaintiff's trunk to the depot, and deliver it there to the baggage agent of the railroad company. The plaintiff herself testified that the trunk was delivered to the defendant's driver, "to be deposited in the baggage room of the Ga. Pacific R. R.;" and her son-in-law, Robinson, who acted for her, says he informed the defendant's general manager that he wanted the trunk carried to the Georgia Pacific depot, and, furthermore, that, when he accompanied the plaintiff to the train, the next morning, he inquired for the trunk of the baggage agent of the Georgia Pacific Railroad, at the depot in Anniston where he had ordered the trunk to be taken. We have only to decide whether the defendant performed that contract; and we are clearly of the opinion that it did perform it fully, both in its letter and spirit. The testimony shows, without conflict, that the driver, Joe Lindsay, immediately upon receiving the trunk, carried it to the depot, and put it on the covered platform between the passenger and baggage departments, in front of the door of the baggage room, at the place, and only place, set apart and especially designated by the baggage agent for the deposit of baggage to be received by him for the railroad, and where the railroad company had, for a long time been accustomed to receive baggage. The driver, Lindsay, testifies that he called the attention of the defendant was a proprietor of an omnibus which ran from his hotel, at which the plaintiff stopped, to the railroad depot. The baggage for the loss of which the action was brought, was received by the defendant at his hotel and brought out by his servants to be sent to the depot with the plaintiff. It was held that the proprietor was liable as a common carrier for such baggage, he being a common carrier of passengers.

And the case of Dickinson v. Winchester, supra, established the doctrine that the keeper of a public house, giving notice that he will furnish free conveyances to and from the depot to all passengers with their baggage who stay at his house, and who for that purpose engages the proprietors of carriages to carry such passengers free of charge to them, will be held liable for the loss of a passenger's luggage incurred through the negligence of the carriage proprietors, their drivers or servants.

In that case the court stated that the question whether the defendant was to be considered liable either as an innkeeper or as a common carrier was immaterial, as he was liable in either capacity.

As to who are common carriers, see note to Staub v. Kendrick (Ind.) 6 L. R. A. 619; and to Browning v. Goodrich Transp. Co. (Wis.) 10 L. R. A. 415.

II. When Liable.

Inasmuch as baggage transfer companies are considered as common carriers, it follows that their responsibility is the same. They are bound to deliver the baggage intrusted to their care according to the terms of their contract, and will be liable for negligence in case of a neglect of such duty.

In Southern Exp. Co. v. Armstead, 50 Ala. 360, the express company was held liable as a common carrier for a trunk taken for hire and delivered by them upon the railroad company's platform, without leaving it in charge of any person, such an act being considered gross negligence.

In the above case the express company, who at first declined to receive the articles, as it had no agent to receive them at the depot and the railroad company had refused the use of its depot, subsequently took the goods and marked them at "owner's risk" without the knowledge or consent of the consignor, but the consignee had knowledge of such facts. It was held that such facts did not relieve it from responsibility.

A student's manuscript books are baggage for which an expressman will be liable as a common carrier when lost through his negligence, if contained in such student's trunk. Hopkins v. Westcott, 6 Blatchf. 64.

In Verner v. Sweitzer, 32 Pa. 208, the defendant's agent, whose business it was to board all trains at the depot and collect passengers' baggage checks, took from the plaintiff his checks for baggage upon the train, handing him a ticket in return therefor. The baggage being lost, it was held in an action to recover damages for the same, that the defendant was liable no matter whether he was a common or a private carrier, there being proof of want of ordinary care on his part without any proof of ordinary negligence on plaintiff's part.

In Springer v. Westcott, 2 App. Div. 256, the plaintiff, while a passenger by railroad, delivered the check for her trunk to the defendant's agent, with instructions to procure her baggage and deliver it at a certain address, taking the usual receipt. The trunk was delivered to her soiled, broken, and empty, and had the defendant's usual yellow label thereon. On the trial in the court below verdict was rendered for the defendant, but upon appeal it was reversed and a new trial ordered, the court stating that it was for the defendant to show that the trunk was in such a condition when received by him from the railroad company, and that in the absence of such a showing the presumption was that it was in good condition when received by him, the case being one for the jury upon the evidence.

Under §883, N. Y. Rev. Ord. 1881, a person who has a license from the mayor to use and employ express wagons in the conveyance and transportation of goods from place to place in a city for hire, wages, or pay, upon conforming to and obeying in all respects the ordinances of the common council, is responsible for all articles intrusted to the drivers of his wagons. Robinson v. Cornish, 34 N. Y. S. R. 695.

See also supra, I.

III. Limitation of Liability.

The question whether or not such companies can limit their liability would seem to depend, as in other cases of common carriers, upon the question of assent on the consignor's part, for when a limitation of liability is indiscriminately made, no presumption of assent can or ought to be indulged. Southern Exp. Co. v. Armstead, 50 Ala. 360, 362.

An express company, or a baggage transfer company, cannot by the use of a general printed receipt, limit its liability so as to relieve itself from responsibility beyond a certain amount. Ibid.

In Woodruff v. Sherrard, 9 Hun, 338, the facts showed that the plaintiff gave a check for her baggage to defendants and engaged them to transfer the same from the depot to her house, taking the company's receipt therefor, which unknown to her contained a special contract limiting defendants' liability. In an action to recover for the loss of the goods it was held that the company was liable, as there was nothing to show that plaintiff assented to the terms of the special contract.

So, in Grossman v. Dodd, 68 Hun, 334, Affirmed

Crabtree, the agent, to the trunk, telling him who had sent it to the train, and when it was going off, and that Crabtree said, "All right," or something of that sort. It is true that Crabtree testified that the trunk was not delivered to him, and that he did not receive it, yet, on cross-examination, he shows, by stating that he so swears because he did not check the trunk, that he was merely expressing an erroneous legal conclusion. His further statements that "the trunk was deposited at the proper place set apart and designated by me, as the railroad company's baggage agent, for the delivery of baggage to me as baggage agent, and at the place at which I check all baggage, and have received and checked all baggage continuously for the railroad for the last three years;" and that "when Joe Lindsay put the trunk on the covered platform, near the baggage-room door, he called my attention to it, and told me whose trunk it was, and what train it was going off on. I do not remember what reply I made to him, but I did not object in any way to his leaving it there,"—leave no room to doubt that there was a good delivery to and acceptance by him of the trunk, which completed the performance of the defendant's contract. It was expressly made known and understood, at the time of the making of the contract of carriage, that the trunk could not be carried the next morning to meet the 8 o'clock train, on which the plaintiff expected to take passage, for the reason that the driver had to go at that time to another depot to take the mail; and, in view of this, it was expressly agreed that he should go at once, that after-

127 N. Y. 500, the court reached a similar conclusion, the plaintiff not having assented to the terms of the special contract limiting the defendant's liability, no such contract arising as a matter of law from the mere acceptance of such a receipt. In that case the plaintiff's trunk and baggage were delivered to the company to be transferred from the pier at which plaintiff had landed to the city, and were damaged by falling into the river through the defendant's negligence.

Again, in Blossom v. Dodd, 48 N. Y. 264, 3 Am. Rep. 701, the question of limitation of liability on the part of the express company arose, and was decided against the defendants, no assent to or knowledge of the restriction being shown on the plaintiff's part. The facts showed that plaintiff delivered his baggage check to the agent of the defendant company on the car, which was badly lighted and received a receipt which contained a limitation of liability, and was badly printed. The company was held liable for the baggage which was lost or stolen in transit.

In Madan v. Sherard, 78 N. Y. 529, 20 Am. Rep. 153, the facts and circumstances were very similar to those in the case of Blossom v. Dodd, except that the receipt, which the plaintiff neglected to read but folded up and put in his pocket, was printed in large type and upon larger paper. The court held that the mere fact that he did not read the paper was not per se evidence of negligence, and no assent being proved on the part of the plaintiff to the special contract, the defendant was liable for the loss of the trunk in question, the plaintiff having a right to regard the paper as a voucher to enable him to follow and identify the goods, no notice to the contrary being given him.

And in Staub v. Kendrick, 121 Ind. 220, 6 L. R. A. 619, where the appellant, engaged in the transportation of trunks and baggage to and from the various hotels and depots in his town, was sued by the appellee for the value of a valise and its contents, and damages resulting from its loss. In affirming the decision of the court below, it was held that one engaged in the business of transporting baggage was liable for the value of articles, necessary for use in traveling, contained in a valise delivered to his agent for transportation, and lost solely through such agent's negligence, even though the defendant posted notices that he would not be responsible for valises, and instructed his agents not to receive the same, the owner of the valise being ignorant of such notice.

The contrary view would appear to have been taken by the courts in some cases.

In Hopkins v. Westcott, 6 Blatchf. 64, the facts showed that upon receipt of the baggage check by defendants they handed plaintiff a paper containing the number of the check and also a notice exempting them from liability for jewelry, and for 34 L. R. A.

loss by fire, and also for an amount exceeding that specified "upon any articles unless specially agreed in writing on this check receipt, and the extra risk paid therefor." The notice was not read by plaintiff until after notice from defendant that his trunk was lost. The court held that the plaintiff was to be considered as having notice of the terms, the same being printed in large type, and that the same was therefore to be taken as a qualification of such liability.

In the above case the question arose as to whether upon the construction of such notice the carrier was only liable for the amount specified therein, or whether he was liable for such amount upon every article lost, except those expressly exempted, provided it was of such value. The court held the latter to be the just construction of the notice, upon the ground that the notice, not being clear, was to be construed strictly against the carrier, the terms used being "any article" thus indicating a liability to such extent upon any article contained in the trunk as baggage.

IV. When not liable.

Before the company or defendant can be held liable, the baggage must be delivered to him, and there must be a breach of the contract to deliver on his part.

Such a company is not liable for the jewelry of a third person carried in a traveler's trunk as merchandise, where it is not made known to the company, the same not being baggage in the ordinary sense. Richards v. Westcott, 3 Bosw. 550.

In Manheim v. Carr, 62 Me. 473, the plaintiff sued to recover for value of baggage alleged to have been lost through the defendant's negligence in delivering the same to the express company at the depot, to be forwarded by an early morning train, pursuant to plaintiff's instructions given to the hotel proprietor upon leaving his hotel. It was held that the defendant, having taken and left the baggage at the depot, with other baggage pursuant to his contract, to be forwarded as instructed, was not liable for its loss.

The direct question of the liability of city expressmen or baggage transfer agents arose in the case of Henshaw v. Rowland, 54 N. Y. 242. The facts showed that the plaintiff delivered a trunk to the defendant to be taken to the depot and delivered there for the plaintiff by a certain time, the plaintiff intending to take a train later in the day. The baggage was duly delivered by the defendant at the depot, but upon plaintiff's calling for same it could not be found. It was held, in an action against the expressman to recover the value of the trunk and its contents, that he having fulfilled his contract, which was to deliver the trunk at the depot, and not to deliver it there to the plaintiff, the latter could not recover.

noon, and take the trunk to the depot. The idea that, after then taking it, the defendant was to keep it in its custody until the next morning, and then deliver it to the plaintiff, at the depot, where she was ready to take the train, is expressly excluded by the very fact which rendered necessary its immediate carriage. The plaintiff's agent and witness, Robinson, testifies that he knew the defendant had no place to store baggage, that it had no warehouse, and that storing baggage was not a part of its business, so that we are convinced that the plaintiff received the very performance of the contract which the parties understood would be made. South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Wood, 66 Ala. 167, 41 Am. Rep. 749. This case is essentially unlike that of Southern Exp. Co. v. Armstead, 50 Ala. 350, relied upon by appellee. There, the express company's agent knew that the railroad agent had refused to allow the express company to deposit goods in its depot at the point of destination, and yet he left the package on the platform, merely calling the attention of the depot agent to it, as the property of the plaintiff. The railroad agent had no duty to perform in regard to it, and, under the circumstances, the action of the expressman was held to be gross carelessness, entitling plaintiff to recover for the loss. The loss of the trunk in this case cannot be attributed to any fault of the defendant. The plaintiff was not entitled to recover, and hence the judgment of the city court must be reversed, and a judgment here rendered for the defendant.

Reversed and rendered.

In Aikin v. Westcott, 123 N. Y. 363, the only question was whether the defendant company actually received into its custody the plaintiff's trunk. It was assumed that the trunk in question reached the railroad company's depot in advance of an employee and agent of the plaintiff, who checked them on the journey and stopped over. The trunks were taken off the train on its arrival by employees of the defendant company and left at the depot at the incoming baggage room, under the railroad company's control. The plaintiff's agents still had the checks, of which the defendants became possessed the following day for the purpose of delivering the trunks at the plaintiff's place of business. The baggage was not forthcoming. The court, in an action against the defendant company, held that the trunk was not formally delivered to the defendant nor was it in its control, and that the fact that the cars were unloaded by the defendant's agent did not alone render him liable, as the goods never passed out of the control of the railroad company.

The case of Patten v. Johnson, 131 Mass. 297, was one in which the defendants were proprietors of a hack stable and owners of hacks, which they furnished with horses and drivers for the transportation of persons with their baggage from one part of the city to another. The plaintiff, whose baggage was heavy, hired of defendant a hack and driver for transportation purposes and refused other help, taking only the hack driver along. The facts showed that he assisted in the delivery of the baggage and assented to the method of delivery employed by the driver. In an action to recover damages for the loss of a trunk the court held the carrier was not liable.

See also cases infra, V., and Hopkins v. Westcott, 6 Blatchf. 64, supra, III.

V. The effect of a custom.

It often becomes a question whether a baggage transfer company which receives baggage to be carried and delivered at a railroad depot, in advance of the intended passenger, is liable for the loss of such baggage when the same is lost or stolen from the depot before such passenger applies for it.

Upon this point it would seem that such companies are free from responsibility for the loss of baggage, where they deliver it according to their contract and to the usual custom.

In Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Foster, 104 Ind. 233, 54 Am. Rep. 319, the appellee sent a trunk to appellant's railroad by an expressman the night before she took her ticket and traveled over the appellant's railroad, and on her producing her ticket to the baggage master and demanding her trunk to be sent upon the train, found that it had been lost or stolen. In an action to recover its value, wherein the railroad company sought to free itself from liability on the ground that they had adopted a rule that a person intending to become a passenger should purchase a ticket or pay a fare before the company could receive baggage and become responsible, the court held that the company might make such a rule, but that if it did not adopt it, or if having adopted it, it pursued a different practice by accepting baggage relying upon the good faith of the owner, it would be liable whether the loss occurred before or after the arrival and departure of the train, or before or after the purchase of a ticket or fare, if the owner intended to become a passenger, and that the baggage agent was the company's agent for the receipt of such baggage. In that case the agent had received the baggage in the same manner as on previous occasions, and the expressman or transfer company had fulfilled his contract by delivering the baggage at the depot pursuant to his contract and the custom.

So, in Green v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 38 Iowa, 100, where the plaintiff's baggage, according to custom, was sent by her through a drayman to defendant's depot the evening before her departure, and was left in the company's waiting room by the carrier, it was held that the railroad company was liable for its loss, the custom being established and the baggage accepted by them.

And in the case of Henshaw v. Rowland, 54 N. Y. 242, the court also recognized the custom in such cases, which showed that it was the usage to send baggage to the depot ahead of the owner, to be left there until the owner thereof should call for the same to be placed on the train on which he had taken his passage, and therefore the transfer company having delivered according to the custom was free from liability.

In Rogers v. Long Island R. Co. 1 Thomp. & C. 396, Affirmed 55 N. Y. 620, action was brought against defendant as a common carrier to recover the value of a trunk and its contents alleged to have been lost by its negligence at the depot. The facts showed that an expressman took the trunk to the depot at the plaintiff's request and placed it beside a baggage crate at the same time informing the agent in charge of the depot where the trunk was, such agent saying it was all right and instructing two men in the depot to take charge of it, whereupon the expressman left. On plaintiff's arriving later in the day and purchasing his ticket and applying for a check for his baggage, the trunk was missing. The court held that under the evidence the company was responsible for the safe delivery of the property, there having been a sufficient delivery thereof to it by the expressman.

R. W.

INDIANA SUPREME COURT.

CLEVELAND, CINCINNATI, CHICAGO,
& ST. LOUIS RAILWAY, Appt.,
v.

William T. MONEYHUN, Guardian of Charles Moneyhun.

(.....Ind.)

1. The failure of a carrier to furnish a seat for a passenger does not justify him in going to a place of peril on the platform when there is plenty of standing room in the car.
2. Going from a car in which there is plenty of standing room to the lower step of the car platform in order to vomit when the train is running at the rate of 25 miles per hour constitutes such contributory negligence on the part of a boy fifteen years of age as to preclude any recovery from the carrier for his injuries when thrown off by a jerk of the train.

(October 21, 1896.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for Madison County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John T. Dye and Lovett & Ryan, with Messrs. Byron K. Elliott and William F. Elliott, for appellant;

Such actions, as a general rule, can be brought only in the name of the infant by his next friend.

1 Rev. Stat. 1894, §§ 256, 257; Spencer v. Robbins, 106 Ind. 530; Wilson v. Galey, 108 Ind. 257.

The failure to find any one of a number of facts which is necessary for the plaintiff to prove in order to entitle him to recover is equivalent to a finding against him thereon, and the verdict will not support a judgment in his favor.

2 Elliott, Gen. Pr. § 983; Cleveland, C. O. & St. L. R. Co. v. Martin, 13 Ind. App. 485; Mitchell v. Brawley, 140 Ind. 210; Noblesville Gas & I. Co. v. Locher, 124 Ind. 79; Housworth v. Bloomhuff, 54 Ind. 487; Buchanan v. Milligan, 108 Ind. 483; Albion v. Hetrick, 90 Ind. 545, 46 Am. Rep. 230; Dixon v. Duke, 85 Ind. 434; Vinton v. Baldwin, 95 Ind. 483.

Where negligence and contributory negligence are in question, and more than one inference can reasonably be drawn, the special verdict must find both the specific facts and the inference or ultimate fact of negligence and freedom from contributory negligence.

Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Grames, 136 Ind. 39; Smith v. Wabash R. Co. 141 Ind. 93; Bloomington v. Rogers, 18 Ind. App. 121; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Costello, 9 Ind. App. 463.

The fact that there are jerks and sudden starts in the movement of the train does not constitute negligence on the part of the company.

Baltimore & Y. Turnp. Road v. Cason, 73 Md. 377; Siner v. Great Western R. Co. L. R. 4 Exch. 123; Dublin, W. & W. R. Co. v. Slatery, L. R. 3 App. Cas. 1155; Rockford, R. I. & St. L. R. Co. v. Coultas, 67 Ill. 398; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Green, 81 Ill. 19, 25 Am. Rep. 255; Malcom v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 106 N. C. 63; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hazard, 26 Ill. 373; Bemis v. New Orleans City & L. R. Co. 47 La. Ann. 1671.

Appellee's ward was guilty of contributory negligence.

Goodwin v. Boston & M. R. Co. 84 Me. 208; Worthington v. Central Vermont R. Co. 64 Vt. 107, 15 L. R. A. 326; Camden & A. R. Co. v. Hooley, 99 Pa. 492, 44 Am. Rep. 120; Fisher v. West Virginia & P. R. Co. 39 W. Va. 366, 28 L. R. A. 758.

It is negligence to stand and ride upon the platform of a commercial railroad car while it is in rapid motion.

Alabama & G. S. R. Co. v. Hawk, 73 Ala. 112, 47 Am. Rep. 403; Jackson v. Crilly, 16 Colo. 103; Paterson v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 85 Ga. 658; Bemis v. New Orleans City & L. R. Co. supra.

The appellee's ward at the time he was injured had reached the age when an infant is presumed to understand danger as well as an adult.

Nagle v. Allegheny Valley R. Co. 88 Pa. 35, 33 Am. Rep. 413; Tucker v. New York O. & H. R. R. Co. 124 N. Y. 308; Wendell v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 420; Hayes v. Norcross, 163 Mass. 546; Wallace v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 165 Mass. 236; Lewis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 38 Md. 533, 17 Am. Rep. 521; Krenzer v. Pittsburgh, O. & St. L. R. Co. (Ind.) 43 N. E. 649; Shirk v. Wabash R. Co. (Ind.) 43 N. E. 656; Reynolds v. New York O. & H. R. R. Co. 58 N. Y. 243; Lofdah v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. R. Co. 88 Wis. 421; Butler v. Pittsburgh & B. R. Co. 139 Pa. 195; Ecliff v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 64 Mich. 195.

Messrs. Goodykoontz & Ballard for appellee.

Jordan, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was commenced and prosecuted in the lower court by appellee, William T. Moneyhun, as guardian of Charles Moneyhun, a minor under the age of twenty-one years. The action arises out of injuries sustained by said ward, while a passenger upon a train of cars operated by the appellant, by reason of the alleged negligence of the latter. Upon the trial there was a special verdict returned by the jury, and upon the facts therein found the court adjudged that appellee was, as such guardian, entitled to recover damages for the said injuries for the benefit of the ward, and rendered judgment accordingly against appellant for $5,000, the amount mentioned in the verdict. The legal proposition submitted by the parties to this appeal arise under the facts embraced in the special finding of the jury.

NOTE.—For contributory negligence of a passenger, see Mitchell v. Southern P. R. Co. (Cal.) 11 L. R. A. 130; also a considerable number of other cases in the note thereto; likewise see Upham v. Detroit City R. Co. (Mich.) 12 L. R. A. 129.

34 L. R. A.

The following facts are all which we deem it necessary to set out in order to present the mooted questions of law herein involved: Appellee is the father and the duly appointed guardian of Charles Moneyhun; the latter having no estate, either real or personal. This ward at the time he sustained the injuries in question was a boy of average size, intelligence, and education for one of his age, being at the time nearly fifteen years of age. On June 9, 1895, after advertising the same, the railroad company (appellant herein) ran an excursion train over its road from Anderson, Indiana, to Benton Harbor, Michigan, and return; the train being composed of two sections, and the cars thereof being vestibuled. Appellee's ward, Charles Moneyhun, with the knowledge and consent of his father, purchased a ticket and boarded said train as a passenger, at Anderson, for the purpose of being carried as such to Benton Harbor. He entered one of the coaches of the second division, and seated himself therein. When said train arrived at Alexandria, a station about 12 miles from Anderson, the coach in which said Moneyhun was seated was detached from the train, and left upon a side track, because of a hot box, which was occasioned by reason of the box being worn and not properly packed. The passengers in this coach, including young Moneyhun, were informed by the conductor in charge of the train that they must leave this car and go into others. On entering the car to which he and other passengers had been transferred, he found all of the seats occupied and the aisle thereof and other places therein filled with passengers who were standing, and he was unable to find a seat upon the train, and for this reason accepted standing room in the car which he entered. After detaching the car from the train for the reason stated, appellant did not replace it by another in order to accommodate the passengers on the train with seats. Moneyhun, after standing in the aisle of the car until the train was near the city of Warsaw, Indiana, became sick. What made him sick, however, is not disclosed by the verdict. Believing that he would be compelled to vomit, by reason of nausea, and in order to avoid soiling the car and persons standing near him, he voluntarily left the car in which he was riding, and passed out through the door of the vestibule, and went down on the lower step of the steps, leading from the ground to the car, and stood upon this lower step for a short time, holding to the railing. While so standing upon this step his back was towards the platform of the car, and his head was leaning forward and outward. The train at the time he left the car, and while he was standing upon said step was running at a speed of 25 miles per hour; and while so standing he was thrown off the train, by reason of the engineer suddenly, unnecessarily, and without warning, applying steam, which caused the car to give a sudden jerk. By being thrown from the train in the manner stated, Moneyhun was severely injured, being the same injury complained of by appellee. The jury also find that there was ample room in the car where he was for him to ride, without going upon the platform or steps, and, had he remained upon the inside of the coach in which he was riding, he would not have been injured; that it was not safe, but dangerous, for him to leave the car and "go onto and stand upon the car step," as he did while the train was running at the rate of 25 miles per hour. The jury further found that "it was not safe for a person to stand where he did, even if the ran smooth and did not jerk." The cars were so vestibuled as to render it safe for a passenger to pass from one car to another, and on the car door there was a printed notice forbidding passengers to ride upon the platform of the car, but, owing to the door being at the time swung back, it was thereby obscured from view. The injuries sustained by appellee's ward consisted of several fractures of both the right and left leg, and dislocation of his left ankle. These injuries are found to be permanent.

The inquiries arising under the above facts embraced in the special verdict are those which usually arise under the issues in actions based upon negligence: First, is the injury in question the result of the negligence of appellant? Second, is the ward of appellee chargeable with contributory negligence? At the very threshold of these questions counsel for appellant challenge the right of the guardian to maintain this action upon the ground that it could be brought only in the name of the infant by his next friend, under §§ 256, 257, Rev. Stat. 1894, Rev. Stat. 1881, §§ 255, 256. Section 29 of the Code of 1881, Rev. Stat. 1894, § 267, and Rev. Stat. 1881, § 266, provides that "a father, or in case of his death or desertion of his family, or imprisonment, the mother may maintain an action for the injury or death of a child, and a guardian for the injury or death of his ward. But when the action is brought by the guardian for an injury to his ward, the damages shall inure to the benefit of his ward." In the case of Louisville, N. A. & O. R. Co. v. Goodykoonts, 119 Ind. 111, this court on page 118 interpreted this section as follows: "If a minor under guardianship sustains an injury to his person from the wrongful conduct of another, his guardian may maintain an action and recover for the benefit of the ward precisely as the latter might have recovered through the intervention of a prochein ami in case he had not been under guardianship. This is so whether the ward's father or mother be living or not. The pain and suffering endured and the permanent injury resulting from the wounding or maiming of a minor are personal to himself, and damages for such pain and injuries are always recoverable for his benefit." We yield adherence to the above interpretation of the statute, and are of the opinion that it clearly authorizes a guardian of an infant who has received a personal injury as the result of a wrongful act of omission or commission by another to sue and recover from the wrongdoer such damages as are personally sustained by his ward. The contention of appellant upon this proposition must therefore be denied, and the action of the appellee in instituting this suit as the guardian of the injured minor is sustained.

The special verdict does not find that the ward of appellee was without fault, or free from contributory negligence upon his part, at the time the injury occurred. As freedom from fault or negligence at the time of the accident upon the part of the latter is an essential factor which must exist in order to entitle the appellee to recover in this action, we may therefore assume, without deciding, that appellant, under the circumstances, is chargeable with actionable negligence, and address our inquiry first to the question of contributory negligence, which counsel for appellant so strenuously insist, under the facts, must be imputed to appellee's ward. It is conceded by appellee that under the facts his ward must be deemed to have been, at the time he sustained the injury, capable of being guilty of contributory negligence. The absence of contributory negligence upon the part of the injured party at the time he received his injuries was in issue, as well as the alleged negligence of the appellant, and the burden rested upon the appellee to establish inter alia both of these requisite facts before he would be entitled to a recovery. The rule is firmly settled that, if the special verdict of the jury or a special finding of the court omits to find any fact essential to support the judgment below, the latter cannot be sustained. No presumptions or intendments are available in favor of a special verdict, and the omission to find a fact in favor of the party upon whom the onus of proving it is cast is equivalent to finding such fact against him. As a legal rule, that which is not proved is the same as that which does not exist. See Housworth v. Bloomhuff, 54 Ind. 487; Buchanan v. Milligan, 108 Ind. 488; Albion v. Hetrick, 90 Ind. 543, 46 Am. Rep. 230; Dixon v. Duke, 85 Ind. 434; Vinton v. Baldwin, 95 Ind. 433; Noblesville Gas & L. Co. v. Loehr, 124 Ind. 79; Mitchell v. Brawley, 140 Ind. 216; 2 Elliott, Gen. Pr. § 938. It is also a well-settled proposition in this state that whenever, under the facts disclosed by a special verdict, the question is presented either as to the negligence of the defendant, or as to whether the plaintiff was without fault, and two inferences may reasonably be drawn as to either of said ultimate facts,—one in favor and the other against,—then the determination of such fact is within the province of the jurors, and their finding will be accepted by the court as controlling. Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Collarn, 73 Ind. 261, 38 Am. Rep. 134; Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Grames, 136 Ind. 89; Rush v. Coal Bruff Min. Co. 131 Ind. 135; Woolery v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 107 Ind. 881, 57 Am. Rep. 114; Smith v. Wabash R. Co. 141 Ind. 92; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Costello, 9 Ind. App. 462; Bloomington v. Rogers, 13 Ind. App. 121. But if the facts found are such that the court can adjudge as a matter of law that the injured party was or was not guilty of contributory negligence, then the finding of such ultimate fact, whatever it may be, will be disregarded by the court. Smith v. Wabash R. Co. supra.

In the case at bar, however, there is but one reasonable inference to be deduced from the facts relative to the acts of appellee's ward at the time he sustained his injuries, and that is to the effect that his own negligence contributed to said injuries; hence a finding by the jury that he was free from fault could not have affected the legal result. It is manifest, we think, from the facts shown, that the ward of appellee was thereunder chargeable with contributory negligence. While it is true that it was a duty incumbent upon the railroad company to furnish a seat within its car for each passenger taken aboard of its train, and not merely standing room in the aisle of the car, the mere fact, however, that he was compelled to accept standing room would not justify him in voluntarily leaving a place of safety and going to one of peril. The jury found that there was ample room in the car in which he was riding, and in other cars upon the train, and that there was no necessity for him to go upon the platform or car steps, and that, had he remained inside of the car, he would not have sustained the injuries which he did; that it was unsafe and dangerous for him to leave the car when the train was running at the rate of 25 miles an hour, and stand upon the steps as he was doing when the accident happened. The jury further found that the place where Moneyhun stood when injured was not a safe place to stand, "even if the train ran smooth and did not jerk." He was not content to step on the platform, but went upon the lower step, and stood there with his back towards the platform and his head leaning outward, as it is expressly shown by the verdict. We are of the opinion that the facts disclose a clear and undoubted case of contributory negligence upon the part of appellee's ward, which cannot be controverted from any legal standpoint. While it may be said, in the sense of decency, that it was proper for this boy, when admonished of the fact that he was about to vomit, to make an effort to avoid befouling his fellow passengers, yet even under this view the law would not justify him in exposing himself to peril, or excuse or mitigate his negligence when he seeks redress in an action for injuries sustained. The authorities cited by the learned counsel for appellee are, under the facts, distinguishable from the case at bar, and lend but little if any support to his contention upon the question involved. The conclusion reached is in harmony with and supported by the following authorities: Goodwin v. Boston & M. R. Co. 84 Me. 203; Worthington v. Central Vermont R. Co. 64 Vt. 107, 15 L. R. A. 326; Camden & A. R. Co. v. Hooley, 99 Pa. 492, 44 Am. Rep. 120; Fisher v. West Virginia & P. R. Co. 39 W. Va. 386, 23 L. R. A. 758; Alabama G. & R. Co. v. Hawk, 72 Ala. 112, 47 Am. Rep. 408; Jackson v. Crilly, 16 Colo. 108; Paterson v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 85 Ga. 653; Bemis v. New Orleans City & L. R. Co. 47 La. Ann. 1871; Wendell v. New York O. & H. R. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 420; Hayes v. Norcross, 162 Mass. 548; Wallace v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 165 Mass. 236; Kronzer v. Pittsburg, C. O. & St. L. R. Co. (Ind.) 43 N. E. 649; Lewis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 38 Md. 588, 17 Am. Rep. 521; Shirk v. Wabash R. Co. (Ind.) 42 N. E. 656; Reynolds v. New York O. & H. R. R. Co. 58 N. Y. 248; Loftdahl v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. R. Co. 88 Wis. 421; Butler v. Pittsburgh & B. R. Co. 189 Pa. 195; Edliff v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 64 Mich. 196; Patterson, Railway Acc. Law, § 272; Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. O. R. Co. v. McClain (Ind.) 44 N. E. 306; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Rice, 9 Tex. Civ. App. 509; Scheiber v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 61 Minn. 499; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Oer- roll, 5 Ill. App. 201; Toledo, St. L. & K. O. R. Co. v. Wingate, 143 Ind. 125, and 184.

It follows that the court erred in denying the appellant's motion for judgment in its favor on the special verdict.

The judgment is therefore reversed and the cause remanded, with instructions to the lower court to sustain this motion and render judgment upon the special verdict in favor of appellant.

VIRGINIA SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS.

J. L. GLEAVES et al.

F. H. TERRY, Secretary of Wythe County Electoral Board.

(.....Va.....)

1. So much of the records of the electoral board as relates to the appointment and removal of judges and commissioners of election and registers or the ordering of a new registration may be inspected and copied by citizens.
2. Mandamus will not lie to compel the secretary of the electoral board to permit memoranda to be taken from records in his possession which may be properly copied, until it is shown that such right has been denied.
3. No citizen other than the proper officials has a right to inspect and take memoranda from so much of the records of the electoral board as relates to the preparation and printing of the official ballots, certification of the same, and their distribution to the judges of election of the several precincts.

(August 4, 1896.)

PETITION for a writ of mandamus to compel defendant to permit petitioners to take memoranda from records in defendant's possession. Denied.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James A. Walker, for petitioners:

A public record is a memorandum made by a public officer authorized to perform that function.

When by express direction of statute a memorandum is required to be kept the memorial made in compliance with the statute is a public record.

A book or memorandum kept by persons in public office because required or made useful by the nature of the office or expressly required to be kept by statute is a public record.

20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 505, 511; 1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 471-478; Clay v. Ballard, 87 Va. 790.

Being a public record the right of inspection by any party having an interest therein exists at common law and is sustained by an unbroken line of decisions.

Clay v. Ballard, 87 Va. 791; 1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 471-478.

The right to take memoranda of a public record is an incident to the right of inspection.

Clay v. Ballard, 87 Va. 790; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 684; High, Extr. Legal Rem. § 830; 2 Starkie, Ev. 415; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 523, and notes; 1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 471-478.

Petitioners are citizens and registered voters and have an interest in common with every citizen of Wythe county in knowing who are the registrars and judges of election when they were appointed, etc. They have the right to this information because they are interested in having only honest and capable officers chosen, and in knowing to whom they shall apply for registration, transfers, etc. It is not necessary that he should have any special or private interest in the record.

3 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 684; High, Extr. Legal Rem. § 830; Brouwer v. Cothrel, 10 Barb. 216; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 521-523, and notes; Clay v. Ballard, 87 Va. 795.

Mr. J. H. Fulton for respondent.

Cardwell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The petitioners represent that they are citizens and voters of Wythe county; that they have applied to F. H. Terry, secretary of the electoral board of the county, at his office in Wytheville, and demanded the right to examine and inspect the records kept by the secretary of the proceedings of the electoral board, and to take written memoranda therefrom; and that said Terry, while allowing them to inspect the records in his presence, refused to permit petitioners to copy the records or to take memoranda therefrom. The prayer of the petition is for a mandamus commanding Terry to allow petitioners to examine the records of the electoral board of Wythe county, and to take memoranda or copies thereof. The respondent answers the petition, and says that it is true that he is a public officer of this state; that he is a member of the electoral board of Wythe county, and its secretary, duly qualified as such by taking the oath to perform the duties of his office according to law; that he has faithfully performed his duties as such, and has always looked to the statute creating the office for his duties and the manner of performing them. Respondent further says that, while it is also true that the peti-

NOTE.—The above decision is of much interest as a determination of the extent to which election records may be inspected by individuals. As to the power of courts to require ballot boxes to be opened or produced in proceedings other than election contests, see Ex parte Arnold (Mo.) 38 L. R. A. 386, and note.

tioner J. L. Gleaves has within the past six weeks made frequent visits to respondent's office, with first one and then another of the petitioners, demanding an inspection of the records of the electoral board, asserting the right to take extracts from and to bring a clerk to make copies of them, respondent has not refused to allow the records which were under his control to be inspected in his presence, as far as proper, by petitioners, or any citizen who wished to do so, and offered to allow all of the petitioners to inspect the same, although respondent does not consider it his duty to do so; but, knowing that these records were under his authority and in his custody, and being responsible for same, has ever, and will ever, unless compelled by authority of law, refuse to allow the records to be taken out of his presence, or memoranda to be taken, or copies of same to be made. He responds, further, that he told petitioners that he was only a member of the electoral board of Wythe county, and that, if petitioners would get the consent of the electoral board, respondent would cheerfully allow, not only an inspection, but a copy, of the records of the proceedings of the board to be made, etc.

Section 67 of chap. 8 of the Code provides for the appointment of registrars by the electoral board in the several counties and cities of the commonwealth; § 69, for the filling of vacancies in the office of registrar, and for the removal of judges of election who fail to discharge their duties according to law; § 71, for the ordering of a new registration under certain contingencies; § 117, for the appointment of judges of election, and § 183, for the designation by the electoral board of five persons to act as commissioners to canvass the election returns. By an act of the assembly (Sess. Acts 1893-94, p. 730), amending § 68 of the Code, the secretary of each board is required to keep in a book, to be provided for the purpose, an accurate account of all the proceedings of the board, including all appointments and removals of judges and registrars; and, by an act approved March 4, 1896 (Sess. Acts 1895-96, pp. 768-770), amendatory of the act of March 6, 1894, entitled "An Act to Provide for a Method of Voting by Ballot," the printing of the ballots, the certification of the same as the official ballots, and their distribution to the judges of election of the several precincts of their county or city, are delegated to the electoral board of each county and city. So far as the appointment or removal of registrars, judges, and commissioners of elections is concerned, or the ordering of a new registration of voters, the law enjoins no secrecy. Therefore, the inspection by the public of this part of the board's acts is not in conflict with any provision of law; but the duties of the board as to the preparation of the ballot, its verification, and the stamping of the seal of the board thereon, as required by §§ 9 and 10 of the act of March 4, 1896, supra, are required to be performed in secret; and it is manifest that, if this were not so, the whole object of the law, viz., to provide for the voter a legal ballot, verified in such manner as to preclude its being counterfeited, and to frustrate as far as possible the use of unofficial and illegal ballots, would be defeated. The vote by ballot ex vi termini implies a secret ballot. Pearson v. Brunswick County Supers. 91 Va. 334. And the provisions of the statutes referred to, for the use of an official ballot, are, we think, plainly in furtherance of the constitutional provision for the exercise of the right of the voter to cast a secret ballot.

"To justify the issuance of a writ to enforce the performance of an act by a public officer, two things must concur: The act must be one the performance of which the law specially enjoins as a duty resulting from an office, and an actual omission on the part of the respondent to perform. It is incumbent on the relator to show, not only that the respondent has failed to perform the required duty, but that the performance thereof is actually due from him, at the time of the application." "The office of the writ of mandamus, when addressed to a public officer, is to compel him to exercise such functions as the law confers upon him." "But the writ neither creates nor confers power upon the officer to whom it is directed. It can do no more than to command the exercise of powers already existing." "The writ of mandamus lies to compel a public officer to perform a duty concerning which he is vested with no discretionary power and which is either imposed upon him by some express enactment or necessarily results from the office which he holds." 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 105, 180, 140, and authorities there cited in notes. That the record of the proceedings of the electoral board of Wythe county, required by law to be kept by its secretary and custodian, is a public record, and open to inspection by the public, except in so far as secrecy is enjoined by law, there can be no doubt; but where the disclosure of their contents would be injurious to the public interest, an inspection will not be granted. 1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 475, 476; 4 Minor, Inst. p. 714. The law, however, does not require of the secretary of the board, expressly or by fair implication, the duty of making copies when demanded, or provide compensation to him for doing so, as is the case with all public records, so far as we now recall; nor does the law by express enactment require him to allow copies to be made; and the granting of the writ of mandamus applied for in this case must therefore depend upon whether or not the duty to allow copies to be taken of the record of the proceedings of the electoral board necessarily results from the office of secretary to the board, held by the respondent. It has already been observed that there are portions of these records the disclosure of which would be injurious to the public interests; and by law, if there be a disclosure of any part of the record by the secretary as to which secrecy is enjoined, he is subjected to a penal v for his neglect or violation of duty. Therefore, if copies of these records are to be made by any citizen who demands the right, to avoid a disclosure of that part as to which secrecy is enjoined the secretary would necessarily have to be constantly in attendance while the copies are being made, and in the performance of a duty not prescribed by law, and for which no compensation is provided. If copies can be made by one person, no one could be refused; and it well might be asked, Is it reasonable to assume that the secretary is to be required to devote an unreasonable portion of his time to allowing copies to be made of the records in his custody, and that this duty necessarily results from the office he holds? When, in point of time, are these copies to be made? And what discretion is to be exercised, and by whom, as to the length of time to be consumed in making the copies? If the secretary is clothed with discretion as to when the copies may be made, or the length of time that is to be consumed in making the copies of the records, or as to what portions thereof may be inspected or copied without injury to the public interests, and without violation of his duties, a mandamus must be denied. The statement is not made that respondent has denied petitioners the right to inspect the records. On the contrary, the statement is that respondent did not deny them this right. Nor is the statement made as to what memoranda or notes from the records petitioners desired to make, or the length of time that would have been required to make the memoranda or notes; but the complaint is merely that respondent refused to allow copies or memoranda to be made of the records. The court is of opinion:

1. That so much of the record of the proceedings of the electoral board of Wythe county, contained in the book provided by law, and committed to the custody of the respondent as secretary of the board, as relates to the appointment and removal of judges and commissioners of election and registrars, or the ordering of a new registration, is a public record, open to inspection by any citizen and voter of Wythe county, and that he may take therefrom memoranda or notes of the proceedings of the electoral board as to which secrecy is not enjoined by law, which memoranda or notes may be made at and within a reasonable time, in the presence of the secretary; but, until it is shown that the right to inspect these records, or to make memoranda or notes, proper to be made as aforesaid, has been denied, a mandamus should not issue requiring respondent to allow such memoranda or notes to be made.

2. That so much of the record of the proceedings of the electoral board of Wythe county, in the custody of its secretary, as relates to the preparation and printing of the official ballots prescribed by law, certification of the same, and their distribution to the judges of election of the several precincts in the county of Wythe, is not a public record, that is open to inspection by any one, other than the officers of the county to whom the duties of preparing, printing, certifying, and distributing the ballots is delegated by law, and that the respondent cannot be compelled to allow petitioners to make memoranda or notes of these proceedings, or to inspect them.

3. That the petition of the applicants here, Gleaves and others, does not make a case upon which the mandamus prayed for should issue, and it must therefore be denied.

KANSAS SUPREME COURT.

John W. BREIDENTHAL

W. E. EDWARDS, Secretary of State.

(.....Kan.....)

*1. After the hearing and overruling by the tribunal provided for by § 10 of the Australian ballot law, of all objections to the nomination certificate filed by authority of a state convention of a political party, the further duties of the Secretary of State as to certification under § 18 of said law are ministerial only; and he has no right to challenge, and the courts have no authority to consider, the motives actuating any political party convention in its course, and he should certify any proper and requisite matter duly appearing on the nomination certificate.

2. A vice-presidential candidate whose name (together with that of his associate presidential candidate) has been certified by authority of a state convention of his party as an addition to the party appellation, and who has not declined the national nomination, nor withdrawn as a candidate in Kansas, has no right, under § 8 of said Australian ballot law, to forbid such use of his name on the electoral ticket nominated by his party in this state.

*Headnotes by MARTIN, Ch. J.

(Johnston, J., dissents.)

(October 27, 1893.)

PETITION for a writ of mandamus to compel defendant to certify to the county clerks the name of Thomas E. Watson as candidate for Vice President upon the People's ticket among the names which were to be certified as candidates at a coming election. Granted.

Statement by MARTIN, Ch. J.:

The following facts appear from the alternative writ of mandamus and the answer thereto: At a national convention of dele-

NOTE.—This case is believed to have no precedent. The modern statutes providing for official ballots, have given rise already to a variety of questions, but this is the first time in which a question has been raised as to use thereon of the names of candidates for President or Vice President.

34 L. R. A.

gates of the People's party held in July, 1896, William J. Bryan was nominated for President and Thomas E. Watson for Vice President; that afterwards in August, 1896, a state convention of said party, held at Abilene, indorsed said national nominations, and ten candidates were nominated as electors for President and Vice President, to be voted for at the ensuing general election; that in due time and form there was filed in the office of the Secretary of State a certificate, signed and verified by the presiding officer and the secretary of said convention, setting forth the names and residences of said candidates for electors, giving the name "People's Party" as the party represented by said candidates, and naming William J. Bryan and Thomas E. Watson as its candidates for President and Vice President respectively, as an addition to be made to the party appellation "The People's Party;" that objections in writing to said certificate were filed, and, after due notice, were considered by the Secretary of State, the auditor of state, and the attorney general, and on October 17, 1896, were decided not to be valid, and said certificate was held to be valid and effectual, and no other or further objections have been filed or considered; yet on the same day the Secretary of State received from Abe Steinberger, secretary of the Middle of the Road Populist committee of the state of Kansas, a telegram in the following words and figures, to wit:

Thompson, Ga., Oct. 16.

Abe Steinberger, Topeka, Kansas: Hand this request to Secretary of State. Do not certify my name on Abilene ticket to county clerks. My affidavit withdrawing my name has been mailed to you. Thomas E. Watson.

And accompanying said telegram was the affidavit of said Steinberger, as follows, to wit:

STATE OF KANSAS, } ss.
SHAWNEE COUNTY.

I, Abe Steinberger, being duly sworn according to law, depose and say that I am the duly authorized agent and representative in the state of Kansas of Thomas E. Watson, the Populist nominee for Vice President, and that I am fully empowered and have been authorized, as evidenced by telegram filed herewith, and as such agent and representative, and with the further knowledge that the said Thomas E. Watson's refusal to permit his name to appear on such ticket, accompanied by required affidavit, has been mailed to the Secretary of the State of Kansas. I hereby protest against the certification by the Secretary of State of the name of the said Thomas E. Watson on the so-called "People's Party Ticket," over the names of the Bryan and Sewall electors named at the Hutchinson Democratic convention, and pretended to have been named at the Abilene People's Party convention, and I request that the Secretary of State omit the name of Thomas E. Watson from the heading of such ticket.

A. Steinberger.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 17th day of October, 1896.

T. S. Stover, Assistant Secretary of State.
34 L. R. A.

And on October 19, 1896, the Secretary of State received by mail a notice from said Thomas E. Watson as follows, to wit:

STATE OF GEORGIA, } ss.
COUNTY OF McDUFFIE.

I withdraw as candidate for Vice President on ticket nominated at Abilene, Kansas, and decline to have my name used upon official ballot upon that ticket; it being placed there to deceive Populist voters to vote for Democratic electors.

Thos. E. Watson.

Sworn to and signed before me, this Oct. 16th, 1896. John A. Faucett, Ordinary of McDuffie County, Georgia.

[Seal.]

The electors named in the certificate of nomination of the People's party are the same as those certified as electors of the Democratic party, whose national nominees for President and Vice President are William J. Bryan and Arthur Sewall, respectively, and said electors are members of the Democratic party. It is further alleged in the answer that, if said electors are chosen, they will not vote for Thomas E. Watson for Vice President, and that it is desired to use his name at the head of said ticket to mislead the voters of the state, and to induce them to vote for said electors under the belief that they were voting for electors belonging to the People's party, and who would vote for said Thomas E. Watson for Vice President if chosen. The allegations in the answer not included in the foregoing relate only to matters of law. The plaintiff moved for a peremptory writ of mandamus, notwithstanding the answer.

Mr. G. C. Clemens for plaintiff.
Messrs. F. B. Dawes, Attorney General,
A. A. Godard, Assistant Attorney General, and Waggener, Horton, & Orr, for defendant.

Martin, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

1. This case involves certain of the duties of the Secretary of State under the Australian ballot law, being chap. 78, Sess. Laws 1893. Section 6 relates to the form of the certificate, and provides that, "in case of electors for President and Vice President of the United States, the names for the candidates for President and Vice President may be added to the party or political appellation." And § 14, relating to the printing of the names of the candidates under the proper party appellation or group, enacts that "the ballot shall contain no other names, except that, in case of electors for President and Vice President of the United States, the names of the candidates for President and Vice President may be added to the party or political organization." Section 13 reads as follows: "Not less than fifteen days before an election to fill any public office, the Secretary of State shall certify to the county clerk of each county within which any of the electors may by law vote for the candidates for such office, the name and residence of each person nominated for such office, as specified in the certificates of nomination or nomination papers filed with the Secretary of State." It will be observed that § 13 does not expressly provide for the certification of the names of presidential candidates, nor even of the party appellation; but, as the certification would be unintelligible without the latter we think it, and also any proper addition of the names of presidential and vice-presidential candidates, to be fairly included within the phrase "as specified in the certificates of nomination or nomination papers." In these respects a certificate of nomination is the guide to the Secretary of State, and he should follow it in giving directions to the county clerk as to the making up of the official ballot. We think it plain that he has no right to omit the party appellation, nor the names of the presidential and vice-presidential candidates added to the party appellation by authority of law, and properly appearing in the certificate.

The motion for a peremptory writ of mandamus notwithstanding the answer is in the nature of a demurrer, and, for the purposes of this hearing, admits every allegation of fact well pleaded in the answer. It does not admit conclusions of law, nor prophecies, nor general allegations of fraud unaccompanied by any statement of fact on which fraud is based, nor matters which the defendant has no right to plead nor the court jurisdiction to entertain. The allegation in the answer that the electors named in the certificate will not vote for Thomas E. Watson for Vice President is clearly not one of fact, and the court should not be guided by the pretense of anyone to the powers of divination. In such cases courts must deal with facts, not with prophecies. Besides, if these electors should be chosen, they will be under no legal obligation to support Sewall, Watson, or any other person named by a political party, but they may vote for any eligible citizen of the United States. Article 12 of Amendments to the Constitution of the United States. And neither the Secretary of State nor any court may interfere with them in the performance of their duties. The charge made by the Secretary of State that it is desired to use the name of Watson at the head of the People's party ticket to mislead the voters must be disregarded for several reasons: First. As to his separate official duties under this statute he is a mere ministerial officer, and not a censor of political parties, nor a guardian of the public morals, and it follows that he has no authority to make such a charge. Secondly. The only facts upon which any claim of fraud is based are that the certificate gave the party appellation as the "People's Party," and named the national candidates as an addition thereto, and then stated the names and residences of the candidates nominated by the convention as presidential electors, and these were Democrats, and the same men who were nominated for a like place by the Democratic party, but this must be held admissible, under Simpson v. Osborn, 52 Kan. 328. Thirdly. This court has no authority to investigate and pass judgment upon the motives which actuate any political party convention in its course, for this is not jurisprudence, but politics. Fourthly. Although the record does not show the nature of the objections made to the certificate before the Secretary of State, the auditor of state, and the attorney general, and overruled by that tribunal on October 17, 1896, yet it is presumable that all proper matters of objection were then heard and decided. After the hearing and overruling of all objections by the tribunal provided for by § 10 of said act, it was the plain duty of the Secretary of State to certify the names of the presidential and vice-presidential candidates of the People's party as specified in the nomination certificate, unless the papers emanating from Watson and Steinberger relieved him from it.

2. What, if any, effect should be given to the communications and documents signed by Watson and Steinberger? Section 8 of said act provides that "any person whose name has been presented as a candidate may cause his name to be withdrawn from nomination by his request in writing, signed by him and acknowledged before an officer qualified to take acknowledgment of deeds, and filed with the Secretary of State not less than fifteen days . . . previous to the day of election, and no name so withdrawn shall be printed upon the ballot." The telegram and the affidavit of Steinberger should be disregarded, and it is doubtful if the affidavit of Watson, filed October 19, was in due time or in proper form. The certificate of the ordinary (an officer in Georgia, nearly answering to a probate judge in Kansas) is in form a jurat, and not an acknowledgment. But, waiving these questions as to time and form, we think that the document is entirely ineffectual. Watson was not nominated by the Abilene convention, and how shall a man withdraw from a nomination which has never been conferred? That convention had no right to nominate a candidate for Vice President to be voted for at the next election. It did nominate ten electors to be voted for at that election. Doubtless, any one of them might have withdrawn by complying with said § 8. A Vice President is not elected at the general election held in November. He should be elected on the 1st Wednesday in December, and only ten citizens of Kansas will have a voice in the matter. In a legal sense, the people of this state vote for no candidate for President or Vice President, that duty being delegated to ten citizens, who are authorized to use their own judgment as to the proper eligible persons to fill those high offices. Again, Mr. Watson does not attempt to decline the national nomination, nor even withdrawn as candidate in Kansas, if such a thing can be done; but he says he declines to have his name used upon a certain official ballot. He does not "withdraw from nomination," within the meaning of said § 8. No national candidate for President or Vice President residing elsewhere has as much authority as the humblest voter in this state to dictate how his name shall be used on an official ballot here.

The order of the court is that the Secretary of State shall forthwith duly certify to the county clerks of this state the names and residences of said nominees for electors of President and Vice President, and that he add to the party appellation of the "People's Party" the name of William J. Bryan as said party's candidate for President, and the name of Thomas E. Watson as said party's candidate for Vice President.

Allen, J., concurs

Johnston, J., dissenting:

Thomas E. Watson is endeavoring to prevent the use of his name as a candidate for Vice President upon what has been designated as the "Abilene Ticket," because, as he states upon oath, it was "placed there to deceive Populist voters to vote for Democratic electors." In obedience to his request and withdrawal, the Secretary of State, in certifying the names of candidates to county clerks, proposed to omit the name of Watson from that ticket. The extraordinary remedy of mandamus has been employed to compel Watson to be a candidate upon the ticket, against his protest, and to compel the Secretary of State to certify him as a candidate thereon, notwithstanding his withdrawal. It was argued that the withdrawal of Watson is informal, and, further, that he is not a candidate who can withdraw, within the meaning of our election statute. The withdrawal is not exactly formal, but it appears to be a substantial compliance with the statute. In § 8 it is provided that the request shall be in writing, signed by the candidate, and acknowledged before a competent officer. Watson's request was executed in the presence of an ordinary, a judge of one of the courts of Georgia; and at the same time, and before the same officer, Watson verified the facts stated in the withdrawal by his oath.

Is Watson a candidate, and, under our statute, is he entitled to withdraw? The nominees for President and Vice President are recognized and spoken of as candidates in the same statute which authorizes the withdrawal of candidates. In §§ 6 and 14 they are specifically named as candidates; and then, in § 8, it is provided that "any person whose name has been presented as a candidate may cause his name to be withdrawn from nomination by his request, in writing," etc. It will be observed that the language is general, authorizing "any person" who has been presented as a candidate to withdraw; and the high rank of the office should not preclude the candidate from availing himself of the right of withdrawal. It is true, we do not vote directly for President and Vice President, but, according to the usage which has prevailed for many years, personal selections are made by the electors, with almost the same certainty that could be accomplished by a direct vote. It is well known that the preliminary steps to a national election are taken by political parties, and the candidates for President and Vice President are chosen by them. After nominations are made, the adherents of the several parties in the several states put forward electors of the same political faith as the candidates, and these electors, if chosen, are in honor bound to vote for such candidates. Although there is no other obligation than that of honoring upon electors so chosen, it is, as counsel for plaintiff remarked, impressive and noteworthy that in all our history no elector has ever violated his honor or betrayed the trust of those who elected him. It would seem to be proper, therefore, to treat them as candidates, within the statute; and the legislature of Kansas, as we have seen, has so recognized them. It is strange, indeed, if there is no way for a national candidate to retire from a ticket if his name should be placed there with a sinister purpose, and that he should be denied the right of withdrawal where his name is merely used to cast a stigma upon him, or to defeat the principles for which he stands. Apart from the question of formality, however, and granting that there is a chance for division of opinion as to whether national nominees for President and Vice President are candidates, within the meaning of the statute, I am still firmly of the opinion that the peremptory writ should not be allowed. The right to this remedy depends upon the averments of the defendant's answer. As the case was submitted, the facts stated in the answer stand confessed; and taking them to be true, as we must, the plaintiff is not entitled to the writ. It is admitted that the purpose of using Watson's name at the head of the ticket is to mislead the voters of Kansas, and induce them to vote for the electors on that ticket under the belief that they are voting for electors who would vote for Watson for Vice President. It is admitted that the electors on the ticket in question are the same as those on the Democratic ticket, who have been certified as electors to vote for the Democratic nominees for President and Vice President. It is further admitted that the electors so named are not members of the People's party, to which Watson belongs, but are members of the Democratic party, and, if chosen, will not vote for Thomas E. Watson for Vice President of the United States. If these facts are true, the placing of Watson's name upon the ticket will be a palpable deception of the voters of the state and a great injustice to him. Shall the Secretary of State be compelled to participate in the deception and wrong and should the solemn mandate of the court be employed to compel such participation? Mandamus is the highest judicial writ known to the law, and the court is vested with large discretion in granting or withholding it. It is not always awarded where the court has power to do so, but, in the exercise of this discretionary power, the court is controlled by consideration of justice and equity. It is fundamental in the law of mandamus that the writ never will be granted where it will prove unavailing, effect a deception, or accomplish injustice. It is clear that the court is not required to compel action that will mislead the voters of the state, or become an instrument in carrying out an injustice. One of the leading ideas in our Australian ballot law is the prevention of deception and fraud in the elections, and to obtain a free and intelligent expression of the voters. This purpose will be frustrated, and the aim of the law defeated, by the proposed writ, if the averments of the answer be true. That the statements of deception and wrong would be difficult to prove if denied is no longer a matter of concern. Proof is dispensed with by the admissions in the pleadings. Watson has attempted in good faith to withdraw. He bases his withdrawal on the fact that it will result in a deception of the voters. The Secretary of State has yielded to his request; and, since it is admitted that the certification and placing of the name on the ballot will operate to mislead and deceive voters, the court, in the exercise of a wise judicial discretion, should refuse the writ.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT.

Charles F. STERLING

v.

REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN.

(.....Mich.....)

1. Mandamus to compel the state board of regents to comply with the provisions of a statute as to the location of a department of the state university does not lie at the suit of a private citizen who has not obtained permission from the court to apply for the writ.

2. Clauses in a Constitution providing for a board of regents to be elected by the people, and to have general supervision of the state university and the control of all expenditures from the university interest fund, will exclude the legislature from power to designate where departments of the university shall be located.

(July 28, 1896.)

APPPLICATION for a writ of mandamus to compel respondents to comply with a statute requiring them to remove the branch of the state university known as the Homœopathic Medical College from Ann Arbor to Detroit. Denied.

Statement by Grant, J. :

In 1895 the legislature passed act No. 257, Laws 1895, the material part of which reads as follows: "That the board of regents of the University of Michigan are hereby authorized and directed to establish a homœopathic medical college as a branch or department of said university, which shall be located in the city of Detroit, and the said board of regents are hereby authorized and directed to discontinue the existing homœopathic college now maintained in the city of Ann Arbor as a branch of said university and to transfer the same to the city of Detroit." The title of the act is "An Act to Amend § One of an Act Entitled, 'An Act for the Establishment of a Homœopathic Medical Department of the University of Michigan,' Approved April 27, 1875, being § 4932 of How. Anno. Stat." The regents of the university declined to comply with said act. The relator thereupon presented this petition for the writ of mandamus to compel the regents to comply with the act. The grounds for such refusal are (1) that it was not, in their judgment, for the best interests of the university; (2) that the legislature has no constitutional right to interfere with or dictate the management of the university. Among other things in their answer, they say: "A large part of the course of instruction required to be given in the other medical department of the university, and in the homœopathic medical college, is common to the two schools. This fact has enabled the regents to provide for such common instruction at the expense, to that extent, of the support and maintenance of a single department; thus saving to the benefit of the university and to the people of the state a large sum of money annually, which otherwise would be required for the continuous support of two medical departments, which would be wholly separate throughout their several courses of instruction in case both departments of medicine were not located in the city of Ann Arbor. It appears to the regents that great advantage arises to the university as a whole, and to the students in the various departments of the university; that all the various branches of the university are located and maintained at the proper seat of the university, at Ann Arbor. It appears also to the regents that whatever suggestions may be made for the advantages to be derived of the homœopathic medical college as a department of the university, by the removal of such department to a larger city, or to any other locality than the city of Ann Arbor, are suggestions which may, perhaps, be used for the removal of the other medical department of the university and other departments of the university to some other location than the city of Ann Arbor, by parties or interests desiring to secure such removal. It further appears to the regents that the removal of one of the established departments of the university suggests a movement for an entire change in that policy of concentration of the departments of the university at the proper seat of the university which has hitherto promoted the growth and advancement of the university to its present place among the great schools of the world. The claim which is made under the application of the relator, that the provisions of act No. 257 command the discontinuance and removal of the homœopathic medical department of the university by the regents, without any reference to their power of supervision of the university, suggests to the regents the question whether such provisions do not curtail and impair the power of supervision and control of the university which has been vested in the regents by the Constitution of the state. It is the purpose, as well as the plain duty, of the regents, to exercise, according to their best judgment, the supervision and control of the university, which has been vested in them by the state Constitution, to promote both the interests of the university and the interests of the people of the state, which are involved in the welfare of the university. The regents have not undertaken to decide for themselves upon the wisdom or unwisdom of the purpose of the provisions of said act No. 257, under which the relator's application is made. They have been advised that grave doubts exist in respect to the validity of said act. They have also been advised that to the extent that the provisions of the act are a foundation for the application for a writ to compel action on the part of the regents, denying their right to exercise judgment, supervision, or control in relation to the subject of the discontinuance of an existing department of the university, there are grave doubts in respect to the validity of the act."

NOTE.—As to the nature of universities or other incorporated institutions belonging to the state, see State, Little, v. Board of Regents of University (Kan.) 29 L. R. A. 378.

34 L. R. A.

Messrs. Geer & Williams, for relator:

The laws locating the university upon a specified tract of land were not designated to localize all of its educational operations but simply to make that the great center, as state buildings and county buildings or corporation offices are made centers for corporate purposes, while many functions may be performed elsewhere.

People, Regents of University, v. Auditor General, 17 Mich. 161, 191.

In that case the regents were contending that they had the power to change the location of a branch of the university without being authorized to do so by the legislature.

Mr. Justice Christiancy, in speaking of this contention, at page 170 says: "While I do not concur in this view, but hold that, the university, having been located at Ann Arbor by the act of 1837 (Sess. Laws, p. 103), however desirable it may be to establish a department or professorship elsewhere, a legislative permission to that effect must first be obtained. See Underwood v. Waldron, 12 Mich. 73; People v. Geneva College, 5 Wend. 211; People, Platt, v. Oakland County Bank, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 232; Comp. Laws, § 2192. Though doubtless the regents may perform their functions anywhere in the state, and all the powers of the several faculties are not necessarily confined to that locality, yet I do not, for the purposes of this case, consider it necessary to discuss this question of power in any way."

The question whether the legislature has the power to require or compel the regents to move the Homœopathic college from Ann Arbor to Detroit has been before this court several times, and because of an equal division of the court each time the question is still an open one.

People, Drake, v. Regents of University, 4 Mich. 98; People, Regents of University, v. Auditor General, 17 Mich. 161; People v. Re- 34 L. R. A. gents of University, 18 Mich. 469; People, Atty. Gen., v. Regents of University, 30 Mich. 473.

The regents of the University of Michigan constitute a public corporation created for public purposes alone, and like all other public corporations it is subject to legislative control unless it has been placed by the Constitution beyond the control of the legislature.

Messenger v. Teagan, 2 Det. L. N. 485; Cooley, Const. Lim. 88; People, Wood, v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 533.

There is nothing in § 8, art. 18, of the Constitution which was intended to remove the university from legislative control.

If it had been the intention to give the regents any power inconsistent with legislative control different language would have been used.

It certainly was not the intention of the framers of the Constitution that the regents should be given absolute power. The legislature of 1851, which met soon after the Constitution was adopted, was composed in part of members of the constitutional convention. Act 151 of the Laws of 1851 gives the regents minute directions and instructions as to the course to be pursued by them in the supervision of the university, and in so far as these provisions have not been amended by subsequent acts of the legislature, the regents from that day to this have proceeded in harmony with the provisions of that act.

The fact that "the regents of the University of Michigan" is mentioned and recognized in the Constitution makes it a constitutional corporation, but that alone does not give it powers beyond the control of the legislature.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 181; Beach, Pub. Corp. § 719; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 572; Baltimore v. State, Board of Police, 15 Md. 376, 74 Am. Dec. 572.

Mr. B. F. Graves, with Messrs. Hanchett & Hanchett, for respondent:

To the extent that authority is granted to the regents by the provisions of the Constitution, their authority is not subject to limitation, diminution, or control by the legislature.

People, Drake, v. Regents of University, 4 Mich. 98; Regents of University v. Detroit's Young Men's Soc. 12 Mich. 138; Alpin v. Regents of University, 38 Mich. 467, 10 L. R. A. 376; Weinberg v. Regents of University, 97 Mich. 246.

It was not the intention of the Constitution to abrogate the principle of government of the university by the people. That principle is fully preserved.

People, Drake, v. Regents of University, supra; People, Regents of University, v. Auditor General, 17 Mich. 161.

Instead of the university being governed by the legislature elected by the people it is governed by the board of regents, who are elected by the people.

The question whether the legislature has power under the Constitution to govern the action of the regents in matters relating to their supervision of the university has been presented to this court in the following cases, with the result that the court has each time refused to enforce statutes in which such government was attempted:

People, Drake, v. Regents of University, 4

Mich. 98; People v. Regents of University, 18 Mich. 469; People, Atty. Gen., v. Regents of University, 80 Mich. 478.

Grant, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

1. The petitioner does not in his petition show any interest in the matter, or the right to question the action of the board of regents. The attorney general is the proper party to move in such a case, and a private citizen does not possess the right, without permission of the court, to apply for this writ to compel a public board to perform an omitted duty. People, Drake, v. Regents of University, 4 Mich. 98. The petition in this case does not set forth that the petitioner is a citizen of the state, or that he is in any manner injured by the action of the board. This point is not raised in the briefs of counsel, probably because it is desired to obtain a decision upon the merits. We think that such proceedings should be instituted by proper parties, and that relators should show themselves competent to bring them into court. Inasmuch, however, as the question has not been raised, we shall do as we have sometimes done before,—dispose of the case upon the main issue.

2. The University of Michigan was founded under an act of Congress making an appropriation of lands for the support of a university in this state, approved May 20, 1826. In 1836 an act of Congress was passed in which it was provided "that the 72 sections of land set apart and reserved for the use and support of a university by an act of Congress approved May 20, 1826, are hereby granted and conveyed to the state, to be appropriated solely for the use and support of such university." 5 U. S. Stat. at L. 59. This grant of lands was accepted by the state by an act of legislature approved July 25, 1836. By the Constitution of 1835 (art. 10, § 5) it was provided: "The legislature shall take measures for the protection, improvement, or other disposition of such lands as have been or may hereafter be reserved or granted by the United States to this state for the support of a university, and the funds accruing from the rents or sale of such lands, or from any other source, for the purpose aforesaid, shall be and remain a permanent fund for the support of said university, with such branches as the public convenience may hereafter demand for the promotion of literature, the arts and sciences, and as may be authorized by the terms of such grant. And it shall be the duty of the legislature, as soon as may be, to provide effectual means for the improvement and permanent security of the funds of said university." By subsequent acts of the legislature the lands were sold and the state received the proceeds, and they were made a permanent fund for the support of the university. In 1837 the university was located at Ann Arbor, upon a tract of land donated for that purpose. Laws 1837, p. 142. The same legislature passed an act establishing the university, providing for a board of regents of twelve members, for three departments, and for the establishment of professorships. It also provided that the regents, together with the superintendent of public instruction, should establish such branches of the university in the different parts of the state as should from time to time be authorized by the legislature; also, for the establishment, in connection with each branch, of an institution for the education of females in the higher branches of knowledge, whenever suitable buildings should be prepared; and also for a department of agriculture.

Under the Constitution of 1835, the legislature had the entire control and management of the university and the university fund. They could appoint regents and professors, and establish departments. The university was not a success under this supervision by the legislature, and, as some of the members of the constitutional convention of 1850 said in their debates, "some of the denominational colleges had more students than did the university." Such was the condition of affairs when that convention met. It is apparent to any reader of the debates in this convention in regard to the constitutional provision for the university that they had in mind the idea of permanency of location, to place it beyond mere political influence, and to intrust it to those who should be directly responsible and amenable to the people. After these constitutional provisions, substantially in their present form, had been presented to the convention, and the question arose as to how they should be selected, whether by election or appointment, Mr. Whipple said: "If we select eight (and I should prefer twelve), your regents will be distributed over every part of the state, and the public will thus obtain a knowledge of this institution; for the convention will observe that the concerns of this university are to be placed in the hands of the regents. They will obtain very important knowledge in regard to the establishment, and the people among whom they live will become informed as to the nature of this institution, and will become interested in it." Const. Debates, 782. The public men of those times were greatly interested in the university. Methods for its management were discussed by governors in their messages, by reports of the board of regents to the legislature, and by committees of the legislature. The general consensus of opinion was that it should be under the control and management of a permanent board, who should be responsible for its management. The regents, in March, 1840, in obedience to a joint resolution of the legislature, reported that "the first change in the organic law deemed essential is the proper restriction of responsibility to the board of regents. At present the responsibility is divided, and the board would be greatly facilitated in their action were such amendments made as would throw entire responsibility on them." In the same report they also urged that the trust and management of the funds of the university should be placed in the regents. A select committee was appointed by the legislature in 1840 to inquire into the condition of the university. No more forcible argument could well be made than is found in that report for placing the entire control of the university in the hands of a permanent board, and taking it away from the legislature. House Documents 1840, p. 470. I quote from that report as follows: "No state institution in America has prospered as well as independent colleges, with equal, and often with less, means. Why they have not may be ascribed, in part, to the following causes: They have not been guided by that oneness of purpose and singleness of aim (essential to their prosperity) that others have whose trustees are a permanent body.—men chosen for their supposed fitness for that very office, and who having become acquainted with their duties, can and are disposed to pursue a steady course, which inspires confidence and insures success, to the extent of their limited means. State institutions, on the contrary, have fallen into the hands of the several legislatures, fluctuating bodies of men, chosen with reference to their supposed qualifications for other duties than cherishing literary institutions. When legislatures have legislated directly for colleges, their measures have been as fluctuating as the changing materials of which the legislatures were composed. When they have acted through a board of trustees, under the show of giving a representation to all, they have appointed men of such dissimilar and discordant character and views that they never could act in concert; so that whilst supposed to act for and represent everybody, they, in fact, have not and could not act for anybody. Again, legislatures, wishing to retain all the power of the state in their own hands, as if they alone were competent or disposed to act for the general good, have not been willing to appoint trustees for a sufficient length of time for them to become acquainted with their duties, to become interested in the cause which they were appointed to watch over, and feel the deep responsibility of the trust committed to them. A new board of trustees, like a legislature of new members, not knowing well what to do, generally begin by undoing and disorganizing all that has been done before. At first they dig up the seed a few times, to see that it is going to come up; and, after it appears above the surface, they must pull it up, to see that the roots are sound; and they pull it up again, to see if there is sufficient root to support so vigorous branches; then lop off the branches, for fear they will exhaust the root, and then pull it upon again, to see why it looks so sickly and pining, and finally to see if they can discover what made it die. And, as these several operations are performed by successive hands, no one can be charged with the guilt of destroying the valuable tree. Whilst state institutions have been, through the jealousy of state legislatures, thus sacrificed to the impatience and petulance of a heterogeneous and changeable board of trustees, whose term of office is so short that they have not time to discover their mistakes, retrace their steps, and correct their errors, it is not surprising that state universities have hitherto, almost without exception, failed to accomplish, in proportion to their means, the amount of good that was expected from them, much less than colleges in their neighborhood, patronized by the religious public, watched over by a board of trustees of similar qualifications for duty, and holding the office permanently, that they may profit by experience. The argument by which legislatures have hitherto convinced themselves that it was their duty to legislate universities to death is this: 'It is a state institution, and we are the direct representatives of the people, and therefore it is expected of us; it is our right. The people have an interest in this thing, and we must attend to it.' As if, because a university belongs to the people, that were reason why it should be dosed to death for fear it would be sick, if left to be nursed, like other institutions, by its immediate guardians. Thus has state after state, in this American Union, endowed universities, and then, by repeated contradictory and over legislation, torn them to pieces with the same facility as they do the statute book, and for the same reason because they have the right." All these reports and discussions were undoubtedly known to the members of the convention, and their action should be construed in the light of such knowledge. I am unable to find a single utterance by any member of that convention from which it could be inferred that the members believed or supposed that they were leaving the control of that institution to the legislature. The result has proved their wisdom, for the university, which was before practically a failure, under the guidance of this constitutional body, known as the "Board of Regents," has grown to be one of the most successful, the most complete, and the best known institutions of learning in the world. That such was the understanding of the meaning of the Constitution of 1850 is shown by the report of the superintendent of public instruction, published in 1852, in which he refers to "the additional and general interest created by a change of the organic law in 1850, in placing the university under the control of regents elected by the people." Report, Pub. Inst. 1852, p. 26.

The provisions of the Constitution of 1850 in regard to the university are these (art. 18):

"Sec. 2. The proceeds from the sales of all lands that have been or hereafter may be granted by the United States to this state, for educational purposes, and the proceeds of all lands or other property given by individuals, or appropriated by the state for like purposes, shall be and remain a perpetual fund, the interest and income of which, together with the rents of all such lands as may remain unsold, shall be inviolably appropriated and annually applied to the specific objects of the original gift, grant, or appropriation."

"Sec. 6. There shall be elected in the year 1863, at the time of the election of a justice of the supreme court, eight regents of the university, two of whom shall hold their office for two years, two for four years, two for six years and two for eight years. They shall enter upon the duties of their office on the first of January next succeeding their election. At every regular election of a justice of the supreme court thereafter, there shall be elected two regents, whose term of office shall be eight years. When a vacancy shall occur in the office of regent, it shall be filled by appointment of the governor. The regents thus elected shall constitute the board of regents of the University of Michigan."

"Sec. 7. The regents of the university, and their successors in office, shall continue to com-stitute the body corporate, known by the name and title of the 'Regents of the University of Michigan.'

"Sec. 8. The regents of the university shall, at their first annual meeting, or so soon thereafter as may be, elect a president of the university, who shall be ex officio a member of their board, with the privilege of speaking but not of voting. He shall preside at the meetings of the regents, and be the principal executive officer of the university. The board of regents shall have the general supervision of the university, and the direction and control of all expenditures from the university interest fund."

The board of regents elected under the new Constitution immediately took control of the university, interpreted the Constitution in accordance with its plain provisions, denied the power of the legislature to interfere with its management or control, and for forty-six years have declined obedience to any and every act of the legislature which they, upon mature reflection and consideration, have deemed against the best interests of the institution. This court has sustained them in that position, and has on every occasion when asked denied its writ to interfere with their action. In January, 1886, in the case of People, Drake, v. Regents of University, 4 Mich. 98, this court, in denying the writ of mandamus to compel the regents to establish a professorship authorized by the legislature, said: "They [the regents] aver that they have acted in good faith, but at the same time under the influence of much uncertainty as to the constitutionality of the law, and we are compelled to recognize in this question what might well suggest doubts of the binding force of the law, and occasion some hesitation in their action." Obviously, it was not the intention of the framers of the Constitution to take away from the people the government of this institution. On the contrary, they designed to, and did, provide for its management and control by a body of eight men elected by the people at large. They recognized the necessity that it should be in charge of men elected for long terms, and whose sole official duty it should be to look after its interests, and who should have the opportunity to investigate its needs, and carefully deliberate and determine what things would best promote its usefulness for the benefit of the people. Some of the members of the convention of 1850 referred in the debates to two colleges (one in Virginia and the other in Massachusetts) which had been failures under the management by the state. It is obvious to every intelligent and reflecting mind that such an institution would be safer and more certain of permanent success in the control of such a body than in that of the legislature, composed of 132 members, elected every two years, many of whom would, of necessity, know but little of its needs, and would have little or no time to intelligently investigate and determine the policy essential for the success of a great university.

Now, in the face of the facts that the regents have for forty-six years exercised such control, and openly asserted its exclusive right to do so; that the courts have refused to compel them to comply with the acts of the legislature; that this court held in Weinberg v. Regents of University, 97 Mich. 246, that they were a constitutional body, upon whom was conferred this exclusive control; and in the face of this plain constitutional provision,—this court is now asked to hold that the regents are mere ministerial officers, endowed with the sole power to register the will of the legislature, and to supervise such branches and departments as any legislature may see fit to provide for. By the power claimed, the legislature may completely dismember the university, and remove every vestage of it from the city of Ann Arbor. It is no argument to say that there is no danger of such a result. The question is one of power, and who shall say that such a result may not follow? The legislature did once enact that there should be a branch of the university in every judicial circuit. If the regents comply with the present act, the next legislature may repeal it, and restore that department to the university at Ann Arbor, or place it elsewhere. Some legislatures have attached conditions, and they have the undoubted right to do so, to appropriations for the support of the university, and a subsequent legislature has removed the conditions. Some legislatures have attached to appropriations the condition for the establishment of a homeopathic professorship in the old medical department. Other legislatures have refused to attach any such condition. What permanency would there be in an institution thus subject to the caprice and will of every legislature? Under this power, the legislature could remove the law department from the university at Ann Arbor to Detroit, and provide that the law library, to which one citizen of Michigan has donated $20,000, could also be removed. It might scatter the great library (to the collection of which private citizens have contributed nearly or quite one half), and also its great museums, laboratories, and mechanical appliances. Other results will readily suggest themselves. It appears to us impossible that such a power was contemplated. Furthermore, it renders nugatory the express provision of the Constitution that "the regents shall have the direction and control of all expenditures from the university interest fund." It is significant that, at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, this fund constituted the sole support of the university, aside from fees which might be received from students. The state had made no appropriations for its support, and there is nothing to indicate that any such appropriations were contemplated. It is unnecessary to argue that the above provision means what it says, and that it takes away from the legislature all control over the income from that fund. The power therein conferred would be without force or effect if the legislature could control these expenditures by dictating what departments of learning the regents shall establish, and in what places they shall be located. Neither does it need any argument to show that the power contended for would take away from the regents the control and direction of the expenditures from the fund. The power to control these expenditures cannot be exercised directly or indirectly by the legislature. It is vested in the board of regents in absolute and unqualified terms. This act, in express terms, prohibits the regents from using any of this fund to support a homoeopathic department at the university at Ann Arbor, since it prohibits them from maintaining such a department there. This power cannot be sustained without overruling the case of Weinberg v. Regents of University. The basis of the majority opinion in that case is that the board of regents is a constitutional body, charged by the Constitution with the entire control of that institution. The result could could not have been reached upon any other basis. It was held not to be a state institution under the control and management of the legislature, as were the other corporations enumerated in the statute then under discussion. We there said: "Under the Constitution, the state cannot control the action of the regents. It cannot add to or take away from its property without the consent of the regents." We might with propriety rest our decision upon that case, and should be disposed to do so were it not for the urgent contention of the counsel on the part of the relator that that case does not apply. We are therefore constrained to state some further reasons to show that the legislature has no control over the university or the board of regents.

(1) The board of regents and the legislature derive their power from the same supreme authority, namely the Constitution. In so far as the powers of each are defined by that instrument, limitations are imposed, and a direct power conferred upon one necessarily excludes its existence in the other, in the absence of language showing the contrary intent. Neither the university nor the board of regents is mentioned in article 4, which defines the powers and duties of the legislature; nor in the article relating to the university and the board of regents is there any language which can be construed into conferring upon or reserving any control over that institution in the legislature. They are separate and distinct constitutional bodies, with the powers of the regents defined. By no rule of construction can it be held that either can encroach upon or exercise the powers conferred upon the other.

(2) The board of regents is the only corporation provided for in the Constitution whose powers are defined therein. In every other corporation provided for in the Constitution it is expressly provided that its powers shall be such as the legislature shall give. In the case of townships (art. 11, § 2), and in counties (art. 10, § 1), and boards of supervisors (art. 10, § 11), it is expressly provided that each corporation shall have such powers and immunities as shall be prescribed by law. The same is true of other officers, aside from the regents, provided for in the Constitution. Justices of the peace (art. 6, § 18), the sheriff, the county clerk, the county treasurer, the register of deeds, and prosecuting attorney (art. 10, § 8), and township officers (art. 11, § 1), can exercise such powers as shall be prescribed by law.

(3) Let us apply another test. It is a rule of construction that where a general power over one subject is conferred upon one body in one clause of an instrument, without any restricting or qualifying language, and the like power over another subject is conferred upon another body in another clause of the same instrument, with restricting or qualifying language, the restrictions or qualifications of the second clause cannot be read into the first clause. On the contrary, they must be excluded. By article 18, § 1, the superintendent of public instruction is clothed with "the general supervision of public instruction"; but it is added, "His duties shall be prescribed by law." By article 18, § 9, the board of education is given "the general supervision of the state normal school;" but it is added, "Their duties shall be prescribed by law." Thus, in every case except that of the regents the Constitution carefully and expressly reposes in the legislature the power to legislate and to control and define the duties of those corporations and officers. Can it be held that the framers of the Constitution, and the people, in adopting it, had no purpose in conferring this power, vis., the "general supervision," upon the regents in the one instance, and in restricting it in the others? No other conclusion, in my judgment, is possible than that the intention was to place this institution in the direct and exclusive control of the people themselves, through a constitutional body elected by them. As already shown, the maintenance of this power in the legislature would give to it the sole control and general supervision of the institution, and make the regents merely ministerial officers, with no other power than to carry into effect the general supervision which the legislature may see fit to exercise, or, in other words, to register its will. We do not think the Constitution can bear that construction.

The writ is denied.

Long, Ch. J., and Montgomery and Hooker, JJ., concurred with Grant, J. Moore, J., concurred in the result.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

Johann August KUJEK, Resp't.,

v.

Manassah L. GOLDMAN, Impleaded, etc.,
App't.

(150 N. Y. 173.)

1. A man who induces another to marry a girl by false representations that she is virtuous when in fact she has been seduced by himself and has become pregnant is liable for damages in an action by the husband for fraud.
2. Exemplary damages are recoverable for fraud in inducing a man to marry a woman who is pregnant by another.
3. A direct precedent for the action is not necessary to give a right of action for a wrong.
4. Loss of the comfort founded upon affection and respect derived from conjugal society is sufficient, irrespective of any pecuniary damages, to sustain an action by a husband against one who has fraudulently induced him to marry a woman who is pregnant by another.

(October 6, 1896.)

APPPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the General Term of the Court of Common Pleas for the City of New York in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for the alleged seduction of plaintiff's wife. Affirmed.

Statement by Vann, J.:

Prior to January 17, 1891, the defendant Katie Kujek, then named Katie Moritz, was an unmarried woman employed as a domestic in the family of the defendant Goldman, by whom she had become pregnant. Upon discovering the fact, the defendants, as it is alleged in the complaint, conspired to conceal their disgrace and to induce the plaintiff to marry the said Katie, and to that end represented to him that she was a virtuous and respectable woman, and he, believing the same, did marry her on the day last named. The plaintiff, as it was further alleged, would not have contracted said marriage if he had known the facts. Subsequently, and on July 29, 1891, owing to such pregnancy, she gave birth to a child of which said Goldman was the father.

The answer of Goldman was, in substance, a general denial. No answer was served by the other defendant, and no judgment was taken against her.

The evidence tended to sustain the allegations of the complaint.

Mr. Wheeler H. Peckham, with Mr. Max Altmayer, for appellant:

Assuming that the appellant perpetrated or conspired to perpetrate a legal fraud upon the plaintiff, the fraud was condoned and ratified by the conduct of the plaintiff subsequent to his discovery of the facts.

Muller v. Muller, 21 N. Y. Week. Dig. 287; Reynolds v. Reynolds, 3 Allen, 605; Bige- low, Fr. 553, note 6; Robertson v. Cole, '12 Tex. 356; Baker v. Baker, 18 Cal. 93; Scott v. Shufeldt, 5 Paige, 48; Montgomery v. Montgomery, 3 Barb. Ch. 132.

The plaintiff did not rely on the alleged misrepresentations of the appellant, and as a reasonable man he had no right to rely. A representation of chastity is to be taken and is taken by the person to whom it is made as an expression of opinion.

No cause of action was proved, and the motion to dismiss should have been granted.

Moral culpability is not always legal culpability, any more than legal culpability is necessarily moral culpability.

Cooley, Torts, chap. 1, pp. 3, 4.

The woman's alleged premarital incontinence with the appellant, and the concealment of the fact from the plaintiff, were certainly a moral wrong upon the husband, but it would not, even if the woman herself had represented herself as chaste, been ground even for a divorce or an annulment of the marriage, or of any contract made in anticipation or consideration of marriage.

Evans v. Carrington, 2 De G. F. & J. 481; Reynolds v. Reynolds, supra.

Her concealment of premarital pregnancy is a fraud which will avoid the marriage.

Montgomery v. Montgomery, and Scott v. Shufeldt, supra; Orchore v. Orchore, 97 Mass. 330, 68 Am. Dec. 98; Reynolds v. Reynolds, and Baker v. Baker, supra.

Mere concealment by the appellant of such facts affecting Katie Kujek's chastity or pregnancy as were within his knowledge could not render him legally liable. He was under no duty to disclose.

There was no proof of damage.

Where a woman is inveigled into a void marriage and then abandoned by a wealthy man, her damage plainly appears in the loss of her services, her defilement under the mockery of empty legal forms, her loss of reputation and support.

Withee v. Brooks, 65 Me. 14; Price v. Price, 75 N. Y. 244, 31 Am. Rep. 468.

But what damage does the evidence show to the plaintiff?

The testimony is insufficient to sustain a verdict for the plaintiff.

The presumption of law is that a child born in wedlock is the child of the father though begotten prior to the marriage, and where the facts show abundant opportunity to the father prior to the marriage this presumption is a very strong one.

Montgomery v. Montgomery, and Baker v. Baker, supra.

The plaintiff had but one remedy, if any, the annulment of the marriage.

Montgomery v. Montgomery, supra; Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. 238, 279; Freethy v. Freethy, 42 Barb. 641; Longendyke v. Longendyke, 44 Barb. 366; Wellington v. Small, 8 Cush. 145, 50 Am. Dec. 719; Parker v. Huntington, 2 Gray, 124; Bowen v. Matheson, 14 Allen, 499.

The highest considerations of morality and sound public policy forbid the upholding of the action.

NOTE.—The above case is one of first impression. It is worthy of notice that the opinion plainly recognizes that there is no precedent for the action, and holds that none is necessary to give a right of action for a wrong.

34 L. R. A.

Mr. August P. Wagener, for respondent:

The law of marriage as administered by courts, so far as property interests are concerned, is founded upon business principles, in which the utmost good faith is required from all parties, and the least fraud in regard thereto is the subject of judicial cognizance.

Piper v. Hoar, 107 N. Y. 78; Neville v. Wilkinson, 1 Bro. Ch. 548; Roberts v. Roberts, 3 P. Wms. 66.

The persons who by acts of speech represent property as belonging to the proposed husband when the possession thereof forms an inducement to the marriage shall be bound to make good the thing in the manner represented.

Monteflori v. Monteflori, 1 W. Bl. 363.

Vann, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The verdict of the jury has established as the facts of this case, beyond our power to review, that the plaintiff married Katie Moritz in the belief that she was a virtuous girl, induced by the representations of the defendant to that effect, when, in fact, she was at the time pregnant by the defendant himself. The case was submitted to the jury upon the theory that if Goldman, knowing that Katie was unchaste, by false representations that she was virtuous induced the plaintiff to marry her, he was entitled to recover damages, and the jury found a verdict in his favor for $2,000. While no precedent is cited for such an action, it does not follow that there is no remedy for the wrong, because every form of action when brought for the first time must have been without a precedent to support it. Courts sometimes of necessity abandon their search for precedents and yet sustain a recovery upon legal principles clearly applicable to the new state of facts, although there was no direct precedent for it, because there had never been an occasion to make one. In remote times, when actions were so carefully classified that a mistake in name was generally fatal to the case, a form of remedy was devised by the courts to cover new wrongs as they might occur so as to prevent a failure of justice. This was called an "action on the case," which was employed where the right to sue resulted from the peculiar circumstances of the case and for which the other forms of action gave no remedy (26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 694). For instance, the action for enticing away a man's wife, now well established, was at first earnestly resisted upon the ground that no such action had ever been brought. In an early case the court answered this position by saying: "The first general objection is, that there is no precedent of any such action as this, and that therefore it will not lie; and the objection is founded on Litt. § 108, and Co. Litt. 81 b, and several other books. But this general rule is not applicable to the present case; it would be if there had been no special action on the case before. A special action on the case was introduced for this reason, that the law will never suffer an injury and a damage without a remedy, but there must be new facts in every special action on the case." Winsmore v. Greenback, Willes, Rep. 577, 580. As was recently said by this court in an action then without precedent: "If the most that can be said is that the case is novel and is not brought plainly within the limits of some adjudged case, we think such fact not enough to call for a reversal of this judgment" Piper v. Hoard, 107 N. Y. 78, 76.

The question, therefore is not whether there is any precedent for the action, but whether the defendant inflicted such a wrong upon the plaintiff as resulted in lawful damages. The defendant, by deceit induced the plaintiff to enter into a marriage contract whereby he assumed certain obligations and became entitled to certain rights. Among the obligations assumed was the duty of supporting his wife in sickness and in health, and he discharged this obligation by expending money to fit up rooms for housekeeping, in keeping house with his wife and caring for her during confinement, when she bore a child, not to him, but to the defendant. Among the rights acquired was the right to his wife's services, companionship, and society. By the fraudulent conduct of the defendant he was not only compelled to expend money to support a woman whom he would not otherwise have married, but was also deprived of her services while she was in child-bed. He thus sustained actual damages to some extent, and as the wrong involved not only malice but moral turpitude also, in accordance with the analogies of the law upon the subject, the jury had the right to make the damages exemplary. By thus applying well settled principles upon which somewhat similar actions are founded, this action can be sustained, because there was a wrongful act in the fraud, that was followed by lawful damages in the loss of money and services. The fact that the corruption of the plaintiff's wife was before he married her does not affect the right of action, as the wrong done to him was not by her defilement, but by the representation of the defendant that she was pure when he knew that she was impure, in order to bring about the marriage. It is difficult to see why a fraud, which, if practiced with reference to a contract relating to property merely, would support an action, should not be given the same effect when it involves a contract affecting not only property rights, but also the most sacred relation of life. Fraudulent representations with reference to the amount of property belonging to either party to a proposed marriage, made by a third person for the purpose of bringing about the marriage, are held to constitute an actionable wrong and the usual remedy is to require the person guilty of the fraud to make his representations good. Piper v. Hoard, supra; Monteflori v. Monteflori, 1 W. Bl. 363; Atherly, Marriage Settlements, 484. In such cases the injury is more tangible and the measure of damages more readily applied than in the case before us, but both rest upon the principle that he who by falsehood and fraud induces a man to marry a woman, is guilty of a wrong that may be remedied by an action, the amount of damages to be recovered depending upon the circumstances of the particular case.

We have thus far considered the right of action as resting upon some pecuniary loss, which, although trifling in amount, may be recovered as a matter of right, leaving it to the jury in their sound discretion, as in the case for the seduction of a child or servant, to amplify the damages by way of punishment and example. We think, however, that the action can be maintained upon a broader and more satisfactory ground, and that is the loss of consortium, or the right of the husband to the conjugal fellowship and society of his wife. The loss of consortium through the misconduct of a third person has long been held an actionable injury, without proof of any pecuniary loss. Bennett v. Bennett, 116 N. Y. 584, 6 L. R. A. 553; Hutchinson v. Peck, 5 Johns. 196; Hermance v. James, 32 How. Pr. 142. As has been well said by a recent writer: "To entice away, or to corrupt the mind and affections of one's consort is a civil wrong for which the offender is liable to the injured husband or wife. . . . The gist of the action, however, is not the loss of assistance, but the loss of the consortium of the wife or husband, which term implies an exclusive right against an invader, of affection, companionship, and aid." Bigelow, Torts, p. 158. The damages are caused by the wrongful deprivation of that to which the husband or wife is entitled by virtue of the marriage contract. They rest upon the loss of a right which the marriage relation gives and of which it is an essential feature. Whether that right is wrongfully taken away after it is acquired, or the person entitled to it is wrongfully prevented from acquiring it, does not change the effect or lessen the injury. While the plaintiff has not been actually deprived of the society of his wife, he has been deprived of that which made her society of any value, the same as if she had been seduced after marriage. Although the formal right to consortium may remain, the substance has been taken away. In other words, when he entered into the marriage relation he was entitled to the company of a virtuous woman, yet through the fraud of the defendant that right never came to him. He has never enjoyed the chief benefit springing from the contract of marriage, which is the comfort, founded upon affection and respect, derived from conjugal society. If the defendant had deprived the plaintiff of his right to consortium after marriage, the law would have afforded a remedy by the award of damages. Yet the plaintiff, through the fault of the defendant, has suffered a loss of the same nature and to the same extent, except that instead of losing what he once had, he has been prevented from getting it when he was entitled to it. This is a difference in form only and is without substantial foundation. The injury, although affected by fraud before marriage instead of by seduction after marriage, was the same, and why should not the remedy be the same? While the method of inflicting the injury is not the same, as it is tortious in character, has substantially the same effect and causes damages of the same nature and to the same extent, why should damages be recovered in the one case if not in the other? Where false representations are wilfully made as to a material fact for the purpose of inducing another to act upon them and he does so act to his injury, he may recover such damages as proximately result from the deception. The representations in this case, as the jury has found, were made to promote the marriage, and they were false, as the defendant well knew. They were clearly material. The plaintiff acted upon them and was thereby injured, for he made a contract entitling him to certain rights, which he has not received and which the defendant knew he could never receive. Here are all the elements of a good cause of action founded upon fraud resulting in damage. The contract induced by the fraud was of a peculiar nature, but it was in law simply a contract, conferring certain rights and imposing certain obligations. While it is not agreeable to treat a subject of sacred importance upon this narrow basis, it is necessary to do so, for our law considers marriage in no other light than as a civil contract. If the defendant had induced the plaintiff to enter into any other contract by making false statements of facts, which, if true would have made the contract more valuable, he would have been liable for all the damages that naturally resulted. If he had induced the very marriage contract under consideration by representing to the plaintiff that he owed his proposed wife a certain sum of money, according to the common law, which entitles the husband to the personal property of his wife, he could have been compelled to make his representations good by the payment of that sum. Montefiori v. Montefiori, supra; Redman v. Redman, 1 Vern. 848; Neville v. Wilkinson, 1 Bro. Ch. 548; Scott v. Scott, 1 Cox, Ch. Cas. 378. These cases, as well as the more important case of Piper v. Hoard, supra, rest upon the principle that fraudulent representations as to the pecuniary condition of one party to a proposed marriage, made by a third person to the other party thereto, in order to promote the marriage, are actionable and authorize the recovery of such damages as may be proved. In this case we have a representation that did not relate to property directly, although it involved rights in the nature of property, but did relate to character, and so vitally that its falsity was destructive of all happiness belonging to the plaintiff by virtue of his marriage. The injury was not merely sentimental, for, as has been shown, it extended to a right which the law recognizes as of pecuniary value, and for the wrongful destruction of which it awards damages.

We think that the facts found warrant the recovery, and, after examining all the exceptions, are of the opinion that the judgment should be affirmed, with costs.

All concur, except Bartlett, J., not voting.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT.

Logan A. MARSHALL

v.

FRANKLIN FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY OF PHILADELPHIA, Appt.

(176 Pa. 623.)

1. An insurance company which issues a policy of "permanent insurance" by which it agrees to be and remain "forever" liable to the assured his heirs and assigns, and which provides that any assignment of the policy shall be brought to the company's office to be entered and "allowed," cannot refuse to enter and allow an assignment solely because it has decided not to consent to the transfer of old policies.
2. The holder of a fire insurance policy insuring "forever" the insured and his assigns may, where the insurer wrongfully terminates the policy, secure a new policy in another company and recover from the old company the costs thereof.
3. The assignee of a policy of permanent insurance providing that the insurance company shall be "forever" liable to the assured and his assigns, may maintain in his own name an action for damages resulting from the company's refusal to enter and allow the assignment of the policy as provided for therein.

(July 15, 1894.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas for York County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due on a policy of fire insurance. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Jere S. Black, Arthur Biddle, and George W. Biddle, for appellant:

Policies in respect of fire are personal contracts with the insured in which there is always a delectus personae.

Lynch v. Dalzell, 4 Bro. P. C. 481; Sadlers' Co. v. Badcock, 2 Aik. 554; Attna F. Ins. Co. v. Tyler, 16 Wend. 885, 80 Am. Dec. 90.

A policy of fire insurance is not assignable and does not run with the land; and on a total alienation of the property the policy is at an end unless the insurer consents to its assignment.

Park, Ins. 6th ed. 595; Porter, Ins. *801; May, Ins. 5, 842; 1 Wood, Ins. 695, 698; 2 Wood, Ins. 753; Biddle, Ins. §§ 202, 623.

Defendant was entitled to decline to transfer in this case. The word "allow," in the sense in which it is used here is defined as "to grant permission to, to permit, to assent to, to yield," etc.

A perpetual policy of fire insurance, like the present, does not differ in its legal effect from a time or annual policy with regard to assignability; and the former is not assignable on an alienation of the property insured without the consent of the insurer any more than the latter; nor does the former run with the land.

Boynton v. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. 43 Vt. 256, 5 Am. Rep. 276.

Policies of fire insurance are not assignable in equity any more than in law without the assent of the insurer, so as to permit the alienee of the property to recover in an action at law as in the present one, where such assignment has never been completed by its entry and allowance by the insurer.

State Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Roberts, 81 Pa. 441; Lynch v. Dalzell, 4 Bro. P. C. 481; Biddle, Ins. §§ 262, 263; May, Ins. ed. 1891, § 877.

Messrs. George E. Neff and Henry C. Niles, for appellee:

An assignment of a perpetual policy carries with it every right essential to its use and enjoyment.

Rafanzyder's Appeal, 88 Pa. 436; State Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Roberts, 81 Pa. 438; Buckley v. Garrett, 60 Pa. 383, 100 Am. Dec. 564.

An insurance company cannot arbitrarily and without cause refuse to allow and approve an assignment.

Boynton v. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. 43 Vt. 256; 5 Am. Rep. 276; May, Ins. ed. 1873, 469, § 887.

Williams, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

We think, with the learned judge of the court below, that this case presents some questions that are new, and must be determined without much aid from our own decided cases. The plaintiff's right to recover is based upon a contract which describes itself as a policy "of permanent insurance." In the caption at the head of the policy it is also called "perpetual." It was issued by the defendant to John Hartman in May, 1889; and it undertakes, in consideration of a deposit of $120, and certain charges for the policy, and the survey of the insured premises, "to be and remain forever liable to the said assured, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns," for any loss that may be sustained by fire to the buildings insured, not exceeding $4,000. This contract, unconditional and perpetual in its terms, is followed by a statement of the conditions upon which it is made, and of the manner in which the holder of the policy may at any time surrender it and reclaim his deposit, less 5 per cent, and so terminate the contract. The only provision for the termination of the policy by the action of the defendant company must be gathered from the third of these conditions, which is in these words: "In case any assured shall assign or transfer his or her policy, such assignment or transfer shall be brought to the office of the company, to be entered and allowed, within thirty days next after such assignment or transfer, and in default thereof the benefit of the insurance, and all claims upon the company shall be lost. For every transfer of a policy, there shall be paid 56 cents." This stipulation recognizes the permanent character of the insurance, and the

NOTE.—The questions decided in the above case are believed to be new. This is the first decision we have found respecting perpetual insurance. While it is generally said that insurance policies are not assignable without consent of the assured it will be seen that in the above case the insurance is made to the assured "his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns."

liability of the company to the holder of the policy, being also the owner of the property insured. All that is required of such holder is that he present the policy within thirty days after he acquires it, at the office of the company, to have the transfer entered and allowed, and pay the fee of 50 cents for such entry and allowance. This had been done with the policy now in question on three different occasions; but when the plaintiff presented his assignment and transfer within the time required, and tendered the fee for the entry of the transfer upon the books of the company, he was met with a flat refusal. This action was brought to recover damages for such refusal. The question thus raised is whether the company may refuse to enter and allow a transfer of a perpetual policy, or is bound, upon the tender of the fee, to allow the transfer, and enter the name of the transferee upon its books as the holder. This depends upon the construction of the word "allow." This word is ordinarily equivalent to the word "permit," or to the words "consent to." Its use in any given case assumes the existence of a power to refuse to allow, permit, or consent to, and the right to elect whether to grant or withhold the allowance or permission asked for. But the nature of the contract, and its express recognition of the right of the insured to sell his policy with the property to which it relates, requires us to hold that this right to elect must be exercised, not arbitrarily and at will, but for cause, and in harmony with the purpose and spirit of the contract. If the purchaser and transferee is a person whose financial condition, habits of life, or moral character are such as to increase the hazard against which the company has undertaken to indemnify the original policy holder, so that if the risk was now offered for the first time it would be refused, it would not be reasonable to deny to the company the right to refuse the increased risk to which the transfer has exposed the insured property. But, on the other hand, if the situation, habits, and moral character of the transferee are unobjectionable, and do not increase the hazard of loss, it would not be reasonable to permit one party to a contract to terminate it without cause, and against the protest of the other party. In this case the defendant company gave a reason for its refusal to enter and allow the transfer, and the validity of that action must depend on the validity of the reason on which it was based. When the plaintiff presented himself at the office of the company with the transfer of the policy, and the fee for its entry and allowance, in his hand, he was told that, as a matter of business policy affecting its own interests, the company had decided not to consent to the transfer of old policies, like that he had brought, but to terminate them, as fast as a transfer became necessary, by refusing to enter and allow such transfer. Was this a valid reason? It was an attempt by one party to a contract to terminate its liability at its own election, and for its own advantage, against the protest of the other party to it. It was the exercise of a power reserved for its protection against risks it had not undertaken to insure against, in a purely arbitrary manner to relieve itself from risks it had undertaken to insure against in violation of its contract, and to the injury of the holder of the policy. It was therefore not a valid reason for the action taken, and the action of the company in refusing to enter and allow the transfer cannot be sustained. It was a violation of the contract for "permanent insurance," of which the plaintiff had a right to complain, and it afforded him a cause of action against the company.

The next question presented relates to the measure of damages. We see no reason for distinguishing this from any case in which the plaintiff sues on a broken contract. He may elect whether he will acquiesce in the action of the defendant, treat the contract as at an end, and recover back the consideration paid, or whether he will refuse to recognize the action of the defendant as terminating the contract, go into the market, and purchase what the defendant has refused to provide in the manner contemplated by the contract, and call upon the defendant to indemnify him against what it may cost when so obtained. The plaintiff has chosen to stand upon the latter of these positions, if the court shall be of opinion that he has the legal right to do so, and has submitted the facts upon which that question may be determined in the case stated agreed upon in the court below. We hold that he has a right to stand upon the position he has chosen, and to say to the defendant: "You terminated my policy in your own company in violation of its terms. You compelled me to buy insurance elsewhere. You must now indemnify me against the loss I have suffered in consequence of your own wrongful repudiations of your contract." This point is ruled by American L. Ins. Co. v. McAden, 109 Pa. 399. The injury sued for was sustained by the plaintiff. The loss was his. As the purchaser of the property, and the policy of perpetual insurance upon it, he had the right, under the express terms of the contract, to present the policy for entry and allowance by the company. Its refusal was not supported by any valid reason. The damages resulting from such refusal may be sued for by the plaintiff, who was compelled to suffer them, without using the name of the party originally insured as legal plaintiff. It is not necessary to go into equity, for the cause of action is one enforceable at law. It grows out of a violation of a contract, and is properly redressed by the recovery of damages by way of compensation. The contract does not run with the land in the common-law sense of that phrase, but it is in express terms a contract to indemnify the owner of the property insured, he being also the holder of the policy. It is a contract for the permanent or perpetual insurance of the property, subject to the implied condition that the hazard shall not be materially increased; and, both by the nature of the contract and by its express words, it is made with the owner, whether he becomes such by operation of law, or by the act of him who was the owner at the time the contract was made. In this respect it is clearly distinguishable from the ordinary policy of insurance.

The assignments of error are overruled, and the judgment is affirmed.

IOWA SUPREME COURT.

Mary A. MOHLER

v.

Estate of Anthony SHANK, Deceased et al.,
*Appts.*SHANK et al., Appts.,

v.

Mary A. MOHLER et al.

(38 Iowa, —.)

1. Jurisdiction of a divorce suit cannot be obtained on a complaint by the guardian of an insane man, although the wife is properly served and appears to contest the jurisdiction.
2. A woman is estopped to claim a share in an estate as widow, although a divorce obtained from her in a suit brought by the guardian for the insane husband was absolutely void, where she has accepted alimony under the decree and contracted a subsequent marriage.

NOTE.—Divorce when husband or wife becomes insane.

- I. Insanity as a ground for divorce.
- II. Insanity as affecting adultery.
 - a. As a ground for divorce.
 - b. As a defense to a claim for alimony.
- III. Insanity as affecting abandonment and failure to support.
- IV. Insanity as affecting cruelty.
- V. The defense.
- VI. Actions on behalf of insane persons.

I. Insanity as a ground for divorce.

Insanity occurring after marriage is no ground for dissolution when the statute does not make it one of the grounds of divorce. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 68 Ill. 87; Baker v. Baker, 23 Ind. 144; Tiffany v. Tiffany, 24 Iowa, 122; Wertz v. Wertz, 43 Iowa, 584; Powell v. Powell, 18 Kan. 371, 28 Am. Rep. 774; Pile v. Pile, 94 Ky. 303.

And statutes making insanity a ground for divorce are not of frequent occurrence, and do not seem to have been favored, being found to have existed in four states only.

Thus, in Arkansas it is provided that a divorce may be granted where either party shall subsequent to marriage have become permanently and incurably insane.

And in Washington it is provided by statute that a court may in its discretion grant a divorce in case of incurable, chronic mania or dementia of either party having existed for ten years.

So, in Wisconsin an act previously existed authorizing divorce on the ground of incurable insanity, but this was repealed, except as to pending actions, by Wis. act March 25, 1882, chap. 230.

And Ky. Rev. Stat. chap. 47, art. 3, provides for divorce for lunacy and unsound mind of a confirmed and incurable character, and not less than three years continuance, to be established by the testimony of persons skilled in mental maladies and other proof, providing for the protection of the property interests of the person of unsound mind and for provision for the wife if she is of unsound mind out of the husband's means, and for the appointment of a guardian ad litem for the lunatic, with the proviso that divorce shall only be granted where the lunacy or unsoundness of mind was the result of intemperance or hereditary taint of insanity which was concealed from the other party at the time of the marriage, and that the (January 18, 1888.)

A PPEALS by the representatives of Anthony Shank, deceased, from decrees of the District Court for Montgomery County in favor of the dower right of one claiming to be the widow of said Shank and refusing to quiet the title of the heirs against such claim. Reversed.

Statement by Rothrock, J.:

The first of the above-entitled actions is a proceeding in probate, by which Mary A. Mohler demands that her dower or distributive share be set off to her, as the widow of Anthony Shank, deceased. The other case is a suit in equity by the heirs of Anthony Shank, and against Mary A. Mohler and others, to quiet the title of said heirs against any claims of Mary A. Mohler in the estate of said Shank. Both of said actions were tried by the court. The application for the admeasurement of dower was sustained, and the petition to quiet title was questions of fact shall be tried by jury. Newcomb v. Newcomb, 18 Bush, 544, 28 Am. Rep. 222.

The constitutionality of such statutes has been upheld.

Thus, the act of the territorial legislature of Washington of December 22, 1885, making incurable, chronic mania or dementia one of the grounds on which divorce might be granted, where the affliction had existed for ten years or more, is not contrary to public policy and therefore unconstitutional. Hickman v. Hickman, 1 Wash. 287.

But they would seem to have been subjected to a strict construction.

Thus, Ky. Rev. Stat. chap. 27, art. 3, providing for divorce for lunacy, and unsound mind of a confirmed and incurable character, is only an amendment of the original statute on the subject giving additional causes for a divorce, and does not change the practice in such cases or dispense with the necessity for bringing in the defendant by service of citation. Newcomb v. Newcomb, supra.

And a wife who was never ascertained to be a lunatic by any judicial finding, and was confined in an asylum in another state by her husband, and was there in obedience to his commands and subject alone to his control at the time of the institution of the action for divorce by him, and when the judgment was rendered, is not, as to him, an absent or nonresident defendant in contemplation of the statute authorizing constructive service, and such service in such case is void. Ibid.

So, a judgment for divorce on the ground of the incurable insanity of the wife under the Wisconsin statute is not final under Wis. Laws 1881, chap. 207, § 3, providing that the court may at any time after rendering judgment therein revise and alter such judgment so far as the custody, support, and maintenance of the insane person are concerned, and may provide for such maintenance by the plaintiff out of property or earnings acquired by him subsequent as well as previous to the decree of divorce, so far as it affects such custody and support, and the action remains pending so far as the custody and support of the lunatic are concerned within the saving clause of the repealing act of March 25, 1882, chap. 230, declaring that it shall not affect pending actions, leaving the court which rendered the judgment full power to alter and revise the same in respect to such custody, support, and maintenance. Hicks v. Hicks, 79 Wis. 466.

And a guardian ad litem for the insane wife, ap-dismissed. The heirs and the administrator of Anthony Shank, deceased, appealed.

Messrs. C. E. Richards and Smith McPherson for appellants.

Messrs. J. M. Junkin and Harl & McCabe for appellees.

Rothrock, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The two causes involve the same questions, and they will be disposed of in one opinion. The facts are not the subject of dispute, and are, in substance, as follows: Anthony Shank and Mary A. Temple (now Mohler) were married on the 1st day of January, 1865, at the city of Red Oak, in Montgomery county. They lived together as husband and wife, in said county, until the year 1873, when said Anthony Shank, upon inquest duly held, was adjudged to be insane, and was placed in the insane hospital at Mt. Pleasant, in this state, where he was under treatment as a patient until the year 1881, when he was removed to Mercey Hospital, at Davenport, where he remained until his death, which occurred in 1892. He was insane from the time he was so adjudged until his death. Soon after his removal to Mt. Pleasant, his wife was appointed his guardian by the circuit court of Montgomery county. Afterwards, and in 1881, she was, by order of the proper court, removed from said guardianship, and another guardian was appointed. Her removal was ordered on the ground that she mismanaged the property of her ward. A judgment for some $200 was rendered against her and the sureties on her bond, as money due from her in the matter of said guardianship. In the month of January, 1884, T. H. Alexander, then guardian of said Anthony Shank, commenced a suit for divorce in the circuit court of Montgomery county against the said Mary A. Shank, in behalf of his said ward, based upon the ground of adultery. An original notice was duly served upon the defendant in that suit, and she appeared to the action, and filed a demurrer, one ground of which was that the court had no jurisdiction pointed by the circuit court in such action, continues to be such guardian until removed by the appointing court, his functions not being suspended by the subsequent appointment of a guardian by the county court, and he remains the proper person to prosecute a petition for a modification of the judgment as to her support. Ibid.

So, statutes prescribing other grounds for divorce, of a general or kindred nature, have been uniformly construed so as to exclude insanity after marriage.

Thus, a divorce will not be granted upon the ground that the wife had become insane, under Ill. Rev. Stat. 1845, chap. 23, § 3, providing that in addition to the cause therein before provided for, courts of chancery shall have power to hear and determine all causes for a divorce not provided for by any law of the state. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 66 Ill. 87.

And divorce will not be granted on the ground that the wife is hopelessly and incurably insane under the Indiana divorce act (2 Gavin & H. 361, § 7), authorizing the granting of a divorce for any other cause than those previously enumerated, for which the court shall deem it proper that a divorce shall be granted. Curry v. Curry, 1 Wils. Super. Ct. (Ind.) 235.

Or under a discretionary power to be exercised upon application of the injured party on that ground, where the insanity resulted from no misconduct on her part, as there would be in no legal sense an injured party. Ibid.

Nor will mental disease upon the part of a wife, such as to prevent her from discharging her conjugal duties, warrant a divorce upon the ground of impotency where her mind was diseased without her fault and she lived happily with her husband for several years after marriage, and discharged all the obligations and duties pertaining to the marriage relation. Pile v. Pile, 94 Ky. 308.

So, to maintain an action to annul a marriage on the ground that the defendant was a lunatic, under the New York Code, it must appear that cause existed at the time of the marriage. Forman v. Forman, 53 N. Y. S. R. 639.

And a divorce upon the ground of insanity of one of the parties at the time of marriage is not warranted by proof of occasional spells of insanity before marriage and ultimate and permanent insanity several years afterwards to which with evidence of hereditary taint in the family. Smith v. Smith, 47 Miss. 211.

And occasional paroxysms of hereditary insanity ? 4 L. R. A.

upon the part of a wife before marriage and thereafter, unknown to the husband until after marriage, is not a ground for a divorce or a decree of nullity on account of fraud, mistake, or inadequacy. Hamaker v. Hamaker, 18 Ill. 137, 65 Am. Dec. 705.

II. Insanity as affecting adultery.

a. As a ground for divorce.

The general and almost universal rule is that adultery committed while insane and not during a lucid interval is not a ground for a divorce. Wray v. Wray, 19 Ala. 522; Nichols v. Nichols, 31 Vt. 331, 78 Am. Dec. 362; Yarrow v. Yarrow [1892] P. 92.

And an action for divorce will be dismissed on proof to the satisfaction of the court of the insanity of the defendant. Broadstreet v. Broadstreet, 7 Mass. 474.

And where the evidence upon the part of a petitioner for a dissolution of marriage by reason of cruelty and adultery discloses facts from which the respondent's insanity may be inferred, the court will require to be satisfied that such facts admit of a different explanation before it will make a decree in favor of the petitioner, though such question was not raised on the pleadings. Hall v. Hall, 38 Swab. & T. 849.

In Matchin v. Matchin, 6 Pa. 332, 47 Am. Dec. 466, however, it was held that a wife's insanity, though so absolute as to have effaced from her mind the first lines of conjugal duty, would not be a defense to a libel for divorce for adultery.

This ruling was based on the paramount purpose of marriage, the protection of legitimate children, the institution of families, and the creation of natural relations among mankind from which proceed all civilization, virtue, and happiness to be found in the world.

But in Nichols v. Nichols, supra, the court criticised Matchin v. Matchin, supra, saying that the reason for the decision in that case is one which will have no application to similar acts committed by the husband, and as applied to a wife seems utterly revolting to all just sense of propriety and decency.

And in Hansell v. Hansell, 3 Pa. Dist. R. 724, which was an action for divorce for cruelty, the court in distinguishing Matchin v. Matchin, supra, avoided the expression of an opinion "whether that decision would be sustained by the spirit and tendency of later jurisprudence."

Evidence of depravity of character and aban-of the subject-matter of the suit, for the reason that the alleged adultery occurred after the plaintiff became insane, and that a guardian could not procure a divorce for an insane person. The demurrer was duly submitted to the circuit court, and was overruled. The defendant excepted to the ruling, and elected to stand on her demurrer. A default was entered against her, for want of an answer, and evidence was introduced, and a decree of divorce was entered of record. Before the decree was entered, the parties to that suit made and signed the following agreement:

Anthony Shank, by Guardian vs.

Mary A. Shank.

Action for Divorce.

The parties hereto agree as follows: (1) That if said court, or the supreme court on appeal, shall hold or decree that plaintiff, Anthony Shank, is entitled to a decree of divorce from the bonds of matrimony between the said Anthony Shank and Mary A. Shank, then the plaintiff shall immediately pay to the defendant $400, and shall also pay off and discharge the bills of Mohler, Brown, & Co., for $331, and H. Roberts & Son, for $70, against said Mary A. Shank, and shall fully release and discharge defendant and her bondsmen by reason of all acts of the defendant; and during the pendency of this action in this court, or the supreme court, the said judgment in circuit court against defendant and her bondsmen shall bear no interest, and a final decree in this case in favor of plaintiff shall cancel said judgment, of itself. (2) Said payments so made shall be in full of any and all claims, of any and every kind, for alimony, both temporary and permanent, and said decree of divorce, and the decree for said payments aforesaid, shall be a bar absolute against defendant, barring and estopping defendant from ever claiming any dower or other interest in the property or estate of Anthony Shank, either while he is living, or after his decease, and shall also fully settle all allowances made by done habits, however, is not sufficient to establish insanity as a defense in a divorce case. Hill v. Hill, 2 N. J. Eq. 214.

And a divorce will be granted where the evidence satisfactorily shows that the defendant was sane at the time she committed the adultery, notwithstanding the fact that she had been adjudicated a lunatic some two or three years before, which adjudication remained unreversed. Cook v. Cook, 53 Barb. 180.

So, insanity is no defense to an action for a divorce upon the ground of adultery where at the time of the commission of the act the party was capable of appreciating the nature of the act and its probable consequences. Yarrow v. Yarrow [1882] P. 92.

And a wife who leaves her home under a delusion that her husband was administering or attempting to administer poison to her, and who commits adultery with the idea that it might probably be the means of bringing about a divorce, is responsible therefor, the fact furnishing a good ground for divorce. Ibid.

In Yarrow v. Yarrow, supra, it was suggested, but not decided, that insanity which will entitle an accused to an acquittal on an indictment for a crime would constitute a valid defense to a suit for a divorce on the ground of adultery.

The question of insanity at the time of the commission of an act of adultery should be put in issue, but a divorce will not be denied where this is not done and evidence is received satisfactorily showing sanity at that time. Cook v. Cook, supra.

But a record adjudicating the defendant in a divorce case a lunatic some two or three years before the act for which the divorce was demanded, establishes the fact, and cannot be contradicted, and such insanity is presumed to have continued until the time of such act, but the presumption of continuance may be rebutted by showing that she was sane at the time of the adultery, the burden of proving sanity at the time of its commission being thereby cast upon the party alleging it. Ibid.

So, it is thought that nymphomania, consisting of a morbid, uncontrollable, sexual desire, would not be deemed such insanity as would excuse adultery as a ground for divorce.

Thus, in Hill v. Hill, supra, insanity as an excuse for adultery as a ground for divorce was held not to have been established though the evidence showed that the mind of the accused was weak, and that her disposition to licentiousness was pronounced and notorious, and that she was unrestrained and shameless in her abandonment to the gratification of her sensuality, and that she did not seem to know what morality meant, and was lost to shame, and her vicious tastes and inclinations were too powerful to be controlled by the demands of duty or the restraints of society.

So, by some of the earlier English decisions, insanity after an act of adultery was held to be a defense to an action for divorce on that ground on the theory that the alleged guilty party was thereby incapacitated to make a defense.

This was so held in Bawden v. Bawden, 2 Swab. & T. 417, 51 L. J. Mat. N. S. 94, 5 Jur. N. S. 157, 6 L. T. N. S. 27, 10 Week. Rep. 202.

And in King v. King, set forth in L. R. 2 Prob. & Div. 125, a doubt was expressed by the court as to whether a decree a mensa et thoro could be made against a lunatic respondent, taking time to consider, and no judgment is known to have been given, nor is there any trace of any such decrees having been made.

So in Mordaunt v. Mordaunt, L. R. 2 Prob. & Div. 120, 13 Week. Rep. 845, an order was made to stay a suit against an insane wife for prior adultery so long as a reasonable hope remained that she might recover.

But two years after (20 Week. Rep. 553) on the ground that there was no hope of her recovery the husband got the petition dismissed without prejudice to an appeal, and appealed.

And in Mordaunt v. Moncrieffe, 42 L. J. Mat. N. S. 49, 30 L. T. N. S. 649, 23 Week. Rep. 12, L. R. 3 H. L. (Sc.) 374, it was held that the lunacy of a wife after the commission of adultery is no ground for staying proceedings brought by her husband against her for divorce, under 23 Viet. chap. 85, § 31, absolutely entitling the husband to a decree dissolving the marriage upon adultery, unless certain acts mentioned therein are proved against him, reversing Mordaunt v. Mordaunt, supra.

In Mordaunt v. Moncrieffe, supra, the court recognized and admitted the weight of the opinion of Sir C. Cresswell in Bawden v. Bawden, supra, but refused to follow that decision.

And Parnell v. Parnell, 2 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 109, infra, VI., was distinguished upon the ground that it was a suit for judicial separation before the act was passed, and could have no application to a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, which is altogether the creation of the statute.

The doctrine of the later English decisions seems to have been adopted in America.

this court heretofore to Mary A. Shank or her attorneys, and the same shall be canceled. (8) This case shall be prosecuted with the utmost diligence to a conclusion, and, if said decree of divorce shall be denied, then this agreement shall be void. Witness our hands, January 30, 1884.

[Signed.] Anthony Shank,
by T. H. Alexander, Guardian.
Mary A. Shank.

The decree of divorce recognized this agreement, and it contained the following provisions in reference to the property rights of the parties: "It is further decreed that the defendant is hereby forever barred and estopped and cut off from having or claiming any right to dower or other estate, or to any part of the property, either real or personal, of the said Anthony Shank, that he now has or may hereafter acquire, or to his said estate or property, or any part thereof, that he may own at the time of his death; that plaintiff has all the rights of an unmarried man. It is further ordered that, as alimony, both temporary and permanent, in full therefor, that plaintiff pay in cash to defendant $400; that plaintiff pay a bill contracted by defendant with Mohler, Brown, & Co., of $383, and a like bill, of $70, to H. Roberts & Son, and that a judgment of $211 rendered by this court at late January, 1884, term, in a case wherein T. H. Alexander, guardian of Anthony Shank, was plaintiff, and Mary A. Shank, E. Temple, William Painter, and William Archer were defendants, be, and the same is hereby, satisfied in full, and canceled, and all other claims of defendant for support are hereby barred; and that execution issue therefor." The amounts provided for in the agreement and decree were promptly paid to the defendant, and the judgment satisfied in full, so that the defendant was allowed and received something more than $1,000. There is no claim made that there was not sufficient cause for a divorce. On the contrary, it is conceded that Mrs. Shank (now Mrs. Mohler) was delivered of a bastard child on the 7th day of August, 1881, more than two years before the

Thus, adultery committed by a party to a marriage while of sound mind is a ground for divorce though he subsequently becomes insane and continues to be so until the time of the commencement of the action and the granting of the decree. Rathbun v. Rathbun, 40 How. Pr. 323.

And subsequent insanity of a permanent and incurable character on the part of the wife will not deprive the husband of his right to have the marriage relation dissolved for an act of adultery committed by the wife when sane and responsible for her acts. Stratford v. Stratford, 32 N. C. 297.

In Rathbun v. Rathbun, supra, Broadstreet v. Broadstreet, 7 Mass. 474, was distinguished upon the ground that in that case the defendant was insane at the time of the alleged adultery, and so continued.

And Mordaunt v. Mordaunt, L. R. 2 Prob. & Div. 103, was criticised and distinguished, the court saying that the opinion was based mainly upon the analogy of the case to a criminal proceeding, and that the law of divorce in England is very different from the law on that subject in this state, and that it is not authority here, nor applicable to the system of law touching divorce existing in this state.

b. As a defense to a claim for alimony.

Adultery committed by a wife while insane is no bar to her claim against her husband for alimony upon the ground that he had abandoned her. Mims v. Mims, 33 Ala. 98; Wray v. Wray, Id. 187.

And the insanity of the wife, proved to have existed at the time of the commission of an act of adultery by her, will be presumed in an action by her for alimony to continue until the contrary is proved. Wray v. Wray, supra.

And where a wife suing by her next friend files her bill for alimony against her husband, alleging insanity on her part and cruelty and abandonment on the part of her husband and the husband answers denying all of the allegations of the bill but failing to object to its form, he cannot procure a reversal of the decree rendered therein on the ground that the wife if insane should have sued by committee and not by next friend. Mims v. Mims, supra.

III. Insanity as affecting abandonment and failure to support.

Failure to provide for and support a wife by her husband is not a ground for divorce, though made 34 L. R. A.

so by statute, where such failure arises from insanity. Baker v. Baker, 32 Ind. 146.

But a husband who wilfully deserts his wife while sane, and remains away for the statutory period required to warrant a divorce in her favor, cannot excuse himself on the ground that before the expiration of the statutory period he became insane. Douglass v. Douglass, 31 Iowa. 421.

So, the failure of a husband to provide a sufficient maintenance and support for his wife, suitable to her condition and circumstances, while she is separated from him without her fault and confined in a lunatic asylum, entitles her to a decree for alimony. Wray v. Wray, 33 Ala. 187.

And the fact that the wife was confined in an asylum for lunatics by her husband's consent and direction does not establish an abandonment of the husband which will entitle him to a divorce. Pile v. Pile, 94 Ky. 308.

The shortcomings of the wife, who had been insane but had at least partially recovered, and erratic acts on her part, are to be viewed charitably by the court in determining whether her subsequent abandonment of her husband is a sufficient ground for divorce. Franklin v. Franklin, 53 Kan. 143.

And a divorce will not be granted a husband against his wife for her abandonment on account of a quarrel growing out of his punishing one of the children, where she had been insane but had been at least partially cured, and he was not at all times as considerate as he might have been in view of his wife's infirmity and weakness. Ibid.

IV. Insanity as affecting cruelty.

Cruel and inhuman treatment do not warrant a divorce when such treatment is the result of insanity. Tiffany v. Tiffany, 34 Iowa, 122; Powell v. Powell, 18 Kan. 371, 25 Am. Rep. 774.

Where an insane man is dangerous to his wife's personal safety the remedy lies in the restraint of the husband and not in a release of the wife. Hall v. Hall, 3 Swab. & T. 349.

And a divorce granted against a wife for acts of cruelty which were the result of a diseased mind on her part culminating in her insanity, in which condition she remained at the time of the service of the summons upon her, will be set aside on motion of her guardian. Cohn v. Cohn, 85 Cal. 108.

And cruelty and inhuman treatment by a wife of her husband endangering his life is not a ground for a divorce where the inhuman treatment relied action for divorce was commenced; and on the 22d day of July, 1884, a marriage license was duly issued to Mary A. Shank and J. L. Mohler, and they were married on the same day. Mrs. Shank-Mohler testified as a witness, in part, as follows: "There were no children born to Anthony Shank and me. There was a child born August 7, 1881. That child was not Anthony Shank's child. This child that I have just spoken of was the child of my present husband, J. L. Mohler."

2. The appellee founds her claim to a distributive share of the estate upon the ground that when Anthony Shank died she was his lawful widow. In other words, the contention in her behalf is that the decree of divorce is absolutely void, because the circuit court had no jurisdiction to entertain the divorce proceeding and enter a decree; the husband in whose behalf the jurisdiction of the court was invoked being at the time insane, and his guardian having no lawful power or authority to commence or maintain the action for divorce. It is conceded that the suit was commenced in the proper county, that service of the original notice was duly had, and that the defendant therein appeared. No question is made as to the form of the decree, and as to the reasonableness of the amount of alimony allowed the defendant; and, although the defendant entered into marital relations with Mohler long before the death of Shank, she insists that she is the widow of Shank. She does not attack the decree directly, and demand that it be set aside and vacated; but she insists that it is void, and should be disregarded by the court, because no right can be predicated thereon by the lawful heirs of Shank. The heirs of Shank maintain that the decree is not void, that there was no defect as to the party plaintiff, and that the guardian had the legal right to maintain the action for divorce. The statutes of this state on the subject of divorce and guardianship are referred to in argument as sustaining this view. It is unnecessary to cite the sections of the Code relied upon by counsel. They contain no such authority, neither expressly nor by implication. On the contrary, we think upon occurred while the defendant was insane and mentally incapable of knowing what she did. Wertz v. Wertz, 43 Iowa, 534.

In Wertz v. Wertz, supra, Douglas v. Douglas, 31 Iowa, 423, supra, III., was distinguished upon the ground that there the cause for divorce was desertion which commenced during the time the defendant was sane.

The intent and motive of a party are a necessary ingredient of the offense of cruelty and barbarous treatment and indignities to the person endangering life or health as a ground for divorce, and such intent cannot be held to exist where legal insanity is established. Hansell v. Hansell, 3 Pa. Dist. R. 724.

And proof of insanity at the time of the commission of the acts is admissible as a defense to an action for divorce by a wife against her husband for cruelty and barbarous treatment and indignities to the person. Ibid.

In Hansell v. Hansell, supra, Matchin v. Matchin, 3 Pa. 332, supra, II., a, was distinguished upon the ground that in that case the divorce was sought for adultery of the wife and the relief granted was based solely upon the nature of the offense and the public necessity of preserving the purity of issue.

So, the fact that the wife is insane and intends to do bodily violence to her husband furnishes no answer to a claim on her part for a restitution of conjugal rights, as the husband is not entitled to turn her out of doors because insane, but is rather bound to place her in proper custody and under proper care. Hayward v. Hayward, 18 Wash. & T. 81.

And a responsive allegation on the part of a wife in a proceeding for restitution of conjugal rights, admitting that she had been insane but asserting her recovery, and denying the facts upon which the husband relied to show continuance of insanity, may be admitted to proof where the husband alleges the wife's insanity and a morbid hatred toward him which rendered cohabitation unsafe. Ibid.

And a divorce will not be granted against a wife on the ground of cruel treatment because of the charge against her husband that he was attempting to poison her where there was no evidence that the charge was prompted by any desire to injure him, and from the evidence the theory that the fears of poisoning expressed by her were the result of a temporary aberration of the mind produced by sickness was as reasonable as any other. Sapp v. Sapp, 71 Tex. 348.

So, acts of violence committed by a husband toward his wife, provoked by and consisting mainly of resistance on his part of attempts by her to take morphine from him while he was in a state of total or partial delirium produced by its use, does not constitute extreme or repeated cruelty within 1 Ill. Rev. Stat. chap. 40, § 1, making it a ground for divorce, especially where the divorce was originally sought on the ground of habitual drunkenness and specific charges of cruelty were added only when it became apparent that the divorce would not be granted on the ground of drunkenness. Youngs v. Youngs, 120 Ill. 280, 6 L. R. A. 548.

And in Avery v. Avery, 33 Kan. 1, 33 Am. Rep. 523, a divorce granted for extreme cruelty of the husband was upheld upon the ground that there was no excuse for his conduct unless he was non compos mentis, and that the trial court from the findings must have considered him of sound mind.

But to establish insanity as a defense in an action for divorce for cruel and barbarous treatment and indignities to the person endangering life or health, the defendant must have been in such a mental condition as to deprive him of the use of his reason to the extent that he did not know right from wrong and was incapable of willing the one or the other. Hansell v. Hansell, 3 Pa. Dist. R. 724.

And violent acts upon the part of a husband toward his wife while laboring under a state of cerebral excitement arising from the fatigues and anxieties of business while he was not an irresponsible agent, attended with a liability of a recurrence of ungovernable passion and cerebral excitement, which would render cohabitation unsafe for his wife, is a ground for a decree of judicial separation. Martin v. Martin, 6 Week. Rep. 367.

The existence of a mere insane delusion would not appear to be sufficient as an excuse for cruelty as a ground of divorce.

Thus, a wife is entitled to alimony and a separate support out of the estate of her husband where he maltreats her because of an insane delusion as to her, rendering living with him insupportable and unsafe, where he is capable of managing his estate and discharging all of his duties towards everyone else. Smith v. Smith, 33 N. J. Eq. 458.

And the accusation by a husband that his wife had been guilty of the crime of incest, together, with slight acts of violence though not very hurtful, is sufficient to constitute cruelty and inhuman treatment which will justify a divorce, and the fact that the accusation was prompted by an insane delusion on his part is no defense. Ibid.

So, in Booland v. Booland, 4 Wash. 118, a divorce that they plainly imply that such a proceeding is not authorized. Section 2222 of the Code requires that the petition for divorce "must be verified by the oath of the plaintiff." It is true that this requirement is not jurisdictional. See McCraney v. McCraney, 5 Iowa, 282, 68 Am. Dec. 702; Ellis v. White, 61 Iowa, 644. But the fact that the statute requires the oath of the plaintiff, and provides for no substituted verification, as in other cases, tends strongly to show that the legislative intent was that an action for divorce should be prosecuted by the injured party, in his or her personal capacity. Other features of the statute are called to our attention, which, it is urged, indicate the legislative intent that the guardian of an insane person may maintain an action for divorce. We do not regard it as necessary to discuss that line of argument. We think that the want of such authority is so apparent as to leave no reasonable ground for debate. It was held in Douglass v. Douglass, 31 Iowa, 421, that, where a husband wilfully deserted his wife while he was sane, she was entitled to a divorce, notwithstanding he became insane during the statutory period of two years. And in Wertz v. Wertz, 43 Iowa, 537, it was held that insanity occurring after marriage does not constitute ground for divorce. These cases do not control the question now under consideration. It is true that in the Douglass Case a divorce was allowed against a party who was insane when the decree was entered. But the cause for divorce had its inception while the party was sane. It may further be said that the question whether the action may be maintained where the defend-was sustained on a charge against a husband of cruelty in maliciously and publicly charging his wife with adultery and other offenses, notwithstanding that the court had the impression from his actions and testimony that he was perhaps unbalanced in his mind on the two subjects of religion and the unfaithfulness of his wife.

The question whether the insanity of a husband will excuse acts of cruelty for which a divorce is asked depends upon whether he is capable of understanding the nature and consequences of the acts charged, at the time when they were committed, and whether he committed them in a fit of mental aberration not directly or immediately caused by drink. Hanbury v. Hanbury [1892] P. 233.

V. The defense.

The rule was adopted by some of the early English cases that an action for divorce could not be allowed to proceed against an insane person. See Bawden v. Bawden, Mordaunt v. Mordaunt, and King v. King, supra, II., a. But these cases were either reversed or overruled, and the practice would now seem to be universal to permit the action to proceed under proper restrictions, leaving the defense to the guardian committee or the next friend of the lunatic respondent.

Thus, an action for a divorce or separation is a civil action, and not a criminal suit or proceeding which cannot be instituted or carried on while the accused is a lunatic. Mordaunt v. Monoreiffe, 43 L. J. Mat. N. S. 49, 30 L. T. N. S. 649, 22 Week. Rep. 12, L. R. 2 H. L. (Sc.) 374.

And the fact that insanity may preclude an effectual defense in an action for divorce must be regarded as a misfortune resulting from the respondent's condition, and not as affecting the petitioner's right to sue. Baker v. Baker, L. R. 5 Prob. Div. 142, 49 L. J. Prob. N. S. 49, 43 L. T. N. S. 332, 28 Week. Rep. 630.

See also Rathbun v. Rathbun, and Stratford v. Stratford, supra, II., a.

Defense by guardian is provided for by statute in Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Thus, if at any time during the pendency of a suit for divorce the respondent is insane, whether such insanity began before or since the filing of the libel, the defense may be conducted by a guardian appointed by the probate court under the Massachusetts statute, or if there is no such guardian by one appointed by the court in which the libel is pending, and if upon the hearing a sufficient cause is shown a divorce may be decreed. Garnett v. Garnett, 114 Mass. 379, 19 Am. Rep. 309.

And the appointment of a guardian ad litem to appear and answer for the respondent in a divorce case, under Mass. Rev. Stat. chap. 70, § 18, providing, that if the respondent is insane at any time 34 L. R. A.

during the pendency of the suit the court shall appoint some suitable person as a guardian, is in the nature of an interlocutory decree or judgment, and is prima facie evidence of the fact of insanity in any subsequent stage of the case. Little v. Little, 13 Gray, 264.

And the complainant in a divorce case is rendered incompetent as a witness under the exception to Mass. Stat. 1867, chap. 305, § 1, providing that when one of the original parties to a cause of action is shown to be insane the other shall not be admitted to testify in his own favor where a guardian has been appointed for the other party and there is no proof to rebut the prima facie case of insanity thereby established. Ibid.

So, the counsel for the defendant in an action for divorce may be admitted to plead in her name upon his suggestion that she was insane. Broadstreet v. Broadstreet, 7 Mass. 474.

As to the Rhode Island statute, see Thayer v. Thayer, 9 R. I. 377, infra, VI.

An action for divorce should not be tried, however, against one whose reason has been dethroned, and who is thus rendered incapable of making answer to a charge or aiding counsel in the conduct of her defense, until at least a reasonable time is allowed for her recovery and restoration. Stratford v. Stratford, 32 N. C. 397.

And a default in an action for divorce on the ground of adultery will be opened and further proceedings stayed on suggestion that since the commission of the offense the defendant had become insane, unless the appointment of a guardian for him is procured, who might appear for him in the action. Mansfield v. Mansfield, 13 Mass. 412.

Parol evidence to establish that the wife was never ascertained to be a lunatic by judicial finding, and that she was confined in an asylum by her husband in a state other than that of his residence, and that she was there in obedience to his command and subject to his control at the time of the institution of the action for divorce by him and when the judgment was rendered, is admissible in a collateral proceeding for the purpose of avoiding the effect of the judgment. Newcomb v. Newcomb, 13 Bush, 544, 25 Am. Rep. 222.

VI. Actions on behalf of insane persons.

The rule adopted by the American cases in which the question is not affected by statutes is that of the principal case, that the marriage relation depends on the free and voluntary consent and the active and affirmative will of the parties, and a guardian of an insane person has no more right to maintain an action to dissolve the marriage relation of his ward than he has to manage and control his will in the matter of entering into the relation.

Thus, the right to sue for a divorce is strictly a personal one of the party aggrieved, and the guarant is insane involves materially different considerations than in a case where the person in whose behalf the action is sought to be maintained is a guardian of an insane person. The marriage contract, by which two persons assume the relation of husband and wife for their joint lives, is a personal status or condition entered into by the parties alone. No guardian or parent or next friend can, by any means known to the law, effectuate a marriage between his ward or child and another. The relation depends upon the free and voluntary consent, and the active and affirmative will, of the parties. And it appears to us that a guardian of an insane person has no more right to maintain an action to dissolve the marriage relation of his ward than he has to manage and control his will in the matter of entering into the relation. The wrongs which may be committed by a husband or wife are not, of themselves, sufficient to dissolve the bonds of matrimony. The injured party, if insane, may, upon recovering his or her reason, condone the wrong, or continue the marriage relation notwithstanding the delinquencies of the other party. If Anthony Shank had recovered his reason, and upon returning to his home found that his wife had committed adultery, and was the mother of an illegitimate child, it would have been his right to condone the wrong, or put her away by an action for divorce. In the absence of some statutory authority, no other person could exercise that right for him. As he was insane, and never restored to sanity, dian or next friend of the insane wife without lucid intervals cannot of his own will institute such a suit which can only be maintained by the exercise of her intelligent will. Worthy v. Worthy, 38 Ga. 45, 91 Am. Dec. 753.

A divorce will not be granted on a bill filed against the husband in the name of his wife by another, where she was insane at the time and incapable of giving any consent to the filing of the bill, whether it was advised and done by friends, relatives, or others. Bradford v. Abend, 89 Ill. 73, 31 Am. Rep. 67.

And an action for divorce and alimony or for alimony alone cannot be brought and maintained by the guardian of an insane woman against her husband. Birdzell v. Birdzell, 38 Kan. 453, 52 Am. Rep. 539.

Whether a party who is entitled to a divorce shall commence proceedings to procure it or not is a personal matter resting solely with the injured party, and it requires an intelligent recollection on the part of such party to commence the proceedings, which cannot be had from an insane person. Ibid.

An insane wife having lucid intervals, who during such an interval directs suit for a divorce to be brought, should bring it in her own name without appearance by next friend. Worthy v. Worthy, supra.

And evidence that a woman was an inmate of an insane asylum for nearly two years, when she was discharged in an improved condition but not well, does not establish that she was so insane as to be incompetent to maintain an action for divorce commenced nearly four years after. Ellis v. White, 61 Iowa, 644.

So, the rule that the question of insanity can only be raised by a plea in abatement in the original suit does not apply in proceedings brought by another in the name of the wife against her husband for divorce where there were grounds upon which fraud would be presumed and her mental condition was such that she could not know that the bill had been exhibited in her name. Bradford v. Abend, supra.

And fraud will be presumed where a bill was filed for divorce in the name of the wife by a person claimed to be her next friend when she was insane and incapable of giving consent to the filing of the bill and confined in an asylum in another state and on the same day the defendant entered his appearance and his answer was filed and the cause tried and a decree of divorce pronounced, whether there was any fraud in fact or not. Ibid.

Under Mass. Rev. Stat. chap. 76, § 12, however, a libel for divorce may be filed and prosecuted in behalf of an insane person, either by the guardian of the party or by a next friend appointed by the court for that purpose. Garnett v. Garnett, 114 Mass. 379, 69 Am. Rep. 369.

34 L. R. A.

And the court may properly grant a divorce on a petition of the guardian of an insane person in a case of desertion, where there is no suggestion that the insanity of the plaintiff is temporary or that she is likely at any time to be in such a condition of mind that her wishes and feelings can be ascertained, and there are no children, and the defendant does not appear. Cowan v. Cowan, 139 Mass. 377.

The court, upon a representation made to it in a divorce case either by a party thereto or another, that the plaintiff is insane, may take notice of such representation, and make the necessary preliminary examination as to such fact in such manner as it may deem proper, and decide in its discretion whether a preliminary inquiry as to sanity is required, with a view to secure a proper administration of justice and the rights of all the parties, and direct what mode shall be adopted to ascertain the facts as to the alleged incapacity, and if such incapacity is established to the satisfaction of the court it will appoint a guardian ad litem to conduct the case. Denny v. Denny, 8 Allen, 811.

And no person should be selected as guardian ad litem for an insane person in an action for divorce who may be adverse in feeling or interest to the party, but one should be selected who will faithfully protect such party's rights and interests. Ibid.

But the difficulty of ascertaining the real facts in a divorce case when either party is incapable of testifying or of instructing counsel because of insanity requires the court to proceed with the utmost caution, especially when the object of the suit is to obtain a complete dissolution of the marriage without the intelligent consent of the complainant. Garnett v. Garnett, supra.

And the agreement of guardians or of counsel in a divorce case in which the parties are insane to submit the case for a final determination upon an imperfect statement of the facts cannot relieve the court of the responsibility of considering what course public policy and the best interests of the parties require to be pursued. Ibid.

And the fact that while both parties were of sound mind a divorce in et, which is substantially equivalent to a divorce from bed and board, was obtained, does not require the court as a matter of course to enter an absolute decree of divorce from the bonds of matrimony after either or both of the parties have become insane. Ibid.

And the fact that a married woman consulted counsel with reference to a divorce previous to her commitment to an insane asylum by her husband, and afterwards brought an action therefor, does not entitle her to a discharge on habeas corpus, where it appears that the asylum was well managed and that she was subject to no unnecessary or unusual restraint or improper treatment, and her remaining there would tend to promote her recovery. Denny v. Tyler, 3 Allen, 225.

the circuit court had no jurisdiction to entertain an action for divorce, commenced in his behalf by his guardian. Birdzell v. Birdzell, 33 Kan. 433, 52 Am. Rep. 539; Worthy v. Worthy, 36 Ga. 45, 91 Am. Dec. 758; Bradford v. Abend, 89 Ill. 78, 81 Am. Rep. 67; 2 Bishop, Mar. & Div. § 806a.

Counsel for appellants, so far as the question of jurisdiction depends on authority, rely mainly on the case of Baker v. Baker, L. R. 6 Prob. Div. 12. It is to be conceded that the English law of divorce is much like our own statute, and that in the cited case it was held that a guardian of an insane person might maintain an action for divorce in behalf of his ward. We have given the case a careful examination, and have to say that we can not bring ourselves to approve the rule therein announced.

8. We come now to a consideration of the question as to the effect or force of the decree for divorce, under the admitted facts of the case. We have found that the decree was void. It has often been said that a void judgment is no judgment; that it may be attacked directly or collaterally. Freeman, in his work on Judgments, uses this language: "A void judgment is, in legal effect, no judgment. By it no rights are divested. From it no rights can be obtained. Being worthless in itself, all proceedings founded upon it are equally worthless. It neither binds nor bars anyone. All acts performed under it, and all claims flowing out of it, are void." This is true, in a general sense; yet, notwithstanding, a party to such a judgment may voluntarily perform it, by paying the amount adjudged against him, and, when paid, no inquiry will be made as to the validity of the judgment; or he may perform the acts required by a void decree, or accept its benefits, and thereby estop himself from questioning the decree. In other words, a party to a void judgment or decree may be estopped from attacking it either directly or indirectly. Suppose a judgment is for a money demand, justly due, and the record shows that it was rendered without having jurisdiction of the person of the defendant by the service of process upon him, and he voluntarily satisfies the judgment. That is an end of the controversy. In the case of Arthur v. Israel, 15 Colo. 147, 10 L. R. A. 683, the wife, without cause, deserted her husband and home, and lived for years in adultery, and afterwards learned that a divorce had been procured by her deserted husband; and she caused a marriage ceremony to be performed with her paramour, and continually lived and cohabited with him until the death of her husband. It was held that she could not take advantage of the fact that the decree of divorce was void for want of service of process, and successfully

An action for divorce cannot be maintained by the guardian of a spendthrift on his behalf, however, against the spendthrift's wife. Winslow v. Winslow, 7 Mass. 96.

So, under the Rhode Island statute a lunatic or a person non compos mentis is duly represented in a petition for divorce by the person who being authorized by statute petitions in his behalf, and personal notice to him of the pendency of the petition, though sometimes expedient, is not necessary where he is a minor without means and the petition is preferred by his father. Thayer v. Thayer, 9 R. I. 377.

And an application for an order, in an action for divorce prosecuted by a next friend of the lunatic, to produce such lunatic in court at the time of the trial of the petition, will be refused, at least until the court can determine upon the trial whether his presence is desirable or necessary. Ibid.

And an allowance, under R. I. Rev. Stat. chap. 157, § 16, empowering the supreme court to make an allowance to the wife out of the estate of the husband to prosecute or defend a petition for divorce or separate maintenance where she has no property of her own, must be made out of the estate of the husband, and not out of that of his next friend, where he is insane and prosecutes his petition by next friend. Ibid.

In England the contrary rule has been adopted irrespective of statutory provisions.

Thus, proceedings for divorce are civil, and though no provision for the case of lunatics is contained in the statute, recourse must be had in such case to the ordinary forms of civil courts where lunatics are litigants. Baker v. Baker, L. R. 5 Prob. Div. 142, 49 L. J. Prob. N. S. 49, 42 L. T. N. S. 332, 28 Week. Rep. 630.

There is no difference between cases of lunatic petitioners and lunatic respondents in actions for divorce, on the question of the right to prosecute or defend by committee. Ibid.

And the argument that the right to sue for divorce is personal and cannot be exercised by anyone but the person wronged is equally applicable to suits for judicial separation, which it is conceded may be maintained on behalf of lunatics. Ibid, dictum.

And the insanity of a husband or wife is not a bar to a suit by the committee of one of them who is a lunatic for the dissolution of the marriage. Baker v. Baker, L. R. 5 Prob. Div. 142, 49 L. J. Prob. N. S. 49, 42 L. T. N. S. 332, 28 Week. Rep. 630, Affirmed in L. R. 6 Prob. Div. 12, 49 L. J. Prob. N. S. 83.

It is not necessary to resort to a lord chancellor for the purposes of permission to institute proceedings by the committee of a lunatic on his behalf against the lunatic's wife for divorce in the consistory court which is bound to entertain the suit when the committee has determined to bring it. Parnell v. Parnell, 2 Phillim. 158.

And an allegation in an action for divorce brought by the committee of a lunatic, that there is no present prospect of his recovery, is sufficient, though it was not alleged that he was incurably insane or that he could not recover within a reasonable time. Baker v. Baker, L. R. 5 Prob. Div. 142, 49 L. J. Prob. N. S. 49, 42 L. T. N. S. 332, 28 Week. Rep. 630.

So, the committee of a lunatic may institute proceedings on his behalf against his wife for divorce for adultery. Parnell v. Parnell, supra; Woodgate v. Taylor, 2 Swab. & T. 512, 30 L. J. Mat. N. S. 197, 5 L. T. N. S. 112.

And the committee of a lunatic plaintiff may sue for adultery though the wife might in such suit plead recrimination by way of defense, thus putting the lunatic husband in the condition of the respondent. Parnell v. Parnell, 2 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 169.

The question whether an action for divorce on behalf of the lunatic should be brought by the committee of his estate or the committee of his person is within the discretion of the lords justices, and as the litigation involves the liability to costs the suit may well be instituted by the committee of the estate. Baker v. Baker, L. R. 5 Prob. Div. 142, 49 L. J. Prob. N. S. 49, 42 L. T. N. S. 332, 28 Week. Rep. 630, Affirmed in L. R. 6 Prob. Div. 12, 49 L. J. Prob. N. S. 83.

F. H. B.

assert against the heirs her right under the statute to the estate of the deceased husband, as his widow. The case at bar presents more cogent reasons for the application of the doctrine of estoppel. In this case the wife was not ignorant of the application for divorce, when it was made. She was made a party, and appeared in the action; and after the decree was entered she accepted the alimony which she agreed to receive, and procured a license, and married her paramour, long before the death of Anthony Shank. She accepted all the benefits of the decree, without reserve, and recognized its validity by contracting and consummating a marriage with Mohler. There could have been no more complete acceptance of the benefit of the decree. In the cited case, the court said: "We discover, upon principle, no sufficient reason why petitioner's conduct in the premises should not produce just as effective an estoppel as if she had received the proceeds of a void judgment for money. By her subsequent marriage with Israel during Arthur's lifetime, she accepted so far as was within her power the benefits or privileges of the divorce decreed. The fact that she did not then know that those decrees were void is a matter of no more consequence than is the ignorance, in this respect, of one who, knowingly in all other particulars receives the fruits of an ordinary void judgment at law. That at the time of her marriage with Israel she understood the decrees to be valid, is, if true, only an additional earnest of her acquiescence in the result, and sincerity in accepting and taking advantage of the benefits supposed to follow. Besides, had she believed them void, her obliquity would be even deeper than it is; because to her other alleged offenses would be added that of intentional fraud upon Israel, who may have thought that he was contracting a valid marriage." In Ellis v. White, 61 Iowa, 644, where plaintiff procured a divorce and alimony upon a petition which she afterwards claimed did not give the court jurisdiction, it was held that, whether the court had or had not jurisdiction, she, having accepted the benefits of the decree, could not be heard to question the jurisdiction of the court to render it. The same principle is announced in Prater

v. Prater, 87 Tenn. 78, and in Odiorno's Appeal, 54 Pa. 175, 93 Am. Dec. 688. And a like rule is to be found in the cases of Stephens v. Stephens, 51 Ind. 542; Yorston v. Yorston, 32 N. J. Eq. 495; Richeson v. Simmons, 47 Mo. 20; Baily v. Baily, 44 Pa. 274; Bourne v. Simpson, 9 B. Mon. 454.

This exception to the doctrine that a judgment or decree entered without jurisdiction is absolutely void is founded upon the plainest principles of justice. As applied to the case at bar, it is but the enforcement of the legal maxim that the law will not permit a person to take advantage of his own wrong. We can discover no reason why Mrs. Mohler should be allowed to masquerade in a court of justice as the widow of Anthony Shank, and at the same time claim that she was the wife of Mohler for about eight years before Shank died. Both the law and good morals forbid it. Having accepted the divorce as valid, in the way she did, she should be held to be estopped from maintaining any claim to any part of the estate of her former husband. The conclusion we have reached in this case on the question of estoppel is not directly supported by decisions of this court, but it appears to us that it is in harmony with modern legislation upon the relation of husband and wife. See chap. 2, title 15, of the Code. The rights of a wife in her property, and her capacity to contract with reference thereto, are plainly conferred upon her. Section 2218 is as follows: "Contracts may be made by a wife, and liabilities incurred, and the same enforced by or against her to the same extent and in the same manner as if she were unmarried." She cannot enter into a contract to divorce herself from her husband. But we discover no reason why the law of estoppel may not be applied to her acts in a case like this.

The decree in the suit in equity, and the order sustaining the claim for a distributive share in the estate, are reversed.

Deemer, J., took no part in the decision of this case.

Rehearing denied.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT.

J. Z. LONG et al.

v.

H. L. HARVEY et al., Appts.

(177 Pa. 478.)

1. A majority of the members of an absolutely independent congregation cannot exercise the authority to remove officers whose terms are indefinite, except by acting in compliance with the rules and discipline of the church.
2. A meeting held by a majority of the members of an independent congregation of the "Disciples of Christ," which was presided over by a clergyman of another congregation and held under a call directed by a tribunal of the elders of sister congregations to whom the majority appealed, and which was held in front of the church because the elders belonging to the minority had closed and locked its doors, when the laws or rules of the church do not provide for such proceeding, was wholly without authority to depose the old officers or elect new ones, but their remedy is by assertion of their rights as members of the congregation.

NOTE.—As to the power of a local church society to withdraw from the general body of a church, see Fuchs v. Meisel (Mich.) 32 L. R. A. 92.

34 L. R. A.

(October 5, 1894.)

A PPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas for Centre County in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to enjoin defendants from exercising the offices of trustees and elders of the Church of the Disciples of Christ at Howard and from interfering with plaintiffs' right to control the property. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Ira C. Mitchell and C. P. Hewes, for appellants:

The laws of the ecclesiastical body will be recognized and enforced by the civil courts when not in conflict with the Constitution and laws of the state.

Twigg v. Treacy, 104 Pa. 498; Krecker v. Shirey, 168 Pa. 551, 29 L. R. A. 476.

In church organizations those who adhere and submit to the regular order of the church are the true congregation.

Winebrenner v. Colder, 48 Pa. 244; Schnorr's Appeal, 67 Pa. 188, 5 Am. Rep. 415; Kerr v. Trego, 47 Pa. 292; Roshi's Appeal, 69 Pa. 462, 8 Am. Rep. 275.

The power of the majority, as well as that of the minority, is bound by the discipline.

Krecker v. Shirey, 168 Pa. 547, 29 L. R. A. 476; McAuley's Appeal, 77 Pa. 397; Landis's Appeal, 102 Pa. 467; O'Hara v. Stack, 90 Pa. 477; Schlichter v. Keiter, 156 Pa. 119, 22 L. R. A. 161.

The right of possession of church property is joint only.

Liederkrane Singing Soc. v. Germania Turnverein, 168 Pa. 265.

Mr. Wilbur F. Reeder, for appellees:

In a church or other unincorporated association where a meeting is duly announced for a certain purpose, and the congregation assembled in their associate capacity in pursuance of such an announcement, a majority of those present may act and the action or decision of those present by a majority vote shall be binding and conclusive on the society or association.

Trustees of a church hold their possession as a fiduciary possession for the benefit of all the members, and they may be dispossessed by the election of others in their places.

Where there is no rule or by-law fixing the term of office the tenure thereof is subject to the will, control, and discretion of the appointing power, and the power that appoints or elects may depose or remove at will.

Shortz v. Unangst, 8 Watts & S. 45; Unangst v. Shortz, 5 Whart. 506; Henry v. Deitrich, 84 Pa. 286; Craig v. First Presby. Church, 88 Pa. 42, 32 Am. Rep. 417.

Those who remain away cannot complain.

Shortz v. Unangst, 8 Watts & S. 52.

A majority may control and direct any other matters consistently with the particular and general laws of the organism or denomination to which they belong.

McGinnis v. Watson, 41 Pa. 9; Suttler v. First Reformed Dutch Church, 42 Pa. 503.

The members in good standing before the difficulty arose who are desirous of adhering to the congregation and order are entitled to vote.

Winebrenner v. Colder, 48 Pa. 244.

The only constitutional method by which a 34 L. R. A. congregation can express itself is by congregational meetings regularly held.

McAuley's Appeal, 77 Pa. 397.

There is a distinction between a corporate act to be done by a definite or indefinite number of persons. In the former a majority of the whole body must be present to act; in the second a majority of those who appear may act.

Craig v. First Presby. Church, 88 Pa. 42, 32 Am. Rep. 417.

The decision of ecclesiastical tribunals in all cases on doctrine, order, and discipline are conclusive on the common-law courts.

Skilton v. Webster, Brighly (Pa.) 203; German Reformed Dutch Church v. Com., Seibert, 3 Pa. 282; Henderson v. Hunter, 59 Pa. 335; Watson v. Jones, 80 U. S. 18 Wall. 679, 20 L. ed. 666; McGinnis v. Watson, supra; Bouldin v. Alexander, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 181, 21 L. ed. 69.

Where a charter of a society provides for an offense it directs the mode of proceeding and authorizes the society on conviction of a member to expel him; this expulsion if the proceedings are not irregular is conclusive and cannot be inquired into collaterally by mandamus action or other mode.

Com., Bryan, v. Pike Beneficial Soc. 8 Watts & S. 247.

Dean, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiffs' bill in this case avers as follows: In 1832 a religious association or congregation was organized at Howard, Centre County, Pennsylvania, denominated "Disciples of Christ." At the commencement of these proceedings, it numbered sixty persons, and was not incorporated. One R. C. Leathers made a report to the Pennsylvania conference for the year 1889, that there were but fifteen members in good standing composing the congregation. That this report dropped from the rolls of the congregation a majority of its members, without notice or hearing, and without warrant. On February 7, 1890, the majority appealed to an impartial tribunal (not named), and asked the elders to join in choosing said tribunal, which they (the elders) refused to do. Then a majority of the congregation, acting through a committee, appealed to the elders of a sister church at Eagleville, to hear and determine the complaint which created schism. The elders of the Eagleville church entertained the appeal, and called in elders of the sister congregations of Lock Haven and Williamsport, and together they heard the complaint on June 13, 1890, and rendered a decision, recommending the calling of a meeting of the congregation at Howard on June 25, 1890, following: Due notice of the meeting was given. On the day named, defendants closed and locked the doors of the church, and prevented a meeting in the church. Those members who had complained and appealed then organized a meeting outside and in front of the church, presided over by Rev. Ryan, of Williamsport. At this meeting, J. Z. Long, one of plaintiffs, was elected trustee in place of H. L. Harvey, then a trustee and one of these defendants. N. G. Fletcher, theretofore and then a trustee, and one of plaintiffs, was approved, as was also A. J. Gardner, one of defendants. A. J. Gardner, and R. C. Leathers were deposed as elders, and the congregation, for the time being, was placed under the supervision and jurisdiction of the elders at Eagleville and Lock Haven. Notwithstanding their deposition, the old board of trustees continued to act, and the old board of elders persisted in holding on to their offices, and by force and violent demeanor, prevented the elders of Eagleville and Lock Haven churches from assuming and exercising the jurisdiction and supervision conferred upon them by the 25th of June meeting, and persisted, by force and threats, to debar a majority of the congregation from engaging in worship in the church. That the 25th of June meeting was constituted and held by competent authority of the denomination, and all its proceedings were regular under the usages of the church, and that the exercise of authority by defendants was wrongful. The prayers for relief were that Harvey, the two Gardners, and Leathers be enjoined from acting as trustees or elders, and from preventing Long and Pletcher from assuming the offices to which they had been elected, and that they be further enjoined from preventing the elders of Eagleville and Lock Haven from assuming supervision of the congregation; and, further, that they and each of them be enjoined from excluding a majority of the congregation from worshipping in the church. The answer of defendants denies that those who appealed, called on the elders of the Eagleville and Lock Haven churches, and held the meeting of 25th of June, are a majority of the congregation; on the contrary, they aver that they compose but a small minority; that O. T. Noble and A. M. De Haas, neither of them members of the congregation, but acting as a committee for the meeting, attempted to take possession of the church property, and turn it over to the minority composing the meeting thus ousting the regular organization, and putting a wholly irregular one in control. They admit they resisted this unauthorized interference. They further aver that one Rev. W. L. Hayden, of Bellefonte, came with the sheriff at the hour of public worship, on the 10th of August following the meeting, and read a lecture or proclamation to them, commanding them to surrender possession of the church to the minority, which they refused to do. They further aver that the action of the 25th of June meeting, with the elders of the churches of Eagleville and Lock Haven, and clergymen from other congregations, was wholly unauthorized, and unknown to the rules and discipline of the church; that there exists no other power to adjust differences in a Disciples congregation than the elders and the congregation, and the congregation alone can depose officers duly elected; that this was a regular and fully organized congregation, with a duly elected pastor, Rev. G. W. Headley; that the defendants, the duly elected officers, representing a majority of the congregation, do not exclude any, but invite all the members to worship in said church. They therefore pray that the bill be dismissed, at plaintiff's costs. The court appointed the late D. S. Keller, Esq., master to report facts and suggest a decree. He took much testimony, and heard full argument by counsel, but died before reporting to the court. Clement Dale, Esq., was appointed in his stead, who, without hearing the argument, made report. He suggested for decree that defendants be enjoined from acting as officers, or otherwise interfering with the occupation of the church, and that some person be appointed to give two weeks' notice of a congregational meeting of the members now in good standing, for the purpose of electing two elders, three deacons, and three trustees, to serve for two years, and thereafter the elections to be conducted according to the usages of the church; the same person appointed to give notice to preside at the election, after the election, the terms of present incumbents' office to end. The president judge approved the report of the master, made in substance the decree suggested by him, and appointed one A. M. De Haas, one who sided with plaintiffs, to give notice and preside at the meeting of the congregation. The two associate judges filed a dissenting opinion, dismissing the bill, at the costs of plaintiffs. We have before us now the appeal from the decree of the president judge awarding the injunction.

Our power of adjudication in disputes between warring church parties is limited. In such cases we can look into the rules of a church organization only to ascertain the church law, and, if that be not in conflict with the law of the land, all we can do is to protect the rights of parties under the law they have made for themselves. Our Brother Williams has so fully discussed this subject, and so clearly stated the rules that must govern courts in such litigation, in the late case of Krecker v. Shirley, 163 Pa. 551, 29 L. R. A. 476, that we need not repeat them.

Each party here claims to be a majority. When this trouble arose, the defendants were in office. Presumably, they were put there by a majority, and there is no evidence even offered to rebut this presumption. It is admitted that their term of office was indefinite, and they could only be deposed by a majority of the members. Assuming that a majority of the members demand the removal of these officers, what method should they legally adopt to effect their purpose? The law is settled that it must be done in compliance with the rules and discipline of the church. "A majority of the church organization may direct and control church matters consistently with the particular and general laws of the organism or denomination to which it belongs, but not in violation of them." Sutter v. First Reformed Dutch Church, 42 Pa. 503. The master finds as a fact that every Disciples congregation is practically independent. Other congregations of the same denomination may advise, but there is no superior tribunal of appeal. Both parties concede that they recognize no rule of conduct in cases of dispute except the New Testament. Alexander Campbell, the Disciples' greatest preacher, if not their founder, says: "It [the church] knows nothing of superior or inferior church judicatures, and acknowledges no laws, no canons or government, other than that of the Monarch of the universe and its laws." Daniel Sommer an authority in the church, discusses the whole subject; and while he favors an appeal to other churches for advice and aid in allaying church dissensions, he comes to this conclusion: "The question is often asked, Have we no right to appeal from the decision of a church?" Certainly the right of appeal is as free as the air we breathe. For our own justification, we may appeal to one church or a dozen, to one man or a hundred. But among religious people who are strictly congregational in their church government, there is no authority in any tribunal that may be thus selected, especially a tribunal chosen by only one party. The decision of such a tribunal may have a moral weight, but it has no legal authority. There is nothing official about committees, even if mutually chosen. . . . As each family is a separate government by itself, so is each congregation. No other family on earth has a right to come in and dictate to me and my family, and no other congregation on earth has the right to come in and dictate with reference to the affairs of the congregation where I hold my membership." Many other authorities were put in evidence before the master. The decided weight of them tends to establish the rule in this particular denomination that each congregation is absolutely independent of any legal control by any other congregation, or by the clergy or officers of such other congregation. What are the admitted facts here? Against the protests of defendants, delegations from the Eagleville and Lock Haven churches, two ministers, one from Bellefonte and one from Williamsport, met with members of this congregation outside the church, and, by a vote, deposed these defendants, and elected in their places part of these plaintiffs, and approved and continued in office part of them. Where, in the rules of the church organization, exists the semblance of authority for this proceeding? The master does not point it out, and we have failed to find it in the evidence. It is said that Leathers and one of the Gardeners were present at one of the hearings before the 25th of June, and had notice of the meeting. This is denied. But assume it to be true; both objected to the meeting when held, and refused to take part. We decline to consider the arguments bearing on the fairness and desire for peace displayed by the respective parties. Discussion of this subject would neither determine the existence of authority in the meeting, nor the want of it. In the exercise of such a high authority as was attempted here, parties must point us to a clear, "Thus saith our church law." We are of opinion that the meeting of 25th of June was wholly without authority to depose the old officers, or to elect new ones.

But it is asked: "If the members represented by these plaintiffs be in a majority, how shall they obtain the rights of a majority?" We reply: "By exercising them as members of the congregation, and as the majority for more than sixty years has exercised them." The reply to this, perhaps, is: "Those in possession will exclude us from lawful participation in congregational government." We are adverse to assuming that any of the members of this congregation, now that their lawful course of action is pointed out to them, will act with lawlessness; but, if peace among members of a Christian church be impossible, then the courts are open to the wronged members, as members, and such remedy as the law warrants will be afforded. But the courts cannot sustain wholly unlawful attempts to right even wrongs.

The decree of the court below is reversed and set aside, and the bill is dismissed, at costs of plaintiffs.

P. C. WIEST COMPANY

William H. WEEKS et al., Appts.

(177 Pa. 412.)

1. The letters "W. H. W.," printed in script, in white, in a horizontal line, upon a red background, on boxes of confectionery, do not infringe a trademark which, as registered in the United States patent office, is described as the letters "P. C. W." generally arranged to appear as script printed in a horizontal line upon a background of "any suitable color," distinctly stating that other forms of letters may be employed or that they may be differently arranged, and that the essential features are the letters "P. C. W."
2. Similarity in the size and shape of boxes for confectionery, which are obtained from box manufacturers and are sold to the trade without discrimination and known as "stock boxes," will not justify a finding in a trademark case that they were selected for an improper or fraudulent purpose.
3. The use of the same names for varieties of candy, by one who is charged with infringing a trademark, on the boxes of which such names do not form a part, does not sustain a charge of infringement of such trademark, but it can be complained of only as an attempt to represent the goods as those of the other party.

(Mitchell, Dean, and Fell, JJ., dissent.)

(October 5, 1896.)

APPEAL by defendants from a decree of the Court of Common Pleas for Luzerne County in favor of complainant in a suit brought to enjoin defendants from alleged infringement of a trademark alleged to belong to plaintiff. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. G. L. Halsey, Alexander Farnham, and Strawbridge & Taylor for appellants.

Messrs. H. W. Palmer and Niles & Noll, for appellee:

The facts found by the master are briefly:

(a) The labels were calculated to deceive; (b) people were in fact deceived; (c) the defendant's design was to deceive buyers and purchasers, and to enable them to sell their manufactures on the strength of the popularity of the goods of the plaintiffs.

The resemblance between two trademarks must be such that an ordinary purchaser of the goods would be deceived by the similarity between them.

Gilman v. Hunnewell, 123 Mass. 139; Desmond's Appeal, 108 Pa. 126, 49 Am. Rep. 118;

NOTE.—For infringement of trademarks by similarity of the names of articles, see note to Munroe v. Tousey (N. Y.) 14 L. R. A. 245.

McLean v. Fleming, 96 U. S. 245, 24 L. ed. 629; Tillot v. Moore, 6 Hun, 106; Popham v. Cole, 66 N. Y. 60, 23 Am. Rep. 92; Merrimack Mfg. Co. v. Garner, 4 E. D. Smith, 387; Dixon Crucible Co. v. Guggenheim, 7 Phila. 408; Heinz v. Brueckmann, 184 Pa. 495; Morse v. Worrell, 10 Phila. 168.

It is no answer to a suit on a label of this description to assert that the individual parts of the design when separately considered are old or of common right to use.

McLean v. Fleming, supra; Sawyer v. Horn, 1 Fed. Rep. 24; Dixon Crucible Co. v. Guggenheim, 7 Phila. 408, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 831; Carbolite Soap Co. v. Thompson, 25 Fed. Rep. 625; Leclanche Battery Co. v. Western Electric Co. 23 Fed. Rep. 276; Press v. Bachof, 14 Blatchf. 482, Price & S. Trademark Cas. 31; Landreth v. Landreth, 23 Fed. Rep. 41; Wellman & D. Tobacco Co. v. Ware Tobacco Works, 46 Fed. Rep. 280; Shaw Stocking Co. v. Mack, 21 Blatchf. 1; American Solid Leather Button Co. v. Anthony, 15 R. I. 388.

The test of infringement is similarity in general appearance such as would be likely to mislead one in the ordinary course of purchasing the goods.

McLean v. Fleming, supra; Atlantic Mill Co. v. Robinson, 20 Fed. Rep. 217; Gillott v. Esterbrook, 48 N. Y. 874, 8 Am. Rep. 558; Dixon Crucible Co. v. Guggenheim, supra; Liggett & M. Tobacco Co. v. Hynes, 20 Fed. Rep. 883.

A defendant cannot avoid infringement by using different words and names (Dixon Crucible Co. v. Guggenheim, and Sawyer v. Horn, supra; Hegeman v. O'Byrne, 9 Daly, 264); or by substituting his own name for that of the plaintiff.

Pratt's Appeal, 117 Pa. 401; Menendes v. Holt, 128 U. S. 531, 32 L. ed. 528; Leonard v. White's Golden Lubricator Co. 38 Fed. Rep. 932.

Defendant will be adjudged an infringer if the general effect has been copied, even though the particular trade symbol or trademark be omitted and the defendant's own mark or symbol be substituted.

Royal Baking Powder Co. v. Davis, 26 Fed. Rep. 248; Mozie Nerve Food Co. v. Beach, 38 Fed. Rep. 248; Heinz v. Brueckmann, 184 Pa. 495; Conrad v. Joseph Uhrig Brewing Co. 8 Mo. App. 277; Southern White Lead Co. v. Cary, 25 Fed. Rep. 125; Wellman & D. Tobacco Co. v. Ware Tobacco Works, supra.

It need not be shown that there has been any actual intent to deceive (McLean v. Fleming, supra); or that there has been any actual deception.

Dixon Crucible Co. v. Guggenheim, supra; Johnston v. Orr Ewing, L. R. 7 App. Cas. 219.

Williams, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Monopolies of any sort have never been favorites with the law. They were held by the common law to be against public policy because against common right. The grants, charters, letters-patent, or other form of device or assurance by the sovereign for their creation were declared by the act of Parliament of 21 Jac. I., chap. 8, to be "utterly void and of none effect, and in no wise to be put in use and operation." Nothing short of the "omnipotence of Parliament" is able to exclude a subject from trade in England. 7 Bacon, Abr. p. 38. Two exceptions to this general rule were given by the early text-writers: First, "It seemeth clear that the King may, for a reasonable time, make a good grant to anyone of the sole use of any art invented or first brought into the realm by the grantee." Second. The King may grant to particular persons the sole use of some particular employments, as "of printing the Holy Scriptures and law books," etc. The somewhat curious reason given for the second exception is that an unrestrained liberty to print the books to which it relates might be "of dangerous consequences to the public." To these exceptions a third must now be added, vis., the right of a tradesman to the exclusive use of such signs, words, or symbols as he may have adopted and used in his business to distinguish articles of his own production from all similar articles produced by other persons. These exceptions do not impair the force of the general rule, Exceptio probat regulam de rebus non exceptis. The rule is unrestricted liberty in the practice of all arts and trades, and in the use of the methods by which they are conducted. He who asserts the right to an exclusive privilege in any department of business must bring himself under the protection of some recognized exception to the rule. The plaintiff in this case claims an exclusive privilege under the third exception, vis., the right to the sole use of a certain trademark adopted, used, and registered by them; and they allege that the defendants have adopted and are now using a trademark which is an imitation of, and an infringement upon, their own. It becomes important, therefore, to learn just what the plaintiffs' trademark is, and then to determine whether it has been improperly imitated by the defendants.

In the bill filed in this case the plaintiffs' trademark is fully described, and the precise form in which it is registered in the United States patent office is given as follows: "Our trademark consists of the letters 'P. C. W.' These letters have generally been arranged as shown in the accompanying fac simile, in which they appear as script, printed in a horizontal line, upon a background of any suitable color; but other forms of letters may be employed, or they may be differently arranged, without materially altering the character of our trademark, the essential features of which are the letters 'P. C. W.'" The business of the plaintiffs was the manufacture of confectionery goods, and particularly of that kind of confectionery known as "caramels." The caramels, when finished, were put up in boxes of various sizes and forms, which are manufactured by box makers and sold to the public generally. The plaintiffs had no exclusive right to their use. They were what is known as "stock boxes." When the boxes were filled the particular kind of caramel they contained was indicated by printed slips or labels pasted upon them in some suitable position, and another slip or label was placed on each box having the trademark "P. C. W.," which indicated that the caramels were the genuine production of the plaintiffs' factory. These letters were the initials of the name of P. C. Wiest, and no one but the owner of the name could rightfully use them without authority from him. The trademark of the defendants consisted also of the initials of the founder of the business done by them, W. H. Weeks, and it is described in the answer and in the statement registered in the United States patent office as consisting of the letters "W. H. W.," made in script, in white, on a dark ground." The defendants are engaged in the manufacture of confectionery, and state in answer that their goods include stick candies, toy forms, caramels, and plain confections, candied fruits, leaves, nuts, and the like. These, when prepared for use, are packed in boxes of various sizes and forms, each of which bears a slip or label indicating the variety of confectionery it contains, and another slip or label displaying the trademark, which affords to the purchaser an assurance that the goods one is about to buy are the genuine product of the defendants' establishment.

As a general proposition, the right of W. H. Weeks to the use of his name or initials as a trademark is as clear as that of P. C. Wiest to the use of his name or initials. Hoyt v. Hoyt, 148 Pa. 628, 13 L. R. A. 848. They are not the same. They do not even bear a close resemblance to each other. And the master reached the correct conclusion that there was neither imitation nor infringement shown by the evidence. If the initials had been the same, we do not see how the defendants could have been restrained from using his own; although in that case, we think, there should have been something in the manner of use to distinguish, and enable the public to distinguish, the product of the rival establishments from each other; and it is probable that without it a court of equity would have restrained the second comer. But in a recent case in New York (Chas. S. Higgins Co. v. Higgins Soap Co. 144 N. Y. 462, 27 L. R. A. 42), it was held that the prior use of one's name by other persons in the same business does not destroy the right of him whose name it is to use it. The right to use one's name seems to have been held to be a personal right, as clear in business as in personal correspondence. We have, however, no such question here. The master has recommended, and the court below has issued, an injunction against the defendants restraining them from the use of the letters "W. H. W.," printed in script, in white, in a horizontal line, upon a red background." This decree says to the defendant, "You have a right to your trademark, and may lawfully use it;" but going beyond the claim of the plaintiffs as stated in the bill, it adds, "You must not use the same kind of letters or mode of arrangement or colors used by the plaintiffs." Now, these accessions constitute no part of the plaintiffs' trademark. The description filed in the United States patent office states that the letters are generally used in script, but may be used in any other way. They are put upon a background of "any suitable color," no color whatever being named. If this injunction can be sustained on the ground on which it was put in the court below, there is no style of letter, no mode of arrangement, no color in the solar spectrum, to which the plaintiffs cannot lay equal claim. But, as the plaintiffs themselves say in the description from which we have quoted, "the essential characteristic of our trademark is the letters 'P. C. W.'" Those are what indicate the ownership and origin of the goods, and they carry their assurance to the public without regard to their own shape, arrangement, or color. A tradesman can have no exclusive right to mathematical lines, to styles of printing, or colors.

The master finds that the defendants have adopted boxes and packages quite like those used by the plaintiffs. The same is no doubt true of most of the confectioners in the commonwealth. The boxes and packages are made by box manufacturers to contain an even number of pounds, or fractions of a pound, and are necessarily uniform in size and general appearance. They are made for the trade, and are sold to the trade, without discrimination. The plaintiffs and the defendants have an equal right to buy from the manufacturers, and they must buy boxes of the sizes and shapes made for, and in use by, confectioners generally. The similarity in size and shape of the boxes does not, therefore, justify the master in finding that they were selected for an improper or fraudulent purpose; for the size and shape of the boxes are determined by the makers, and fixed upon with a view to the accommodation of the largest number of purchasers.

The other circumstance to which the master refers as justifying his decree is the use of the same names for varieties of candies that the plaintiffs had previously used, and perhaps devised. But one who invents a machine or a new combination, or devises a new article, contributes the result of his skill and his inventive powers to the public if he does not take the necessary step to secure himself an exclusive right to use and vend his invention. If he does not do this, he must not complain if his neighbor appropriates his invention or device to his own use, and enters into competition with him in its production and sale. The ground on which the courts will interfere in such cases is to protect the inventor from the attempt of his neighbor to sell his own work as and for the work of the inventor. This would be enjoined as a fraud upon both the inventor and the public; but, so long as he sells his own work as his own, any man may imitate the unprotected work of any other man as closely as he is able. We think the injunction awarded in this case cannot be sustained upon the findings of the learned master, and should be set aside. If the defendants are really attempting to sell their own confectionery by representing it to the public as the production of the plaintiffs, this, and not an imitation or infringement of the trademark, should be charged in the bill as the ground of relief.

The decree is reversed.

No order is made in relation to costs.

Mitchell, J., dissenting:

This is a perfectly clear case of fraudulent effort of appellants to get a part of plaintiff's trade, by such imitation of his boxes, labels, lettering, coloring, etc., as will deceive and mislead intending purchasers. It is an effort which equity ought to, and usually does, enjoin, without reference to the strict doctrine of trademarks. For this reason I would affirm the decree.

Dean and Fell, JJ., concur.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

Clara H. SPENCER, Appt.,
v.

Peter B. MYERS, Impleaded, etc., Resp't.

(150 N. Y. 202.)

1. The right of a wife to assign a policy of insurance on the life of her husband, under Laws 1879, chap. 248, when the policy is issued for her benefit and the husband gives his written consent, is not limited to policies issued or delivered within the state, but extends to those issued by a foreign company in another state.

2. Stipulations in an insurance policy against assignments cannot avail an assignor when the insurer declines to take advantage of them and pays the money into court.

(October 13, 1898.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Fourth Department, reversing a judgment of the Oneida County Circuit in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover the proceeds of a life insurance policy which defendant claimed under an assignment. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. S. M. Lindale, for appellant:

The foundation for the assignment of the policy was the agreement made October 24, 1887, between the husband and wife, that the wife would upon demand execute a transfer of the policy.

That agreement being a contract directly between husband and wife was void.

Hendricks v. Isaacs, 117 N. Y. 411, 6 L. R. A. 559.

Prior to the legislative acts (Laws 1878, chap. 821, and Laws 1879, chap. 248), a married woman was incapable of assigning a policy of insurance issued upon the life of her husband for her benefit.

Eadie v. Skimmon, 26 N. Y. 9, 82 Am. Dec. 395; Brick v. Campbell, 123 N. Y. 843, 10 L. R. A. 259; Romasie v. Chauncey, 129 N. Y. 574, 14 L. R. A. 712; Miller v. Campbell, 140 N. Y. 457.

Laws of 1878, chap. 821, which provided that a married woman might dispose of such policy "in case she have no child or children born of her body," has no application here, because this plaintiff has a child born of her body yet living.

Laws 1879, chap. 248, is by its express terms applicable to no policies of insurance except those and those only which were "issued within the state of New York."

This policy was not "issued within the state of New York." It was issued at the office of the company in Hartford, Connecticut, and immediately became an effective and binding contract.

Cooper v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co. 7 Nev. 116, 8 Am. Rep. 705.

By its own terms it is a Connecticut contract, executed, delivered, and to be performed in that state.

3 Herman, Estoppel, 710; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 7; MacTier v. Frith, 6 Wend 103; Hallock v. Commercial Ins. Co. 26 N. J. L. 268; Southern L. Ins. Co. v. Kempton, 56 Ga. 339; Yonge v. Equitable L. Assur. Co. 80 Fed. Rep. 902; Shattuck v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 4 Cliff. 598; Cooper v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co. 7 Nev. 116, 8 Am. Rep. 705; Lorscher v. Supreme Lodge K. of H. 72 Mich. 316, 2 L. R. A. 206; Hyde v. Goodnow, 8 N. Y. 286; Western v. Genesee Mut. Ins. Co. 12 N. Y. 258; Milhouse v. Johnson, 21 N. Y. S. R. 882; 1 May, Ins. 3d ed. § 66; Cooke, Life Ins. 43; 1 Bacon, Ben. Soc. & Life Ins. new ed. 538; Bliss, Life Ins. § 370; 1 Biddle, Ins. § 149; Niblack, Acc. Ins. & Ben. Soc. 2d ed. §§ 138, 139.

The statute (Laws 1879, chap. 248), which provides for assignment by wives of policies of insurance for their benefit upon the lives of their husbands, covers by its terms none but policies "issued within the state of New York," and it should be strictly construed.

Brick v. Campbell, 123 N. Y. 843, 10 L. R. A. 259; Miller v. Campbell, 140 N. Y. 460; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Healey, 86 Hun, 530.

Statutes conferring powers and rights upon married women are in derogation of common law, and are to be construed strictly.

23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 389; Bertles v. Nunan, 92 N. Y. 157, 44 Am. Rep. 361; Fitzgerald v. Quann, 109 N. Y. 441.

The courts have strictly limited the scope of the act of 1878 to its precise wording.

Smillis v. Quinn, 90 N. Y. 497; Brick v. Campbell, 123 N. Y. 843, 10 L. R. A. 259; Brummer v. Cohn, 86 N. Y. 17, 40 Am. Rep. 503.

The laws of Connecticut have nothing to do with the assignment which was executed in this state.

Miller v. Campbell, 140 N. Y. 457.

The policy was created without any assignable quality.

Bacon, Ben. Soc. & Life Ins. § 295; Unity Mut. L. Assur. Asso. v. Dugan, 118 Mass. 219; Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Weitz, 99 Mass. 157; Sterens v. Warren, 101 Mass. 564; Warnock v. Davis, 104 U. S. 775, 26 L. ed. 924; Fitzpatrick v. Hartford Life & A. Ins. Co. 56 Conn. 138.

Restrictions in policies as to transfers or assignments are always upheld.

New York L. Ins. Co. v. Flack, 56 Am. Dec. 749, note, citing 1 Phillips, Ins. §§ 107, 207; Smith v. Saratoga County Mut. F. Ins. Co. 1 Hill, 497, 3 Hill, 508; Ferree v. Oxford F. & L. Ins. Co. 67 Pa. 378, 5 Am. Rep. 436; Waterhouse v. Gloucester F. Ins. Co. 69 Me. 409; Lazarus v. Commonwealth Ins. Co. 5 Pick. 76; Stolle v. Aetna F. & M. Ins. Co. 10 W. Va. 546, 27 Am. Rep. 593; Lynde v. Newark F. Ins. Co. 139 Mass. 57.

Equitable considerations are of no moment.

Milhouse v. Johnson, 21 N. Y. S. R. 382

NOTE.—As to assignments of life insurance policies made payable to a wife, see a considerable number of cases in a note to Johnson v. Alexander 34 L. R. A.

(Ind.) 9 L. R. A. 663; also Brick v. Campbell (N. Y. 10 L. R. A. 259, and note.

Frank v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 102 N. Y. 266, 55 Am. Rep. 807; Drummer v. Cohn, 86 N. Y. 11, 40 Am. Rep. 508; Brick v. Campbell, 123 N. Y. 887, 10 L. R. A. 259; Champlin v. Layton, 18 Wend. 412, 31 Am. Dec. 882; Wood v. Wood, 94 N. Y. 248.

Mr. William Kernan, for respondent:

The assignment of the policy by the plaintiff, with the written consent of her husband, to the defendant, Myers, was valid, and the defendant, Myers, was entitled to the policy and is entitled to the proceeds thereof.

Laws 1879, chap. 248, § 1.

In the interpretation of statutes the great principle which is to control is the intention of the legislature in passing the same, which intention is to be ascertained from the cause or necessity of making the statute as well as other circumstances.

People, Wood, v. Lacombe, 99 N. Y. 48; People, Westchester F. Ins. Co., v. Davenport, 91 N. Y. 574; People, Commonwealth Ins. Co., v. Coleman, 121 N. Y. 542.

The policy was issued within the meaning of the act of 1879, "within the state of New York, upon the lives of husbands for the benefit and use of their wives, in pursuance of the laws of the state."

So far as our courts have discussed and passed upon this question, they have sustained such assignment of policies issued by companies of other states and assigned in this state.

Wilson v. Lawrence, 13 Hun, 288, 76 N. Y. 585; Brick v. Campbell, 123 N. Y. 887, 10 L. R. A. 259; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Van Campen, 32 N. Y. S. R. 1125; Miller v. Campbell, 140 N. Y. 457.

Our courts have not held that outside of the act of 1840 such policies are not assignable. They have held that their nonassignability was due to the act itself, that the designs of the act were to provide for widowhood, and the intention was that the wife could not frustrate that design by assignment.

Eadie v. Skimmon, 26 N. Y. 9, 82 Am. Dec. 895; Living v. Domett, 26 Hun, 151; Wilson v. Lawrence, 13 Hun, 288; Barry v. Equitable L. Assur. Soc. 59 N. Y. 587; Drummer v. Cohn, 86 N. Y. 11, 40 Am. Rep. 508; Frank v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 102 N. Y. 266, 55 Am. Rep. 807.

If the plaintiff claims the benefit of the act of 1840 making the policy nonassignable, then she must submit to the act of 1879, which did away with the nonassignability of the policy under the act of 1840 and rendered it assignable.

The assignment of such policy by the wife was allowed by the law of Connecticut and is valid, and the defendant is entitled to the proceeds under such law.

Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Palmer, 42 Conn. 66, 19 Am. Rep. 580; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Westervelt, 52 Conn. 586; Barry v. Equitable L. Assur. Soc. 59 N. Y. 587.

The fact that the husband and wife had a child to whom the insurance was payable in case the wife did not survive the husband did not affect the validity of the assignment. The contingent interest of the child did not arise, and by the assignment the defendant Myers became vested with the whole interest in the policy.

Anderson v. Goldsmidt, 103 N. Y. 618.

84 L. R. A.

The provision in the policy "that no assignment of this policy shall be valid" does not affect the assignment to the defendant Myers. Leinkauf v. Calman, 110 N. Y. 50.

O'Brien, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff claimed to be entitled to the proceeds of a policy of insurance upon the life of her husband, and the learned trial judge sustained her claim. The general term reversed the judgment, having arrived at a different conclusion, upon what seems to us to be a very reasonable construction of a statute which is involved. On the 28th of October, 1880, the plaintiff's husband insured his life for her benefit in the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company. The policy was issued at Hartford, and sent by mail to one of the agents of the company in this state, to be delivered to the husband, who had made the written application upon which it was issued. The insured died in January, 1890, with the policy in force. The plaintiff claimed the money payable under the policy amounting to $2,000, as widow of the insured, and the payee named therein. The defendant also claimed it under a written assignment from the plaintiff, to which her husband, the deceased, had consented in writing executed in due form. Both parties claiming the money, the company refused to pay either, and the plaintiff brought the action against it alone. Subsequently it paid the money into court, and the assignee was made a party. The controversy is, therefore, between the widow and her assignee, and turns upon the validity of the assignment. It is quite true, as urged by the learned counsel for the plaintiff, that prior to the statutes (Laws 1873, chap. 821; Laws 1879, chap. 248) a married woman was incapable of assigning a policy of insurance for her benefit upon the life of her husband. Miller v. Campbell, 140 N. Y. 457; Romains v. Chauncey, 129 N. Y. 574, 14 L. R. A. 712; Brick v. Campbell, 122 N. Y. 848, 10 L. R. A. 259; Eadie v. Skimmon, 26 N. Y. 9, 82 Am. Dec. 895. But the obvious purpose of these statutes was to remove this disability, and it is not contended that the incapacity still exists in general, but only in particular cases. The learned counsel for the plaintiff has devoted a considerable part of his argument to establish the proposition that the policy was issued and delivered in the state of Connecticut, and not in this state, and therefore is a Connecticut contract. For the purposes of this case we will assume that he is correct in this contention. But we think that is not a material circumstance in the determination of the rights of the parties in a controversy between them with respect to the right to receive the money. Such a policy is assignable by the wife under the laws of Connecticut. Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Palmer, 42 Conn. 66, 19 Am. Rep. 580; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Westervelt, 52 Conn. 586; Barry v. Equitable L. Assur. Soc. 59 N. Y. 587. The law of the place where the contract is made is sometimes important when questions concerning its validity or construction are involved. But in this case no such questions arise. The sole question is whether it was transferable, and whether the defendant, by the assignment, has acquired the right and title to the proceeds. Nor is there any question made with respect to the sufficiency of the instrument of assignment, in form and substance, to pass the beneficial interest, if, by the laws of this state, the policy could be transferred under any circumstances. In whatever state or jurisdiction the obligation had its legal origin, it was held within this state as property, and was subject, in all respects, to the laws of this state. The plaintiff's contention must rest entirely upon the proposition that by the laws of this state she was incapable of making a valid assignment, and this we understand to be the ground upon which she relies to sustain this appeal. The act of 1879 (chap. 248) is entitled "An Act for the Relief of Policy Holders in Life Insurance Companies," and the 1st section reads as follows: "All policies of insurance heretofore or hereafter issued within the state of New York upon the lives of husbands for the benefit and use of their wives, in pursuance of the laws of this state, shall be, from and after the passage of this act, assignable by said wife with the written consent of her husband; or, in case of her death, by her legal representatives, with the written consent of her husband, to any person whomsoever, or be surrendered to the company issuing such policy, with the written consent of the husband." That this statute has removed the disabilities of married women to assign insurance policies upon the lives of their husbands, at least to some extent, is not, and of course cannot be, denied. But the learned counsel for the plaintiff insists that it applies only to policies "issued within the state of New York;" that is to say, that it extends no further than to enable them to assign policies issued by our domestic companies; and that, since the policy in question was issued by a foreign company, and in another state, the disability to assign still exists, and existed when the plaintiff made the assignment in question. We think that such a construction of the statute is altogether too narrow. It rests entirely upon a close adherence to the literal meaning of words, and fails to take into consideration the policy and general purpose of the statute. Of course, it was passed for the purpose, as indicated by the title, of relieving married women from the disability referred to. But what good reason is there for saying that the legislature intended, in a case where two policies were issued upon the husband's life for the benefit of the wife, one by a foreign and the other by a domestic company, that the latter was to be transferable and the former not? At the time of the passage of the act probably one half the policies for the benefit of married women within the state had been issued by foreign companies, and they were being constantly issued in the same proportion. It is difficult to suppose any practical or rational purpose that the legislature could have had in view if it intended to remove the disability to assign as to one half these policies and retain it as to the other half. Nor can the purpose of discriminating against foreign companies and favoring our own be imputed to the lawmaking power with any more reason. It must be assumed that the intention of the statute was to make obligations of this character held in this state, wherever created, assignable. It is scarcely possible that the question as to which side of the boundary line of the state the policy was made or delivered could have been present to the legislative mind.

It is said that statutes changing the common law with respect to the rights and disabilities of married women must be strictly construed. That, of course, is a well-settled principle, but is hardly applicable here. That the common law has been changed by the statute, there is no dispute, and can be none. It is admitted that the intention was to remove the incapacity of a married woman to assign an insurance policy issued for her benefit on the husband's life. What is claimed is that the power thus conferred is not generally applicable to all such policies, but special, depending entirely on the place where they were issued,—a circumstance that cannot be supposed to have had any influence upon the legislation or the choice of language for the expression of the thought in the legislative mind. The rule does not require courts in any case to seize upon some word or expression in a statute, and, by giving to them a narrow or literal meaning, defeat the general purpose and manifest policy intended to be promoted. It being conceded that the intention was to enable a married woman to transfer her interest in certain property, we are not required to resort to strict construction for the purpose of limiting the power to obligations created in this state, when we can see that its convenience and necessity are equally applicable to contracts made elsewhere. In such a case we should be guided by the general and well-settled principles for the construction of statutes. They were well stated in the case of People, Wood, v. Lacombe, 99 N. Y. 43, in this language: "In the interpretation of statutes, the great principle which is to control is the intention of the legislature in passing the same, which intention is to be ascertained from the cause or necessity of making the statute as well as other circumstances. A strict and literal interpretation is not always to be adhered to, and where the case is brought within the intention of the makers of the statute, it is within the statute, although by a technical interpretation it is not within its letter. It is the spirit and purpose of a statute which are to be regarded in its interpretation; and if these find fair expression in the statute, it should be so construed as to carry out the legislative intent, even although such construction is contrary to the literal meaning of some provisions of the statute. A reasonable construction should be adopted in all cases where there is a doubt or uncertainty in regard to the intention of the lawmakers. These general rules are upheld by numerous authorities." People, Westchester F. Ins. Co., v. Davenport, 91 N. Y. 574; People, Commonwealth Ins. Co., v. Coleman, 121 N. Y. 542; Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 380. The stipulations in the policy against an assignment do not affect the question as to the defendant's rights. Whatever force these clauses had, the company alone can take advantage of them, and, as it has declined to, and paid the money into court, they do not concern the plaintiff. We think that the assignment of the policy to the defendant is valid under the act of 1879, and he is entitled to the proceeds paid into court.

The judgment should be affirmed, and judgment absolute rendered against the plaintiff, with costs.

All concur, except Martin, J., not sitting.

MINNESOTA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Minnesota, Resp't,

v.

John R. HOWARD, Appt.

(.....Minn.....)

1. Neither a misnomer of a crime, nor the omission to give it any name, in the caption of an indictment, affects the validity of the indictment.

2. An indictment for a statutory offense is sufficient if it alleges the commission of the crime in the words of the statute, if by that means all that is essential to constitute the offense is directly charged. But if the statute does not set forth all of the elements necessary to constitute the offense intended to be punished, an indictment which simply follows the words of the statute is not sufficient. It must in such case allege the particular facts necessary to bring the case within the intent and meaning of the statute.

3. An indictment for the crime of offering a bribe to a juror, under the provisions of Gen. Stat. 1894, § 6348, must directly allege that the person to whom the bribe was offered was a juror, that the defendant knew it, also what was offered, naming it, and the fact that it was of value, and that it was offered with intent to influence the action of the juror as such.

4. Held, that the indictment in this case, which is for offering a bribe to a juror, is not sufficient because it does not directly allege the scienter, or any fact showing that the thing offered to the juror was of value.

(November 23, 1894.)

A PPEAL by defendant from an order of the District Court for Wright County overruling his demurrer to an indictment charging him with bribery. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Rome G. Brown and W. E. Culkin, for appellant:

The indictment is so drawn that on its face it shows that there were no facts or circumstances constituting the crime of bribery of a judicial officer, or bribery of any kind, whereby the indictment is contradictory and false upon its face and insufficient.

It is expressly provided by statute: "The indictment shall be direct and certain as it regards: (1) the party charged; (2) the offense charged; (3) the particular circumstances of the offense charged, when they are necessary to constitute a complete offense."

Minn. Stat. 1894, § 7241.

Bribery is only committed where the thing offered as a bribe is accepted by the person to whom it is offered.

2 Bishop, Crim. L. § 85; State v. Walls, 54 Ind. 561.

An indictment which charges defendant with a criminal offense and fails to set out the acts, facts, and circumstances constituting such offense, or sets out acts, facts, and circumstances consistent with his innocence of the offense charged, is bad.

State v. McIntyre, 19 Minn. 98.

The official character and authority of the person to whom the bribe was offered is not sufficiently stated.

State v. Freeman, 15 Vt. 732; State v. Brown, 12 Minn. 490; State v. Farrington, 59 Minn. 149, 28 L. R. A. 895; State v. Crooker, 95 Mo. 889; State v. Downer, 8 Vt. 424, 30 Am. Dec. 482; State v. Burt, 25 Vt. 378.

To hold this indictment good (to hold that it contains a definite and certain statement of the following facts which are necessary to be true in order to make the act complained of a public offense) it must state:

(1) That Ernest Otto was then and there a regularly impaneled and authorized juror.

(2) That he was such a juror of said court and of the said term of said court.

(3) That he was duly impaneled and was sitting as a part of said court as one of the triors of said cases, and that as such juror the said cases were being tried by and before the said twelve jurors of which he was one.

(4) And that, as such juror so impaneled and sitting as a trior of said cases, he had or was to have under the authority of law some action, vote, opinion, or decision in the determination of the facts and verdict in said cases.

The facts and circumstances connected with the alleged offer are not stated.

Brown v. State, 13 Tex. App. 858.

The statement as to what was caused to be offered and was offered to Otto is insufficient.

Designating the thing offered as a bribe is an insufficient statement of the thing which is offered.

ibid.; People v. Ward, 110 Cal. 369.

The fact of value must be shown on the face of the indictment by proper allegations as to the character of the thing offered.

NOTE.—The decision in the above case as to the insufficiency of the averment of knowledge as to the fact that the person to whom a bribe was offered was a juror, and that the money offered him was of value, is one that has few direct precedents. A 84 L. R. A. considerable number of decisions on the form of an indictment for a statutory offense are found in a note to Com., Allegheny County, v. Weiss (Pa.), 11 L. R. A. 590.

The question of value is an essential element of the crime.

Bishop, Crim. L. § 85; Baker v. Rusk, 15 Q. B. 870; Davy v. Baker, 4 Burr. 2471; 2 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 126.

The general principle in regard to pleadings supports the rule which we contend for.

People v. Ward, 110 Cal. 369; State v. Hinckley, 4 Minn. 845; State v. Tilney, 38 Kan. 714; Barton v. State, 29 Ark. 68; State v. McAnulty, 26 Kan. 588; State v. Anderson, 25 Minn. 66, 33 Am. Rep. 455; Boyle v. State, 37 Tex. 359; United States v. Bornemann, 36 Fed. Rep. 257; Williams v. State, 5 Tex. App. 116; Com. v. McDowell, 1 Browne (Pa.) 360; Markle v. State, 3 Ind. 535.

Knowledge on the part of those offering the bribe is not sufficiently averred.

In bribery cases knowledge is an essential fact which must be expressly alleged and proved.

Whart. Crim. Pl. & Pr. § 164; Bishop, Crim. L. § 85; 2 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 126; Bishop, Directions & Forms, § 246; 2 Whart. Precedents of Indictments & Pleas, 1012, 1013.

Both the knowledge and intent should be specifically stated.

United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 612, 26 L. ed. 1135; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 202, 37 L. ed. 422; Birney v. State, 8 Ohio, 230; Com. v. Stout, 7 B. Mon. 247; Anderson v. State, 7 Ohio, pt. 2, p. 250; State v. McIntyre, 19 Minn. 95; State v. Maloney, 12 R. I. 251; State v. Downer, 8 Vt. 424, 30 Am. Dec. 482; State v. Carpenter, 54 Vt. 551; Com. v. Israel, 4 Leigh, 675; Horan v. State, 7 Tex. App. 183; State v. Hilton, 26 Mo. 199; Coyne v. People, 124 Ill. 17; United States v. O'Neill, 3 Sawy. 481; Com. v. Kirby, 2 Cush. 577; Com. v. Boynton, 12 Cush. 499; Schmidt v. State, 78 Ind. 41; 1 Whart. Crim. L. 8th ed. § 648.

In all offenses touching the official capacity or authority of the person upon or with whom the offense is committed knowledge on the part of the accused of that capacity and authority is an essential element of the offense. Knowledge must be alleged with directness and certainty. Courts will not speculate as to whether some other allegation—as that of intent or purpose—implies the element of knowledge.

State v. Cody, recently decided by this court, 67 N. W. 798.

Where a statutory offense is defined in general statutory terms it is not sufficient in every case to allege the facts and circumstances of an offense merely in the terms of the statute. Where the statutory definition is in general terms the statement of the facts and circumstances of the particular offense must be stated in particular terms in accordance with the particular facts in the case, and where any particular ingredient is under the common law or under the rule of law applicable to that offense an essential part of such an offense, the statement of the particular facts and circumstances must go beyond the words of the statute and allege such fact particularly.

United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. ed. 1135; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. ed. 819; Com. v. Clifford, 8 Cush. 215; Com. v. Bean, 11 Cush. 414, 14 Gray, 52; Com. v. Pitburn, 34 L. R. A.

119 Mass. 297; Reans v. United States (No. 1), 153 U. S. 584, 38 L. ed. 830; United States v. Cook, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 164, 21 L. ed. 588; United States v. Bittinger (Mo.) 15 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 49; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 202, 37 L. ed. 422; Birney v. State, 8 Ohio, 238; Com. v. Stout, 7 B. Mon. 248; State v. Krueger (Mo.) 35 S. W. 604; State v. McIntyre, 19 Minn. 95; State v. Farrington, 59 Minn. 149, 28 L. R. A. 395; Sarah v. State, 28 Miss. 267, 61 Am. Dec. 544; Com. v. Barrett, 108 Mass. 302; 1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. 624; Schmidt v. State, 78 Ind. 41; Ender v. People, 20 Mich. 233.

Messrs. H. W. Childs, George B. Edgerton, and J. T. Alley, for respondent:

The name given to the crime with which the pleader sought to charge the defendant in the indictment is an irregularity and not fatal. The charging part of the indictment must be looked to to determine the character of the offense.

State v. Jarvis, 18 Or. 360; People v. Cuddehi, 54 Cal. 53; People v. Phipps, 39 Cal. 331; State v. Coon, 18 Minn. 518; State v. Munch, 22 Minn. 70; State v. Garvey, 11 Minn. 154; State v. Eno, 8 Minn. 220; State v. Hinckley, 4 Minn. 845.

That an erroneous name was given to the crime by the grand jury is immaterial if in the charging part which follows the appellant is charged with the commission of a crime. The indictment is not one for an attempt to commit a crime but for a completed offense.

State v. McGinnis, 30 Minn. 52; 2 Bishop, Crim. L. § 88; State v. Gray, 29 Minn. 142; 1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 436.

Under the allegations in the indictment the presumption is that the jury was duly and regularly impaneled and sworn.

Clague v. Hodgson, 16 Minn. 829; Leyde v. Martin, Id. 88; State v. Ryan, 13 Minn. 370.

It is stated in this indictment that a bribe of money of value was offered, and this is in the statutory language, and is all that is necessary.

2 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 75; Com. v. Chapman, 1 Va. Cas. 138; 1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. §§ 488, 579; State v. Ellis, 83 N. J. L. 103; State v. Perley, 86 Me. 427; People v. Ward, 110 Cal. 369.

Money being the measure of value, the allegation in the indictment is sufficient.

State v. Brown, 118 N. C. 645.

Start, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant demurred to the indictment returned against him by the grand jury of the county of Wright and filed in the district court of such county on the 16th day of June, 1896. The court overruled the demurrer and certified the case to this court. Omitting the title the indictment is in these words:

"John R. Howard is accused by the grand jury of the county of Wright and state of Minnesota, by this indictment, of the crime of bribery of a judicial officer committed as follows:

"On the 9th day of December, A. D. 1895, there was pending for trial in the district court in and for the county of Wright and state of Minnesota, two certain civil cases and actions entitled respectively as follows, to wit: Mat-threw Czech, plaintiff, against the Great Northern Railway Company, defendant, and Susie Czech, plaintiff, against the Great Northern Railway Company, defendant, and at said time in said county of Wright, the regular general December, 1895 term of said court was in session, and each and both of said civil cases and actions were regularly upon the said term calendar for trial, and at said time and place and in said court, each and both of said cases and actions were upon trial together before one of the regular judges of said court and a jury of twelve men, and the name of one of the said jurymen of the said twelve jurymen was then and there one Ernest Otto. That the trial of said cases and actions before said judge and jury began December the 5th, A. D. 1895, and was continued and held during and over December the 9th, 1895, and until December the 10th, A. D. 1895, and that in the matter of the trial of the said cases and actions the said court had full and complete jurisdiction.

"That the said John R. Howard on the said 9th day of December, A. D. 1895, at the village of Buffalo, in the said county of Wright and state of Minnesota, did wrongfully, unlawfully, and feloniously hire, procure, and cause one O. L. Billings to offer a bribe and money of value to the said jurymen, Ernest Otto, then and there serving on the said jury as aforesaid, with the intent on the part of him, the said John R. Howard, and him, the said O. L. Billings, to influence the action, vote, opinion, and decision of him, the said jurymen, Ernest Otto, as a jurymen in said cases and actions, and to cause him, the said jurymen, Ernest Otto, to hang the said jury, and regardless of his, the said Ernest Otto's, convictions in the matters involved in said cases and actions, prevent a verdict being rendered in said cases and actions against said defendant, and that the said O. L. Billings did then and there unlawfully and feloniously offer the said bribe and money to the said jurymen, Ernest Otto, for the purpose aforesaid and with the intent aforesaid, solely by reason of his being hired, procured, and caused to do so by the said John R. Howard, as aforesaid, the said John R. Howard being then and there in the employ of the said defendant in the cases and actions, and at the said time and place engaged in assisting the said defendant in and about the trial of said cases and actions, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided and against the peace and dignity of the state of Minnesota."

The section of the Penal Code upon which the indictment is based reads thus:—

"Bribery of a Judicial Officer. A person who gives or offers, or causes to be given or offered, a bribe, or any money, property, or value of any kind, or any promise or agreement therefor, to a judicial officer, juror, referee, arbitrator, appraiser, or assessor, or any person authorized by law to hear or determine any question, matter, cause, proceeding, or controversy, with intent to influence his action, vote, opinion, or decision thereupon, is punishable by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years or by fine of not more than $5,000, or both."

Penal Code, § 64, Gen. Stat. 1894, § 6848.

1. The crime attempted to be charged in the 34 L. R. A.

indictment is "offering a bribe to a juror," or, strictly speaking, causing a bribe to be offered to a juror. In the caption of the indictment the crime is designated as "bribery of a judicial officer." This discrepancy is the first objection to the indictment urged by the defendant. An error in designating the name of the crime in the caption of the indictment is an irregularity only. The charging part of the indictment must be alone considered in determining whether the indictment charges a public offense. If it states facts showing the commission of a crime by the defendant, the law determines its name and nature, and neither a misnomer of the crime nor the omission to give it a name affects the validity of the indictment. State v. Hinckley, 4 Minn. 345; State v. Garvey, 11 Minn. 155; State v. Coon, 18 Minn. 518; State v. Munch, 22 Minn. 67.

It is further urged that the indictment is insufficient because it does not charge that the person to whom the bribe was offered, was a juror. The allegations of the indictment in this respect are sufficient.

2. Two other objections to the indictment are assigned in support of the demurrer meriting more serious consideration. They are (a) that the indictment does not contain any direct and certain allegation of fact as to the amount, kind, or value of the thing offered as a bribe; (b) that it is not alleged that the defendant knew that the person to whom the offer was made was then a juror. It is claimed by the state that the indictment substantially follows the statute in alleging what was offered to the juror, and that it is sufficient in all other respects when tested by the requirements of the statute, which, so far as here material, are: The indictment shall be direct and certain as regards the offense charged and the particular circumstances thereof when they are necessary to constitute a complete offense. The indictment is sufficient if it can be understood therefrom that the act charged as the offense is clearly set forth in ordinary and concise language, and that the act constituting the offense is stated with such a degree of certainty as to enable the court to pronounce judgment upon a conviction according to the right of the case.

No indictment is insufficient by reason of a defect or imperfection in matter of form which does not tend to the prejudice of the substantial rights of the defendant upon the merits. Gen. Stat. 1894, §§ 7241, 7247, 7248.

These are wholesome and sensible provisions which should be liberally construed and indictments sustained where the objection is as to matters of form and not of substance. But they were not intended to encourage laxity in criminal pleading in matters of substance, but simply to cure "a disease of the law" resulting from the over-nicety of courts and their lack of practical sense in giving effect to formal defects in indictments. The statute dispenses with mere formality and technicality, but the requirement that the indictment must be direct and certain as regards the offense and the particular circumstances thereof is imperative. State v. Brown, 12 Minn. 490; State v. McIntyre, 19 Minn. 93.

The rule that the charge must be laid positively, and not inferentially by way of recital merely, is not abrogated by the statute. It is true as claimed by the state, that an indictment may charge the commission of a statutory offense in the language of the statute without greater particularity when by that means all that is essential to constitute the offense is stated fully and directly.

State v. Comfort, 23 Minn. 271; State v. Abriah, 41 Minn. 41.

But if the statute does not set forth all of the elements necessary to constitute the offense intended to be punished, an indictment which simply follows the words of the statute is not sufficient. It must in such case go further and allege with certainty all of the particular facts necessary to bring the case within the intent and meaning of the statute. If the statute simply names the offense and provides for its punishment, or defines a crime by its legal result, an indictment which simply follows the words of the statute is not sufficient. It must go further and state directly the facts whence the result comes.

1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. §§ 626-628; Com. v. Bean, 11 Cush. 414.

It is apparent from the reading of the statute upon which the indictment in this case is based, that it defines the crime of bribing or offering a bribe to a juror by its legal result, and does not contain all of the essential elements of such crime. The essential elements of the crime of offering a bribe to a juror or judicial officer, as necessarily inferred from the statute, include knowledge on the part of the accused of the official character or capacity of the person to whom the bribe is offered, the fact that the thing offered was something of value, and that it was offered with the intent to influence his official action. It is not sufficient to follow the words of the statute and allege that the defendant offered a bribe to the juror, naming him, with intent (following the words of the statute), or offered him property of value or money of value with such intent. On the contrary it is necessary to allege directly, and not by way of recital or argument, the official character or capacity of the person to whom the offer was made, knowledge that he was such juror or officer by the defendant, the name of the thing offered (if known), the fact that it was of value, and that it was offered with intent to influence the official action of such person. 2 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 126; People v. Ward, 110 Cal. 369; United States v. Kessel, 62 Fed. Rep. 57; Brown v. State, 18 Tex. App. 358; United States v. O'Neill, 2 Sawy. 481; Com. v. Boynton, 19 Cush. 499; Schmidt v. State, 78 Ind. 41; State v. Carpenter, 54 Vt. 551; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 202, 37 L. ed. 422.

Not all of the cases cited are bribery cases, but they all show the necessity of alleging the scienter in similar cases, although the statute does not expressly make it an element of the offense.

The forms of indictments for bribery or offering a bribe, of or to judicial or public officers or jurors, from Chitty to Bishop, contain direct allegations as to the knowledge of the defendant in the premises, the thing given or offered and its value and the intent with which the act was done. 3 Chitty, Crim. L. 696; Bishop, Directions & Forms, § 247.

The usual form of the allegation of knowledge is that the defendant, "well knowing the premises" or some equivalent, and as to the particular thing (if it was money) given or offered, the allegation is either "a large sum of money to wit, the sum of $5" as the case may be, or "the sum of $5 in money." The latter seems to be the better form. In every case of bribery or offering a bribe to which we have been referred, or which we have found, the indictment contained substantially both of these allegations as to knowledge of the defendant and the thing given or offered, save two. The exceptions are the cases of Com. v. Chapman, 1 Va. Cas. 188, and State v. Ribusch, 33 Mo. 276. In the first case the sufficiency of the indictment was not involved. In the second case cited the indictment was for an attempt to induce by bribery a witness to absent himself from the trial of a cause. It contained an allegation of knowledge on the part of the defendant that the person whom he attempted to bribe was a witness, but it contained no allegations as to the facts constituting the attempt, or as to the money, property, or thing offered as a bribe. The indictment in this respect followed the words of the statute, and it was held to be sufficient on the ground that the crime consisted of the attempt, and the kind or amount of the bribe need not be alleged. The case turned on the construction of the statute and is not here in point. Tested by the rules of law which we have stated, it is apparent that the indictment in question is insufficient as to the allegations of knowledge on the part of the defendant and as to the particular thing offered to the juror.

As to the first it is urged that the allegations in the indictment to the effect that the defendant was employed in the trial of the cases in which the person to whom the offer was made was a juror, and that he caused the offer to be made with intent to influence his action as such juror, is a sufficient allegation of knowledge on the part of the defendant. But both knowledge and intent are essential elements of the crime, and both should be directly charged and not argumentatively or by way of recital. State v. Cody (Minn.) 67 N. W. 798.

It is not necessary in this case to allege a description of the money offered to the juror, or that a description thereof was unknown, or that it was current money of the United States, but it was necessary to allege directly some fact, not a conclusion or a result, showing that the money offered was of value. As already stated, the simple allegation that the offer was a given sum of money is all that is necessary. From such an allegation of fact the court can draw the conclusion that the thing offered was of value. A variance between the sum named in the indictment and that proved on the trial would not be material.

We are not to be understood as holding that this indictment would be held insufficient if the objections thereto were made for the first time after verdict. In such case we would be inclined to resort to all permissible intendments to sustain it.

The order overruling the demurrer must be reversed, and the case remanded to the District Court, with direction to enter an order sustaining the demurrer and resubmitting the case to another grand jury or discharging the defendant, as the court shall be advised.

Canty, J., concurring:

I am of the opinion that the indictment sufficiently charges that the accused knew Otis was a juror in the particular cases on trial, and sufficiently alleges the intent of the accused. In other respects I concur in the foregoing opinion.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT.

John MITCHELL

v.

Charles PRANGE et al., Piffs. in Err.

(.....Mich.....)

1. A verdict for plaintiff in an action to recover for injuries caused by negligence cannot be found upon grounds not alleged in the declaration.
2. A provision in a contract for excavating a sewer trench, that blasts are to be carefully covered to effectually prevent injury to persons or property, refers to injury from flying debris, and not from noise of the explosion.
3. Failure to give warning of an intended blast in an excavation in which blasting had been going on for several weeks will not render the person discharging the blast liable for injury to a blacksmith injured by the starting, in consequence of the noise, of a horse which he was shoeing at a place several hundred feet distant from the excavation.

(July 8, 1898.)

ERROR to the Superior Court of Grand Rapids to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Birney Hoyt, for plaintiffs in error:

A person doing work in a public place for the benefit of the public, under legislative and municipal authority, cannot be held for negligence if the work is carefully done, although the work is dangerous in its character.

Booth v. Rome, W. & O. T. R. Co. 140 N. Y. 267, 24 L. R. A. 105; Benner v. Atlantic Dredging Co. 184 N. Y. 156, 17 L. R. A. 220; Murphy v. Lovell, 128 Mass. 396, 35 Am. Rep. 381; Dodge v. Essex County Comrs. 8 Met. 380; Tiedeman, Mun. Corp. 329, and cases cited.

In such cases the damage is termed consequential.

Detroit v. Beckman, 84 Mich. 125, 22 Am. Rep. 507; Pontiac v. Carter, 82 Mich. 164; Larned v. Briscoe, 62 Mich. 393.

The defendants, under the authority shown in this case, had as much right to proceed with the blasting as a railroad company has to run its locomotives and trains along its road. Such company is not bound to give special notice to every person in houses and shops near its line when its trains are coming or when its whistles are to be sounded or bells rung; and are liable for injury caused by sounding its whistles only when sounded unnecessarily and with actual knowledge that there is imminent danger.

Ochs tree v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. (Iowa) 62 N. W. 7; Heininger v. Great Northern R. Co. 59 Minn. 458; Barron v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 89 Wis. 79; Selleck v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 93 Mich. 375, 18 L. R. A. 154; Id. 58 Mich. 195; Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Clarke, 85 Neb. 867, 23 L. R. A. 504.

The blasting was not the proximate cause of the injury which plaintiff received.

A person cannot recover for the conjunction of defendant's fault with circumstances of an extraordinary nature and which could not have been foreseen.

Allegheny v. Zimmerman, 95 Pa. 287, 40 Am. Rep. 649; Fairbanks v. Kerr, 70 Pa. 86, 10 Am. Rep. 664; Hoag v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 85 Pa. 293, 27 Am. Rep. 658; Phillips v. Dickerson, 83 Ill. 11, 28 Am. Rep. 607; Benner v. Canfield, 86 Minn. 90.

Mr. Charles A. Watt, with Mr. Peter Doran, for defendant in error:

The defendants were engaged in firing large and heavy blasts of dynamite, causing loud and sudden detonations, in one of the most populous and thickly settled streets in the city of Grand Rapids. The noise occasioned by these blasts was an actionable nuisance per se, and any damage produced by such noise would render the person causing it liable without any showing of negligence or want of care on his part whatever.

Bishop, Non-Cont. L. §§ 411, 412, 416.

The law exacts from a person who undertakes to do even a lawful act on his own premises, which may produce injury to his neighbor, the exercise of a degree of care measured by the danger, to prevent or mitigate the injury.

Booth v. Rome, W. & O. T. R. Co. 140 N. Y. 267, 24 L. R. A. 105.

There is a question of fact raised on this record whether this blast was unnecessarily loud, and whether defendants have taken the proper precautions to reduce the sound of the blast to the proper extent. This question should properly be left to the jury.

Beauchamp v. Saginaw Min. Co. 50 Mich. 163, 45 Am. Rep. 80.

The accident must be caused by the negli-

NOTE.—As to the duty of those engaged in blasting with respect to the safety of others, see Blackwell v. Moorman (N. C.) 17 L. R. A. 729, 84 L. R. A.

As to injuries to land and buildings from blasting, see note to Benner v. Atlantic Dredging Co. (N. Y.) 17 L. R. A. 220.

gent acts of the defendants, but it is not necessary that the consequences of the negligent acts of the defendants should be foreseen by the defendants. It is not necessary that either the plaintiff or defendants should be able to foresee the consequences of the negligence of the defendants, in order to make the defendants liable.

Billman v. Indianapolis, O. & L. R. Co. 76 Ind. 175, 40 Am. Rep. 230; La Duke v. Elzeter Twp. 97 Mich. 450; Bleil v. Detroit Street R. Co. 98 Mich. 228; Noble v. St. Joseph & B. Harbor R. Co. 99 Mich. 250; Bishop, Non-Cont. L. §§ 450, 451, 456.

It is a question for the jury to say whether the cause is proximate or not.

Bishop, Non-Cont. L. § 455.

The city cannot authorize negligence in the performance of its public contracts any more than it can authorize the commission of a crime.

Kendrick v. Towle, 60 Mich. 367.

Hooker, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff was injured by the kick of a horse which he was shoeing, and recovered a judgment against the defendants, who were engaged in excavating a trench for a sewer, some hundreds of feet distant from his shop. The plaintiff's claim is that the horse was frightened by an explosion in the trench, caused by the defendants for the purpose of excavating rock. Counsel for the plaintiff admitted upon the trial that blasting was necessary. The first count of the declaration alleges the explosion as wrongful; the second alleges that it was the duty of the defendants to give notice, by ringing a bell or otherwise, to people in the vicinity, that a blast was to be made, which duty was neglected. Upon the trial it was claimed that defendant's negligence consisted in using an excessive charge, in failing to properly cover it, and in failing to give the proper notice of the intended blast; and the case was allowed to go to the jury upon such theories. It was improper to allow the jury to find a verdict upon the ground that the charge was excessive, or that it was not properly covered, as neither was alleged in the declaration. Furthermore, there was no evidence that the charge was an improper one, or that any usual method of covering would have obviated the danger. It was urged that filling the trench with dirt would have lessened the noise, but it was not shown to be a proper or usual or reasonable thing to do, to excavate and refill a trench each time they put in and explode a blast. The specifications under which the work was done, required that: "When rock is found in the bottom of a trench, it is to be taken out to a depth of 6 inches below the bottom of the sewer, and replaced by a strong gravel, well rammed. Ledge rock that cannot be removed by pick or bar, will be paid for as extra work at a price named in the proposal for such excavation. Should the contractor fail to name a price for such rock excavation, no extra allowance will be made therefor. The estimate of the quantity of rock excavated will be based upon the bottom width of trench required for laying the different dimensions of sewers, as used in the original estimate of quantity of excavation, with side slopes of $\frac{1}{2}$ of a foot horizontal to 1 foot vertical. In all cases where blasting is necessary, the blast is to be carefully covered with brush or timber sufficient to effectually prevent injury to persons or property." The provision for covering was evidently to protect persons and property from injury by fragments which might otherwise be thrown from the trench, and it was error to instruct the jury as follows: "The contract with the city requires that in all cases where blasting is necessary that the blast is to be carefully covered with brush or timber, sufficiently to effectually prevent injury to persons or property. Now, was this blast so carefully covered with brush or timber as to sufficiently and effectually prevent injury to persons or property; or, in other words, did these defendants use all the precautions, notices, and warnings, and cover that blast of dynamite in such a manner, as prudent men ought, under like circumstances, to have exercised?—is a question for you to determine." Nor do we think the defendants negligent in not taking measures to apprise the plaintiff of the intended blast. It appears that they did take precautions to warn passers-by within a reasonable distance, but it would hardly be reasonable to expect them to give notice to everyone who resided or worked within a radius of 500 feet, especially after the business had been going on to the knowledge of such persons for several weeks. The plaintiff knew that blasting was a common occurrence, and to be expected at any minute. This did not deter him from attempting to shoe the horse. He did not know when the blast was coming, and, if the defendants knew that he had a blacksmith shop in the vicinity, they did not know that he would have the foot of a spirited horse in his lap. Both were engaged in lawful acts, and upon this record the injury appears to be a casualty, which is not ascribable to the defendants' neglect of duty.

Judgment reversed, and a new trial ordered.

Long, Ch. J., did not sit. The other Justices concurred.

MINNESOTA SUPREME COURT.

City of ST. PAUL, Resp't.,

v.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE, & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY, Appt.

(.....Minn.....)

1. Evidence held sufficient to justify a finding that in 1879 there was such a recognition on the part of defendant's grantor (St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co.) of the rights of the public and of the city in the premises in controversy as to interrupt the continuity of its adverse claim; and hence that defendant had not acquired title by twenty years' adverse possession before the commencement of this action.

2. City Ordinance No. 286, passed April 21, 1882, construed as a mere revocable license to defendant to erect certain structures on the premises referred to.

3. Special Laws 1872, chap. 93, construed as granting the defendant the right, as against the public and the city, to occupy the premises in controversy (a part of the public levee) with its railroad tracks to the extent necessary to make and maintain a continuous connection through the city between its two lines of railway formerly known, respectively, as the St. Paul & Chicago Railroad and the Minnesota Central Railroad.

On Rehearing.

4. A municipal corporation has no proprietary rights in the streets, levees, or other public grounds within its territorial limits. Whatever rights it has in them it holds merely in trust for the public.

5. A municipality has no authority over such public grounds, except such as is delegated to it by the legislature. The "care, supervision, and control" of all public highways, streets, etc., within the city limits, given to the common council of the city of St. Paul by the city charter (Special Laws 1874, chap. 1, subchap. 4, § 7), did not authorize the council to grant to a railway company the right to construct and maintain a freight house on a "public levee" for its own exclusive use.

6. Section 11 of the same subchapter, providing that "the common council shall have power and authority . . . to grant the right of way upon, over, and through any of the public streets, highways, alleys, public grounds, or levees of said city, to any steam or horse railway company or corporation, upon such limitations or conditions as they may prescribe by ordinance," only authorized the common council to grant the right of trackage; that is, the right to construct and operate railroad tracks on and over the public grounds within the city, but not to occupy and use such grounds as a site for depots, freight houses, or other buildings.

7. Gen. Stat. 1878, chap. 34, § 47 (Gen. Stat. 1894, § 2042), provides that "if it becomes

*Headnotes by MITCHELL, J.

NOTE.—That the state is a trustee for the people in respect to the title of the soil under navigable waters, is declared in Miller v. Mendenhall (Minn.) 8 L. R. A. 89, and other cases cited in note thereto.

That city waterworks are held in trust for the people, see Huron Waterworks Co. v. Huron (S. D.) 20 L. R. A. 848.

34 L. R. A.

necessary in the location of any part of a railroad to occupy any road, street, alley, or public way or any part thereof, it shall be competent for the municipal . . . or other public authorities owning or having charge thereof and the railroad company to agree upon the manner and upon the terms and conditions upon which the same may be used or occupied." Heid, that this only authorizes municipal or other public authorities to agree or arrange with a railroad company as to the manner or terms upon which it may occupy public streets or ways with its railroad tracks, but does not authorize them to grant to the railroad company the right to occupy them as sites for its depots, freight houses, or other like structures.

8. Ordinance No. 286 of the city of St. Paul, by which the common council assumed to grant to the defendant the right to occupy a part of the public levee as a site for a permanent freight house, was invalid because in excess of the powers of the common council.

On Second Rehearing.

9. Where land has been dedicated to a specific, limited, and definite public use, the legislature has no power to destroy the trust, or divert the property to any other purpose inconsistent with the particular use to which it was dedicated. The state holds such property, not in a proprietary, but in a sovereign, capacity, in trust for the use to which it was dedicated. While much must be left to the discretion of the legislature as to the best manner of regulating that use, yet its power of control over such property must be exercised in conformity with the purpose of the dedication.

10. The erection of a warehouse on land dedicated to public use as a levee is not necessarily a misuse of the property, as such structures may be in aid of the use for which it was dedicated.

11. The legislature may also grant, or authorize the granting, to any person or corporation having traffic with craft navigating the contiguous waters, the exclusive use of so much of a public levee as is reasonably necessary for his or its business with such craft, provided, and so long as, it does not unreasonably interfere with the use of the levee by the public. But to give a public levee, or any part of it, to a railway company, as a permanent site for its general freight warehouse, without reference to its traffic with craft navigating the contiguous waters, would constitute a diversion of the property to a use foreign to, and inconsistent with, that to which it was dedicated.

12. While the language of Gen. Stat. 1894, § 2680, is broad enough to authorize a city to divert lands held in trust for a specific and particular use to another and inconsistent one, and while the language of Ordinance 286 of the city of St. Paul may be equally broad, it does not follow that either is void in toto.

13. The operation of the statute may be restricted by construction to a grant of

That a wharf is owned by a city in trust for the public, see Roberts v. Louisville (Ky.) 13 L. R. A. 844.

That a street is held in trust for the public, see Schopp v. St. Louis (Mo.) 20 L. R. A. 783; also Eddy v. Granger (R. L.) 28 L. R. A. 517, and cases cited in footnote thereto.

authority to municipalities to grant to railway companies such rights in public grounds as the legislature itself might have granted, and the ordinance, although too broad, will be valid to the extent of such granted rights as the city was authorized to grant.

14. A grant of special privileges on land dedicated to a particular public use is always subject to the implied condition that it may be revoked whenever the needs of the public require, and the state or municipality has a large discretion in determining when such a condition has arisen; but such a grant, rightfully made, is not revocable at the mere arbitrary pleasure of the state or municipality. When such a grant has been acted on, the licensee has vested rights in the license which are subject only to the paramount interests of the public.

15. Cause remanded to the court below to try and determine the issue whether the privileges granted to the defendant by Ordinance 286 constitute, either in whole or in part, an unlawful misuse of the property, and to modify, if necessary, its order for judgment accordingly.

(Start, Ch. J., and Buck, J., dissent.)

(May 10, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the District Court for Ramsey County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover possession of certain real estate. Modified.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

Messrs. W. H. Norris and Flandrau, Squires, & Cutcheon for appellant.

Messrs. Edward J. Darragh, Herman W. Phillips, and Henry J. Horn for respondent.

Mitchell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The first trial of this case resulted in a decision in favor of the defendant, which was affirmed on appeal to this court. 45 Minn. 387. A second trial, to which the plaintiff was entitled under the statute (49 Minn. 88), resulted in a decision in favor of the plaintiff, and from an order denying a new trial the defendant appeals. The facts are fully stated in the opinion on the first appeal, and need not be repeated. Suffice it to say that the premises in dispute are a part of what has been called "Island 11," another portion of which was the subject of litigation in Schurmeier v. St. Paul & P. R. Co. 10 Minn. 83 (Gil. 59), and 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 272, 19 L. ed. 74. The city of St. Paul claims the premises as a public levee, under a dedication in 1854 by one Hopkins, the grantee of Louis Roberts. On the other hand, the defendant railway company contends (1) that Hopkins never owned the land, but that its predecessors and grantors acquired title to the whole of Island 11 as part of the Federal railroad land grant of March 3, 1857; (2) that, even if Hopkins owned it, he never dedicated it to the public; (3) that, even if he owned and dedicated the land, yet it has since acquired title to it by twenty years' adverse possession by itself and its grantors; and (4) that, even if the public has an easement in the land for levee purposes, yet defendant has a right to maintain certain tracks and structures upon it under the legislative act of February 28, 1872 (Special 34 L. R. A.

Laws 1872, chap. 93), and also under Ordinance No. 286 of the plaintiff city, passed April 21, 1883.

The Schurmeier Case is decisive that Louis Roberts, Hopkins' grantor, acquired title to the land in question under patent from the United States; and the evidence is plenary that Hopkins dedicated it to the public for levee purposes. This disposes of defendant's first and second contentions. Therefore, aside from defendant's claim to the limited right of use of the premises under the legislative act and the city ordinance referred to, the case comes down to the single question whether the defendant had, before the commencement of this action, acquired title by twenty years' adverse possession. Upon the last trial, as upon the first, the greater part of the evidence and of the arguments of counsel was directed to this issue. The possession of those under whom defendant claims commenced not earlier than the winter of 1862-63. It may be assumed for present purposes that up to September, 1879, this possession was hostile, exclusive, notorious, and continuous; so that, if not thereafter interrupted, it would have ripened into title in the winter of 1882-83. The main and pivotal question in the case is whether the evidence justified the trial court in finding, as we must presume it did, that the continuity of this adverse possession was interrupted before the statute of limitations had run, by a recognition by the occupant (either the defendant itself or its grantor, the St. Paul, Minneapolis, & Manitoba Railway Company) of the title and right of the public and the plaintiff city. The evidence tending to prove such recognition was in several respects stronger than on the first trial, and, in our opinion, was amply sufficient to justify the finding of the court.

It is familiar law that, in order that adverse possession may ripen into title, there must be continuity of adverse possession for the statutory period. Hence a recognition by the occupant of the title of the owner will break the continuity of claim, as well as the continuity of possession, although the occupant continues in possession of the premises; and in such case he must begin de novo if he would claim the benefit of the statute of limitations. If he continues in possession of the premises after such break in the continuity of claim, the benefit which he might have obtained from his prior adverse possession is, nevertheless, determined, and if, after such break, the occupant should again attempt to hold adversely to the title of the real owner, such adverse possession will be held to commence from that time, and the occupant will not be permitted to tack his former possession. One alleged act of recognition of the public right in the land in controversy by the then occupant, the Manitoba Company, is the petition presented to the city council September 16, 1879, asking for the vacation of parts of certain designated streets and a part of this same public levee, in order to enable the Union Depot Company to erect a union depot and secure railroad track communication therewith. The tenor of this petition and the subsequent action of the city council in granting, in part, its prayer, on the 8th of January, 1880, are quite fully stated in the opinion on the former appeal. 45 Minn. 394, 395. The nature of the scheme then on foot to provide a union depot and terminal facilities for all railroads coming into St. Paul is too familiar as a matter of local history to require to be related at length. It is enough for present purposes to say that the contemplated site for this depot, and the one subsequently used for that purpose, consisted of certain lots (and the intervening streets and a part of the levee abutting these lots) then owned by the Manitoba Company, and which that company proposed to convey, and afterwards did convey, to the Union Depot Company, in which the Manitoba Company was itself a shareholder. The effect of the act of the city council was that the title of the land vacated was in the Manitoba Company relieved of the burden of any public easement, and thus to enable it to subsequently convey an unencumbered title to the entire tract to the Union Depot Company, which it did for the sum of $75,000. As was said on the former appeal, the part of the levee asked to be vacated did not include the land in controversy; but, if it was a public levee, it would necessarily follow that the land in controversy was also, for the color or claim of title on the part of the Manitoba Company and the title of the public and the city were precisely the same as to both. Hence, assuming that Mr. Hill had authority to act in the premises for the Manitoba Company, the petition was, on its face, a recognition of the right of the public and the city in the land in controversy, and that the possession of the Manitoba Company was subordinate to that right.

It is contended, however, (1) that Mr. Hill never intended to recognize any such right, because he did not know, when he signed the petition, that it asked for the vacation of any part of the levee east of Sibley street, which included all of the levee to which the Manitoba Company ever asserted an adverse claim; (2) that he had no authority to act in the premises for the Manitoba Company; and (3) that that company never ratified his act. We are of opinion that the evidence would justify a finding on each and all of these questions adversely to the defendant. The presumption is that a person knows the contents of an instrument which he signs. Mr. Hill was the general manager of the Manitoba Company, and as such was, according to his own testimony, invested with very large powers. He was one, at least, of the chief promoters of the union depot scheme. He was the representative of his company in all matters pertaining to that enterprise. He must have been entirely familiar with the condition of the title to the premises, and hence must be presumed to have known that the passage of this ordinance of vacation by the city council was necessary to the successful consummation of the proposed scheme to provide a union depot. It must also be kept in mind that the claim of the Manitoba Company to Island 11 had been judicially determined to be unfounded; also, that at the date of this petition the adverse possession, if any, of the railway company, had not yet ripened into title, and could not do so, in any event, for more than three years. With these facts Mr. Hill must have been familiar. Hence, had he known the exact contents of the petition, there was every reason why he should sign it, and no conceivable reason why he should not. As against this array of circumstantial evidence, the mere recollection or memory of Mr. Hill, after the lapse of a number of years, and after the situation of affairs had wholly changed, was by no means conclusive; and, in considering the evidence as to Mr. Hill's authority to act in the premises for the Manitoba Company, it must be recollected that, as that company's possession had not yet ripened into title, the fact, if fact it was, that he had no authority to make contracts affecting the title of its real estate, is not controlling. The evidence of adverse possession, on the one side, and of disclaimer, on the other side, all consisted of what may be termed "matters in pais,"—of what certain persons from time to time did as representing the defendant or its predecessors. What Mr. Hill did, as general manager of the Manitoba Company, by way of asserting a claim to the premises in its behalf, would have been competent evidence for the defendant to establish its claim; and, if so, then certainly the same character of evidence would be competent in behalf of the plaintiff to establish a disclaimer by it. The fact that the Manitoba Company has never repudiated or disaffirmed Mr. Hill's act, but accepted and has all these years retained the benefits of it, is competent evidence tending to prove both prior authority and subsequent ratification. The evidence already considered was of itself sufficient to justify the court in finding that there was such a recognition by the Manitoba Company in 1879 of the right of the public and the city as interrupted the continuity of the prior adverse possession. It therefore becomes unnecessary to consider the subsequent action of the defendant itself in petitioning the city council in June, 1881, for leave to construct the "lower warehouse," and in April, 1882, for approval of the plan of its proposed new "freight house," and for leave to extend the river front of the same a certain distance further out than the river front of the old building.

It only remains to consider what rights, if any, the defendant has under City Ordinance No. 286 and under the legislative act of February 28, 1872. An examination of the ordinance satisfies us that it amounts to nothing more than a revocable license. Its language is that of a license or permit, and not of a grant. By the terms of Special Laws 1872, chap. 98, the defendant was required to make and maintain a continuous connection, through the city of St. Paul, between the St. Paul & Chicago Railway (river road), which it had just purchased, and its line formerly known as the Minnesota Central Railway; and to that end it was authorized, among other things, "to the extent that was reasonably necessary to the establishment and maintenance of such connection, to enter upon and cross over or under the tracks, roadbed, and lands of any other railroad corporation, and any other lands, street, and highways, with its own tracks necessary to maintain such connection, condemning the same to its own use in the same manner and upon like terms and conditions as the St. Paul & Chicago Railway Company or the St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Company is authorized to condemn land for right of way and railroad purposes, but the right to condemn and occupy any other street in the city of St. Paul shall not be exercised so long as said company has the right to use the public levee for such connection, and can accomplish such connection by the use of such levee. It is apparent that this act gave to the defendant the same rights to enter upon and cross over streets and highways with its tracks, necessary to the maintenance of this connection, which were possessed by the St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Company in like cases. The rights of the latter company in that respect are defined in Laws 1857 (Ex. Sess.) chap. 1, subchap. 1, § 7. It is also apparent that the act was designed to give them these rights in the public levee as well as in "other streets." By virtue of its paramount authority over all highways, the state had the power to confer this privilege or right so far as the public easement was concerned. But this could not affect the private property rights of abutting owners (Gray v. First Div. of St. Paul & P. R. Co. 18 Minn. 315, Gil. 289); hence the necessity for authorizing the defendant to exercise the right of eminent domain whenever necessary. It is contended by plaintiff that, under the provisions of this act, the defendant could only acquire the right of way over and across streets and the levee by condemning the public easements as well as the private property rights of abutting owners. The statute is somewhat awkwardly worded, but we do not think that this is its proper construction. The city, in its corporate capacity, has no proprietary interest in a public street or a public levee. It holds the title merely in trust for the general public. If the public was to be condemned, how could its value be estimated, and to whom would the compensation be payable? Our construction of the statute is that it is a grant of the privilege or right of use so far as the public easement is concerned, but that if such use amounts to an additional servitude upon the street or levee, which affects the private property rights of individuals, the defendant may acquire such rights by the exercise of the right of eminent domain. Our conclusion, therefore, is that, under the provisions of this statute, the defendant has the right, as against the public and the city, to occupy this levee with its tracks so far as necessary to make and maintain a continuous connection through the city between its two lines referred to in the act.

The court found that defendant's two north-erly tracks across the premises in controversy constitute a section of the line constructed by defendant to make and maintain a continuous connection, through the city, between these two lines, and that these two tracks, with their continuations east and west of the premises in controversy, furnish and afford the defendant the only practical means of making and maintaining this connection. The conclusions of law and order for judgment must therefore be modified so as to permit defendant to maintain these two tracks.

The defendant assigns as error the rulings of the court in admitting various items of evidence, but we find no substantial merit in any of them, and nothing of sufficient importance to require special notice. Cause remanded, 34 L. R. A.

with directions to the court below to modify its conclusions of law and order for judgment in accordance with this opinion.

A rehearing having been had, Mitchell, J., on January 7, 1896, delivered the following opinion:

This appeal has once before been considered by this court. The record and briefs were very voluminous, and the main issue was whether the defendant had acquired absolute title to the premises in controversy by adverse possession. The oral arguments were wholly, and the briefs mainly, devoted to a discussion of that question. The natural result was that other and less important issues received but little attention from either court or counsel. The defendant's claim of certain rights under City Ordinance No. 286 was disposed of in our opinion by merely saying that the ordinance amounted to nothing more than a revocable license; that its language was that of a license or permit, and not of grant. Upon an application for a reargument of this question, we became satisfied that sufficient consideration had not been given to it, and that there was at least grave doubt whether the ordinance, if valid, did not constitute an irrevocable contract between the city and defendant. We therefore ordered a reargument of the question as to the force and effect of this ordinance, and the rights of the defendant under it. This involves two questions: First, the authority of the city council of St. Paul to pass the ordinance; and, second, if they had the power to pass it, its force and effect. These questions should be considered in the order named; for, if the ordinance is held invalid, it will be unnecessary to consider the second question at all.

The land in question fronts on the Mississippi river, and was dedicated by the original proprietor to public use as a "levee." Defendant's grantor, being in possession of the premises and claiming adversely to the city, had erected thereon a wooden freight house, fronting on the river, and some 400 or 450 feet long. In 1881, after defendant took possession, it presented a petition to the common council of the city of St. Paul, stating that it contemplated taking down this freight house, and replacing it with a large and permanent one, and asking permission in the meantime to erect a temporary wooden structure. This permit was granted, the limit of the permit being two years. In March, 1883, the defendant presented a further petition to the common council, stating "that it was then ready to construct its new freight house, which was described as to be a large, elegant, and permanent structure, plans of which were submitted. The petition further stated that, in order to carry out the plan of the structure as demanded by the growing commerce of the city, it would be necessary to extend the river front of the building out into the river from 7 to 10 feet further than the front of the old one; and requested the council to approve the plan of the proposed building, and to grant permission to extend it out into the river to the limit above mentioned. The plan proposed was of a building about 600 feet long and 50 feet wide, of brick, with stone foundation and a slate roof. In response to this petition the council, in April, 1882, by a unanimous vote, passed the ordinance in question (No. 286), which is as follows:

"Section 1. That permission be, and the same is hereby, given to the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul Railway Company to take down and remove the old freight house, which is owned and used by said company, standing next below Sibley street on the levee, and to erect a new freight building upon the site now occupied by said old freight house, provided that the new structure may be extended a distance of 10 feet nearer the Mississippi river than the old one, if the city engineer shall be of the opinion that the same shall in no manner interfere with the navigation of said river. And provided further, that said new freight house shall be built substantially in accordance with the plans on file in the office of the city clerk. And provided that the basement or lower story fronting on the river shall be laid with substantial floor, and said lower story, together with the platform on the river front, and the railway track along the said river front shall be open and subject to the use of the public for all wharfage and transfer purposes without charge, and a sufficient platform and entrance for drays shall be provided for said lower story at the end of said building.

"Sec. 2. Nothing in this ordinance contained shall be construed as waiving any of the rights of the city of St. Paul in and to the real property proposed to be occupied by said building.

"Sec. 3. This ordinance shall be in force from and after its passage."

Thereupon the defendant proceeded and erected, and has ever since maintained, the freight house, in accordance with the provisions of the ordinance.

It may be here suggested that the authority of defendant's grantor, the St. Paul, Minneapolis, & Manitoba Railroad Company, under its charter (Laws 1857, Ex. Sess., chap. 1), "to construct its railroad upon and along, across or over any public or private highway," etc., "if the same shall be necessary," does not extend to or contemplate the construction upon a highway of stations, depots, freight houses, or other buildings, but applies only to railroad tracks, where the use of the highway by the railroad company will be concurrent with that of the general public, and not exclusive. Wayzata v. Great Northern R. Co. 50 Minn. 488. It is elementary law that a municipal corporation has no proprietary rights in the streets, levees, or other public grounds within its limits. Whatever rights it has it holds merely in trust for the public. It is equally elementary that all its powers over such public grounds are derived from the legislature. It can exercise no power over them, except such as is given it by the legislature, either expressly or by necessary implication. It is also well settled that a grant of power to a city to grant any privileges or rights in streets or other public grounds is to be strictly construed, and not enlarged by construction; and, if there is a fair or reasonable doubt as to the existence of its power, it will be resolved against the municipality. Dill. Mun. Corp. § 705; St. Louis v. Bell Teleph. Co. 96 Mo. 628, 2 L. R. A. 278.

With these general principles in mind, we come to the consideration of the provisions of 34 L. R. A.

the charter of the city of St. Paul relating to the powers of the city council over public grounds within its limits, and which were in force in 1882, when Ordinance No. 286 was passed. The charter then in force was Spec. Laws 1874, chap. 1, and amendments. Subchapter 4, § 7, of that act, provided that "the common council shall have the care, supervision, and control of all public highways, bridges, streets, alleys, public squares, and grounds, and parks and sewers, and all other public improvements and public property within the limits of said city." The able counsel for the defendant seems to rely with confidence on this as giving authority to the common council to pass the ordinance in question. He says: "Statutory provisions of this kind have uniformly been held to confer upon city councils authority to grant the railway companies the right to occupy public streets; at least, as against the city and the public." We have examined all the authorities cited by counsel, and submit, with all deference to him, that none of them support his contention. Some of these cases merely hold that a certain use of a street, as by erecting telephone poles and wires, or constructing a horse railroad, is a proper "street use," and imposes no additional servitude on the street; while others are merely to the effect that, under a general grant of power to regulate the use of streets, the city council has the power to prescribe the manner in which, or the conditions upon which, streets may be occupied for a legitimate "street use." In Gregsten v. Chicago, 145 Ill. 451, the city had an express grant of authority to do what it did. In St. Louis v. Western U. Teleph. Co. 149 U. S. 465, 37 L. ed. 810, the only thing decided was that the city was authorized by the Consultation and laws of Missouri to impose upon a telegraph company putting its poles in the streets of the city a charge in the nature of rental for the use of the streets for that purpose. Neither party was in position to question the authority of the city to permit the company to place its poles in the streets, for it was by virtue of the exercise of this power that the city claimed the right to make the charge, and the permit granted by the city in the exercise of this assumed power constituted the only right on part of the company to put its poles in the street. We are of the opinion that the "care, supervision, and control" of streets and public grounds, and the power to regulate their use, which is the usual and ordinary grant of power to municipal corporations, and which is certainly as broad as the power granted by the section above quoted, is not sufficient to empower them to authorize the use of such grounds for the purpose even of constructing and operating thereon a commercial railway, much less of erecting thereon depots, freight houses, or other buildings which exclude the general public from the concurrent use of a part of the street or other public ground. Dill. Mun. Corp. § 705, and cases cited; Lackland v. North Missouri R. Co. 31 Mo. 180. In this state these would not be proper "street uses," but the imposition of an additional servitude upon the street. Section 8 of the same subchapter of the city charter gives the common council power to vacate and discontinue public grounds, etc., upon certain conditions, but it will not be claimed that this section has any application to the case in hand.

The only other provision relating to the power of the common council in the premises is § 11 of the same subchapter, which reads as follows: "The common council shall have power and authority by a vote of three fourths of all the members elect of said council to grant the right of way upon, over, and through any of the public streets, highways, alleys, public grounds, or levees, of said city to any steam railway or horse railway company or corporation upon such limitations or conditions as they may prescribe by ordinance." We may consider this in connection with Gen. Stat. 1878, chap. 84, § 47 (Gen. Stat. 1894, § 2643), cited by counsel for defendant, and which reads as follows: "If it became necessary in the location of any part of a railroad, to occupy any road, street, alley, or public way, or any part thereof, it shall be competent for the municipal or other corporation or public officer or public authorities owning or having charge thereof and the railroad company to agree upon the manner and upon the terms and conditions upon which the same may be used or occupied; or such company may appropriate so much of the same as may be necessary for the purposes of said road in the same manner and upon the same terms as is herein provided for the appropriation of the property of individuals." Section 11 of the chapter quoted above clearly refers only to "trackage"; that is, to the right to construct and operate railroad tracks on the streets or other public grounds. This is conclusively shown by the term "right of way". It does not give the common council any authority to barter away, or transfer to a railroad company, the right to use any part of the streets or public grounds as a site for depots or freight houses to the entire exclusion of the public therefrom. This seems to us too plain to require argument. It also seems to us that the provision of the General Statutes cited is subject to the same limitation. The phrase, "in the location of any part of a railroad," clearly indicates to our minds that this also refers only to "trackage," and that it is but the counterpart and equivalent of § 11 of the city charter. It was never intended to authorize municipal authorities to sell or give away to railroad companies, as sites for depots and other buildings, lands in which they had no proprietary interest, and which they held merely as trustees for the public. Any such power would be an exceedingly dangerous one to vest in municipal authorities, and it would require very clear language to that effect to warrant a court in holding that the legislature intended to grant them any such power. Whether the authority of railway corporations to acquire rights in streets and other public lands by the exercise of the right of eminent domain is limited to "trackage" or "right of way," it is not necessary now to consider. If there is any other provision of statute containing any grant of power to the common council of St. Paul over public grounds within its limits, our attention has not been called to it by counsel, neither have we found it. Nowhere do we find any grant of power authorizing the common council to give the defendant the right to use and occupy any part of the public levee as a site for its freight house. It follows that this ordinance is invalid because not within the granted powers of the common council.

We have not overlooked the difference between a "street" and a "levee." A street is designed exclusively for the purpose of travel and intercommunication. The word "levee," as used in the West and South, means a landing place for vessels, and for the delivery of merchandise to and from such vessels, and, as incident to that, for the temporary storage of the merchandise. Hence, some things might be a proper use of a public levee which would constitute a misuser of a street. For example, the erection and maintenance of a warehouse as a place for the receipt and delivery and temporary storage of goods while in transit would probably be a proper use of a levee, provided it was open to the common use of all on the same terms. This would be in aid of and necessary to the main object for which a levee is designed. But this is a very different thing from giving to a particular person or corporation the right to occupy a levee as a site for its warehouse solely for its own business, and to the exclusion of the general public, as was attempted by the ordinance in question. The fact that the common council stipulated that a small part of the structure might be used by the public for wharfrage and transfer purposes does not alter the case.

It can hardly be necessary to say that the fact that the defendant may have expended its money on the faith of this ordinance creates no equitable estoppel against the public, whose mere trustee the city is in prosecuting this suit. The defendant was bound to take notice of the extent of the powers of the common council from which it obtained the ordinance. The result is that the former decision is adhered to, although, as to the point now considered, upon a different ground.

On January 20, 1896, the following order was made:

It appearing from the petition of the defendant that its counsel overlooked and failed to call the attention of the court to Gen. Stat. 1894, § 2680, it is ordered that further argument be allowed, but only as to the force and effect of said section, the same to be submitted on printed briefs either on or before the last day of the present term, or on the first day of the next term of this court, at the election of counsel for the plaintiff.

The second rehearing having been had, Mitchell, J., on September 28, 1896, delivered the following opinion:

It is somewhat unfortunate that the questions involved in this case have been presented and considered piecemeal. On the trial in the court below the main issue was whether the defendant had acquired title to the premises by adverse possession, and very little attention seems to have been paid to the rights, if any, of the defendant under City Ordinance 286; that question having apparently been brought into the case only incidentally and almost accidentally. On the first argument of the appeal in this court, the discussion was almost wholly devoted to what had been the main issue in the court below. The result was that we disposed of the ordinance, without much consideration, by merely saying that it amounted to nothing more than a revocable license. Upon the reargument of this question the main point discussed, and the only point considered, was whether the state had delegated to the city authority to enact the ordinance in question. We held that the ordinance was invalid, because in excess of the granted powers of the city. After this opinion was filed, counsel for the defendant applied for further reargument, on the ground that they had overlooked, and failed to call the attention of the court to, Gen. Stat. 1894, § 2680. A further reargument was thereupon granted as to the force and effect of this section. Upon an examination of the case after it was submitted on this last reargument, it occurred to us that there might be a serious question as to the power of the state itself to grant any such authority to the city over public grounds dedicated to a specific public use. As this question was only briefly discussed by counsel for the defendant, and not at all by counsel for the plaintiff, we, on our own motion, requested additional briefs on that point. After an examination of the additional briefs filed in response to this request, we are inclined to think that perhaps a more important question was whether the purposes for which a portion of this levee was granted to the defendant by this ordinance constituted a diversion of it from the particular and specific public use to which it was dedicated. In order that the precise questions involved may be clearly in mind, we shall again quote in full the statute now relied on, and also the ordinance enacted in pursuance of it, and which defendant claims constitutes a binding contract between it and the city, an impairment of the obligation of which is forbidden by the Federal Constitution.

"The common council, board of aldermen, trustees, commissioners, or other corporate authorities of any city, town, village, or other municipal corporation, are hereby authorized and empowered to grant, sell, convey, or lease any public grounds or place within their corporate limits to any railroad corporation, subject nevertheless to all the rights of the original proprietors on such grounds." Gen. Stat. 1894, § 2680. This statute was enacted over thirty years ago. Gen. Laws 1866, chap. 41.

Ordinance 286 reads as follows:

"Sec. 1. That permission be and the same is hereby given to the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul Railway Company to take down and remove the old freight house, which is owned and used by said company, standing next below Sibley street on the levee, and to erect a new freight building upon the site now occupied by said old freight house, provided that the new structure may be extended a distance of 10 feet nearer the Mississippi river than the old one, if the city engineer shall be of the opinion that the same shall in no manner interfere with the navigation of said river. And provided further that said new freight house shall be built substantially in accordance with the plans on file in the office of the city clerk. And provided, that the basement or lower story fronting on the river shall be laid with substantial floor, and said lower story, together with the platform on the river front, and the railway track along the said river front, shall be open and subject to the use of the public for all wharfage and transfer purposes, without charge, and a sufficient platform and entrance for drays shall be provided for said lower story at the end of said building.

"Sec. 2. Nothing in this ordinance contained shall be construed as waiving any of the rights of the city of St. Paul in and to the real property proposed to be occupied by said building."

We shall, without further discussion, take as settled that the premises in question were dedicated by the owner, Hopkins, to public use, as a "levee" or "landing." The word "levee" has a well-understood meaning in the West and South. It is a place, on a river or other navigable water, for lading or unlading goods, or for the reception and delivery of passengers. It is either the bank, or the wharf, to or from which persons or things may go from or to some vessel in the contiguous waters. State v. Randall, 1 Strobb. L. 111, 47 Am. Dec. 548; State v. Graham, 15 Rich. L. 310; Coffin v. Portland, 27 Fed. Rep. 418. It means the land contiguous to a river or other navigable water, used as a landing place for water craft, and for the transfer of freight and passengers to and from such craft. In a general way, this is at once the definition and limitation of the particular and specific public use to which this land was dedicated by the owner. It is elementary and fundamental law that, if a grant is made for a specific, limited, and definite public use, the subject of the grant cannot be used for another and different use. Its use must be restricted to that for which it was dedicated. Even the legislature itself has no power to destroy the trust, or to divert, or to authorize a municipality to divert, its subject to any other purpose, either public or private, inconsistent with the particular use to which it was granted. Neither the state nor the municipality within which the property is situated has any proprietary interest in it which either of them can sell or divert to any use inconsistent with the purpose of the dedication or grant. The state holds such lands merely in its sovereign capacity, in trust for the public for the purposes for which it was dedicated. If the legislature should attempt to divert it, or to authorize its diversion, the property would not revert to the donor, or the public easement be extinguished. The act of the legislature would be a mere nullity. The cases relied on by defendant's counsel decide nothing inconsistent with these propositions. See Portland & W. V. R. Co. v. Portland, 14 Or. 188, 58 Am. Rep. 299; Illinois & St. L. R. & Canal Co. v. St. Louis, 2 Dill. 70. It is frequently stated that the power of the legislature in the absence of special restrictions, over public places held for the use and benefit of the public, is unlimited; but we think that in every well-considered case it will be found that this general proposition is qualified by the statement, in substance, that this power must be exercised in subordination to, and in conformity with, the purposes of the dedication. However, no narrow or unreasonable definition should be placed upon the nature of the use to which the property has been dedicated, nor any unreasonable limitation imposed upon the discretion of the legislature in regulating that use. Much must necessarily be left to the discretion of the legislature as to the best manner of regulating that use, and of improving the property for that purpose; and the mode or manner of exercising that use must be allowed to keep pace with changed conditions and consequent new necessities of the public. It is only when there has been a clear diversion of the property to a use inconsistent with that for which it was dedicated that courts would feel warranted in interfering; and this will usually be largely a question of fact, depending upon the facts and circumstances of each particular case. No doubt the legislature, as the representative of the public, has the power, either directly or indirectly, through the municipality, or even through a private corporation or person, to improve these premises for "levee purposes." It might construct, or authorize the construction and maintenance of, wharves or warehouses thereon as aids to and conveniences for public travel and traffic to and from craft navigating the river, and to impose, or to authorize the imposition of, charges for the use of such structures sufficient to defray the cost of their construction and maintenance. This would not only be consistent with, but in aid of, the principal use for which the land was dedicated. The legislature might also grant, or authorize the granting, to any person or corporation having traffic with vessels on the river, the exclusive use of so much of a levee as was reasonably necessary for his or its business with such vessels,—provided it did not unreasonably interfere with the use of the levee by the remainder of the public,—until such time as the needs of the public required the termination of such exclusive use. The construction and maintenance of a permanent structure do not by any means necessarily constitute a misuse of a levee. Like the grain elevator referred to in Illinois & St. L. R. & Canal Co. v. St. Louis, supra, it might be in aid of the very use for which the public levee is designed. To give a public levee, or any part of it, to a railway company, to be used as a site for its depot, or for its general freight warehouse, without reference to its traffic by way of the transfer of passengers and freight to and from vessels navigating the adjacent river or other navigable water, would, in our opinion, constitute a diversion of the property to a use foreign to and inconsistent with that for which a levee is dedicated.

So much for the general principles of law applicable to the case. The language of § 2680 is broad enough to permit, if not require, a construction which would effect a purpose which the legislature has no power to authorize. It would authorize the absolute sale or gift of any public ground, for whatever purpose dedicated, to any railroad company, to be used for any purpose for which such company might hold or use real estate, and thus wholly extinguish all rights of the public in the premises. The legislature has no such unlimited power over land dedicated to a specific and particular public use, but it does not follow that the statute is wholly void and ineffectual for any purpose. Its operation may be cut down by construction within the limits of the legislative powers, and held effectual to authorize a municipality to grant to a railroad company any rights or privileges in public grounds which the legislature itself might have granted; that is, any rights or privileges consistent and in conformity with the purposes for which such grounds were dedicated. We cannot agree with the contentions of plaintiff's counsel that this general statute has been by implication repealed as to the city of St. Paul by subsequently enacted provisions of the city charter, or that the statute does not apply to public grounds of the character of this levee. We are therefore brought to the consideration of the provisions of the ordinance itself, as to whether the rights and privileges assumed to be granted to the defendant are in conformity with the use for which the land was dedicated, or are so inconsistent with and foreign to that use as to amount to an unauthorized diversion of it. Unfortunately the record furnishes comparatively little light on this question, because, for reasons already suggested, the case was not tried on any such lines. In fact, no such issue seems to have been tried at all. All that the record clearly shows is the provisions of the ordinance itself, and the further fact that this freight house has been constructed and is maintained in accordance with those provisions. It perhaps also fairly appears that there are some 1,400 feet front of public levee, including that situated within the plat of St. Paul proper, and that this building is about 350 feet long on the river front by about 50 feet wide. The ordinance is entirely silent as to the length of time for which the privilege is granted to the defendant, or as to the uses to which the structure may be devoted, except as to the lower story. Neither does it in terms reserve to the city any right to supervise or regulate the manner of its use. The record is also practically silent as to the purposes for which the defendant is actually using this building, or as to the extent or nature of defendant's traffic with vessels or other craft navigating the river. Under the terms of the ordinance, the defendant might devote the whole of the building, except the lower story, to uses wholly foreign to "levee purposes," and entirely disconnected with its exchange traffic with craft navigating the river; and, for anything the record shows, such may be the fact. Neither does it appear whether there exists any present public necessity for the use of this land for levee purposes. This last consideration would, of course, not be controlling, for the fact that the land is not presently needed for levee purposes would not prevent the city or state, as the trustee of the public, from objecting to a diversion of the property to a use wholly foreign to or inconsistent with that to which it was dedicated; but, for reasons to be stated hereafter, it would be material in determining whether the city or state, as such trustee, had a right to recall or revoke a special privilege previously lawfully granted. But the fact, if it be a fact, that the ordinance assumes to grant to the defendant rights and privileges greater than the city was authorized to grant, will not render the ordinance wholly void. It would still be valid to the extent of such rights and privileges as the city was authorized to grant. We shall not stop to consider upon which party rested the burden of proof on these matters, for, in view of the manner in which the case was tried and submitted, we are satisfied that final judgment for or against either party on these questions ought not to be rendered on the present record. Justice requires that the cause be remanded to the trial court, to determine, in accordance with the rules we have endeavored to lay down, whether the privileges granted by the ordinance do or do not amount to an unlawful diversion of this part of the levee to a purpose inconsistent with that for which it was dedicated. If they do not, either in whole or in part, then the order for judgment in favor of the plaintiff should be further modified so as to make it subject to the right of the defendant to maintain this building in accordance with the terms of the ordinance. If, on the other hand, such privileges, in their entirety, constitute a plain diversion of the premises to an unauthorized use, the trial court should so find, and in such case the present order for judgment would stand unmodified in that regard. If, however, the court should find that within the rules already suggested the privileges granted by the ordinance were in part authorized, but in part unauthorized, then the court should determine how far they were authorized, and how far they were not; that is, how much of the levee is reasonably required as a site for a freight house for the accommodation of defendant's traffic as common carrier, with craft navigating the contiguous river, and cut down the operation of the ordinance to the limits to which its provisions were authorized, and modify the order for judgment accordingly.

If it be objected that this furnishes no definite and exact rule, the answer is that such instances are not infrequent in the law, and one of the most useful functions of the judiciary is the exercise of a sound judgment and common sense in such cases. As already suggested, no such narrow construction of the term "levee purposes" should be adopted as to deprive the defendant of any privileges properly granted to it, or to limit too narrowly the reasonable discretion of the state or city in regulating the use of the property; nor, on the other hand, should so lax a construction be indulged in as to sanction a plain diversion of it to a use foreign to and incompatible with that to which it was devoted by the owner. Any grant of privileges upon lands dedicated to a particular public use is necessarily subject and subordinate to the rights and necessities of the public, and may always be revoked and terminated whenever required by the needs of the public in the use of it for the purpose for which it was dedicated. This is an implied condition of every such grant, for there can be no irrevocable license, as against the rights of the public to the full enjoyment of its easement in the property; and, as to when a condition of things has arisen that public interests require a revocation of the grant or license, much must be left to the discretion of the state or municipality, as the trustees of the public. But such a license, if lawfully granted, and subsequently acted on by the licensee, is not revocable, in the ordinary sense of the word; that is, it is not revocable at the mere arbitrary pleasure or whim of the state or municipality. The licensee in such a case has vested rights under the license, subject only to the paramount rights of the general public in the property for the use to which it was dedicated. We might also add that, if the privileges granted to the defendant by this ordinance were, in whole or in part, authorized as a legitimate use of the property for "levee purposes," the fact that such privileges, thus authorized, may incidentally benefit the defendant in a way not strictly germane to "levee purposes" would not render the grant a diversion of the property to an unauthorized use. We may be pardoned for adding the suggestion that, inasmuch as the plaintiff has accomplished the main purpose of this suit by establishing its title to the whole of the premises in dispute as a public levee, and also its right of immediate and exclusive possession, subject only, to the right of the defendant, under the act of the legislature, to maintain certain railroad tracks across the property, and to whatever rights it may have, under this city ordinance, to maintain this freight house on a certain portion of the property, and as nothing remains to be determined except the extent of these rights under the ordinance, it would seem that two great and progressive organizations, like the plaintiff city and the defendant railway company, ought to be able, without further prolonging this already protracted litigation, to adjust this matter, on the legal lines suggested in this opinion, on a liberal basis, that will at once protect the rights of the public and the defendant company.

Cause remanded for a new trial, but only of the issue considered in the foregoing opinion, and for such modification of the findings of fact and conclusions of law as may be made necessary by the determination of such issue.

Start, Ch. J.: I dissent.

Buck, J.: I also dissent.

34 L. R. A.

KENTUCKY COURT OF APPEALS.

J. B. BRIGGS, Trustee, etc., Appt.,
v.

Town of RUSSELLVILLE

Town of RUSSELLVILLE

J. H. BEALL, Appt.

(.....Ky.....)

Land within the limits of a town, although it has never been divided into building lots, is subject to municipal taxation if it is near railroad depots and shops, has convenient access to the highways, and lies only a short distance from the business portion of the town, so that it enjoys the police protection and other benefits of the town.

(June 20, 1894.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Logan County refusing to enjoin defendant from proceeding to collect a tax which had been assessed against plaintiff's property. Affirmed.

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Logan County enjoining defendant from proceeding to collect a tax which had been assessed against plaintiff's property. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Wilbur F. Browder and M. P. Sloss for Briggs and Beall.

Messrs. J. H. Bowden and S. R. Crewdson for town of Russellville.

Landes, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

These two cases originated in the Logan circuit court, involve the same questions and stand upon substantially the same state of facts, except as to the condition, use, and situation of the parcels of land, which it is claimed on the one hand and denied on the other are subject to municipal taxation. On that account they were heard together, both in the court below and in this court. The litigation is friendly, the object being to ascertain whether or not the town of Russellville has the right to impose taxes for municipal purposes on certain land belonging to the appellant J. B. Briggs, trustee, in one case, and to the appellee, J. H. Beall, in the other case, which was originally brought within the limits of the town by an act of the general assembly entitled "An Act to Extend NOTE—Municipal taxation of rural lands within the limits of the corporation.

- I. Validity of exemption or discrimination in rates.
- II. Construction of statutory exemption or discrimination.
- III. Right to repeal exemptions.
- IV. Validity of taxation of farm lands.
- V. Power of courts.
- VI. What property is taxable.
- VII. Power of municipality to exempt.
- VIII. Original incorporation.
- IX. Assessments.
- X. Method of raising question.

There is much contrariety of opinion among the courts upon all branches of this question.

I. Validity of exemption or discrimination in rates.

Leaving out of consideration for the present the conflict upon the question whether farm property can be constitutionally taxed for municipal purposes, there seems to be a hopeless conflict, in practical application of the rule if not in actual decision, upon the question whether or not an attempted exemption of such property is valid.

It is held that where the Constitution requires that all taxes shall be uniform the legislature cannot provide for the exemption or lower taxation of farm land within the limits of the municipality. Knowlton v. Rock County Supers. 9 Wis. 410.

So, where the Constitution provides for the taxation of all property, land within the limits of a municipality cannot be exempted from municipal taxation. Zanesville v. Richards, 5 Ohio St. 590.

So, under a constitutional provision that all taxes assessed by cities must be uniform upon all taxable property and persons within the limits of the city, and no property shall be exempted therefrom other than such property as may be exempted from taxation under the Constitution and general laws of the state, a special charter of a city exempting agricultural property from taxation is void. Hayward v. People, 145 Ill. 85.

Under a constitutional provision that all taxes must be uniform the owner of agricultural land in 34 L. R. A.

a city cannot have the aid of the courts to relieve him from municipal taxation. Cary v. Pekin, 38 Ill. 154, 30 Am. Rep. 548.

Under a constitutional provision that all laws exempting property from taxation other than that provided for in the Constitution shall be void, an exemption of agricultural property from municipal taxation when such property is not provided for in the Constitution is void. Smith v. Americus, 30 Ga. 810.

On the other side, it is held that the provision of the Indiana Constitution requiring a uniform and equal rate of assessment and taxation does not apply to municipal taxes. Hamilton v. Ft. Wayne, 40 Ind. 491.

So, a provision in a city charter exempting from taxation for fire-department purposes all unplatted land containing 10 or more acres, and used exclusively for farming purposes, is a reasonable and valid provision. Baldwin v. Hastings, 33 Mich. 630.

The Michigan Constitution requires a uniform rule of taxation (art. 14, § 11), but the court does not seem to have considered the effect of that requirement upon the question.

The land used for agricultural purposes may be taxed at a lower rate than that used for city purposes. Gillette v. Hartford, 31 Conn. 351.

There seems to be no provision in the Connecticut Constitution upon the question.

A law exempting agricultural tracts of more than 10 acres in size, while allowing tracts of less than that size to be taxed, does not violate constitutional provisions requiring the uniform operation of laws and forbidding the granting of special privileges and immunities. Leicht v. Burlington, 73 Iowa, 20.

Prescription by the legislature of different rates of taxation for the old and new portions of the city in case of an enlargement of boundaries is not an unjust discrimination. The legislature has power to make two or more taxing districts of the same city in which the rates of taxes shall be different. Daly v. Morgan, 60 Md. 460, 1 L. R. A. 757.

A statute exempting agricultural land from taxation in extending the limits of a town is not in conflict with the provisions of a Constitution and Define the Corporate Limits of the Town of Russellville, Authorize the Election of a Police Judge, and Provide a Sinking Fund for Said Town," approved March 12, 1869 (2 Sess. Acts 1869, p. 236). Previous to the passage of said act, the boundary of the town was in a very irregular and unsatisfactory shape, and while, in 1869, it was a thrifty, though quiet, town, having a population of near 2,000 souls, with a reasonable prospect of growth and of steady improvement, having the advantage of one railroad, with the prospect of the early construction of another, the main object of the extension of the limits seems to have been to correct the irregular shape of the lines defining the limits of the town, and at the same time to extend the jurisdiction of the municipal government over a considerable territory claimed to be actually suburban, although not within the lawful limits of the town. This the act accomplished by describing a perfect square of territory, each of the four sides extending 410 poles, with the county court-house and public square in the center. By a previous act, entitled "An Act to Amend the Charter of the Town of Russellville," approved March 5, 1868 (2 Sess. Acts 1867-68, p. 219), the chairman and board of trustees of the town were authorized and empowered to assess and collect annually an ad valorem tax "of not exceeding 50 cents on the $100 worth of real and personal estate within the corporate limits of said town, and a poll-tax of not exceeding $3" on each tithable inhabitant of the town, for municipal purposes. Subsequently another act was passed, entitled "An Act to Amend and Reduce into One the Acts Relating to the Town of Russellville," approved May 1, 1880 (2 Sess. Acts 1879, p. 874), which was substantially a new charter, and under which the municipal affairs of the town were conducted, until the passage of the act for the government of towns of the fifth class, approved July 8, 1893, to which class the town of Russellville now belongs. By the act of 1880 the boundary of the town was continued as fixed by the act of 1869, and the municipal authorities were empowered to assess and collect taxes for municipal purposes annually upon all of the real and other property in the town as of the 10th day of January, upon a list of the "taxable inhabitants and owners of property in said town," and the marshal of the town was invested with "all the powers and authority within the town of Russellville to collect the town tax as sheriffs have in collecting the state tax and county revenue." Notwithstanding the ample power of taxation thus conferred on the municipal authorities to assess and collect taxes on their property within the corporate limits of the town, no effort was made by the said authorities to assess or levy or collect from the appellant Briggs and the appellee Beall taxes upon their land which was brought into the limits of the town by the act of which prohibit the exemption of private property from taxation and require all property to be taxed in proportion to its value. Kansas City v. Cooley, 60 Mo. 127.

The legislature may exempt from city taxation land held for farming purposes. Lee v. Thomas, 49 Mo. 112.

But under a new Constitution the Missouri court has changed its rulings.

A statutory provision permitting the assessment of land in a city not laid off into lots and blocks only by the acre as agricultural land is in conflict with a constitutional provision that all property subject to taxation shall be taxed in proportion to its value. State, Griewold, v. O'Brien, 89 Mo. 631.

A statute providing that no tract of land in a city over 3 acres in extent shall be subject to taxation so long as it remains undivided and is used for agricultural purposes is in conflict with a constitutional provision requiring taxes to be uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the same and forbidding exemptions other than those declared in the Constitution. Copeland v. St. Joseph, 126 Mo. 417.

II. Construction of statutory exemption or discrimination.

There are several cases in which statutory exemptions or discriminations have been construed or enforced without any discussion as to their validity.

Under the Indiana act of 1852 a tract of land, less than 20 acres of which were used for farm purposes, was not exempt from city taxation. Conklin v. Cambridge City, 68 Ind. 130.

A particular statute exempting farm lands within a certain city from municipal taxation is not repealed by a general statute subsequently passed without negative words, giving a general power of taxation but without necessary conflict between the two. Blain v. Bailey, 25 Ind. 165.

The Indiana act of 1877 providing for an exemption of agricultural lands from municipal taxation 34 L. R. A.

was not retroactive in its operation. Stills v. Indianapolis, 81 Ind. 532.

Although the land is platted for the purpose of sale in parcels, each of which contains more than 5 acres, it is not within the provision of the Indiana statute taxing platted land if it is vacant and not used for town purposes. South Bend v. Cushing, 123 Ind. 290.

In Henderson v. Lambert, 8 Bush. 607, it appeared that farm lands had been expressly exempted from city taxation by act of the legislature.

In St. Louis v. Allen, 13 Mo. 400, the power to tax the added land was made dependent on the making of certain suggested improvements in the vicinity of the added territory.

But when the improvement was made the land might be taxed at city rates for the remainder of the year. Benoist v. St. Louis, 19 Mo. 179.

A requirement that the land shall be assessed by the acre does not require the assessment to be made at the value of the land for farm purposes, but the taxing power may take into consideration the value of the land for any purpose. Benoist v. St. Louis, 15 Mo. 668.

In Serrill v. Philadelphia, 38 Pa. 355, the court construed certain tax exemptions which were given by statute in favor of rural lands, holding that one covering all rural lands was repealed by a subsequent one covering only marsh lands so as not to give a double exemption to the latter.

The mere fact that the land is held with the expectation of a rise in value will not make it taxable if it is used for farm purposes or is unoccupied, under a charter making farm lands or land vacant or unoccupied taxable at a lower rate than general city property. Gillette v. Hartford, 81 Conn. 351.

Under the Louisiana act of 1850 a distinction is made between rural and urban property. Municipality No. 8 v. Michoud, 6 La. Ann. 606.

Under the Indiana statutes agricultural land within a city is subject to city school taxes and such special assessments as affect it in the same manner as other property, but it is only subject to general city taxes to an amount equal to the rate 1890, and afterwards by the act of 1890, until the efforts made for that purpose which furnished the occasion for the present litigation. As we take it, the taxes now involved were assessed in 1893; under the authority of acts in force previous to the passage of the said act of July 8, 1893. Action was instituted by each of the parties seeking to enjoin the town and the collector of the town tax from proceeding to collect these taxes, which had been assessed by the municipal authorities on their said respective parcels of land within the limits of the town. The issues having been made up in each case, in the case of the appellant Briggs the court adjudged, in substance, that his land was lawfully assessed, and that he was liable for the tax, and his petition was dismissed; but in the case of the appellee Beall, the court adjudged, in brief, that his land was not lawfully assessed, or subject to the tax, and that he was not liable therefor, and the municipal authorities were perpetually enjoined from proceeding to collect the tax that they were then seeking to collect from him on his said land. These appeals are prosecuted to reverse the judgment in each case.

In the case of Briggs, trustee, it appears that he was living with his family upon 12 acres of land that were included within the limits of the town by the acts of 1869 and 1880, which have been referred to, and that the dwelling house and all other improvements were erected thereon in 1872. The track of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad lies in front of this ground and is the south boundary of it. We do not deem it necessary to go into lengthy detail of the facts material especially in the Briggs case. It is sufficient to say that the facts show that, although there was no public street or alley or sidewalk contiguous to his ground, he and his family had convenient access to the public streets of the town by a driveway out of his lawn across the said railroad track, and thence across a meadow in which Mrs. Briggs had an interest, to the Hopkinsville pike, laid down on the map of the town as "Hopkinsville Street," which leads to the public square and the principal business part of the town, and which is a prolongation of the main center street in the original boundary. His ground is 32 poles from the passenger depot of the said railroad, at which is the nearest sidewalk. The same may be said concerning the land of appellee Beall. Brigg's residence is also something more than 1,000 feet from the electric-light plant which supplied the town, and from which his residence was supplied, over a line erected at his own expense, with light, which was the nearest point in the business part of the town to his house. He had a number of tenement houses situated south of the said railroad track, and somewhat nearer to his ground than the electric-light plant. The facts show further that assessed in the several townships for general township purposes. Leeper v. South Bend, 106 Ind. 373; Dickerson v. Franklin, 112 Ind. 173.

III. Right to repeal exemptions.

An exemption from municipal taxation may be repealed at any time. McCallie v. Chattanooga, 3 Head, 317.

The limitation of the rate of taxation to be placed on agricultural land may be repealed at any time. Washburn v. Oshkosh, 60 Wis. 453.

The legislature may repeal a provision for the exemption or lower taxation of agricultural property at any time. Powell v. Parkersburg, 28 W. Va. 603; Probasco v. Moundsville, 11 W. Va. 501.

A statute fixing the size of the tract which is exempt from taxation lower than was the rule when certain property was annexed to the city will apply to that property if it is within its provisions. Winzer v. Burlington, 68 Iowa, 279.

IV. Validity of taxation of farm lands.

Upon the question of the power to tax farm land there is also direct conflict.

One line of cases holds that—

The taxation of farm property within the limits of a city for city purposes cannot be said to be a taking of property without due process of law however great the hardship or unequal the burden. Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 73, 26 L. ed. 653.

A statute giving a municipal corporation power to tax all land within its limits is not in violation of the Indiana Constitution, cannot be held void because it is unjust, and does not take private property for public use without compensation. Logansport v. Seybold, 59 Ind. 225.

The prohibition against taking private property for public use without compensation has no application to the taxation of property. Groff v. Frederick City, 44 Md. 67; Martin v. Dix, 52 Miss. 53, 24 Am. Rep. 661.

The extension of city limits so as to include farm lands and subject them to taxation, is not unconstitutional. R. A.

stitutional. Gliboney v. Cape Girardeau, 58 Mo. 141; State. Patterson v. McReynolds, 61 Mo. 303.

The charter may authorize taxation of all the property within the corporate limits. Barker v. State, 18 Ohio, 514.

Farm land enjoying no direct advantage from the municipal improvements is not exempt for that reason from payment of municipal taxes. Hummelstown v. Brunner, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 140.

The question of the taxation of rural property within the limits of a municipality rests solely with the legislature, and such taxation is not unconstitutional because not equal and uniform for the reason that the rural property does not receive the same benefit that urban property does, nor because it is a taking of private property for public use without compensation. Norris v. Waco, 57 Tex. 635.

The taxation of a dairy farm included in the city limits for general municipal purposes is not an unconstitutional taking of private property without just compensation,—at least where the Constitution requires that taxes shall be uniform in respect to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the body levying the tax. Ferguson v. Snohomish, 5 Wash. 668, 24 L. R. A. 795.

If the legislature includes the new territory in the municipality without any direction as to its liability for taxation it will be liable to municipal taxation for past debts as well as for current expenses. Madry v. Cox, 73 Tex. 533.

If the proceedings to incorporate the land into the city are valid the taxes will be valid. Lancaster County v. Rush, 35 Neb. 119.

If the legislature has power to annex the territory to the municipality, when it is annexed the municipality has the right to tax it. Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 242.

On the other side it is held that—

Subjecting to municipal taxation farm property which cannot be benefited by municipal expenditures is a taking of private property for public purposes without just compensation. People v. Daniels, 6 Utah, 290, 5 L. R. A. 444; Ellison v. Linford, 7 Utah, 163.

his ground was not divided up into lots, but that it constituted one lot, upon which, with ample means, he had erected a splendid urban residence, where he and his family were in a position to enjoy, and had the privilege of enjoying, if they chose to avail themselves of it, all of the advantages and conveniences which were to be afforded by or derived from the presence and energy of the municipal government, not only for comfort, but for protection as well. Appellee Beall was the owner of 180 acres of land situated on the western and northwestern boundary of the town as established by the act of 1869, but all of his land, up to the commencement of his action, had always been used as farming lands, and only 77½ acres of it were included in the said town boundary, through which, as shown on the map of the town, the Owensboro & Nashville Railroad track runs from north to south. No part of this land had ever been divided into lots since the act of 1869. His residence was on that part of his farm that lay outside of the limits of the town, and the approach to it was from the Hopkinsville pike, and from a point thereon beyond the west line of the town boundary. That part of his land within the town boundary, as it appears from the map of the town is about equally divided by the track or line of the Owensboro & Nashville Railroad, but no streets or alleys had been laid out through any part of it, but that part of it east of said railroad is situated on the Greenville pike, which is a prolongation northward of Main street, and is laid down on the map as "Greenville Street," which the municipal authorities in 1862 and since improved at considerable expense and for some distance out, and in front of Beall's land, but just how far, or to what point, the record does not show with certainty, but probably to a point nearly half way the length of his line fronting on said street or pike. Along this street, and on both sides of it, and adjoining Beall's land on the west side, there are several houses, which were occupied mostly by colored persons, erected on lots which were originally a part of the tract in question, but they were laid off, and sold prior to 1869. The occupants of said houses used the said street as the only way of ingress and egress from the premises, and appellee Beall used it also when going to and from that part of his land which he entered through a gate opening on the said street or pike. That part of this parcel of land lying between the line of the Owensboro & Nashville Railroad and Greenville street is wet, but good meadow land, and water rises on and flows from it under a culvert constructed across the said street at the expense of the town. There is an area of 34 acres of land between appellee Beall's land and the business part of the town, upon which there were not any improved lots, except that of appellant Briggs. Appellee Beall

The extension of the limits of a city over outlying farm lands is in reality nothing more than an attempt to tax land a certain distance outside the limits of the city, and is in effect the taking of private property without compensation. Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa, 82; Langworthy v. Dubuque, 13 Iowa, 86.

In Cheaney v. Hooser, 9 B. Mon. 380, it is intimated that the extension of the limits of a city over an adjoining farming land simply for the purpose of increasing the revenues of the city without any benefit to the farm would be an unconstitutional taking of private property for public use without compensation. And that intimation was adopted and applied as law in Covington v. Southgate, 15 B. Mon. 491.

An uninhabited tract of land nowhere adjoining an existing village, and in which the village has no special interest, cannot be made a part of the village for the mere purpose of increasing the corporate revenues by the exaction of taxes. Smith v. Sherry, 50 Wis. 210. This is put upon the ground that such action would be an abuse of the constitutional power that the legislature shall provide for the organization of cities, and incorporated villages.

If the city limits are extended to include agricultural property which is not benefited by the extension and cannot be, but is farming land simply, the attempt to tax is taking private property for public use without compensation contrary to the provisions of the Constitution. Parkland v. Gaines, 88 Ky. 562.

But a subjection of land to taxation by the extension of town limits is not unlawful unless the legitimate object of improving the town shall have been palpably perverted to the unauthorized purpose only of lessening the burden of taxation on the inhabitants who would not be otherwise benefited by the extension. Swift v. Newport, 7 Bush, 37.

It is no invasion of constitutional rights to require land which enjoys the benefits of a town and is surrounded by buildings and has enjoyed the enhanced price because of the building of the town to be taxed as city property. Simms v. Paris (Ky.) 1 S. W. 543.

Local taxation authorized by law cannot be deemed a taking of private property without just compensation, unless it is palpable that persons or their property are subjected to such burden for benefit of others for purposes in which they have no interest and to which they are therefore not justly bound to contribute. Elkton Trustees v. Gill, 94 Ky. 123.

V. Power of courts.

Some of the courts assume that under the departmental system of government the question of municipal taxation, the same as that of the annexation of territory to the municipality (see note to State, Richards v. Cincinnati, 27 L. R. A. 787), is purely one for the legislature, and that the courts will not interfere with legislative action.

If the limits of the municipal corporation have been constitutionally extended the courts are powerless to interfere with the taxation of agricultural lands within the extended limits. Santa Rosa v. Coulter, 58 Cal. 537; Dixon v. Mayes, 73 Cal. 166.

In a case involving validity of a tax on the property of a mining company the court said it would not enter upon an inquiry as to whether the owner of the property is benefited by the tax or not, for the purpose of determining its validity. Gold Hill v. Caledonia Silver Min. Co. 5 Sawy. 575.

When the lawmaking department of the government has exercised its judgment in relation to the assessment of taxes, the courts have no power to interfere unless the fundamental law of the land has been violated. Linton v. Athens, 53 Ga. 533.

Where agricultural land is not within the exemptions made by the Constitution and statutes of the state, it will not be exempt. Mendenhall v. Burton, 42 Kan. 570.

If the property has been included within the limits of the city, the question of the right to tax it is precluded, and the rule is that all property situated within the city must bear its proper portion of taxes and must be assessed as city property. The had never voted for town officers, or held any office in said town, but was engaged in mercantile and other business in the town, and owned other property in the town. The lands of both Briggs and Beall, the taxes on which are involved in this litigation, are in the vicinity of the passenger and freight depots of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, and the shops of the Owensboro & Nashville Railroad, as shown by the map of the town, but they are situated on the side of the line or track of the former road opposite to them, which has to be crossed in passing from their lands to the business part of the town, the court-house and the public square.

The foregoing statement contains the principal facts that are material to the questions raised in the two cases. It is contended by counsel for the appellant Briggs, and the appellee Beall that neither parcel of ground was subject to municipal taxation, briefly, because it is not urban property, and had never been used as such, or divided into lots; that the owners had never consented to the extension of the boundary of the town so as to include their land within the town limits; that they had never received any benefits from the municipal government, or consented to be taxed by it; and that to compel them to pay taxes on their said lands to the town for municipal purposes would be the taking of private property without any compensation.

court says: "It would breed unwarrantable confusion with our assessments, and produce endless strife in our taxation, to permit any body of land that has been declared a part of an incorporated city to be taxed as farming land, the same as if it was not embraced within the city limits." Hurla v. Kansas City, 46 Kan. 738.

The question whether the benefits resulting from the extension of the limits authorized the burden of contributing to existing debts of the city is for the legislature to determine. Stoner v. Flournoy, 28 La. Ann. 850.

The question of the taxation of rural property within the city limits is for the legislature, and not for the courts, and the courts will not interfere although the tax is harsh and oppressive. New Orleans v. Michoud, 10 La. Ann. 783.

In New Orleans v. Cazelar, 27 La. Ann. 156, where it appeared that complainant's property was several miles distant from the outskirts of the city and consisted in part of original forest, the court held that the power to extend the limits of the city was absolute, and that the Constitution required the taxes within the city limits to be equal and uniform, so that there was no relief to complainant from such taxation.

In St. Louis v. Russell, 9 Mo. 507, it is held that the power of the legislature to extend the limits of a municipality are unlimited and it is assumed that the power of taxation accompanies the extension of the limits.

Rural land which lies within the limits of a municipal corporation, and which belongs to a class of property selected for taxation, cannot be relieved from a levy for municipal purposes on the ground that it receives no, or an inadequate, benefit from the expenditure of the money so raised. State, Bailey, v. Brown, 53 N. J. L. 162.

In Manly v. Raleigh, 4 Jones, Eq. 370, where a suit was brought to enjoin the collection of taxes on the added territory, the court says the power of the legislature to extend the limits of the town is absolute.

If the discretion as to annexation of land to a

On the other hand, it is contended by counsel for the town that the situation of the two properties is such, with reference to the streets of the town, and with reference to other houses and lots within the limits that are subject to municipal burdens, as to make it proper and right that they should be subject to their fair proportion of these burdens, which are necessary to the maintenance of municipal government for the benefit and convenience of the inhabitants of the town, and for the preservation of public order. Numerous cases of a character similar to these cases, and in which the same questions were raised, have been decided by this court, and in no such case has it been held that the general assembly did not have the constitutional power to fix the territorial limits of municipal corporations, either by acts of original incorporation, or by subsequent acts extending their boundary lines. We do not understand counsel here to deny that the general assembly had the constitutional authority to pass the acts of 1869 and 1880 by which the limits of the town of Russellville were extended. Nor do we understand counsel to hold that the municipal power or authority within the limits of the town as defined by those acts is restricted, except in respect of the power to tax the added territory. There were other purposes for which the general assembly had the constitutional power to extend the jurisdiction of municipal govern-municipality is committed to county commissioners, the court cannot interfere with the exercise of such discretion on the ground that the resulting taxation will bear unjustly on individuals within the annexed territory. Powers v. Wood County Commrs. 8 Ohio St. 238; Blanchard v. Bissell, 11 Ohio St. 96.

The question of the taxation of rural land for municipal purposes is for the legislature, and not for the courts. Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 85 Pa. 170, 27 Am. Rep. 633.

The courts are powerless to afford relief if agricultural lands are taxed. Davis v. Point Pleasant, 22 W. Va. 239.

In Land, Log & L. Co. v. Brown, 73 Wis. 224, 3 L. R. A. 472, the court, in considering the power of the legislature to authorize a village to levy a tax on all the property in the town in which the village was situated, said it is for the legislature to fix the limits of a taxing district, and not for the court.

Under a constitutional provision that all property within the limits of a taxing power shall be equally taxed, a court will not withdraw land from the taxing district after the incurring of indebtedness so that the result would be to throw greater burdens on the remaining land. Galeburg v. Hawkinson, 75 Ill. 152.

Conversely, some of the courts assume the power to supervise the action of the legislature, and some others, which have decided that the power rests absolutely in the legislature, have intimated that they would control any abuse of such power. The position of the latter courts seems inconsistent because if the power is absolute in the legislature it would seem that the court would have nothing to say about it, and in the states in which the courts exercise the right to interfere it is because of alleged abuse of power by the legislature. So that the difference between the two rules rests rather upon the degree of abuse than upon the question of power.

The legislature cannot authorize a city to tax for its support land not reasonably considered to be city property. Bradshaw v. Omaha, 1 Neb. 16.

But in Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54, that case was ment over territory contiguous to a town or city by extending its limits, besides that of taxation. This might be done in any case in anticipation of the future growth of the town or city, for the purposes of police protection, and the like. Such an exercise of legislative power was not violative of the constitutional guaranty of private property to the owners, because the land was still their own, and could not be taken or appropriated for any public use, such as for streets or alleys, without their consent, or without just compensation therefor. Cheaney v. Hooser, 9 B. Mon. 880; Swift v. Newport, 7 Bush, 87. It will be found on investigation, we think, that in most of the states the courts will not interfere in such cases to relieve property owners from taxation by the municipal authorities, because municipal government being an important part of the governmental machinery of the state, it is the peculiar province of the legislative department—the lawmaking power—to define or provide a method of defining the limits of municipal corporations, and to clothe them with the powers of local government, and that the propriety of legislative action in this regard may not be questioned. In this state, however, as well as in several other states, it has long been the established doctrine that the courts will relieve against the burden of municipal taxation, following the extension of the boundary lines of a town or city, in cases where “the legitimate object of improving the town” has been “palpably perverted to the unauthorized purpose only of lessening the burden of taxation on the inhabitants, who will not be otherwise benefited by the extension.” Swift v. Newport, supra. In the case of Elkton Trustees v. Gill, 94 Ky. 138, following Cheaney v. Hooser, supra, and Mallus v. Shields, 2 Met. (Ky.) 558, the doctrine is stated in the following language: “The protection afforded to, and advantages received by, the citizen from a municipal government are, in the meaning of the Constitution, just compensation for taxation imposed in order to maintain it. And local taxation authorized by law cannot be deemed taking private property without just compensation, unless it is palpable that persons, or their property, are subjected to such burden for benefit of others for purposes in which they have no interest and to which they are therefore not justly bound to contribute.” In that case a parcel of 6 acres of land, embracing the residence and lawn of the owner, which was within the limits of the town, the land being a part of a tract containing 46 acres, which was used for agricultural purposes, the part including the residence being adjacent to two streets of the town, was held to be subject to taxation by the town. In Mallus v. Shields it was held that a lot of about 9 acres departed from, and the court held that except in cases where the sole object of the extension of the limits was to increase the revenue of the city, which was not passed upon, the question of the extension of the limits of the city was for the legislature, and that when the limits were extended the taxation upon all the property within the extended limits should be uniform according to its value.

The courts will interfere to restrain municipal taxation where the owner of the property cannot be benefited in a municipal point of view. Langworthy v. Dubuque, 16 Iowa, 271.

The courts will limit the line of municipal taxation to the line where it ceases to be for purposes beneficial to the proprietor in a municipal point of view. Fulton v. Davenport, 17 Iowa, 404.

In order to justify interference by the court there must be such a flagrant case as authorizes the conclusion at first blush that the taxation is a mere taking of private property for public use. Sharp v. Dunavan, 17 B. Mon. 223.

In Re Little Meadows, 85 Pa. 335, where an attempt was made to incorporate a village with a great deal of farm land within its limits, the court says it is quite unjust to give a village such an extension, for this puts all the farm lands around it in the power of the real villagers to tax them as they please and expend all the tax for themselves. But the question in the case was the interpretation of the power given by the legislature, and not the question of the power of the legislature.

The wisdom or discretion of the exercise of the power of taxation cannot be interfered with by the courts unless it has been so grossly perverted as to be a manifest violation of the Constitution. Hewitt's Appeal, 88 Pa. 55.

If the statute provides that the city council shall discriminate between agricultural lands and city lands the discretion is committed to them to determine which shall be taxed as city lands, and the court will not interfere with that discretion unless it is abused. Erie v. Reed, 113 Pa. 468.

When in the judgment of the legislature the interest of a suburban population demands local regulations, and the peace, tranquillity, and order of 34 L. R. A.

the public indicate that such is necessary, there is constitutional power to so enact and tax for such purposes the real estate of the people whether the lands are large or small. There is no power in the courts to control the action of the legislature when the power to tax is conferred in good faith to uphold local government and give police regulations to the people, and not merely to impress taxable property for revenue purposes in order to lighten the burdens of others. Arbogast v. Louisville, 2 Bush, 271.

The Federal courts are bound by the decisions of the state upon the question as to restraining collection of taxes upon farm lands within the city limits for city purposes. Oliver v. Omaha, 3 Dill. 368; Kountze v. Omaha, 5 Dill. 443.

VI. What property is taxable.

Each case must be determined upon its own peculiar facts. Brooks v. Polk County, 58 Iowa, 460.

If the land is so situated that the city cannot grade and improve streets, erect its public works, or extend public protection to its citizens proper without at the same time giving the owner of the land the full benefit and greatly enhancing the value of his property, the power to tax arises. Fulton v. Davenport, 17 Iowa, 404; Davis v. Dubuque, 20 Iowa, 458.

A lot which is benefited by the improvements and current expenditures, as well as permanently enhanced in value, is liable to taxation for municipal purposes; but it is not liable to taxation if it is not accessible by any street leading to the business part of the city and has no additions or improvements near it, while it is surrounded on all sides by land used exclusively for agricultural purposes. O'Hare v. Dubuque, 22 Iowa, 144.

In determining whether lands of a rural character situated within the limits of a city are benefited by the municipal government, the purpose for which they are held is a controlling fact to be considered. If held as city property to be put upon the market whenever they reach a value corresponding to the view of the owner, they ought to acres in the town of West Covington, upon which the owner resided, and a part of which was in cultivation, and part containing evergreens and shrubs and a large number of fruit trees, was constitutionally subject to taxation for municipal purposes. In the case of Sharp v. Dunavan, 17 B. Mon. 223, it was held that where a town is extended by improvement, so as to give those living adjacent to the town boundary all the advantages which the citizens enjoy from the local government of the town, the legislature had the constitutional power to extend the limits of the town and subject the owners of the property within the extension to taxation for town purposes, and that the legislative discretion in the location of the lines of the extension could not be questioned or controlled by the courts. In that case 34 acres of land, including the residence of the owner, being a part of a tract of 140 acres which were used for agricultural purposes only, were brought within the limits of the town by the legislative act. The owner's residence was situated 25 poles from the original boundary of the town, and 155 poles from the center of the business part of the town, and near enough to enjoy the advantages of schools, churches, and the business of the town. This case and that of Cheaney v. Hooser arose under the act of 1846, extending the boundaries of the town of Hopkinsville. Another case—that of Stiles v. Dunavan (MSS. Opin.)—originated under the same act, in which it was decided that the land of the owner that was brought within the limits of the town by the said act, containing 23 acres, and used as a residence, and for pasturing and other agricultural purposes, was liable to municipal taxation. The foregoing references are sufficient to show the doctrine that has prevailed in this state upon this question, and the manner in which it has been applied. Applying it to these two cases, we find that the facts exhibited by the records before us, fairly viewed, do not make out a case that would authorize the interference of the court in behalf of either appellant Briggs or appellee Beall. Considering the character and location of their property, its proximity to the two railroads, their depots and shops, running through and located in the town, and to the business portion of the town, the actual and prospective growth of the town, and the propriety, under existing conditions, of extending the police jurisdiction of the town over the locality, and the benefits and advantages necessarily afforded to and enjoyed by them, by reason of the very existence and presence of the municipal government, in common with other citizens and property owners on whom the burden of main-be taxed as other city property. Durant v. Kauffman, 34 Iowa, 194.

The mere fact that a city residence consists of 20 acres does not exempt it from city taxation if it is used for residence, lawns, orchards, groves, etc., which make it a fine piece of residence property. Ibid.

If the lands are enhanced in value by the proximity of the settled portion of the city and the prospect of its soon becoming good city property it is liable to city taxation. Brooks v. Polk County, 53 Iowa, 460.

In order to exempt land within a city from municipal taxation it is not sufficient merely to show that it is used for agricultural purposes, but it must be shown that it is used exclusively for such purposes, and that it does not derive such benefit from the expenditure of city taxes as to make it taxable for city purposes. Tubbsing v. Burlington, 68 Iowa, 691.

A tract of 18 acres of land occupied as a homestead surrounded on all sides by platted land and having all the benefits of light, water, streets, and fire protection common to that portion of the city is subject to municipal taxation, although it is not subdivided by streets or alleys nor platted. Parkins v. Burlington, 77 Iowa, 563.

In Ford v. North Des Moines, 80 Iowa, 623, the claim was made that there was an unreasonable extension of the municipal boundaries thereby making the subjecting of the property to taxation for abutting streets unconstitutional, but the court held that the mere fact that the property was overflowed by high water of the river was no reason why it should not be annexed to the municipality.

Under a statute exempting land in good faith for agricultural purposes land held for speculation is not exempt, although it is at the time used for agricultural purposes and is not laid off into lots or blocks. Farwell v. Des Moines Brick Mfg. Co. (Iowa) 66 N. W. 176.

Land abutting on the main street of a city is taxable, although it contains 18 acres, has never been platted in lots and blocks, and a part of it has always been used for agricultural purposes. Mendenhall v. Burton, 42 Kan. 370.

34 L. R. A.

The mere fact that the land is devoted to agricultural purposes is not sufficient to exempt it from taxation. The question to be determined is whether or not the actual condition of the town and its growth authorized it to include the land within its bounds. Maltus v. Shields, 2 Met. (Ky.) 563.

In order to render land liable to city taxation, there must be, not only benefits actual or presumed, but also a town or city population on or near the land creating a necessity, or at least rendering it not unreasonable that the municipal government should be extended over it. Courtney v. Louisville, 12 Bush, 413.

A tract of 15 acres of which 7 or 8 are used for pasture, 1 for garden, and the remainder for residence, barn, etc., is not land used exclusively for agricultural purposes within a statute exempting such land from taxation. Simms v. Paris (Ky.) 1 S. W. 542.

The mere fact that the land is used exclusively for garden purposes is not sufficient to exempt it if it enjoys all the advantages which the corporation affords others. Elfert v. Central Covington, 91 Ky. 194.

Where the complainant kept boarders who worked in the town, and stores had been erected near his property, he could not enjoin the collection of the tax on the ground that the limits of the town were extended solely to increase the revenue of the town at his expense. Beattyville v. Daniels, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 736.

Where the proportion of the complainant's land which is within the town limits is only 6 acres, and he has sold a portion of his tract at an enhanced value because of the proximity of the town, while the streets are laid out past his property and buildings surround it, he cannot complain if he is taxed for municipal purposes. Milton Trustees v. Gill, 94 Ky. 138.

In State, Paulison, v. Taylor, 86 N. J. L. 184, the court asks, Can a man keep a farm or a large garden in the midst of a city or within city limits and claim that it shall be valued only according to the uses to which he applies it without regard to its actual market value?

A statute requiring farm land to be assessed by taining it had been cast, it was, in our opinion, reasonable and just to require them and their property to bear a due proportion of the burden. By forbearing for so many years to assess their property, it is manifest that the municipal authorities were not seeking to foster private interests, or to lighten the burden of other taxpayers, by extending the boundaries of the town; and when at last they did attempt to subject this property to taxation it was under circumstances and conditions that showed that these parties were to be equal sharers with every other property owner in the town of the benefits of the municipal government.

the acre is no longer applicable if the land has been laid off into lots and blocks. State, Combes v. Vanhorne, 30 N. J. L. 444.

A statute exempting property used for farm purposes applies only to land used for the cultivation of crops or the pasturage of stock, and not to dwelling houses and their appurtenances. Carriger v. Morristown, 1 Lea, 116.

If the streets are extended to the complainant's property, and he is afforded police protection, he is subject to municipal taxation. Cook v. Crandall, 7 Utah, 344.

A lot not used for agricultural purposes, and situated so near the city as to be protected and benefited by the municipal government, is not exempt from city taxation. Butler v. Muscatine, 11 Iowa, 438; Herahey v. Muscatine, 22 Iowa, 184.

Land adapted to city uses, deriving increased value from the proximity of the city and having a city population near it rendering the city government over it reasonable, is liable to city taxation. But the court says undoubtedly land held for and adapted to agricultural purposes only cannot be subjected to ordinary municipal taxation simply because of proximity to a city, although this fact may afford extra facilities for reaching the city, and render it more valuable; nor merely because of improvements constructed by the municipality. Torbitt v. Louisville (Ky.) 4 S. W. 345.

In a territory the district to be taxed for municipal purposes must be confined to the limits indicated by the buildings or public improvements of the city, and such outside district as is so near that it is probable that the protection of the police will be extended to it or that the benefits of the improvements made with municipal taxes will be received by its residents and property. People v. Daniels, 6 Utah, 238, 5 L. R. A. 444.

If the property cannot be regarded as town lots, but is used for agricultural purposes alone, while the city improvements do not extend near it and there are only a few houses in its vicinity, it cannot be subjected to municipal taxation. Covington v. Arthur, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 163.

Where the land is unplatted and is used for agricultural purposes, and is distinct from the platted portion of the town and from streets and lights, it is exempt, although the dwelling was at one time rented to a person who did not occupy it for agricultural purposes. Taylor v. Waverly (Iowa) 68 N. W. 347.

Thirteen acres of land owned by a merchant doing business within the city, 1 acre of which he has improved and uses for a residence, lawn, and outbuildings, is agricultural if the remainder of the tract is used for cultivation and pasture. Tubbesing v. Burlington, 68 Iowa, 691.

In a petition to sever certain land from a municipality on the ground that it was agricultural land, the court says it is conceded that it is not liable for municipal taxation. It is further said cities ought not to be permitted to retain lands within their limits which are not needed for city purposes and which are not benefited by being within the corporation, against the will of the owners, for the mere purpose of deriving revenue therefrom. Evans v. Council Bluffs, 65 Iowa, 238.

Land used for agricultural purposes, remote from the city proper and not near to any street or alley which has been worked, is not liable to taxation for city purposes. Deeds v. Sanborn, 28 Iowa, 419; Deiman v. Fort Madison, 30 Iowa, 542.
84 L. R. A.

VII. Power of municipality to exempt.

The municipality cannot exempt agricultural property from taxation if the power is not conferred by the legislature. Third Municipality v. Ursuline Nuns, 2 La. Ann. 611.

VIII. Original incorporation.

The fact that the land is included within the municipality at its original incorporation, and not by extension of its limits, does not change the rule as to exemption from liability. Buell v. Ball, 20 Iowa, 232; Deeds v. Sanborn, 28 Iowa, 214.

IX. Assessments.

The principles applying to assessments are somewhat different from those applying to taxation in general, and are set out in notes to Re Madera Irrig. Dist. Bonds (Cal.) 14 L. R. A. 755; Davis v. Litchfield (Ill.) 21 L. R. A. 563; and Raleigh v. Pearce (N. C.) 17 L. R. A. 330. But for the purpose of showing how the conflict of decision runs into even this branch of the subject, attention is called to the following cases:

In Pennsylvania, where the rule of absolute power in the legislature is applied to other cases, it is held that farm lands cannot be charged with the expenses of improving the streets running through them. Scranton v. Pennsylvania Coal Co. 105 Pa. 445.

On the other side, Maryland holds that an assessment for benefits may be authorized upon property outside of city limits. There is a strong distinction between such an assessment and regular city taxes. Brooks v. Baltimore, 48 Md. 235.

So, special paving and curbing assessments are not taxes for "any city purpose" within the meaning of the Iowa exemption law. Farwell v. Des Moines Brick Mfg. Co. (Iowa) 66 N. W. 176.

So, in Indiana an exemption of agricultural property from general city taxation does not apply to assessments for improvements. Kalbrier v. Leonard, 34 Ind. 497.

Agricultural land within a city is subject to local assessments for street improvement. Taber v. Grafmiller, 109 Ind. 203.

If the property is within the limits of the town, and abuts on a street upon each side of which lots are platted, upon many of which lots houses are built, so that the construction of a highway is reasonable, the abutting lots may be assessed for the work, although a portion of the lots adjoin farm property in the rear and are not built upon. Hood v. Lebanon, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 313.

X. Method of raising question.

If the property has been unlawfully annexed to the city the collection of a tax thereon may be enjoined. Peru v. Bears, 55 Ind. 576.

The question of the validity of the tax cannot be raised by a suit against the collector for levying on and selling property for the nonpayment of the tax. Walden v. Dudley, 49 Mo. 421.

The power of a city to tax farm land cannot be called in question in an injunction suit by the owner to restrain the execution of an order annexing the property to the city. Suliz v. Indianapolis, 55 Ind. 515.
H. P. F.

The taxes involved in these cases having been levied and assessed under laws existing before the passage of the act of July 8, 1893, providing for the government of towns of the fifth class, it is not necessary to pass upon any question that might be raised under any of the provisions of that act bearing upon the question of municipal taxation. Nor is it necessary for us to determine the effect of the provisions of our present Constitution requiring that taxes shall be uniform upon all property subject to taxation "within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax," and prohibiting the exemption from taxation of any property except such as is exempted by the Constitution. Copeland v. St. Joseph, 126 Mo. 417. It is only necessary to say that under the provisions of the Constitution all property not exempted by that instrument is required to be "assessed for taxation at its fair cash value, estimated at the price it would bring at a fair voluntary sale." This plain requirement will prevent exorbitant and arbitrary valuations, and placing more than an equal and just proportion of the public burdens on any taxpayer.

Finding no error in the judgment in the case of Briggs, trustees, the judgment is affirmed. But, for the reasons given, the judgment in the case of appellee Beall is reversed. It is conceded by counsel for the town that only so much of his property as lies between the Owensboro & Nashville Railroad and Greenville street or pike, ought to be subjected to taxation in this proceeding, and the cause is accordingly remanded, with directions to so adjudge.

TENNESSEE SUPREME COURT.

Frank H. POST, Appt.,
v.

MECHANICS' BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION.

(.....Tenn.....)

1. Loans at fixed premiums without free and competitive bidding, as required by the Tennessee statutes (Mill. & V. Code, § 1751) cannot be lawfully made by a building and loan association, but are usurious if the premium is more than lawful interest.
2. Payments of dues upon stock in a building and loan association cannot be credited upon a usurious loan to a stockholder in winding up the affairs when the association is insolvent, since such credit would relieve the borrowing shareholder from his share of the losses and throw them all on the nonborrowing stockholders.
3. Payment of dues in advance under an agreement with a building and loan association for interest upon the advances until they are absorbed by dues does not entitle the stockholder in case of the insolvency of the association to be treated as a creditor with the right to repayment of his advances with interest, especially when the agreement for interest thereon was not warranted by the charter.
4. A mistaken declaration of the maturity of stock by a building and loan association when the stock is in fact not matured will not make the stockholder a creditor or put him in the position of a holder of matured stock in subsequently winding up the affairs of the association when insolvent.

(October 14, 1896.)

APPEAL by complainant and others from a decree of the Court of Chancery Appeals modifying a decree of the Chancery

Court for Knox County in a proceeding to wind up the affairs of an insolvent building association. Modified.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Green & Shields and Webb & McClung, for appellants, Post and advance payment stockholders:

These contracts have in them all of the elements of mutuality and equality of benefits which take the contracts out of the usury laws and make them valid as building and loan contracts.

Patterson v. Workmen's Bldg. & L. Assn. 14 Lea, 698.

The construction of a written contract is a matter of law which this court determines for itself without embarrassment from the holding of the court of chancery appeals.

Toomey v. Atyoe, 95 Tenn. 374.

Borrowing stockholders are estopped to deny the validity of their subscriptions for stock or to dispute that they are stockholders in said association.

Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 2d ed. §§ 108, 116; Morrow v. Nashville Iron, S. & C. Co. 87 Tenn. 262, 3 L. R. A. 37; Cartwright v. Dickinson, 88 Tenn. 488, 7 L. R. A. 706; Endlich, Bldg. Assn. §§ 60, 61.

The borrower's relation to the association as borrower is separate and distinct from his relation to it as a stockholder.

Endlich, Bldg. Assn. §§ 448, 477, 478.

The payment of dues upon stock are not payments to the mortgage debt, and do not ipso facto work an extinguishment of so much of the mortgage, and hence, they are not to be regarded as partial payments.

Endlich, Bldg. Assn. 2d ed. § 477; Rogers v. Hargo, 92 Tenn. 35.

The usury in the loan would only entitle the borrower to have the contract of loan purged of NOTE.—On the question of the right to apply payments made on stock in a building and loan association as credits on a mortgage given by the stockholder, see Southern Bldg. & L. Assn. v. An- 34 L. R. A.

niston Loan & T. Co. (Ala.) 29 L. R. A. 120, and note; Bulst v. Bryan (S. C.) 29 L. R. A. 127; Randall v. National Bldg., L. & P. Union (Neb.) 29 L. R. A. 123.

its usury, and could in no way affect the validity of the borrower's stock in the association.

The insolvency of an association and its inability to carry out its contract with the borrower work the same result.

Rogers v. Harpo, 92 Tenn. 38.

Mr. Julius Parker, for S. V. Armstrong;

The objection to the validity of the action of the association in declaring the stock matured resolves itself into an insistence that the declaration of dividends was erroneous and therefore illegal.

The capital stock of a corporation is a trust fund for the payment of creditors. This lies at the basis of the doctrine of the illegality of dividends which encroach on the capital stock.

2 Thomp. Corp. § 2136.

In the case at bar there are no creditors asking the court to enforce this doctrine intended alone for their benefit.

Upon the declaration of a dividend by directors it becomes eo instanti the property of the shareholders, and can be recovered by them as a debt notwithstanding the intervention of a condition of insolvency.

Cook, Stock & Stockholders, 2d ed. § 548.

When one paying money under mistake has deprived the party paid of legal rights, or influenced him to waive or lose them, the plaintiff will be estopped to show his mistake and to recover the payment so made.

Guila v. Baldridge, 2 Swan, 295.

It is not an answer to this contention to say that the directors who made the mistake were the common agents of all the stockholders including this appellant. As to dividends the corporation and the stockholder to whom such dividend was declared stand at arm's length and in opposition.

Cook, Stock & Stockholders, 2d ed. §§ 543 et seq.

The relation between the withdrawing stockholder whose withdrawal notice has matured, and the corporation, is that of creditor and debtor.

Endlich, Bldg. Assn. § 186.

The intervention of a condition of known insolvency between the creation of this relation and the withdrawing stockholder's getting his money does not change his relation back again to that of stockholder, and in winding up the insolvent association the withdrawing stockholder whose withdrawal notice has matured is entitled to be paid in priority to other stockholders.

Endlich, Bldg. Assn. § 486.

The right of the stockholder who gives notice of withdrawal in accordance with the by-laws and whose notice under those by-laws has matured is prior to that of general stockholders. The ground for this holding is that this is the contract method of terminating the relationship of stockholder and creating the relationship of creditor. That reason applies with its full force to this case, although the initiative step here was taken by the corporation and only assented to by the stockholder.

Messrs. Lucky, Sanford, & Tyson, for Curtis, Armstrong, Condon, and Hunt:

Every essential fact to constitute usury here exists.

Bank of Newport v. Cook (Ark.) 46 Am. St. Rep. 178, note.

34 L. R. A.

The statutes chartering building and loan associations must be strictly complied with or the loan will be held usurious.

Bates v. People's Sav. & L. Assn. 42 Ohio St. 655; Reese v. Ladies' Bldg. Assn. (Ark.) 18 L. R. A. 184, note.

If usurious then it must be governed by the rules governing other usurious loans,—the borrower charged with the sum actually received and credited with all sums paid, whether interest, dues, or fines.

Williar v. Baltimore Butchers' Loan & A. Assn. 45 Md. 547; Kupfert v. Gutenberg Bldg. Assn. 30 Pa. 471; Southern Bldg & L. Assn. v. Anniston Loan & T. Co. 101 Ala. 582, 29 L. R. A. 120.

In no event can appellants be required to pay back on their loans more than the amounts they actually received less the sums they paid thereon as interest, credited as partial payments, they sharing losses with other stockholders upon the sums paid in by them as dues.

Rogers v. Harpo, 92 Tenn. 35.

The investing stockholders who had paid in advance of March 27, 1895, are not preferred creditors, are simply stockholders, and have that much more of capital invested in the corporation.

The facts found by the appellate court stamp the loans as usurious.

Reese v. Ladies' Bldg. Assn. supra; Endlich, Bldg. Assn. 1st ed. §§ 353, 355, 356; 2d ed. § 408; Martin v. Nashville Bldg. Assn. 2 Coldw. 418.

Whenever a loan is found to be usurious then the borrowers have the right to have every payment made by them to the creditor credited on the loan.

Martin v. Nashville Bldg. Assn. and Southern Bldg. & L. Assn. v. Anniston Loan & T. Co. (Ala.) 29 L. R. A. 120, note, and authorities there cited; Endlich, Bldg. Assn. 1st ed. § 496.

The case at bar conclusively entitles the borrower to a credit for all of his payments. The association being the creditor has received from the borrower so much money as dues on the stock held by it as collateral. Where a creditor making a usurious loan and taking collateral from his debtor receives and collects on the collateral money he is clearly chargeable with the collections on collateral.

Endlich, Bldg. Assn. 2d ed. § 477; Lord v. Ocean Bank, 20 Pa. 386, 59 Am. Dec. 723.

If the transaction is not brought within the provisions of the acts governing loan associations it must be governed by the rules governing other cases of mortgagor and mortgagee.

Williar v. Baltimore Butchers' Loan & A. Assn. 45 Md. 547.

Even where the borrowing stockholder is in default and the association seeks to enforce its mortgage against him he is entitled to have credited on his debt the amount without interest he has paid on his stock.

2 Endlich, Bldg. Assn. §§ 149, 483.

Messrs. Henderson, Jourdmon, Welcher, & Hudson, and Cormick, Henderson, & Sansom for interveners.

Wilkes, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill filed to wind up the defendant company as an insolvent corporation, and to properly and equitably distribute its assets. It was filed by a shareholder and creditor. The association answered, and admitted its insolvency, and a decree was pronounced maintaining the bill as a general creditors' bill, adjudging the corporation as insolvent, and requiring all creditors to come in and file their claims, and a receiver was appointed. The chancellor passed upon the rights of the various parties, and gave decree accordingly. The case was appealed, and the court of chancery appeals has passed upon the questions involved, and the cause is now before us on appeal by several parties. The questions presented are important, and some of them quite difficult. We are content to mention and dispose of them as presented. It is found, as a matter of fact, by the court of chancery appeals, that the by-laws of the association contain a provision that no funds of the association should be loaned for a greater premium than 30 per cent, and, as a matter of fact, that the loans were not made under competitive bids, but by agreement between the borrowers and association, at a fixed premium, and were evidenced by notes payable six years after date, and secured, principal and interest, by mortgages upon real estate. These mortgages further provided to secure the dues and fines prescribed by the by-laws. No loans appear to have been made to parties other than stockholders in the association, and the stock of the borrowing shareholder was in each instance by the contract pledged to the association, to secure the loans made in addition to the real-estate mortgages. The court of chancery appeals find that these mortgages and notes matured at a definite time, and were enforceable at maturity, irrespective of the maturity of the stock hypothecated to secure the loans. The court of chancery appeals held, under this finding and statement of facts, that all of the loans made by the association to its members were in violation of the laws of the state in regard to usury, and that, in the adjustment and settlement of the rights of the parties, the loans should be purged of all usury. It is not necessary to dwell upon the question of whether the loans as made by the association were unlawful, unwarranted, and usurious. We have recently passed upon this question in one of its features in the case of McCauley v. Workman's Bldg. & S. Asso. in which we held that such loans were unlawful and usurious, under the statutes of our state, when the premium was fixed upon which loans could be made, and the money was not loaned under free and competitive bidding, as required by the statutes. It is not necessary for us to go further in this case. McCauley v. Workman's Bldg. & S. Asso. 97 Tenn. —. In accord: Patterson v. Workmen's Bldg. & L. Asso. 14 Lea, 696; Bates v. People's Sav. & L. Asso. 42 Ohio St. 655; Endlich, Bldg. Asso. 2d ed. 409-411; Id. 1st ed. 894, 897; Reeve v. Ladies Bldg. Asso. (Ark.) 18 L. R. A. 184, note.

The next question is: Treating the loans as usurious, upon what basis shall they be adjusted in the distribution of the assets of an insolvent corporation, and in the winding up of its affairs? The court of chancery appeals held that the borrowing stockholders should be charged with the money actually obtained by them from the association, with 6 per cent interest per annum upon such amount, but should have credit thereon for all moneys paid by them into the association on any and all accounts, including the payment of dues upon their stock, but that they were not entitled to have these payments credited upon the principle of partial payments. That court was of the opinion that the contracts of the members to pay dues upon their stock, and to repay their loans, were indissolubly tied together; that the payment of the former was intended as a payment pro tanto of the latter, and, inasmuch as the loans were usurious, the subscriptions were also tainted, and the borrowing stockholders were entitled to have their payments on stock dues credited upon the loans from the association. The court further held that, as a matter of fact, the dues paid into the association were paid in on stock, and that, under a proper construction of the contracts and law applicable to them, the agreement to pay dues, fines, and interest all entered into the undertaking of the borrowing member when he made his loan, and the taint of usury, therefore, attached to the whole transaction; and for this reason that court concludes that the payments upon stock should be credited upon the loans. The effect of this would be to relieve the borrowers from all losses in the business of the association, and throw such losses exclusively upon the nonborrowing stockholders. We think the question involved in this feature of the case is not one of fact, but of law and fact, to be determined by a proper construction of the charter, by-laws, and contracts entered into by the borrower and stockholder with the association. We are of opinion the court of chancery appeals is in error in not observing the distinction, well settled, between the borrower's relation to the association as a borrower and as a stockholder. Upon this point that court says: "The one distinct from the other may be thinkable, but, from a judicial view, they are essentially parts of one and the same contract so far as the construction of the contract is concerned. This being so, the element of usury, tainting the note, taints also its necessary element of payment as fixed by the contract." The subscriptions to stock, and the obtaining a loan, are two distinct things; and, while one is clearly dependent upon the other, still they are not indissolubly connected. A shareholder may never become a borrower. While it is the original scheme that all shareholders will become borrowers, still it is not compulsory. Likewise, a borrower is not in every instance a stockholder, as outsiders are allowed to borrow surplus funds of the association after the preference demand of the stockholders is satisfied. But, as to borrowing stockholders, their contracts and obligations as shareholders and borrowers are in many respects distinguishable and different. The shareholder enters primarily into his contract of subscription. This is a plain, simple contract, tainted with no usury or other irregularity, and could stand alone. Having made this contract and become a subscriber, he applies for a loan. He states in his application that he is a stockholder, and thus puts himself in position to claim the preference given to the stockholders in making loans. Payments made on stock are simply investments in stock, whether the shareholder be a borrower or not. These payments have no direct relation to loans made to members. It is true that in solvent going concerns, under certain contingencies, as in cases of withdrawal or maturity of the scheme, the borrower has the right to have the amounts due to him upon his stock credited upon his indebtedness to the association. But this payment of dues upon stock is not "ipso facto" a payment on his loan. It is more in the nature of a set-off or adjustment of cross demands and claims. If the borrower prefer, he can pay his loan in money, and the association cannot force him to credit the amount of his stock payments upon his indebtedness to the association. The relations of borrower and stockholder are separate and distinct. Endlich, Bldg. Asso. 2d ed. §§ 448, 477, 478. Mr. Endlich says: "It has therefore become a well-recognized doctrine that the payments of dues upon stock are not payments to the mortgage debt, and do not ipso facto work an extinguishment (pro tanto) of so much of the mortgage, and hence that they are not to be regarded as partial payments, and that therefore the statutory rule for computing interest on partial payments is inapplicable to them." Id. § 477. Again, it is said: "It may be safely stated that the doctrine has forced its own recognition upon the courts of nearly every state in the Union, as well as England. It may, it is true, not have found, upon all occasions, express and explicit judicial sanction. In theory, it may have been persistently denied, yet in its results it has in some form or other been everywhere applied, and, in the condemnation of the outrageous consequences flowing from the opposite doctrine, it has at some time or other been everywhere confirmed." Id. § 128; Rogers v. Hargo, 92 Tenn. 35; Pioneer Sav. & L. Co. v. Cannon, 96 Tenn. 599, 83 L. R. A. 112.

The rule in regard to the distribution of the assets of insolvent associations, in so far as it relates to borrowing stockholders, is laid down in Rogers v. Hargo, supra, to be that the borrowing stockholder will be charged with the money actually received by him, with interest from date of its receipt. He is credited with all payments of interest and premiums as of dates when made. He is not allowed credit for amounts paid as dues on his stock. After all liabilities of the company are paid, the remaining fund is distributed pro rata among stockholders, whether borrowers or not, upon the basis of the amounts paid by them, respectively, as dues upon the stock. This is in accord with the rule laid down in Strohen v. Franklin Sav. Fund & L. Asso. 115 Pa. 278, 279, and as now held in Endlich on Building Associations, 2d ed. §§ 514, 515, though formerly the same author held to the opposite view. See also Toule v. American Bldg., L. & I. Soc. 61 Fed. Rep. 446.

It is insisted, and very ably urged, that while this is the correct rule in winding up associations which are merely insolvent, and which have conducted a legitimate business, a different rule must be adopted when the business of the association has been conducted upon an illegal and usurious basis, and that in such cases the borrower has the right to have every payment made by him to the lender credited on his loan. We see no tenable ground for such distinction. The stock subscriptions, and loans, as we have seen, are separate transactions, and it is only as to the latter that the question of usury arises. The subscriptions for the stock are not tainted with usury, and there is no reason why the borrower who has paid usury upon his loan should be allowed to recoup it by receiving back the payments made on his stock. Each class must stand upon its own basis, and the shareholders' rights as between themselves must be adjusted on the status of their shares, not affected by any questions of usury involved in the loans. The stockholders must bear the losses made in the business between them, but, if the shareholders whose loans are tainted with usury are allowed credit for their payments on stock, they will escape their share of such losses, and the same will be thrown on the nonborrowing stockholders.

The next question arising is as to the right of certain stockholders who paid dues in advance of their maturity. These stockholders are not borrowers, but they claim that having paid dues in advance, under an agreement with the association that interest should be allowed upon such advance payments until absorbed by dues, they should be treated as creditors of the association, and the amounts advanced as loans to it be repaid, with interest. The charter forbids the company to retain a monthly payment exceeding two dollars per share, but does not in express terms prohibit it from allowing stockholders to pay in advance if they so desire. But here the advances were made under an agreement that the parties making the advances should be allowed interest upon the amounts advanced. It was in some respects the same thing as if the association, in order to accommodate its borrowers, had gone to some bank or outside person, and borrowed money to put into the association. Such a proceeding is not warranted by the charter or the proper scope and scheme of a building and loan association. They should not be borrowers of money, but only lenders for the proper purposes of their creation. To allow the amounts advanced to be paid back would be to sanction such proceedings as legitimate loans, to convert capital into loans, and to create preferred stock, in order to work out supposed equities. We think the proper holding upon this matter is to treat the advances as payments upon stock, and not as loans to the company; and this is, in effect, carrying out the intention of the parties, which was to pay up their stock in advance, and, by anticipation of its maturity, receive a discount by so doing.

The next question presented is as to the right of a certain stockholder (Armstrong), whose stock was declared matured in December, 1894, but who had failed to draw anything from the association. It is insisted that he should be paid the par value of the stock, as a creditor of the association, and not be required to share as a stockholder. The court of chancery appeals held: "In sound reason and legal analogy, the positions of the members holding stock in a series declared through mistake to be matured, when in point of fact it had not matured, is, in respect to the assets of the insolvent corporation, the same, in effect and as to results, as that of members giving notice. They are not entitled to be paid in preference to other stockholders. They will prorate with all other stockholders in the assets of the association after the expenses of the administration of its affairs are paid." The court of chancery appeals found that this series of stock had been declared mature by mistake, and that the real value of petitioner's share was not $1,000 but only $792.80; and the contention now is that he should be paid, if not the par value ($1,000) of his stock, its real value, of $792.80. If this contest were alone with the association as a solvent, going concern, this contention might be sustained, perhaps, upon the theory that the association would be estopped to set up its mistake in declaring the stock paid up, and in such case would be required to pay the stockholder as it had agreed; especially in consideration of the fact that he was no longer a member after his stock matured, and had no right to vote or to withdraw on notice, secured by the by-laws to unmatured, but not to matured, stockholders. This latter was a valuable right, in the light of the fact that all stockholders withdrawing before the bill was filed were paid in full. But, in view of the insolvency of the association, the rights of the different shareholders as among themselves, and not simply as against the association, must be considered; and the case presents itself as one purely arising out of mistake of facts and errors in the conduct of the business, and, as a matter of fact, Mr. Armstrong's stock has not matured, and he does not stand in the attitude of a creditor, or of a stockholder holding matured stock, but of a stockholder whose stock is not yet mature, and upon that theory his rights in a contest with his fellow stockholders must be adjusted and settled as a stockholder. This applies to all shareholders who stand in the same relation and occupy the same status as does Mr. Armstrong.

It follows that the decrees of the Court of Chancery Appeals must be reversed and modified in the particulars indicated, and in all other respects it is affirmed.

WISCONSIN SUPREME COURT.

Rufus W. ROBINSON, Resp't.,
v.

SUPERIOR RAPID TRANSIT RAILWAY COMPANY, Appl't.

(.....Wis.....)

1. What a conductor said after allowing a passenger to get back on the car because he had become convinced that he had paid his fare, although he had put the passenger off because he thought he had not paid the fare, is a part of the res gestæ of the ejection.
2. An instruction that plaintiff is "entitled" to exemplary or punitive damages if the injury was malicious is error, since such damages cannot be claimed as matter of law, but only in the discretion of the jury.
3. Exemplary damages cannot be recovered from a carrier for the malicious act of the conductor in ejecting a passenger, unless his act is either authorized or ratified by the carrier.

(November 4, 1896.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for Douglas County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for plaintiff's alleged wrongful ejection from defendant's car. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Ross, Dywer, & Hanitch, for appellant:

Keeping the conductor in defendant's employ after the service of the summons and

NOTE.—On the question how near the main transaction declarations must be in order to constitute a part of the res gestæ, see note to Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Stein (1891) 19 L. R. A. 738.
34 L. R. A.

complaint in this action is not ratification, but at most is evidence of ratification.

Milwaukee & M. R. Co. v. Finney, 10 Wis. 538; Craker v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 36 Wis. 675, 17 Am. Rep. 504; Bass v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 42 Wis. 667, 24 Am. Rep. 437; Eviston v. Cramer, 57 Wis. 578; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Prentice, 147 U. S. 101, 87 L. ed. 97; Dillingham v. Anthony, 73 Tex. 47, 8 L. R. A. 634.

The fact that a railroad conductor ejecting a passenger was not legally justified in refusing to allow the passenger to ride on his ticket will not justify the awarding of exemplary damages where the conductor was actuated by malice, however mistaken as to the legal rights of the passenger and as to his own duties in the premises.

Hoffman v. Northern P. R. Co. 45 Minn. 53; Fine v. St. Paul City R. Co. 60 Minn. 144, 16 L. R. A. 347.

Mr. Yate H. V. Gard, for respondent:

The language of the conductor after plaintiff had returned to the car was pleaded as part of the transaction, and taken in connection with what had just preceded it would seem clear that it is part of the res gestæ.

Bass v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 42 Wis. 671, 24 Am. Rep. 437.

If the defendant corporation ratified the act of the conductor it thereby became liable in exemplary damages.

The ratification of a tort may be either with full knowledge of the facts or with the purpose of the principal without inquiry to take the consequences upon himself.

Cooley, Torts, 128.

The report of the conductor shows that plaintiff was wrongfully expelled, and this is all that is necessary to charge the corporation.

Bass v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 43 Wis. 669, 24 Am. Rep. 487.

The defendant in its answer approves, sanctions, and adopts every contention adverse to plaintiff that the conductor contended for against him. Such an answer under such circumstances amounts to a most forcible ratification of the conductor's acts.

Taylor v. Ryan, 15 Neb. 578; Henderson v. Fox, 83 Ga. 238; Bennett v. Matthews, 64 Barb. 410; Klein v. Bauman, 53 Wis. 244.

The corporation is held liable in exemplary damages for the acts of its agents and servants within the scope of their employment in all cases where such damages would be awarded against the individual if acting for himself.

Thomp. Corp. § 6388.

If the prompt dismissal of the offending servant raises a presumption against ratification, and it certainly does, then the retention must raise the presumption of ratification.

Bass v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 42 Wis. 675, 24 Am. Rep. 487; Patry v. Chicago, St. P. & O. R. Co. 77 Wis. 218; Perkins v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 55 Mo. 201; Cleghorn v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 56 N. Y. 44, 15 Am. Rep. 375; Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 57 Me. 202, 3 Am. Rep. 89.

Cassoday, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action to recover damages by reason of the defendant's having without cause, unlawfully, wilfully, maliciously, and with force and violence ejected and expelled the plaintiff from one of its railway passenger cars, upon which he was rightfully riding after having paid his fare. The defendant answered, by way of admissions, denials, and allegations, to the effect that, if the plaintiff had paid his fare, the conductor of the car had forgotten the fact, and so ejected the plaintiff only after he had refused to inform the conductor whether he had paid his fare or not. At the close of the trial, the jury returned a verdict to the effect that they found for the plaintiff, and assessed his damages at $250, of which sum $200 was so awarded as exemplary damages. From the judgment in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount stated, and costs, the defendant brings this appeal.

1. We perceive no error in allowing the plaintiff to testify as to the conversation between himself and the conductor in respect to paying his fare while riding on the car, and at the time and immediately after he was ejected, and just after he got on the car again. The controversy was as to whether the plaintiff had or had not paid his fare. He was put off because the conductor claimed he had not paid his fare. He was allowed to get on the car again because the conductor became convinced that he had paid his fare. The res gesta commenced when he paid his fare, and did not terminate until he returned to the car, and was allowed, by the conductor, to ride peaceably. Within the authorities, it included what the conductor said just after the plaintiff stepped back into the car. Hooker v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 76 Wis. 542; Hermes v. Chicago & N. R. Co. 80 Wis. 592; Reed v. Madison, 85 84 L. R. A.

Wis. 674. The case is clearly distinguishable from Gristin v. Milwaukee City R. Co. 84 Wis. 22; Ehrlinger v. Douglas, 81 Wis. 59.

2. Error is assigned because the trial court, after charging the jury to the effect that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict for compensatory damages for all injuries, including injuries to his feelings, further charged them to the effect that, if the conductor maliciously put the plaintiff off the car, then he was "also entitled" to what are called "exemplary" or "punitive" damages; that is, something different from, and over and above, the compensatory damages which the law allowed them to impose in such a case, in the way of warning and punishment, and as a public example. There is no claim that at the time in question the conductor was not acting within the scope of his employment, nor that the plaintiff had not paid his fare. The plaintiff was therefore entitled to compensatory damages. Whatever may be the rule in other states, it is settled in this state that, in actions for personal torts, such compensatory damages include, not merely the plaintiff's pecuniary loss, but also compensation for mental suffering; and that, in awarding such damages in such a case, no distinction is to be made between other forms of mental suffering and that which consists in a sense of wrong or insult. Crocker v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 36 Wis. 657, 17 Am. Rep. 504; Fenelon v. Butts, 53 Wis. 344; Grace v. Dempsey, 75 Wis. 323; Reinke v. Bentley, 90 Wis. 459. The question here presented is whether the plaintiff was "also entitled," as a matter of law, to "exemplary or punitive" damages, in case the jury found that the conductor maliciously ejected the plaintiff. In Day v. Woodworth, 54 U. S. 13 How. 371, 14 L. ed. 185, Mr. Justice Grier, speaking for the court, said "that, in actions of trespass and all actions on the case for torts, a jury may inflict what are called exemplary, punitive, or vindictive damages upon a defendant, having in view the enormity of his offense, rather than the measure of compensation to the plaintiff. . . . This has been always left to the discretion of the jury, as the degree of punishment to be thus inflicted must depend upon the peculiar circumstances of each case." This is quoted approvingly by Mr. Sutherland (vol. 1, § 392). The same was followed in Pike v. Dilling, 48 Me. 539, where numerous adjudications are referred to, and an instruction to the jury to the effect that in such case they "were authorized, if they thought proper, in addition to the actual damages the plaintiff has sustained, to give him a further sum, as exemplary or vindictive damages both, as a protection to the plaintiff, and as a salutary example to others, to deter them from offending in like cases," was held to be in accordance with the weight of judicial authority in this country. In Webb v. Gilman, 80 Me. 188, it was said by the court that "exemplary or punitive damages cannot be demanded as a matter of right; actual damages may be." To the same effect: Foot v. Nichols, 28 Ill. 486; New Orleans, St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Burke, 53 Miss. 200, 24 Am. Rep. 689; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Rector, 104 Ill. 296; Boardman v. Goldsmith, 48 Vt. 403; Snow v. Carpenter, 49 Vt. 426; Kentucky C. R. Co. v. Gastineau, 83 Ky. 119; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Brooks, Id.

129; Stilson v. Gibbs, 53 Mich. 280; Wilson v. Bowen, 64 Mich. 133. In the last Illinois case cited, an instruction substantially like the one in the case at bar was held bad. In one of the Kentucky cases cited, an instruction that the jury "should" give punitive damages if they found the neglect wilful was held error; and, in the other Kentucky case cited, it was held error to instruct in such a case that the jury "ought" to award punitive damages. It is true that an instruction to the effect that the jury "ought" to give exemplary damages in such a case was sustained by this court in Hooker v. Newton, 24 Wis. 292; but the case is not in harmony with the best considered cases, nor with the weight of authority. Mr. Thompson, in his excellent work, after stating that "the jury may, if they think proper, give damages by way of punishment," says: "It may be stated that, in cases in which such damages may be given, whether they will be given or not, is a question within the discretion of the jury. Many judgments have been reversed because the jury were allowed to give such damages; but no case is recollected where a judgment was reversed because such damages were not given, though possibly such cases may be met with in the recent books of reports." 2 Thomp. Trials, § 2065. The reason for the rule, as indicated in some of the cases cited, is that the primary object of such action is to fairly compensate the plaintiff for the wrong he has suffered and the injury he has sustained, and that he is not entitled, as a matter of legal right, to anything more. Accordingly, some courts of high standing refuse to allow punitive damages in cases similar to this.

3. There is another matter calling for consideration. The charge left the question of exemplary damages to turn wholly upon the question whether the conduct of the conductor was malicious,—the same as though the action had been directly against him. This court has repeatedly held, in effect, that such exemplary damages can only be recovered against the principal for the wrongful and malicious act of the agent, when such act is either authorized or ratified by the principal. Craker v.

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 36 Wis. 657, 17 Am. Rep. 504; Bass v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 36 Wis. 450, 17 Am. Rep. 495, 39 Wis. 636, and 43 Wis. 654, 24 Am. Rep. 487; Eviston v. Cramer, 37 Wis. 570; Patry v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 77 Wis. 218; Mace v. Reed, 89 Wis. 440; Hagan v. Providence & W. R. Co. 3 R. I. 88, 63 Am. Dec. 877. On the same day that the plaintiff was so ejected from the car, September 12, 1894, the conductor reported his version of the transaction to the defendant; but that report, while it was not expressly excluded on the objection of the plaintiff, was allowed in evidence simply as showing that the defendant had no knowledge of wrong on the part of the conductor. The only evidence of notice to the defendant that the conduct of the conductor was malicious is the allegations contained in the complaint served September 25, 1894. There is nothing to indicate that the complaint was read to the jury, nor that they knew its contents, and the trial court stated, at the time the evidence was excluded, that there was not any evidence in the case of ratification. It does appear that the conductor was in the employ of the defendant from July 28, 1894, to December 18, 1894, and then left of his own accord. Such retention of the conductor in the employment of the defendant, with knowledge that such conduct of the conductor was wilful and malicious, would have been evidence tending to prove ratification. The decisions of this court cited are to that effect. See also cases cited in the notes to 62 Am. Dec. 887; Cleghorn v. New York C. & H. R. Co. 56 N. Y. 47, 15 Am. Rep. 375. In taking the question of such ratification from the jury, the court necessarily held that, if the jury found that the conduct of the conductor was malicious, then the defendant was conclusively bound to know the same, because it was so alleged in the complaint. This, we think, was error.

The judgment of the Superior Court for Douglas County is reversed, and the cause is remanded for a new trial, or, at the option of the plaintiff, for judgment in his favor on that part of the verdict assessing compensatory damages.

IOWA SUPREME COURT.

Minnie HALL
v.

Town of MANSON, App't.

(.....Iowa.....)

1. A pedestrian's knowledge that the town is laying watermain is not sufficient to give notice of an excavation at a particular place near a crossing.

2. A finding of fact by a jury on conflicting evidence will not be disturbed on appeal.

3. An unguarded and unlighted excavation in close proximity to a crosswalk may constitute negligence of a municipality, although the crosswalk itself is not defective.

4. A witness called by both parties may be impeached by the party first calling him by proof of his contradictory statements as to a matter to which he testified only when cross-examined as the witness of the other party.

NOTE.—As to the power to compel the plaintiff in suit to submit to a physical examination, see McQuigan v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. (N. Y.) 14 L. R. A. 468, and note; also Graves v. Battle Creek (Mich.) 34 L. R. A.

19 L. R. A. 641; Carrioo v. West Virginia, C. & P. R. Co. (W. Va.) 24 L. R. A. 50; Lyon v. Manhattan R. Co. (N. Y.) 25 L. R. A. 402.

5. The measurement in the presence of the jury of a woman's foot and her leg 6 inches above the ankle, in a suit for injuries to the foot and ankle, must be permitted by the court when there is a direct conflict as to such measurements by the medical men called by the respective parties,—at least if the witness herself does not object.

6. An instruction as to the duty of a municipality in respect to a walk, which says it must be kept "in a safe condition" for public travel, ought to be changed to say that the duty in that respect is to use reasonable and ordinary care.

(October 20, 1894.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the District Court for Calhoun County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Reversed.

Statement by Kinne, J.:

The plaintiff claims that on the evening of October 20, 1891, in company with another lady, she undertook to pass over Second street, in the town of Manson, Iowa, on the sidewalk crossing the same at a point near the northwest corner of the crossing of Main street and Second street, and that, without negligence on her part, and without knowledge of the existence of an excavation, and of its close proximity to said crosswalk, she fell into an excavation, was violently thrown to the bottom of it, and severely injured. She alleges that she is permanently disabled by reason of said injuries, and asks damages in the sum of $4,000. She alleges that said crossing was dangerous for pedestrians to travel over by reason of a deep excavation and pitfall made in the earth, by defendant, at both sides of said crossing. This excavation was about 7 feet deep and extended close up to the edge of the crossing, said crossing being but 8 feet wide. That on said October 20, 1891, and long prior thereto, the defendant had negligently and carelessly permitted said excavation to exist, and said crossing to remain in said unsafe and dangerous condition, and had failed and neglected to construct or place a barrier or hand rail to prevent persons passing over said walk from falling into said excavation, and failed to place any warning, light, or signal to indicate to or warn persons passing over said crossing of the existence of said excavation. It appears that the town, for the purpose of laying its water mains, had excavated a ditch extending along Second street and across Main street. A water pipe had been laid in the ditch, but the excavation had not been filled prior to the accident. The defendant admitted its incorporation, and that the plaintiff's claim had not been paid, and denied all other allegations in the petition. The cause was tried to a jury, and a verdict returned for the sum of $2,250, on which judgment was entered. The defendant appeals.

Mr. E. A. Walton, for appellant:

Although one has a right to use a defective street or crossing knowing it to be defective, yet he must, having that knowledge, use it so as to avoid injury, if possible,—not that he must use more than ordinary care but that the circumstance of knowledge changes the application of this ordinary test.
34 L. R. A.

Hanlon v. Keokuk, 7 Iowa, 488, 74 Am. Dec. 276.

Plaintiff should be held chargeable with knowledge of the existing conditions, and, the night being as dark as she testifies, she did not do as an ordinarily prudent person would do under the circumstances, when she might have gone another route equally convenient.

Fulliam v. Muscatine, 70 Iowa, 486; Parkhill v. Brighton, 61 Iowa, 108; McGinty v. Keokuk, 66 Iowa, 725; Hartman v. Muscatine, 70 Iowa, 511; Plymouth v. Milner, 117 Ind. 324; Dole v. Webster County, 76 Iowa, 370.

The defect, if any existed, lay in the absence or want of a light at the time of the accident.

Plaintiff certainly had as much knowledge of such defect as defendant, and should have used ordinary care to avoid the danger.

Achtenhagen v. Watertown, 18 Wis. 381, 86 Am. Dec. 769; Munger v. Marshalltown, 56 Iowa, 216; Cressy v. Postville, 59 Iowa, 62; O'Laughlin v. Dubuque, 42 Iowa, 541; Alline v. Le Mars, 71 Iowa, 654; Ely v. Des Moines, 86 Iowa, 55, 17 L. R. A. 124.

Defendant was not negligent with reference to maintaining the crossing in a reasonably safe condition.

Plaintiff had the whole width of a crossing perfectly safe in itself and free from defects.

She must know at her peril whether she is within the limits of the crossing.

O'Laughlin v. Dubuque, 42 Iowa, 541; Alline v. Le Mars, 71 Iowa, 654; Macomber v. Taunton, 100 Mass. 255; Hubbell v. Yonkers, 104 N. Y. 434; Damon v. Boston, 149 Mass. 147; Richardson v. Boston, 156 Mass. 145; Goodin v. Des Moines, 55 Iowa, 67.

Negligence cannot in any degree be predicated on the narrowness of the crossing.

Detroit v. Beckman, 34 Mich. 125, 22 Am. Rep. 507; Lansing v. Toolan, 37 Mich. 152.

Defendant was not negligent in respect to the existence of the excavation, and is not liable to plaintiff on account thereof.

If defendant is liable it is because of a breach of a statutory duty.

Rusch v. Davenport, 6 Iowa, 443; Wilson v. Jefferson County, 13 Iowa, 181; Mower v. Leicester, 9 Mass. 248, 6 Am. Dec. 63; Bates v. Rutland, 62 Vt. 178, 9 L. R. A. 363; Damon v. Boston, 149 Mass. 147.

There was no statutory duty except to maintain its sidewalks and crosswalks in a reasonably safe condition.

The liability being created by statute, the rule is that only those using the streets in the ordinary mode for travel can recover damages.

Taylor v. Peckham, 8 R. I. 349, 5 Am. Rep. 578, 91 Am. Dec. 235; McArthur v. Saginaw, 58 Mich. 357, 55 Am. Rep. 687; Goelts v. Ashland, 75 Wis. 642; Agnew v. Corunna, 55 Mich. 428.

A sufficient time had not elapsed between the placing of the light and the time of the accident, to charge defendant with constructive notice.

Brobury v. Des Moines, 68 Iowa, 523, 50 Am. Rep. 756; Thiessen v. Belle Plaine, 81 Iowa, 118; Klatt v. Milwaukee, 53 Wis. 190, 40 Am.

Rep. 759; Seaward v. Milford, 21 Wis. 485; Doherty v. Waltham, 4 Gray, 596; Ball v. Independence, 41 Mo. App. 469; Warau v. Dunlap, 112 Ind. 579; Weirs v. Jones County, 80 Iowa, 351; Aylesworth v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 30 Iowa, 459.

A party cannot impeach his own witness.

Hall v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 84 Iowa, 311; Gardner v. Connolly, 75 Iowa, 205; Humble v. Shoemaker, 70 Iowa, 223; Hunt v. Hoover, 34 Iowa, 77; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 442.

The rule obtains in all its strictness where the adverse party is called as a witness, and it matters not in such case that the witness may be subsequently called by the other party.

Branch v. Lety, 14 Jones & S. 428; Olive v. Olive, 95 N. C. 485; Gabbett v. Sparks, 60 Ga. 532; Hunt v. Coe, 15 Iowa, 197; Hunt v. Hoover, 34 Iowa, 77; White v. State, 87 Ala. 24; Craig v. Grant, 6 Mich. 447; Roundtree v. Tibbs, 4 Hayw. (Tenn.) 108; Fulton Bank v. Stafford, 2 Wend. 483; Ellicott v. Pearl, 35 U. S. 10 Pet. 412, 9 L. ed. 475.

The court erred in denying plaintiff's request to exhibit plaintiff's injured foot to the jury, and declining to permit measurements to be made in the presence of the jury.

Such evidence is always competent on behalf of the party suing for personal injury.

Langworthy v. Green Top, 95 Mich. 98; Edwards v. Three Rivers, 96 Mich. 625; Schroeder v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 47 Iowa, 378; Barker v. Perry, 67 Iowa, 146; Lanark v. Dougherty, 153 Ill. 163; Carrico v. West Virginia, C. & P. R. Co. 39 W. Va. 86, 24 L. R. A. 50; Osborne v. Detroit, 82 Fed. Rep. 86; Hess v. Lowrey, 122 Ind. 225, 7 L. R. A. 90; Taylor, Ev. § 512; Abbott, Trial Ev. 599; Union P. R. Co. v. Botsford, 141 U. S. 250, 35 L. ed. 734; King v. State, 100 Ala. 85; Graves v. Battle Creek, 95 Mich. 266, 19 L. R. A. 641; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Chidress, 82 Ga. 721; Shepard v. Missouri P. R. Co. 85 Mo. 629, 55 Am. Rep. 390; Hatfield v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 33 Minn. 130, 53 Am. Rep. 14; Walsh v. Sayres, 52 How. Pr. 334; 25 Cent. L. J. 3.

The defendant was not bound to fence in the crossing to keep pedestrians from stepping off or wandering therefrom into danger.

O'Laughlin v. Dubuque, 42 Iowa, 542; Alline v. Le Mars, 71 Iowa, 654; Macomber v. Taunton, 100 Mass. 255; Hubbell v. Yonkers, 104 N. Y. 434; Damon v. Boston, 149 Mass. 147; Tower v. St. John, 83 N. B. 88; Ross v. Davenport, 66 Iowa, 548.

Appellant was not bound to fence in and guard the excavation.

Mears, Botsford, Healy, & Healy, for appellee:

Ordinary care only is required in such cases, but the circumstance of knowledge changes the application of this ordinary test.

Hanlon v. Keokuk, 71 Iowa, 488, 74 Am. Dec. 276.

A party is not to be denied relief simply because he goes upon a street which he knows to be dangerous.

Rice v. Des Moines, 40 Iowa, 642; Ross v. Davenport, 66 Iowa, 548; Troxel v. Vinton, 77 Iowa, 90; Kendall v. Albia, 78 Iowa, 242.

The city should make the streets and walks reasonably safe for the uses for which they are intended.

Bicen v. Sioux City, 85 Iowa, 351.

34 L. R. A.

If the city builds a walk over a dangerous place it is the duty of the city to guard against that danger, and that duty is equally strong if the city renders a walk unsafe and dangerous by reason of an excavation underneath or at the immediate side without guarding against that danger.

Mocre v. Burlington, 49 Iowa, 136; Rowell v. Williams, 29 Iowa, 210; Duffy v. Dubuque, 68 Iowa, 172, 50 Am. Rep. 743; Pittinger v. Hamilton, 85 Wis. 356; Manderschid v. Dubuque, 29 Iowa, 74, 4 Am. Rep. 196; Case v. Waverly, 36 Iowa, 545.

The sufficiency of a barrier, the sufficiency of lights, or the sufficiency of any warning to apprise pedestrians or people of the place of the danger, is always a question for the jury.

Stier v. Oakalosa, 41 Iowa, 357; American Waterworks Co. v. Dougherty, 37 Neb. 878; Norwood v. Somerville, 159 Mass. 105; Sterling v. Schiffmacher, 47 Ill. App. 141; Duffy v. Dubuque, 68 Iowa, 172, 50 Am. Rep. 743.

The ditch was per se a defect. Although put there for a lawful purpose it was nevertheless a defect, and the length of time it had remained there unnecessarily was a material consideration as a part of the negligence of the city.

Andrews v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. 77 Iowa, 671.

Submitting one's person to the observation of the jury will not be allowed when there is abundant and competent evidence on both sides.

Loyd v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 53 Mo. 509.

It is at the pleasure of plaintiff to submit her person to view of the jury.

Mulhadeo v. Brooklyn City R. Co. 80 N. Y. 370.

Kinne, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

1. This case has once before been in this court and is reported in 90 Iowa, 595. It is insisted that plaintiff's negligence contributed to produce the injury of which she complains. It is said that she was possessed of such knowledge touching the excavation as should have warned her to have taken another way to her destination, and thus have avoided the danger. The evidence does not show that plaintiff had any knowledge whatever of the existence of the excavation into which she fell. True, it appears that she knew that the town was engaged in putting in water. She had seen some of the ditches, and knew they were digging such ditches in the business part of the town; she had seen one of these ditches on the day of the accident. She could have taken another route just as direct to reach the place she was going to. She was not under such circumstances negligent in attempting to go over the crossing, having no knowledge of the existence of the excavation. She testified that it was so dark she could not see the edges of the crossing; that there was no light at or near the excavation; and there is no claim that there were barriers to keep people from falling into it. If her testimony be taken as true, and it is supported, she was in the exercise of due care. Counsel's argument is based upon the claim that when one injured has knowledge of the danger he must use such knowledge so as to avoid injury if possible. Such is no doubt the law, but the facts of this case do not bring it within that rule. If the evidence to the effect that there was no light at or near the excavation is to be believed, then it is clear that, having no knowledge of the excavation, and no light by means of which she might see her danger, and there being nothing to prevent her stepping into the hole, and she being otherwise in the exercise of due care, she is not chargeable with negligence in not discovering and avoiding the excavation. Her knowledge that the town was laying water mains does not charge her with notice of this particular excavation. Even if she did know of the danger she would not be negligent in attempting to go over the crossing if she exercised due care in so doing. Hers was not a case of knowingly and consciously incurring danger, hence the cases relied upon are not applicable. Counsel also argue that the only duty the town owed to plaintiff was to keep its walks and crossings in a reasonably safe condition. He insists that if the crossing itself was in fact good and sufficient the town was not liable for an injury received by one when off of said crossing. The following cases are cited: O'Laughlin v. Dubuque, 42 Iowa, 541; Allins v. Le Mars, 71 Iowa, 654; Ely v. Des Moines, 86 Iowa, 55, 17 L. R. A. 124. These cases in their facts are all different from the one at bar. In the Dubuque Case the person was injured while crossing the street, not on a regular crossing, and it is said: "Sidewalks and crosswalks alone are constructed for foot travelers, and he who, without some good and sufficient reason, walks elsewhere and is injured should not be permitted to complain that he has been injured through the fault and negligence of the city." In Allins's Case the injured party was able to see the limits of the walk, and voluntarily and without necessity therefor, stepped from the walk without knowing she could safely do so. Ely's Case was one where the pedestrian on a city street unnecessarily left the street, went into an alley, and fell into an area way. None of the cases are controlling in the one under consideration. In this case the crossing was being made on the walk provided by the town, and owing to the darkness plaintiff inadvertently stepped off of the crossing into an unguarded, and, as some of the evidence shows, unlighted excavation, which came up to the very edge of the crossing. The jury must have found that plaintiff was not negligent, and we cannot disturb their finding in that respect.

2. Counsel for appellant insist that the evidence shows that the defendant was not negligent. The argument is that as the defendant had a crossing which was, in and of itself, good, and inasmuch as it had a right to excavate for its water mains, and because the excavation formed no part of the crossing walk, therefore it cannot be held liable for an injury received to one who, in the exercise of due care, and unable by reason of the darkness to discover the limits of the crossing walk, and not knowing of the excavation adjoining said walk, steps into the same. On the same theory a city might erect a bridge over a river and erect no guard rails to keep the pedestrians from stepping over its side and falling into the stream below. The duty imposed upon the town to keep its crossings in a reasonably safe condition for the use for which they were intended "extends, not merely to the surface of the street or walk, but to those things within its control which endanger the safety of those using the street or walk properly. . . . In the statutory sense a street or sidewalk is defective when it is not in a reasonably safe condition for the use for which it is intended. . . . It may be due to the presence of something which is a menace to the safety of the users of the way as well as to imperfect construction or the absence of needed labor or material." Bliven v. Sioux City, 85 Iowa, 351. The real question is, Is the defect complained of in the walk itself, or so near it as to endanger the persons of those properly using it? Rosell v. Williams, 29 Iowa, 210; Ross v. Davenport, 66 Iowa, 548; Duffy v. Dubuque, 62 Iowa, 172, 60 Am. Rep. 743; Pittenger v. Hamilton, 85 Wis. 856. It was, then, a question for the jury as to whether defendant was negligent, and as there was evidence tending to show such negligence, as well as evidence to the contrary, the finding of the jury in that respect should not be disturbed.

3. The court told the jury in the seventh division of the charge, in substance, that if the defendant had caused a light, sufficient to apprise a person of ordinary prudence of the existence of the ditch, to be placed at or near it on the evening of the accident, and before it happened, then the defendant was not guilty of negligence unless it was shown that defendant had caused said light to be removed, or had actual notice or knowledge of said removal, and had sufficient time thereafter to replace the same. It is urged that the verdict is against this instruction and against the evidence. There was much evidence tending to establish the fact that a lamp or lamps were lighted at the excavation on the evening of the accident, and before it happened. There was evidence also to the contrary. There was much evidence showing that when the accident occurred there was no light at or near the excavation. There was an undoubted conflict touching this matter, and it cannot be said that the finding of the jury was contrary to either the instruction or the evidence. Again, if the evidence had been undisputed that the light was burning when the accident occurred, still it would be a question for the jury, under the instruction, as to whether it was a sufficient light to apprise one of the danger.

4. Plaintiff called one Lemoine as a witness, and showed by him that he was mayor of the town at the time the accident happened; that the town was then engaged in laying mains for water; that the excavations were made by contractors for the town. Defendant afterwards called the same witness, and he testified in chief that lamps were lighted at the excavation on the night of the accident, and before it happened. On cross-examination he was asked if he did not, on the morning after the accident, and in the presence of plaintiff and Mrs. Safford, at the latter's house, in a conversation there, state "that the town was negligent in not having the lights lit, as they depended on the moon, but after this they would have the lights lit." This was objected to as "incompetent, and laying the ground for impeachment of a witness whom they have used as their own witness, and for the further reason it is on something entirely immaterial." The court said, "I do not understand that a witness who is called by a party cannot be contradicted, and especially I think it is competent to ask this witness this question in view of the testimony he has given." The defendant excepted to the ruling, and the witness answered, "I made no such statement." To another question propounded to this witness touching a similar conversation with Elinor Hall, the same objection was made, when plaintiff's counsel said, "Plaintiff states that this question is not asked for the purpose of charging any admission upon the defendant because the conversation was had with the mayor of the defendant town, but wholly for the purpose of impeachment of the witness as a witness." The objection was overruled, and an exception taken, and the witness answered, "I have no recollection of making such statement." Mrs. Safford, Elinor Hall, and the plaintiff were each called by the plaintiff in rebuttal, and asked touching the conversations above referred to. In each case objection was made and overruled, and the witnesses testified to the conversation. Appellant contends that the impeaching witnesses contradicted Mr. Lemoin upon a matter immaterial and irrelevant to the issue. In the second place, it is insisted that it was not competent for plaintiff to impeach her own witness. We dismiss the first contention by saying that, in view of the statement of counsel for plaintiff, this evidence is to be treated as offered for the sole purpose, as to Lemoin, of laying the ground for impeachment, and, as to the other witnesses, of impeaching Lemoin. Was it competent and receivable for that purpose? It is no doubt a general rule that one will not be allowed to impeach or discredit his own witness. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 442; Hunt v. Hoover, 34 Iowa, 79; Hall v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Co. 84 Iowa, 316; Gardner v. Connelly, 75 Iowa, 206; Humble v. Shoemaker, 70 Iowa, 226; Clapp v. Peck, 55 Iowa, 272. This rule only prohibits impeachment in three ways: First, calling witnesses to impeach the general character of the witness; second, proof of prior contradictory statements by him; and, third, a contradiction of the witness by another where the only effect is to impeach, and not to give any material evidence upon any issue in the case. Becker v. Koch, 104 N. Y. 400, 58 Am. Rep. 513; Cross v. Cross, 108 N. Y. 629. It is said that "whether it be competent for a party to prove that a witness whom he has called, and whose testimony is unfavorable to his cause, had previously stated the facts in a different manner, is a question upon which there exists some diversity of opinion." 1 Greenl. Ev. § 444. It will be observed that this is not a case where plaintiff was surprised by the testimony of the witness when examined by her counsel. When the witness was called by plaintiff nothing was asked him relating to the fact as to whether the excavation was lighted. He was interrogated touching other matters, and then, it would seem, discharged. Afterwards defendant called him as its witness, and asked him whether there were lights at the excavation. On his cross-examination the plaintiff asked the questions heretofore set out. If, when the witness was called by plaintiff, she had interrogated him regarding the lights, and he had testified that the excavation was lighted, and plaintiff had then sought to show by him that he was mistaken, and, failing so to do, had, in rebuttal, put witnesses on the stand to show that he had made contrary statements, we should have a case within the general rule. If the plaintiff had not called Lemoin as a witness, there is no doubt she might have impeached or discredited his evidence regarding the lights at the excavation which was drawn out when he testified on being called by the defendant. It could not then be claimed that she was impeaching or discrediting her own witness. When he in fact testified to the matter as to which it was sought to impeach him, he was the defendant's witness, called by it. He had before that time been called by plaintiff, and testified as to other matters, and been virtually discharged. He was no more plaintiff's witness as to the matter of lights than if she had never called him to the stand. Plaintiff did not call out the testimony as to which she seeks to impeach Lemoin, but it was elicited by the defendant while Lemoin was its witness. Whatever reason there may be for the rule which prevents one from impeaching or discrediting his own witness, there is none for extending it to a case like this. Courts of high standing have refused to follow the general rule above mentioned, and hold that by putting a witness on the stand one is not responsible for his credibility in such a sense that he is absolutely precluded, when surprised by adverse testimony, from showing that the witness had made statements of the facts contrary to his testimony. Selover v. Bryant, 54 Minn. 434, 21 L. R. A. 418; Smith v. Briscoe, 65 Md. 561; Johnson v. Leggett, 28 Kan. 605; State v. Sorter, 52 Kan. 531; Crocker v. Agnew, 123 Ind. 585. So much of the doctrine announced in the above cases as permits the witness, under such circumstances, to be impeached or discredited by adverse testimony showing that he had made statement of the facts contrary to his testimony, this court has not approved of. Hall v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Co. 84 Iowa, 316; Smith v. Dawley, 92 Iowa, 312; Humble v. Shoemaker, 70 Iowa, 226. But see Thomas v. McDanel, 88 Iowa, 380; Smith v. Utesch, 85 Iowa, 381. We held in Arts v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Co. 44 Iowa, 283, a case where plaintiff had called a witness who testified to nothing of benefit to either party, and he was then dismissed, and the other party, on cross-examination, drew out evidence not proper to be given on cross-examination, that the witness must be regarded as called by the defendant, therefore plaintiff might contradict him. So, in the case at bar we hold that Lemoin was the witness of the defendant, hence the court properly permitted plaintiff to interrogate him touching his former statements, and, as he denied making them, it properly permitted the plaintiff to impeach him by calling witnesses to testify that statements had been made by him which were contradictory to the facts as testified to by him.

5. The character of plaintiff's injury, and its extent as to permanency, was a material question in the case. Her claim was that by reason of the fall "several of the ligaments of the second and third toes" were ruptured and her ankle severely sprained; that the injury caused severe and acute pain. Several medical men testified for plaintiff that they had just measured her foot at various places, and her leg 6 inches above the ankle, and found it considerable larger than the other foot. At the point above the ankle they say the leg was smaller than the other leg at the same point. An equal number of doctors, who had just measured the injured foot at the same places, swore for the defendant, that it was the same size as the other foot, except in the measurement of the leg above the ankle, which was $\frac{1}{4}$ of an inch larger than the other leg at the same point. It will not admit of a doubt that this array of medical men were not all telling the truth. Either the injured foot and leg were, at the points where measured, the same size as was the other foot and leg at the corresponding points, or it was larger or smaller at some or all of said points of measurement. Now, clearly, when such skilled men differ so radically touching a matter of mere measurement, as to which any number of men lacking in skill, but possessed of ordinary good sense ought to substantially agree, because relating to a fact capable of exact ascertainment, it was proper to resort to the practical plan of taking these measurements in the presence of the court and jury. Plaintiff being called to the stand by the defendant, she was interrogated as follows by its counsel:

Q. Mrs. Hall, you are the plaintiff in this action?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you the lady whose feet and legs were measured in the adjoining room here just before noon to-day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you kindly now remove your shoes and stockings and permit the measurement to be made here and now, in the presence of the jury, in the presence of the plaintiff's witness, Dr. Saunders, and the defendant's witness, Dr. Martin? Will you kindly remove them, and allow the measurements to be made now.

A. Shall I, Mr. Healy?

Mr. T. D. Healy: I have nothing to say. It is for the court to say.

Q. Do you refuse to do so, Mrs. Hall?

Mr. M. F. Healy: The witness has been examined four times since yesterday, and I think there should be some limit to this matter somewhere, but at the same time we do not wish it to appear in the position of objecting to the examination.

By the Court: I think we have had enough of that; we are not going to start a measuring school here.

Q. Do you refuse to permit the examination; do you object to it?

Mr. Hall (from the audience): I object to this now.

Mr. O'Connell: Never mind, you are not in his case.

34 L. R. A.

Mr. M. F. Healy: Well, I rather think he is in the case, and under the circumstances I think we ought to object to the examination being made,—a further examination at this time.

By the Court: Well, this matter has gone far enough. This proposed examination and measurement will not be allowed. You may put it in the record, Mr. Reporter, that the court, of its own motion, declines to permit it. (To which the defendant excepts, both to the remarks and the ruling of the court.)

The remark of the court about not starting a measuring school was not proper. Counsel for appellee says this requirement of the plaintiff that she permit these measurements to be made was "unseemly." We may be permitted to disagree with counsel, and to say that the request was reasonable, and, under the circumstances, it ought to have been willingly complied with. Here were medical men differing as to the measurement of this plaintiff's foot. If the measurements were as sworn to by the physicians who testified on part of plaintiff, it was a material fact, indicating an abnormal condition of the injured foot. By making the measurements in the presence of the jury the actual facts would be shown by the best attainable evidence, and the conflict between the learned doctors settled. There is nothing delicate in the measurement of a foot or arm or ankle in a proper case. It is to be observed that plaintiff offered no objection to these measurements being made. No ground of objection thereto was stated by her counsel, but the court refused to permit it to be done. This court, in Schroeder v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 47 Iowa, 878, said: "We are often compelled to accept approximate justice as the best that courts can do in the administration of the law. But while the law is satisfied with approximate justice when exact justice cannot be obtained, the courts should recognize no rules which stop at the first when the second is in reach. Those rules, too, which lead nearer the first should be adopted in preference to others which end at points more remote. . . . To our minds the proposition is plain that a proper examination by learned and skillful physicians and surgeons would have opened the road by which the cause could have been conducted nearer to exact justice than in any other way. The plaintiff, as it were, had under his own control testimony which would have revealed the truth more clearly than any other that could have been introduced. The cause of truth, the right administration of the law, demand that he should have produced it." It was also held in that case that the power of the court was ample to enforce obedience to an order compelling the party to submit to an examination; so it was held that, as the plaintiff had the right in such a case to exhibit his injured limb to the jury in order to show the extent of his suffering, he may in a proper case, and under proper circumstances, be required to do the same thing for a like purpose upon the requirement of the other party. In Barker v. Perry, 67 Iowa, 147, an action to recover for a personal injury, the court, in speaking of this subject, said: "This kind of evidence is of an important and satisfactory nature. It brings before the jury part of the res gesta, and enables them to determine the nature and character of the injury better than to receive it in a secondary way, as it must be described by witnesses." The following cases show the trend of the authorities touching this question: Langworthy v. Green Twp. 95 Mich. 93; Edwards v. Three Rivers, 96 Mich. 625; Lanark v. Dougherty, 153 Ill. 163; Carrico v. West Virginia, C. & P. R. Co. 39 W. Va. 86, 24 L. R. A. 50; Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578, 49 Am. Rep. 724; State v. Wiencers, 66 Mo. 29; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Wood, 118 Ind. 548, and 578; Whart. Crim. Ev. § 312; 1 Best, Ev. Morgan's ed. 307; Abbott, Trial Ev. 599; 25 Cent. L. J. 3; 15 Cent. L. J. 2; Mulhado v. Brooklyn C. R. Co. 30 N. Y. 870; King v. State, 100 Ala. 85; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Childress, 82 Ga. 721; Hatfield v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 83 Minn. 130, 53 Am. Rep. 14. He would be a bold man who would assert that the evidence of experts is in all cases valueless. The testimony of medical men in the case at bar touching these measurements, a matter not resting in opinion at all, but capable of physical demonstration, is in direct contradiction, and is well calculated to shake one's faith in the reliability of experts. In the interest of attaining justice these measurements should have been taken before the court and jury. We do not hold that in all cases, and as a matter of right, one party may require the injured party to expose the injured part of his person to the jury. But when such exposure is in no way indelicate, and seems to be essential in order that the jury may be properly and correctly advised as to the material fact which is in dispute, it is not only the right of the court to order such exposure and examination of measurement of the injured part on the request of a party, but its duty so to do. As we have said, the condition of this foot and ankle was material as bearing upon the question of the permanency of the injury, and the court erred in not ordering the measurements made as requested.

6. Complaint is made of the second division of the court's charge. It is in substance the same as was given on the former trial, and which we held good when the charge was considered as an entirety. While we do not think that the jury could have been misled to defendant's prejudice by the statement of the law therein contained, in view of other parts of the charge, still, as this case for other reasons must be reversed, it is proper to say that on a retrial the court should avoid the statement found in this division of the charge to the effect that it was the defendant's duty to keep its walks in "a safe condition" for public travel. Defendant's duty in that respect is to use reasonable and ordinary care. It is not an insurer of the absolute safety of its walks and crossings. The law in this respect was correctly stated in other divisions of the charge.

7. Complaint is made of the use of the word "pitfall" in the tenth division of the court's charge to the jury. Technically speaking, the word means a trap set to ensnare the unwary. The court used it as describing the hole into which plaintiff fell. While we think the court used the word in a different sense, still it would be better to use a word or words amply expressing the thought intended to be conveyed, and as to which no question of error can arise.

8. Error is assigned upon the refusal of the court to give instructions asked by the defendant. So far as they announced correct principles of law, they were embodied in the court's charge. The third instruction asked was properly refused, because it assumed that plaintiff knew the crossing was unsafe, and knew of the ditch, and knew that it was imprudent to attempt to pass over the crossing. There was no evidence justifying such an instruction. It is said the damages allowed are excessive. In view of a retrial, we need not discuss that question. Many other questions are discussed by counsel. We have examined the points made, and discover no error except as heretofore pointed out.

Because of the refusal of the court to permit the measurements asked for, the judgment is reversed.

Robinson, J. dissenting:

I cannot assent to the fifth division of the foregoing opinion. None of the authorities cited in its support appear to me to require the conclusion reached. The larger number of them merely hold that in a case involving injuries to a person it is proper to exhibit the injuries to the jury, and do not treat of compulsory, but of voluntary, examinations. Of the cases cited King v. State, 100 Ala. 85, is the only one which involved the compulsory examination of the alleged injuries of a person in the presence of the jury. In that case a witness testified that the defendant shot him on the arm, and the defendant, in cross examination, offered to exhibit the arm to the jury. The state objected, and the objection was sustained. It was held on appeal that the court erred in sustaining the objection, and in that connection the fact was noticed that no question was raised by the witness, court, or counsel as to the delicacy of the proposed exhibition; that the arm could have been shown to the jury without offense to the modesty or delicacy of feeling of the witness, of the court, or of the persons present in the court-room; and that in view of the conflicting testimony as to the direction from which the shot was fired it might have afforded the jury valuable aid in determining vital questions. In Hatfield v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 83 Minn. 130, 53 Am. Rep. 14, also cited in the majority opinion, the plaintiff sought to recover for personal injuries which she testified caused her to limp in walking. The defendant requested the court to direct her to walk across the court-room in the presence of the jury, but the court declined to do so. That ruling was sustained on appeal. The supreme court held that a trial court has the power, in a proper case and under proper circumstances, to direct a person to do in the presence of the jury a physical act that will illustrate or show the character of the injuries of which he complains, but that the court "very properly refused to direct the plaintiff to exhibit herself to the jury and bystanders by walking across the room." It was said such an act would only have enabled the jury to determine a fact which was shown by uncontradicted evidence. Whether a person may be compelled, against his will, to submit to an examination of personal injuries, is a matter in regard to which the authorities are in conflict. In Union P. R. Co. v. Botsford, 141 U. S. 250, 35 L. ed. 784, the power of the trial court to order the plaintiff, who was seeking to recover for personal injuries, to submit to an examination by a surgeon, was denied. See also McQuigan v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 129 N. Y. 50, 14 L. R. A. 466, and note. The right to order such an examination was affirmed by this court in Schroeder v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 47 Iowa, 375, but that case did not involve the right to compel a public examination before the jury. The authorities which sustain the right of trial courts to order the physical examination of persons whose condition is the subject of controversy hold that the courts have a large discretion to grant or refuse such orders, and that their action will not be disturbed unless the discretion has been abused. Thus, it was said in Hatfield v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. supra, in regard to the order therein sought, that "it is evident, from the very nature of things, that the propriety of such an order must usually rest largely in the discretion of the trial court, and it would only be in case of a plain abuse of such discretion that we would interfere." In Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Childress, 82 Ga. 721, it was held that trial courts had the power to order the physical examination of persons alleged to have been injured, "and that in each case it was to be exercised, or not, according to the sound discretion of the presiding judge." In Shepard v. Missouri P. R. Co. 85 Mo. 684, the court said of orders for such examinations that it was inclined to hold that they might be made, "but not that a party has an absolute right to have such a personal examination. It is a matter in which the court has a discretion which will not be interfered with unless manifestly abused." See also Stuart v. Havens, 17 Neb. 211; Achison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Thul, 29 Kan. 475, 44 Am. Rep. 659. Before a court will be authorized to order the physical examination of a witness, the necessity of the examination to a just determination of the cause must be shown. Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578, 49 Am. Rep. 724; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Norfleet, 78 Tex. 324; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Underwood, 64 Tex. 466. When a physical examination is ordered, care should be taken to protect the person examined from indignity, and no indelicate exposure of the person not absolutely necessary should be required. Especial care will be taken to avoid wounding the feelings of modest and sensitive females. Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Childress, and Shepard v. Missouri P. R. Co. supra. Such an examination will not be ordered in the presence of the jury, where it would require an indecent exposure of the person. 1 Thomp. Trials, § 861; 25 Cent. L. J. 7. And an unnecessary exposure of that kind should not be permitted by the court, even though no objection be made. Brown v. Swineford, 44 Wis. 285. Very few of the cases which involve compulsory physical examination refer to those which were, or were designed to be, made in open court in the presence of the jury. As a rule they relate to private examinations only. All authorities which treat of the subject recognize a sacredness of the person, a right to be free from physical restraint or compulsion, which will be interfered with only for reasons of controlling importance. Until the contrary is shown, the rulings of the trial court must be regarded as correct, and we are required to indulge in all reasonable presumptions that they are correct. When Mrs. Hall was asked to remove her shoes and stockings and submit to measurements in the presence of the jury, the testimony which had been introduced showed that she had submitted to physical examinations conducted by medical experts on behalf of the defendant two years or more before the trial, and again on the day of the trial, and that but two of the four physicians who had examined her for the defendant at the time of the trial had been called as witnesses. There was no suggestion that she had refused to submit to any private examination which the defendant desired to make. Dr. Speaker had testified for her that he was present when Dr. Evans measured her feet on the day of the trial, that the left or injured foot was $\frac{1}{4}$ inch larger at the ankle and between that and the toes than the other foot, and that he thought the left leg 6 inches above the ankle was $\frac{1}{4}$ of an inch larger than the right leg at the same distance above the ankle. Dr. Evans had testified that the left foot was $\frac{1}{4}$ an inch larger than the right at the middle joint above the ball of the foot and at the ankle, and that the left leg 6 inches above the ankle was $\frac{1}{4}$ of an inch smaller than the right. Dr. Saunders had testified that this measurement, on the day of the trial, showed that the left leg of the plaintiff 6 inches above the ankle was smaller than the right, but he did not state what the difference was. Dr. Eslick had answered a hypothetical question, but did not testify to any personal knowledge of the plaintiff's feet. On the part of the defendant, Dr. Hews had testified that measurements of the plaintiff's feet had been made that day in the presence of himself, two physicians who had testified for the plaintiff, three other physicians who were witnesses for the defendant, and attorneys for the parties; that there was a difference between the feet and legs of the plaintiff at one point of measurement, but that he had forgotten which one, of $\frac{1}{4}$ of an inch, and he did not state which foot or leg was the larger. Dr. Martin had testified that he saw the measurements described by Dr. Hews, and that they showed the feet of the plaintiff to be of the same size, and that the left leg 6 inches above the ankle was $\frac{1}{4}$ of an inch larger than the right. This was the showing made with respect to the measurements when Mrs. Hall was requested to make the exhibition of herself and submit to the measurements in question. Dr. Mullarky and Dr. Young, who it appeared had assisted in making the measurements, had not testified, and the defendant gave no reason for not having called them. As they were afterwards examined for the defendant, we may presume that they were present in court, and that the court knew that the defendant had not exhausted its testimony in regard to the measurements. The question which they were designed to settle was not controlling, and was one of many involved in the case. Much testimony had been given in regard to the anatomy of the foot and ankle, the rupture of tendons and ligaments, electrical experiments to ascertain the nature and extent of the injuries in question, besides the direct testimony of the plaintiff and others in regard to her injuries and sufferings. Mrs. Hall is described as "rather fleshy," and a difference of half an inch in measuring the circumference of her feet and limbs might easily be made by different persons, and observers be unable to detect any errors in the measurements. It is not at all probable that measurements made in the presence of the jury would have aided it materially to reach a verdict. It is by no means certain that such measurements would not have confused rather than helped the deliberations of the jury. The request of the defendant was that Mrs. Hall remove her shoes and stockings in the presence of the jury, and, we may presume, before a large audience of bystanders in a crowded court-room, for the single purpose of having her feet and legs measured in such a manner that the jury might see it done. In my opinion, it was not only within the power, but the duty, of the district court, under the circumstances shown to exist, to refuse to allow the desired experiment to be made. As it appears to me, it certainly would have been indelicate, if not positively indecent, and would have been shocking and repulsive to any modest and sensitive woman. It was not shown to be necessary. The defendant had been afforded ample opportunity to make accurate measurements, and if its witnesses failed to make and remember them the plaintiff should not suffer for their negligence. Although she and her attorneys did not offer as much resistance to the request of the defendant as they might well have made, yet it is evident that they were unwilling to make the exhibition desired, and that they did not wish to prejudice their case by appearing to withhold evidence which was within their power to give. The court had a knowledge of the plaintiff, and of the conditions under which the experiment, if permitted, would have been made, which we cannot have. The defendant had not introduced all the evidence at his command. In my opinion, no abuse of the discretion with which the district court was clothed is shown. The opinions of the majority, while disclaiming the adoption of a rule applicable in all such cases, does, in effect, hold that the district court had no discretion, and that in this and all similar cases the defendant may, as a matter of right, require a woman whose injuries are in question to partially disrobe herself in the presence of the court, jury, members of the bar, and possibly a court-room full of bystanders, and raise her garments sufficiently high to permit each of the twelve jurors to see her legs measured 6 inches above the ankles, and that this may be done even though other evidence is at the command of the defendant, and at hand, which may show that the exhibition is wholly unnecessary. I cannot assent to such a holding. It may be further said that, after the court refused the request of the defendant, the latter called Dr. Saunders, who had testified for the plaintiff, and showed by him that he was present when the measurements were made for the defendant, and saw nothing unfair in them, and nothing to show that they were not made at the places measured for the plaintiff. Dr. Mullarky then testified, and corroborated fully the testimony given by Dr. Martin in regard to the measurements. Dr. Young testified that the feet measured the same, and that he could not see any difference between them. The plaintiff did not offer any evidence in rebuttal on this branch of the case. It thus appears that the preponderance of the evidence on that issue was on the side of the defendant. I believe it has had a fair trial, and that it has no just reason to complain of the judgment of the district court.

Granger and Deemer, JJ.:

We place our concurrence in the conclusion of the majority opinion on the fact of the interference by the court without objection by the witness or counsel. It appears in the record that the court, of its own motion, declined to permit the examination. It seems to us the record limits our inquiry to that state of facts. There was nothing in the examination not entirely proper to take place in open court if the witness did not object.

SOUTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT.

George F. LEITZSEY, Appt.,

v.

COLUMBIA WATER POWER COMPANY.

(.....S. C.....)

1. A demurrer to a complaint against a grantee of one who erected a dam for injuring land by maintenance of the nuisance cannot be sustained for failure to state injury after notice to defendant of the nuisance.

where the notice was given fifteen days before suit was brought, and the complaint alleged injury up to the time it was filed.

2. A statute giving the trustees of a public canal power to raise the water in a river to a certain height by means of a dam, and providing that if in constructing the canal or developing the dam it becomes necessary to use private property, the board "shall have a right to acquire such right of way" in the manner now provided by law, requires the settlement of damages for flooding lands by the dam

NOTE.—The purposes for which a statute may authorize the flowage of land are the subject of a note to Turner v. Nye (Mass.) 14 L. R. A. 437. See 34 L. R. A.

also the case of Nunamaker v. Columbia Water-Power Co. (S. C.) post, 222.

under the eminent domain law, and not by suit for nuisance.

3. Failure to object to the raising of water along abutting lands by a dam across a river constitutes permission to do so within the provision of a statute that in case any person permits entry upon his land for the construction of a public improvement without previous compensation he shall have a right to petition for the assessment of his damages, so that such remedy is exclusive.

(October 17, 1896.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Common Pleas Circuit Court for Richland County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover damages for the alleged wrongful flooding of plaintiff's land. Affirmed.

The first cause of action set out in the complaint was as follows:

(1) That the defendant was at the times hereinafter mentioned, and now is, a corporation duly created and organized under and by virtue of the laws of the said state. (2) That the plaintiff was at the time of the commission of the grievances hereinafter set forth, and now is, the owner in fee and in possession of a tract of land containing 420 acres, more or less, lying on the right bank of Broad river, in the said county and state, bounded on the north by lands of F. W. Wagener, on the east by the said river, on the south by lands of the state penitentiary, and on the west by the Newberry road, separating this tract from lands of the estates of Eli Huffman and Isaiah Haliwanger, and also by lands of the estate of Godfrey B. Nunamaker, and that running across or near to the said land, leading into the said river, is a branch and a ditch, by means of which, and the said river, the said land was, prior to the commission of the said grievances, and from time immemorial, accustomed to be drained for agricultural purposes. (3) That on or about the — day of —, 1889, the board of trustees of the Columbia Canal, a corporation duly created and organized under and by virtue of the laws of the said state, raised and erected a dam, known as the "Columbia Canal Dam," across the current of the said river, at a point a short distance below plaintiff's said tract of land; that thereafter, on or about the 11th day of January, 1892, the said board of trustees of the Columbia Canal transferred and conveyed to the said defendant the said dam, and all and singular the property thereto appertaining, and that the said defendant has since been and now is the owner and in possession thereof. (4) That since the said 11th day of January, 1892, the said defendant has kept up, maintained, and continued, and now maintains, keeps up, and continues, the said dam as aforesaid, so that by reason thereof the waters of the said river are raised 6 feet in the channel thereof, and greatly increased in quantity therein, and in the said branch and ditch, and the free, natural, and accustomed flow of the said water, and of sand and other sterile earth, through the channels of the said river and of the said branch and ditch, has been and now is hindered and obstructed; and the said river and the said branch and ditch have been and now are prevented and hindered from effecting the proper, natural, and usual drainage of the said land; the said waters are caused to percolate through, and water-log and water-soak 40 acres of the said land lying on the said river; and in times of ordinary freshet the waters of the said river are caused to flow back upon and inundate the said 40 acres of the said land, depositing thereon quantities of sand and other sterile earth, all of which, prior to the commission of the said grievances, and from time immemorial, the said waters were not accustomed to do. And the plaintiff further avers that prior to the grievances hereinbefore complained of the said 40 acres of the said land were of unusual and great fertility, and were not subject to overflow by the waters of the said river so as to destroy or materially injure the crops growing thereon, and that since the commission of the said grievances, and by reason thereof, the said lands have become liable to frequent and prolonged freshets, overflowing and inundating the said lands to such an extent as to destroy the crops growing thereon, and wholly to deter and prevent the use of the said lands for agricultural purposes, or for any valuable purpose whatever. And the plaintiff further avers that by reason of the said grievances so as aforesaid caused by the keeping up, maintaining, and continuing of the said dam by the said defendant as aforesaid, the said 40 acres of land, which prior thereto were reasonably worth $75 per acre, have become water-logged, unproductive, uncultivable, and wholly valueless to the plaintiff, to the great nuisance and injury of the plaintiff, and to his damage $4,000. (5) That on the 2d day of August, 1894, the plaintiff gave the defendant notice of the said nuisance, and then requested the defendant to remove the same, but that the said defendant has failed and refused so to do. (6) That the said keeping up, maintaining, and continuing of the said dam have heretofore been and now are without the consent of the plaintiff; that the said plaintiff has received no compensation for the injury sustained by him as hereinbefore set forth; and by reason of the premises, the plaintiff is entitled to have, of and from the said defendant, compensation in the said amount of $4,000.

84 L. R. A.

The second cause of action set out was:

(1) That the defendant was at the times hereinafter mentioned, and now is, a corporation duly created and organized under and by virtue of the laws of the said state. (2) That the plaintiff was at the time of the commission of the grievances hereinafter set forth, and now is, the owner in fee and in possession of a tract of land known as "Mickler's Island," lying in, and surrounded by the waters of, Broad river, in the said county and state, and being situated opposite to, and off from, a tract of land adjoining the tract described in the second paragraph of the first cause of action hereof, known as "Swygert's Mill Tract," and that prior to the commission of the said grievances, and from time immemorial, the said river was accustomed to flow past and by the said island without material injury thereto. (3) That on or about the — day of —, 1889, the board of trustees of the Columbia Canal, a corporation duly created and organized under and by virtue of the laws of said state, raised and erected a dam, known as the "Columbia Canal Dam," across the current of the said river, at a point below the plaintiff's said tract of land; that thereafter, on or about the 11th day of January, 1892, the said board of trustees of the Columbia Canal transferred and conveyed to the defendant herein the said dam, and all and singular the property thereto appertaining; and that the said defendant has since been and is now the owner and in possession thereof. (4) That since the said 11th day of January, 1892, the said defendant has kept up, maintained, and continued, and now keeps up, maintains, and continues, the said dam as aforesaid, so that by reason thereof the waters of the said river are raised 6 feet in the channel thereof, and greatly increased in quantity therein, and the free, natural, and accustomed flow of the water, and of sand and other sterile earth, through the channel of the said river, and past the plaintiff's said land, has been and now is hindered and obstructed, and the said river has been and now is prevented from effecting the proper, natural, and usual drainage of the said land; the said waters are caused to percolate through and water-log and water-soak the whole of the said tract of land, and in times of ordinary freshet the waters of the said river are caused to flow back upon and inundate the said land, depositing thereon quantities of sand and other sterile earth, all of which, prior to the commission of the said grievances, and from time immemorial, the said waters were not accustomed to do. And the plaintiff further avers that, prior to the grievances hereinbefore complained of, the said tract of land was of unusual and great fertility, and was not subject to overflow by the waters of the said river so as to destroy or materially injure the crops growing thereon, and that since the commission of the said grievances, and by reason thereof, the said lands have become liable to frequent and prolonged freshets, overflowing and inundating the said lands to such an extent as to destroy the crops growing thereon, and wholly to deter and prevent the use of the said lands for agricultural purposes, and for any valuable purpose whatever. And the plaintiff further avers that by reason of the said grievances so as aforesaid caused by the keeping up, maintaining, and continuing of the said dam by the said defendant as aforesaid, the said tract of land, which prior thereto was reasonably worth $100 per acre, has become water-logged, unproductive, uncultivable, and wholly valueless to the plaintiff, to the great nuisance and injury of the plaintiff, and to his damage $2,000. (5) That on the 2d day of August, 1894, the plaintiff gave the defendant notice of the said nuisance, and then requested the defendant to remove the same, but that the said defendant has failed and refused so to do. (6) That the said keeping up, maintaining, and continuing of the said dam by the said defendant has heretofore been and now is without the consent of the plaintiff; that the said plaintiff has received no compensation for the injury sustained by him as hereinbefore set forth, and by reason of the premises the plaintiff is entitled to have of and from the said defendant compensation in the said amount of $2,000.

The demurrer was as follows:

The defendant, the Columbia Water Power Company, moves the court to dismiss the complaint in this action on the ground that it appears from the face of the complaint that neither in what is therein stated to be a first cause of action, nor in that which is stated to be a second cause of action, does it state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against this defendant. Both of said causes of action objected to are insufficient, in this: That after it is alleged in the third paragraph of each of said causes of action "that on the — day of —, 1889, the board of trustees of the Columbia Canal, a corporation duly created and organized under and by virtue of the laws of said state, raised and erected a dam, known as the 'Columbia Canal Dam' across the current of the said river, at a point a short distance below the plaintiff's said tract of land, and that thereafter, on or about the 11th day of January, 1892, the said board of trustees of the Columbia Canal transferred and conveyed to the said defendant the said dam, and all and singular the property thereto appertaining, and that the said defendant has since been and now is the owner and is in possession thereof," it does not allege any negligence or want of care on the part of the board of trustees, or their grantees, either in the construction of the dam, or in its maintenance or repair, or that the defendant has done anything contrary to any contract or obligation arising out of any agreement with the plaintiff with reference to the construction, maintenance, or repair of the said dam, and its effect upon the land claimed to be injured in the said cause of action. The action brought by the plaintiff by said complaint is a common-law action for injury to his freehold, or at least for compensation for the taking for the use of a public purpose of a private property. The court will take cognizance of the fact that, under the Constitution and laws of the state, Broad river is a navigable stream, and declared to be a public highway. The court is bound to take further judicial notice of the act of the general assembly referred to in said third paragraph, creating the board of trustees of the Columbia Canal, and all of its provisions,—the same being a public act, passed for a public purpose,—and of the act of 1890 amendatory thereof. Taking such judicial notice, it appears: That under its provisions the said board of trustees had full authority, and were commanded and directed, to erect said dam, and to flow back the waters of the said navigable stream, and to use private property in the construction and maintenance of the said canal and dam, and that for the taking and use of such private property said act makes provision for the condemnation of such lands, and a remedy to the owner to secure compensation for the taking and use of such private property. That the court therefore must hold that said remedy is exclusive unless the board of trustees exceeded their authority, or did not conform to such provisions. There is no allegation in the complaint that they exceeded their authority, or did not conform to such provisions; but it is alleged in paragraph six of each of said causes of action "that the said keeping up, maintaining, and continuing of the said dam has heretofore been and now is without the consent of the plaintiff; that the said plaintiff has received no compensation for the injury received by him as heretofore set forth; and by reason of the premises the plaintiff is entitled to have, of and from the said defendant, compensation," etc. That said allegation is insufficient because it does not aver that the dam was erected without the consent of the plaintiff, nor that entry and use were made of the private property without the permission of the plaintiff. Further, it fails to allege that the taking complained of was after notification in writing by plaintiff to defendant of plaintiff's refusal of consent thereto, or that said taking and use complained of were and are without the permission of the plaintiff. The complaint therefore does not show that the plaintiff did not have his remedy under § 1752 of the Revised Statutes of 1898. The statute incorporating the board of trustees, authorizing the erection of the dam, having then provided a remedy for the taking and use of plaintiff's property, he is confined to such remedy; and, the complaint not showing upon its face that the case there alleged is one not provided for by said statute, it fails to state a cause of action. It is further submitted by the defendant that the complaint, upon its face, shows no actionable injury to the plaintiff between the time of the commencement of the action and of the refusal of the defendant to remove the dam. The refusal of the defendant to remove the dam was dated the 14th of August, 1894. The action was commenced the 17th of August, 1894. During this interval it is not alleged that any damage occurred to the plaintiff by reason of the flowing of his land by prolonged freshets in the river, or any injury thereto, as in law the defendant, assuming that, if liable at all, it could only be liable for such injury as arose from the time of its refusal to remove, and, the complaint showing on its face no actionable injury from said time of refusal to remove to the commencement of the action, it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.

The order sustaining the demurrer was as follows:

"The defendant interposes an oral demurrer to the complaint upon the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to state a cause of action, and moves to dismiss the said complaint upon the ground that the same does not state a cause of action, as set forth in the written grounds filed in the cause pursuant to rule 18 of the circuit court. Now, upon hearing argument of counsel for plaintiff and defendant, it is ordered and adjudged that the said oral demurrer be sustained, and the said complaint is hereby dismissed. The court reserves the right hereafter to file its grounds and reasons for sustaining the demurrer and dismissing the complaint, if it may see fit.

"O. W. Buchanan, Presiding Judge.
"December 11, 1895."

Messrs. Melton & Melton, J. S. Muller, and Obeah & Douglass for appellant.
Messrs. Abney & Thomas for respondent.
34 L. R. A.

Jones, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from an order sustaining a demurrer to the complaint herein on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The action was begun August 17, 1894, to recover damages or compensation for injuries to the lands of plaintiff, situated in Lexington county, caused by a dam erected in 1889 across Broad river by the board of trustees of the Columbia Canal under authority of an act approved December 24, 1887. The complaint (which will be set out in full, at least as to one of the causes of action, in the report of this case) sets up two causes of action,—one referring to injuries to an island in Broad river known as "Mickler's Island;" the other to injuries to a tract of 420 acres lying on the western bank of the river, on which were a branch and a ditch leading to the river, by which, together with the river, this tract had been accustomed to be drained for agricultural purposes. At the hearing the court properly took judicial notice of the act approved December 24, 1887, entitled "An Act to Incorporate the Board of Trustees of the Columbia Canal, to Transfer to the Said Board the Columbia Canal and the Lands now Held therewith and Its Appurtenances, and to Develop the Same," and of the amendatory act approved December 24, 1890. The court also took judicial notice of the fact that Broad river is declared to be a navigable stream and a public highway. To this the plaintiff did not object, and, as appellant, does not object here. These acts and this fact, then, must be read into the complaint, as a part thereof. It appears that under authority of the said act of 1887 the board of trustees of the Columbia Canal completed said dam in 1889, and by authority of the amendatory act of 1890 the trustees on the 11th of January, 1892, conveyed the canal and dam, and the property appurtenant, to the defendant company, and the defendant has ever since maintained and continued said dam. The complaint further alleges, substantially, that by reason of the maintenance of the dam the water of Broad river at plaintiff's land is raised 6 feet in the channel, thereby obstructing the free and accustomed flow of water, and of sand and other sterile earth, through the channel of the river and of the branch and ditch, and preventing the proper and usual drainage of these lands; thereby causing the waters to percolate through and water-log and soak, these lands; that in times of ordinary freshet the waters of the river are caused to frequently overflow and inundate large portions of said land to such extent as to destroy the crops growing thereon, and wholly prevent the use of said lands for agricultural purposes; that the keeping up, maintaining, and continuing of the said dam by the defendant have been and now are without the consent of the plaintiff; and that the plaintiff has received no compensation for said injuries. The complaint also shows that on the 2d day of August, 1894, the plaintiff gave defendant notice of said nuisance, and requested defendant to remove the same, but that defendant has failed and refused so to do. The date of defendant's refusal does not appear. In the order sustaining the demurrer the presiding judge, Hon. O. W. Buchanan, reserved the right to file his grounds and reasons for sustaining the demurrer and dismissing the complaint, if he saw fit. These grounds and reasons have not been filed, but it appears in the case that "the demurrer was sustained for the several grounds set forth therein." The demurrer specifying the grounds and the order sustaining the same will appear in the report of the case. The demurrer, and the exceptions to the order sustaining the same, raise practically the following questions: (1) Whether the statute of 1887 gave authority for the acts resulting in the injuries complained of, and afforded therefor a remedy which is exclusive. (2) Whether, assuming the affirmative of the first proposition, the complaint contains any statement of facts showing a case outside of the application of such a provision of law, such as acts of negligence in the construction or maintenance of the dam, or acts in excess of the authority conferred. (3) Distinct from the foregoing, and assuming the right to bring an action at common law, whether the complaint is fatally defective in not stating that plaintiff had been injured by defendant after notice of the alleged nuisance, and demand for its removal. We will consider the last proposition first.

1. It appears that the dam was constructed, and the water raised in the channel of the river, by the grantors of the defendant. The defendant was not the original creator of the alleged nuisance. "Where a defendant was not the original creator of the disturbance of an easement, an action will not lie against him until he has been requested to remove the cause of the disturbance which is on his land." Elliott v. Rhett, 5 Rich. L. 420, 57 Am. Dec. 750. In Angell on Watercourses, § 408, the same doctrine is announced as follows: "It has been held ever since Penruddock's Case, 5 Coke, *101, that where a party was not the original creator of the nuisance he must have notice of it, and a request must be made to remove it, before any action can be brought. Where a dam was erected, and land in consequence flowed, by the grantor of an individual, the grantee will not be liable for the damages in continuing the dam and flowing the land as before, except on proof of notice of damage and of a special request to remove the nuisance." This rule is based on the reason that it would be unjust to subject a person, not the creator of the nuisance, to a suit for the nuisance of which he was ignorant, and which he did not intend to continue. In this case notice of the nuisance, and request for its removal, were received by the defendant fifteen days before the commencement of this action. The alleged grievances were caused by the "keeping up, maintaining, and continuing the dam." The natural and accustomed flow of the water, etc., through the channel of the river, of the branch, and of the ditch "has been and now is hindered and obstructed." The river, branch, and ditch "have been and now are prevented and hindered from effecting the proper, natural, and usual drainage of said land; . . . the said waters are caused to percolate," etc. It is clear that the complaint alleges injury after as well as before the notice to remove the nuisance, and up to the commencement of the action. It may be that the injury sustained by plaintiff for which action would lie is small, but that was for the jury. We do not think the demurrer could be sustained on this ground.

2. Taking the first proposition stated above: This is the crucial question in the case. Does the act of 1887 provide a remedy for the injuries complained of by plaintiff? Section 2 of this act provides "that the said board of trustees are hereby authorized and directed for the development of said canal to take into their possession the said property with all its appurtenances; and for the purpose of navigation, for providing an adequate water power for the use of the penitentiary and for other purposes hereinafter named, they are hereby authorized, empowered, and directed to improve and develop the same." Section 3 provides "that in order to improve and develop the power of said canal for navigation to furnish the city of Columbia with an adequate supply of water and other hydraulic purposes, they are authorized to construct a dam across Broad river at, above, or below the head of the present canal, as by survey already made, may be deemed advisable for the development of the said water power, and in locating and constructing the said dam, they shall have the right to raise the water in the Broad river to such a height as will give a head and fall of 87 feet at the south side of Gervais street at mean low water," etc. Section 4 provides "that the said board of trustees shall have the right of way, and the same is hereby granted in and along said course of the canal, for the construction and operation of the same. If in enlarging and developing the said canal, or in constructing the said dam, it become necessary to use the private property of any person or corporation for the purpose, the said board of trustees, for the sake of the public improvement contemplated in the construction of the said canal, and the better navigation of the Broad river and Congaree river, and the transportation of supplies to market, shall have the right to acquire such right of way in the manner now provided by law." Appellants contend for a strict construction of this act, and that, while the power of eminent domain has been conferred, the manner prescribed for the exercise of it has been carefully and expressly limited to the securing the right of way, properly so called, along the line of the canal, and for the purpose of the construction of the dam. It is undoubtedly true, as a general rule, that statutes granting power to condemn private property for public use should be strictly construed. This principle was very strongly asserted in Greenville & C. R. Co. v. Nunnamaker, 4 Rich. L. 111, but this case asserts also another well-settled rule of construction, in this language (p. 115): "But in the construction of the charter, when the strict signification of a word is opposed to the apparent intention, it is proper to maintain the design and purpose of the charter, even by neglect of the meaning of the word." Mr. Endlich, in his work on Interpretation of Statutes (§ 843), shows that, while the rule of strict construction applies to such statutes, the application of such rule must stop short of defeating the object of the enactment. Mr. Black, in his work on the same subject (p. 308), says that such statutes "are to receive a reasonably strict and guarded interpretation, and the power granted will extend no further than expressly stated, or than is necessary to accomplish the general scope and purposes of the grant." So in Ross v. Georgia, O. & N. R. Co. 33 S. C. 482, Chief Justice McIver, speaking for the court, said: "When the legislature granted a charter to the defendant company, authorizing it to construct a railway between the points therein designated, it must be regarded as having conferred upon said company the right to take and condemn such lands and rights of way as might be necessary to effect the purpose. This is the rule of construction as applied to such enterprises as railroads built for private gain, but serving a useful public purpose. The construction of the Columbia Canal was a great public work, begun by the state itself, for important public purposes; among others, 'for providing an adequate water power for the use of the penitentiary;' 'to improve and develop the power of said canal for navigation;' 'furnishing the city of Columbia with an adequate supply of water.' The state created the board of trustees, giving it large discretionary powers, and directed it to improve and develop the said canal for the purposes named. 'The principle of strict construction is less applicable where the powers are conferred on public bodies for essentially public purposes.' Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 355. 'The right to condemn will be . . . more readily inferred . . . in favor of public corporations exercising powers solely for the public use and benefit than in favor of private individuals, or corporations organized for pecuniary profit.' Lewis, Em. Dom. § 241. Article 1, § 28, of the Constitution of 1868, under which the case arises, provides: 'Private property shall not be taken or applied for public use, or for the use of corporations, or for private use, without the consent of the owner or a just compensation being made therefor; provided, however, that laws may be made securing to persons or corporations the right of way over the lands of either persons or corporations, and, for works of internal improvement, the right to establish depots, stations, turnouts,' etc.; 'but a just compensation shall, in all cases, be first made to the owner.' This provision of the Constitution 'was inserted for the double purpose of maintaining the sanctity of private property, and at the same time promoting internal improvements, especially in respect to rights of way over lands, and in establishing stations, etc., to facilitate transportation.' Ex parte Bacot, 36 S. C. 138, 16 L. R. A. 586.

The statute in question must be interpreted in the light of the foregoing principles. It is expressly provided in the 3d section of said act that in locating and constructing the said dam the board of trustees shall have the right to raise the water in Broad river to a specified height at a given point. This was deemed essential to the development of the canal, which the trustees were directed to do. The right to locate and construct the dam necessarily, and by the terms of the act, includes the right to raise the water in the channel of Broad river. Assuming that plaintiff, as a proprietor on Broad river, a fresh-water navigable stream, owned to the middle of the stream, as contended for by appellant, this act, by necessary inference, if not in express words, when it authorized the raising of the water in Broad river to a given height authorized the entry and invasion of the plaintiff's land to the extent necessary to maintain such height of water. Now, in the 4th section of the act the board of trustees is granted necessary right of way in and along the course of the canal for the construction and development of the same. Under the well-settled rule of statutory construction, that when the subject matter of an act is clearly ascertained, in order to effect the legislative intent, and carry out the general scope and purpose of the act, general words will be restrained, and words of narrow signification will be enlarged, a court would be justified in enlarging the words above quoted to include, not only lands strictly in and along the course of the canal, but all lands necessary to be used in maintaining the dam and the specified height of water which are essential for the development and operation of the canal. But § 4 goes further, and provides: 'If in enlarging and developing the said canal, or in constructing the said dam, it becomes necessary to use private property,' etc., 'the said board of trustees,' etc., 'shall have the right to acquire such right of way in the manner now provided by law.' It will be observed that in § 3 the right to raise the water in the river was complied with, and made a part of the construction of the dam; and now, in § 4, the right to use private property necessary in the construction of the dam is expressly given. Construing the terms used in the light of the manifest purpose of the act, we cannot give them the narrow and restricted interpretation contended for by appellant, limiting the right of way to the actual line of the canal, and to the land actually occupied by the structure called the 'dam,' but must give them the enlarged meaning indicated above. The real dam is the damming of the water to the specified height, and must include all lands or easements necessary to maintain it. The legislature, having directed the development of a great public work for essentially public purposes, certainly meant to grant all rights without which the power granted would be worthless.

It is contended further that, granting that the statute of 1887 vests the board of trustees with all the powers conferred by the condemnation statutes of this state (Gen. Stat. 1882, §§ 1550-1561; Rev. Stat. 1893, §§ 1743-1755), still the defendant could reap no benefit thereby without showing that the provisions of the statute have been called into actual operation in the manner provided. Section 1743 provides: 'Whenever any person or corporation shall be authorized by charter to construct . . . a canal . . . in this state such person or corporation, before entering upon any lands for the purpose of construction, shall give to the owner thereof . . . notice in writing that the right of way over said lands is required,' etc. It does not appear on the face of the complaint that any such notice was given. But in Verdier v. Port Royal R. Co. 15 S. C. 476, it is held that an owner may give permission to enter for purpose of construction of a highway without first receiving the notice, and that such may be inferred from facts and circumstances. See also, to the same effect, Tutt v. Port Royal & A. R. Co. 28 S. C. 400, which was an appeal from an order sustaining a demurrer. The complaint does not show that the plaintiff objected at all to the raising of the water in the river 6 feet on plaintiff's banks. This was done in 1889 by defendant's grantor, without objection, so far as appears. The allegation of the sixth paragraph of the complaint, "that the said keeping up, maintaining, and continuing of the said dam by the defendant has heretofore been and now is without the consent of the plaintiff," etc., relates to time beginning January 11, 1892, when the dam, etc., was conveyed to defendant. The first and only evidence of objection was given on the 2d day of August, 1894, when the notice to remove the nuisance was served. The act authorizing the construction of the dam and raising the water in the river's channel was a public act, of which plaintiff is presumed to have known. The extensive and permanent character of so large a public work, so near plaintiff's land, with the manifest and avowed purpose of raising the water on plaintiff's land; with the inevitable result of interfering with the drainage of lands accustomed to be drained into the river in the territory necessary to maintain the specified head of water in the river, the immediate elevation of the water in the branch and ditch spoken of, and the overflow of plaintiff's land in times of ordinary freshet, must surely have attracted plaintiff's attention. The entry upon and appropriation of plaintiff's land for the construction of the dam were open and patent. The projection and maintenance of the water of the river 6 feet against his banks, above the former level, with its inevitable results, were all the entry and use of plaintiff's land necessary to be made and were as effective for the construction of the dam and canal as an entry by workmen with pick and shovel to dig up the soil would be in the case of constructing a railroad. From the absence of objection, under these circumstances, permission to enter must be inferred. Section 1752, Rev. Stat. 1893, provides for such a case: "If in any case the owner of any land shall permit the person or corporation acquiring the right of way over the same to enter upon the construction of a highway without previous compensation the owner shall have the right, after the highway shall have been constructed, to demand compensation, and to petition for an assessment of the same in the manner hereinbefore directed: provided such petition shall be filed within twelve months after the highway shall have been completed through his or her lands." This section has received interpretation in the case of Aull v. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co. 42 S. C. 436, where Chief Justice McIver, as the court's organ, says: "In § 1558, Gen. Stat. (Rev. Stat. 1893, § 1752), the word used is 'permit,' showing an intention to provide for cases, which oftentimes have occurred, where the railway company, without first obtaining the 'consent' of the landowner, either expressly or by presumption, has been suffered or permitted to construct its road 'over the land of another.' . . . If, therefore, a railway company, without first obtaining the consent of a landowner, and without first resorting to the proper proceedings to condemn the land and have the compensation to which the landowner is entitled ascertained, proceeds to construct its road over the land of another, without objection, or by the implied permission, of the landowner, such landowner may at any time within one year after the completion of the road, under the provision of § 1559 (Rev. Stat. 1893, § 1752), demand compensation in the manner therein provided."

It is contended that the right to condemn lands does not include such use of or injury to the lands of plaintiff as complained of in this case; but in Ross v. Georgia, C. & N. R. Co. 33 S. C. 477, it was held that the word "lands" includes all rights or easements growing thereout. The compensation allowed by the statute is for the right of way, not simply the land. "The act, in effect, defines the term 'compensation' to be the value of the land, together with such special damage as may be sustained by the landowner, by reason of the construction of the road through his lands." Bowen v. Atlantic & F. B. V. R. Co. 17 S. C. 579. Since the compensation is for the right of way, the right of way must include such use of land as subjects the landowner to any special damage for which compensation is allowed. There is no doubt that the injuries complained of in this case could have been submitted to a jury to assess the amount of compensation, as matter of special damages. Of course, the permission granted by plaintiff to the board of trustees to enter for construction of the dam and appurtenances did not deprive plaintiff of his constitutional right of compensation, for which a remedy was provided. It simply relieved the board of trustees, so entering, from the character of trespassers. Tompkins v. Augusta & K. R. Co. 21 S. C. 491. Neither is the defendant grantee a trespasser for continuing the use. The remedy provided by the statute is exclusive. McLaughlin v. Charlotte & S. C. R. Co. 5 Rich. L. 584; Fuller v. Edings, 11 Rich. L. 239; Verdier v. Port Royal R. Co. 15 S. C. 483; Sams v. Port Royal & A. R. Co. Id. 487; Ross v. Georgia, C. & N. R. Co. 33 S. C. 477.

2. Notwithstanding the legislature authorized the erection of the dam and the raising of the water in the river, and provided an exclusive remedy to enable plaintiff to secure compensation for the lands taken, and special damages, nevertheless an action at common law would be sustained for any injury resulting from negligence in the performance of authorized acts, as compensation for injury from such a cause was not contemplated by the legislature. The complaint, however, contains no allegations to bring the case within this rule. Wallace v. Columbia & G. R. Co. 84 S. C. 66, is in point here: "There must be some allegations of facts showing that the defendant in doing the act which it was authorized to do, has either wantonly or through negligence done the act in such a manner as unnecessarily impaired or injured the rights of the plaintiff. . . . The wrong, if any, which was done to the plaintiff by the defendant did not consist in constructing its roadbed over the streams flowing through the lands of the plaintiff, for that it had a legal right to do. Nor did it consist necessarily in the fact that the natural flow of the water was obstructed, for that may have been the inevitable and unavoidable consequence of the construction of the railroad, but it may have consisted in the unskillful or negligent manner in which the work was done." Authorities on this subject are numerous. The point is tersely stated in Watts v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 39 W. Va. 196, 23 L. R. A. 674: "The grant is a defense as to all acts done within it, not outside it." Neither a right of way conferred by grant, nor one conferred by condemnation, will give exemption from damages consequential upon the improper or negligent exercise of the rights, and not from the fair, proper, and reasonable exercise of it; for the reason that neither in making such grant, nor in the assessment upon an inquisition, are damages contemplated or included that are to be solely attributed to such misuse of the right.

The demurrer was properly sustained upon the grounds discussed in the second and third propositions above stated.

The judgment of the Circuit Court sustaining the demurrer and dismissing the complaint is affirmed.

Arthur S. NUNAMAKER, Appt.,

v.

COLUMBIA WATER POWER COMPANY.

(.....S. C.....)

The grant of a right to flood a part of a farm by the erection of a dam will preclude the maintenance of an action for injuries caused by the dam to the remaining portion.

(October 17, 1896.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Common Pleas Circuit Court for Richland County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover damages for alleged wrongful flooding of plaintiff's land. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Melton & Melton, J. S. Muller, and Obear & Douglass for appellant.

Messrs. Abney & Thomas for respondent.

Jones, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case, being in all respects, except in one particular to be hereinafter noticed, like the case of Leitzzey v. Columbia Water Power Co. (just decided by this court) ante, 215, is ruled by the principles therein announced. The point of difference in this case and the one just referred to is this: In the third paragraph of the complaint it is alleged that "on or about the 15th day of March, 1891, the said board of trustees of the Columbia Canal purchased from the plaintiff herein the right to overflow and cover with water, and keep covered with water, 14½ acres, part and parcel of the tract of land described in the second paragraph, and bordering on the said river." These acres, however, are not included in the 60 acres, for injuries to which damages are demanded. To this defendant demurred as follows: "The complaint, upon its face, shows no cause of action, in that it appears therein that the plaintiff granted to the board of trustees, under whom defendant claims, the right to overflow and cover with water, and keep covered with water, 14½ acres of land, being part and parcel of the same tract alleged now to be damaged by reason of the keeping up and maintaining of the dam alleged in the complaint to be a nuisance. In law, this grant of the easement to overflow this portion of the particular tract of land has the same effect as if condemnation proceedings had been taken under the provisions of law, and all injuries to the residue of the tract of land are conclusively presumed to have been taken into consideration in fixing the amount of the purchase money of the parcel of land so granted." The demurrer was sustained on this ground, as well as upon the other grounds stated in said Leitzzey's Case, and appellant's third exception in this case alleges error. The circuit court did not err. In Lewis, Em. Dom. § 566, it is stated: "If one individual should convey to another a strip of land to be used for a railroad, there would be a release of all damages resulting from the operation of the road in a reasonable and proper manner." This is precisely what this court decided in Wallace v. Columbia & G. R. Co. 34 S. C. 62. In the last-mentioned case the railroad company acquired a right of way by agreement with the landowner, and it was held that the landowner could not maintain an action against the company for damages resulting to the landowner from the construction and maintenance of its roadbed, without showing that the damage was the result of the unskillful and negligent manner in which the work was done. Randolph, Em. Dom. § 129, says: "There is a well-settled rule to the effect that where property is purchased where it might have been condemned, the consideration is conclusively presumed to cover all damages to the remainder of the tract for which the owner could have obtained compensation in condemnation proceedings." In Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Smith, 111 Ill. 363, it is held that, where a person conveys a right of way over his land, it will be conclusively "presumed that all the damages to the balance of the land, past, present, and future, were included in the consideration paid him for his conveyance, the same as an assessment of damages on a condemnation would be presumed to embrace." To the same effect is the well-considered case of Watts v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 39 W. Va. 196, 23 L. R. A. 674, which holds that, when one grants to a railroad company a strip of land for its use in the construction of its road, all damages to the residue of the tract, arising from construction, which can be taken into consideration in the assessment of compensation under proceedings for condemnation, are released. There are many other cases to this effect. It would be unreasonable to hold that a voluntary grant of a right of way is not as effectual to protect the grantee from suit for damages arising from its proper use as a right of way taken under compulsory proceedings. This, which is settled law as to railroads, applies, on principle, to canals as well. We have shown in Leitzzey's Case that this land, including its use for the purpose for which it was granted, may have been condemned for the necessary use of the canal. The plaintiff, having seen fit to grant

NOTE.—See the preceding case of Leitzzey v. Columbia Water Power Co. (S. C.) ante, 215.
34 L. R. A.

a license to permanently flood a part of his tract of land for the maintenance of the canal, is presumed to have taken into consideration the damage to the residue of his tract which would accrue to him from the proper and reasonable use of the right granted. If for such damage he did not get adequate compensation in the price paid for the grant or license, and greater injury than he contemplated has resulted from such reasonable use, it is damnum absque injuria.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

ALABAMA SUPREME COURT.

C. McANALLY, Appl.,

v.

ALABAMA INSANE HOSPITAL.

(.....Ala.....)

A contract by a married woman to pay for the support of her insane husband in an asylum, not made in the mode provided by statute, is not valid under Code, § 2346, giving a wife capacity to contract as if sole, "with the assent or concurrence of her husband expressed in writing," and § 2350, authorizing her to engage in trade or business without his consent, if he is of unsound mind or has abandoned her.

(February 6, 1896.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Birmingham City Court in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to enforce de-

NOTE.—Insanity of husband as affecting wife's disability of coverture.

- I. Generally,—wife as head of family.
- II. As to separate property and rights of wife.
- III. As to dower rights.
- IV. As to community property.
- V. As to property and rights of husband.

I. Generally,—wife as head of family.

The cases are hopelessly conflicting, but it may be possible to draw the conclusion from them that the wife of an insane man is to be regarded as the head of the family so far as may be necessary to its proper care and maintenance. But even this can be regarded only as a general, and not as an universal, rule.

Thus, the wife of an insane man should be regarded as the head of the family and entitled to its control during his insanity, and she has the right as against his father to control his abiding place or change his domicile. Robinson v. Frost, 54 Vt. 106, 41 Am. Rep. 835.

And the guardianship of an insane husband for whom no statutory guardian had been appointed is in his wife rather than his father, and she may enter the father's dwelling where they had temporarily occupied an apartment, and remove her husband notwithstanding the father's opposition. Ibid.

So, in Gustin v. Carpenter, 51 Vt. 585, an insane husband was spoken of as being intellectually dead for the present.

And in Forbes v. Moore, 32 Tex. 185, the wife is also said to be the head of the family during the husband's insanity. See infra, IV.

And she is also spoken of as the head of the family in Sawyer v. Cutting, 23 Vt. 493, infra, V.

So, in Wenman's Case, 1 P. Wms. 701, the wife of a lunatic was treated as his custodian, and was committed for contempt of court for not obeying an order to produce him before a commission granted to inquire as to his lunacy, where it appeared that she had been with him and had been instrumental in removing him from place to place in order to avoid his production.

And in Bird v. LeFevre, 4 Bro. Ch. 100, interest on a fund in court belonging to a person afflicted with imbecility was ordered to be paid to his wife for the maintenance of himself and his family, it appearing to be for the benefit of the family that the interest should be so paid.

34 L. R. A.

And in Re Edwards, 3 Macn. & G. 134, an order was made for payment of a lunatic's maintenance to a married woman who was the committee of his person on her separate receipt, her solicitor undertaking that the money should be duly applied.

And in Retcourt v. Ewington, 9 Sim. 252, where an attachment was issued against a married man for want of answer of himself and wife, and the sheriff returned that the husband was insane and therefore incapable of answering, it was ordered that the wife should answer separately, and that the service of subpoena on her should be deemed good service, and that the senior clerk should be appointed guardian of the husband to put in his answer.

So, the wife of an insane husband may employ the selectmen of the town to commit him to an insane asylum under N. H. Rev. Stat. chap. 9, § 16, providing that the parent, guardian, or friends of an insane person may cause him to be sent to an asylum with the consent of the trustees and there supported on such terms as they may agree, the wife being regarded as the friend of the husband in such case. Davis v. Merrill, 47 N. H. 208.

And in England the wife of a lunatic would appear to have power to prosecute an inquisition of lunacy against him. See Re F. —, 2 De G. J. & S. 80, and Chester v. Rolfe, 4 De G. M. & G. 798, 18 Jur. 114, 23 L. J. Ch. N. S. 283, infra, V.

But the wife of an alleged lunatic is not considered as a friend or relative of her husband within the Maine statute allowing the appointment of a guardian upon the application of any friend or relative, on the ground that husband and wife should not be permitted to act adversely to each other except in cases of violence or divorce. Re Howard, 31 Me. 552.

And physical or mental incapacity is not included within the words "any other cause" in Wis. Rev. Stat. chap. 95, § 4, providing that any married woman whose husband, either from drunkenness, profligacy, or any other cause shall neglect or refuse to provide for her support or the support and education of her children, shall have the right in her own name to transact business and to receive and collect her own earnings, as such words must be understood to refer to like or similar causes. Edson v. Hayden, 20 Wis. 683.

And the wife of an insane man under guardianship cannot maintain an action to recover possession of property belonging to her in her own name.

defendant's liability on a bond given by her to plaintiff. Reversed.

Defendant's husband was in need of treatment at the hospital. Defendant and E. F. Enslen executed a bond to the hospital conditioned that so long as the husband remained in the hospital defendant should supply him with clothing and pay the hospital charges. Plaintiff alleged that the clothing was not furnished and charges were not paid, and it therefore brought this suit on the bond.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Messrs. C. B. Powell and Joseph G. Crews for appellant.

Messrs. Ward & Campbell, for appellee: At common law a wife was incapable of making a contract.

1 Co. Litt. 112a-129; Reeve, Dom. Rel. 98; Arthur v. Broadnax (Ala.) 87 Am. Dec. 709, Freeman's note.

Exceptions grew up and fastened themselves upon the body of the law. Originally they were these:

First, where the wife was a sole trader by the custom of London, an exception which of course never obtained in this country.

Second, where the husband was civilliter mortuus—civilly dead. As the modes of civil death existing at common law are these: (1) attainer of treason or felony; (2) banishment from or adjuration of the realm; (3) entering into religion—that is becoming a monk professed.

Third, where the husband was an alien enemy.

Fourth, where the husband was an alien and had never been in England.

Arthur v. Broadnax, 3 Ala. 557, 87 Am. Dec. 707; Manby v. Scott, 8 Smith, Lead. Cas. 1752; Gregory v. Paul, 15 Mass. 81; Roland v. Logan, 18 Ala. 307; Rhea v. Rhenner, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 105, 7 L. ed. 72; Love v. Moynahan, 16 Ill. 277, 68 Am. Dec. 306; Curstens v. Hanselman, 61 Mich. 426.

The husband was at common law liable for the wife's engagements for necessities furnished her upon the ground of an implied agency.

Manby v. Scott, supra; Sawyer v. Cutting, 23 Vt. 486; Benjamin v. Benjamin, 15 Conn. 847, 39 Am. Dec. 384; Freestone v. Butcher, 9 Car. & P. 648.

An insane husband was liable for the wife's support upon the same ground.

Manby v. Scott, 8 Smith, Lead. Cas. 1767.

During the husband's insanity the wife is the head of the family and has control of it.

Robinson v. Frost, 54 Vt. 105, 41 Am. Rep. 835.

and the joinder of her husband as plaintiff is a ground for the dismissal of the action under Mo. Rev. Stat. 1879, § 5804, providing that it shall be the duty of the guardian of an insane person to prosecute and defend all actions instituted in behalf of or against his ward. Hayes v. Miller, 81 Mo. 424.

And the fact that two of three trustees have died, and the third, who was a widow, had married a person afterwards found to be a lunatic, authorizes the appointment of new trustees in their places, where it had become impossible to obtain a payment of the dividends, as the bank would not pay them to the wife without the husband's concurrence. Re Wood, 3 De G. F. & J. 125.

See also Shaw v. Thompson, 16 Pick. 198, 26 Am. Dec. 655, infra II., holding that the husband's insanity does not remove the wife's disability or confer on her any new power.

II. As to separate property and rights of wife.

As to the separate and independent rights of the wife, though the decisions are conflicting, it would seem that the insanity of the husband is generally regarded as removing, or at least affecting, the disability of coverture to some extent.

Thus, the fact that a husband is insane and out of the state in an insane asylum without will or ability to return endows the wife with as much right to act in her own name with reference to her own right as she would have if her husband was civilly dead or had abjured the realm and abandoned her. Gustin v. Carpenter, 51 Vt. 585.

And a married woman whose husband is insane and confined in an insane asylum in another state may sue in her own name for a personal tort to her, which is a cause of action which would survive to her. Ibid.

So, a married woman having property, and whose husband is insane and has no settlement and cannot reduce her property to possession and thereby gain a settlement, may herself gain one in her own right by virtue of the possession of her property as if she were sole. Andover v. Merrimack County, 37 N. H. 487.

Nor can a wife's property be reduced to the possession of the husband where he is insane, by the act of his guardian, the right of election to so—duce it being in its nature a personal one to the husband which cannot be exercised by another. Ibid.
34 L. R. A.

So, in Steed v. Cadley, 2 Myl. & K. 52, a fund bequeathed to a married woman whose husband was of unsound mind, but against whom no commission had issued, was transferred into court on bill filed by the husband and wife for payment of the legacy to their joint account, and afterwards in consideration of their poverty, on the wife's application, the dividends were ordered to be paid to her for life.

And a settlement of one half of a fund to which a lunatic was entitled upon his wife, made upon her application and approved by the master by writing at the foot of the draft, after which the lunatic died without further proceedings having been taken, will not preclude the wife from retiring from the proposed settlement and claiming for herself the whole of such fund to which she was entitled upon the distribution of the intestate's estate. Baldwin v. Baldwin, 5 De G. & Sm. 325.

In Shaw v. Thompson, 16 Pick. 198, 26 Am. Dec. 655, however, it was held that the fact that a husband is non compos mentis does not remove the disability of his wife or confer on her any new power to bind herself by contract, and she cannot render herself liable on contract for necessities supplied her, as the law would still raise an implied promise against the husband for such necessities.

So, a wife appointed by commissioners of insanity custodian of her insane husband cannot recover compensation for services in that capacity from his estate under Iowa Code, § 2507, making the expenses of the family chargeable upon the property of both husband and wife or of either of them. Grant v. Green, 41 Iowa, 88.

And the wife of an insane husband, who contracts with his guardian to care for him for a specified sum for her services, cannot recover thereon as the agreement is without consideration, the services being such as she owed to her husband in virtue of the relation existing between them. Ibid.

III. As to dower rights.

The husband's insanity does not seem to affect

When a husband is insane and confined in an asylum in another state the wife may sue as if sole.

Gustin v. Carpenter, 51 Vt. 585.

Mr. James E. Webb also for appellee.

Haralson, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

At common law, marriage vested in the husband the title of the wife to all personal chattels of which she had actual or legal possession; and to her real estate he gained a title only to the rents and profits during coverture, but the estate itself remained entire to the wife, after the death of her husband, or to her heirs, if she died before him, unless by the birth of a child he became tenant for life by the curtesy. 2 Brick. Dig. pp. 71, 72, §§ 36, 51. At common law, the wife was generally incapable of entering into any valid contract to bind either her person or property, and could not be sued at law in an action ex contractu; and, except as modified by statute, this disability continues to exist. 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1397; Reeve, Dom. Rel. 188; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 604; Davis v. Carroll, 71 Md. 570; Canal Bank v. Partee, 99 U. S. 832, 25 L. ed. 398; 8 Brick. Dig. p. 545, §§ 52, 53. This rule of the common law has been modified in this state, and "the wife has full legal capacity to contract in writing, as if she were sole, with the assent or concurrence of her husband expressed in writing." Code, § 2348. This statute, as to contracts therein referred to, does not enlarge the capacity of a married woman to contract in all of the usual modes; but, as we have heretofore held, it is enabling and restrictive,—enabling, so as to authorize her to contract in any manner that she could do if a feme sole, with the written consent and concurrence of her husband; and restrictive, in that it denies this power, except in the specific mode prescribed in the statute. For the full exercise of the power to contract, two things are necessary,—a written contract by the wife, and the written assent or concurrence of the husband for her to make or enter into the contract. Scott v. Cotten, 91 Ala. 628. One of the exceptions to the common-law rule to which we have referred, disabling the wife to contract, was, that if the husband abandoned her, and departed into another country without the intention of returning, the law conferred on her the capacity of contracting and suing as though she were sole. Arthur v. Broadnax, 8 Ala. 557, 37 Am. Dec. 707; James v. Stewart, 9 Ala. 855; Mead v. Hughes, 15 Ala. 148, 50 Am. Dec. 123; Roland v. Logan, 18 Ala. 307. Or, when the the wife's power to convey or bar her right to dower.

Thus, where a wife separate and apart from her husband could not convey or bind her dower or homestead right by deed or mortgage, her joinder in a deed or mortgage with her husband, who is insane and incompetent to make a deed, will not bind her. Brothers v. Bank of Kaukauna, 84 Wis. 261.

And a joinder by a wife with her husband in a deed of his property, which had been sold by his guardian while he was insane and incapable of contracting, will not bar her dower or estop her from claiming dower under Mo. Rev. Stat. 1879, §§ 698, 2197, providing that a married woman may relinquish her dower in the real estate of her husband by their joint deed, acknowledged and certified as required by statute. Rannells v. Gerner, 80 Mo. 479.

Nor will the joinder of a wife with her husband in a deed of his property, made by his guardian when the husband was insane and incompetent to contract. Rannells v. Isgrig, 99 Mo. 19.

And the Massachusetts statute, providing that no conveyance by a married woman of any real property except a lease for a term not exceeding one year shall be valid without the assent of her husband in writing or his joining with her in the conveyance, contemplates an intelligent assent of a sound mind capable of contracting and advising, and a conveyance made by her in which her husband joins when he is insane is void to the same extent as if there had been no assent, and no subsequent action or failure to act on his part could give it validity. Leggate v. Clark, 111 Mass. 308.

And an order of the probate judge committing a husband to an insane asylum is not prima facie evidence of or admissible to prove his insanity on an issue whether he was of sufficient mental capacity to give an intelligent assent to his wife's conveyance of real estate. Ibid.

See also Heidenheimer v. Thomas, 68 Tex. 287, infra, IV.

IV. As to community property.

During the insanity of the husband the wife is the head of the family, and as such head has the 34 L. R. A.

legal right to dispose of so much of the common property of husband and wife as may be necessary to supply the wants of herself and his and her children. Forbes v. Moore, 28 Tex. 196.

And no recovery can be had by a husband who had been insane, after his recovery, from persons employed by his wife during his insanity to dispose of community property for the support of herself and children, unless there was an unnecessary squandering of the property by them. Ibid.

But the rule that the wife may sell community property or the property of her husband where he is insane springs only from the necessity of the family to have a support, and would not apply where the sale would deprive the family of the only piece of property which could have contributed to its support. Heidenheimer v. Thomas, 68 Tex. 287.

And the wife of an insane man has no power to dispose of community property or the separate property of her husband, where the statute makes provision for the support of the family and the education of the children. Ibid.

And a deed made by a husband and wife of the homestead when the husband is non compos mentis, for the purpose of the payment of a debt already due from the husband, is invalid and ineffectual to transfer her homestead, though she properly acknowledged it, where the homestead constituted her entire property. Ibid.

In Heidenheimer v. Thomas, supra, Forbes v. Moore, supra, was criticized, the court saying that it did not appear in that case that the wife had disposed of any property, and the remarks made in the course of the opinion, so far as could be seen from the record, were not necessary to the decision of the cause.

V. As to property and rights of husband.

The general rule would seem to be that laid down in Richardson v. Du Bois, L. R. 5 Q. R. 51, 30 L. J. Q. R. N. S. 69, 21 L. T. N. S. 635, 18 Week. Rep. 62, 10 Best & S. 830, that the agency of the wife of a lunatic, and her authority to pledge her husband's credit do not differ from those ordinarily implied from the relation of husband and wife.

Thus, the estate of an insane husband is bound husband was civilly dead,—outlawed, banished, imprisoned for life, etc.,—the wife had the powers of a feme sole. 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 591. The reason for ingrafting the exception referred to on the disabilities of the wife to contract at common law was, that without it oftentimes married women whose husbands had renounced their wives, families, and country "could obtain no credit on account of their husbands, for no process could reach them; and they could not recover for a trespass upon their persons or their property, or for the labor of their hands. They would be left the wretched dependents upon charity, or driven to the commission of crimes to obtain a precarious support." Gregory v. Paul, 15 Mass. 81; Mead v. Hughes, supra. The same reasons, it is contended for the appellee, apply to ingraft an inception in favor of married women in cases of the insanity of their husbands, and for the further reason that, the husband being insane, no marital right can be affected, and every presumption of possible coercion is removed out of the way,—citing Reeve, Dom. Rel. 188. But, the reasons in the two cases are not the same. It has been held as the common-law doctrine that "the husband must maintain the wife, not only during cohabitation, but whenever there is a separation without her fault. Insanity in either is not a fault; therefore, whether he or she is insane, or though both are, he must still provide for her. If she is in an insane asylum, he must support her there. He may be sued for necessities there supplied to her. Or, should he be the one in the asylum, the wife, though sane, may charge him with necessities while he is there confined." 1 Bishop, Mar. & Div. § 565.

One is not civilly dead who is insane, nor,—if not removed beyond his state,—can he be said to be where process may not be served on him. He is responsible for contracts made before he became insane, and may be sued on them. And that one insane may be the better taken care of, and not become a charge on his family, the statutes of this state provide for the appointment of a guardian of his person and property. Code, § 2390. So far as he is concerned, if a married man, the wife has no occasion to enter into a contract for his support with an asylum. The same reasons, then, for the rule invoked as to the capacity of the wife to contract, whose husband is civilly dead, or who has abandoned his wife and family, and gone to reside in another state, with no intention of returning, do not apply to cases of the mere insanity of the husband. In the American & English Encyclopædia of Law, it is said on this subject that, "as a general rule, the insanity, infancy, or other incapacity of a husband does not affect the personal status of his wife," and the compilers while stating that there seemed to be no cases on the point, added that the "proposition is an easy inference from the well known principles on this for necessities furnished his wife upon her request upon an implied contract to provide them for her during cohabitation. Pearl v. McDowell, 8 J. J. Marsh. 653, 20 Am. Dec. 190; Davidson v. Wood, 1 DeG. J. & S. 465, 9 Jur. N. S. 589, 11 Week. Rep. 791, 8 L. T. N. S. 476.

And the fact that the wife has a separate income does not affect the rule. Davidson v. Wood, supra.

And the wife of a lunatic, though he is confined in an asylum as dangerous, may pledge his credit for necessities for herself and bind his estate therefor, and the person supplying her may sue the husband in an action for debt. Read v. Legard, 4 Eng. L. & Eq. 523.

So, an action of assumpsit will lie against a husband to recover a sum of money due for the tuition of his children on a contract made by his wife during the pendency of a bill in chancery for divorce and alimony filed by the wife on the ground, among others, that the husband was a lunatic, under which an order had been made allowing a designated sum per annum for the support and maintenance of herself and the children, the husband having been subsequently restored to sanity and the bill dismissed. Harris v. Davis, 1 Ala. 259.

And the estate of an alleged lunatic is bound for the costs of lunacy proceedings brought by his wife against him though she was living apart from him at the time, and he recovered within a few months, where she had fair reason for believing that he was in such a state as to require the intervention of a court to protect their persons and property. Re F—, 2 De G. J. & S. 89.

And a solicitor employed by the wife of a lunatic upon an issue of a commission de lunatico inquirendo against him on her petition is entitled to stand directly in his own right as a creditor against the estate of the lunatic for his costs, where the proceedings were reasonable and for the benefit of the lunatic. Chester v. Rolfe, 4 De G. M. & G. 798, 18 Jur. 114, 23 L. J. Ch. N. S. 233.

But while a married woman, whose husband was sick and his mind was wandering and he was unconscious of what was transpiring and continued in that condition until his death, may be regarded as the head of the family for the purpose of taking care of the property and providing necessities for it, she is not thereby constituted the general agent of her husband, and authorized to transact his business generally, or to transfer his property to pay his debts. Sawyer v. Cutting, 23 Vt. 486.

And the fact that a husband is a lunatic and confined in an insane asylum does not authorize his wife to sell a crop of wheat belonging to him to pay a particular creditor to the prejudice of others. Alexander v. Miller, 16 Pa. 215.

Nor is an insane husband in a lunatic asylum liable for repairs upon his house in which his wife and her children reside upon her order, though the repairs were necessary for the house, where she had been supplied with money sufficient and applicable to the payment for such necessary repairs. Richardson v. Du Bois, L. R. 5 Q. B. 51, 39 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 60, 21 L. T. N. S. 635, 18 Week. Rep. 62, 10 Best & S. 830.

And the fact that the committee of the person of a lunatic is his wife will not release her from the charge of malversation, as against the committee of the estate, for having made savings out of the moneys supplied for his support, though she properly discharged her duty as committee of the person. Stephenson v. Holmes, 3 L. J. Ch. N. S. 41.

In Rock v. Slade, 7 Dowl. P. C. 22, 1 Arn. 346, 2 Jur. 993, however, it was held that the wife of a lunatic who has no committee has a sufficient implied authority to sue in the name of the lunatic for funds due to him.

And in Forbes v. Moore, 32 Tex. 195, the wife of an insane man was held to have the right to dispose of so much of the separate property of the husband as may be necessary to supply the wants of the family when there is no common property.

F. H. B.

subject." Volume 14, p. 593. Said § 2846 of the Code, touching the wife's power in this state to contract with the written consent of her husband, is in derogation of the common law, and it would seem that none of the exceptions to which we have been referring, on the power of the wife to contract at common law, have anything to do with the statutes of this state on the subject. These statutes seem to create their own exceptions to the wife's power to contract. In § 2848 it is provided that "if the husband be non compos mentis, or has abandoned the wife, or is a nonresident of the state, or is imprisoned under a conviction for crime for a period exceeding two years, the wife may alienate her lands as if she were sole," and, —as to her personal property,—"if the husband is living apart from the wife, without fault on her part, or if he be of unsound mind, the wife may convey or dispose of such property in any manner, as if she were sole." In the section providing that the wife may, with the consent of the husband expressed in writing, and under the conditions specified, enter into and pursue any lawful trade or business as if she were sole, it is provided that "the consent of the husband is not necessary, if he be of unsound mind, or has abandoned his wife, or is a nonresident of the state, or is imprisoned under conviction for crime." § 2850. Again, it is provided that "all property of the wife held by her previous to the marriage, or to which she may become entitled after the marriage in any manner, is the separate property of the wife, and is not subject to the liabilities of the husband," and that "the earnings of the wife are her separate property." §§ 2841, 2842. These statutes, regulating the rights and liabilities of husband and wife, were designed to furnish a complete system within itself, not dependent on common-law rules for its enforcement. What the wife may do in case of the insanity of her husband, in respect to contracting and taking care of herself and her property, is carefully provided for in the statutes, and it would seem, on a common principle of interpretation, she is excluded from doing anything more in this respect than is authorized by statute. Her power to contract under the statute being specified and limited by the terms of the statute, she is restricted to the mode prescribed. Ashford v. Watkins, 70 Ala. 160; Scott v. Cotten, supra; Vincent v. Walker, 98 Ala. 169. We have no occasion, therefore, in this case, to apply any of the common-law rules invoked in favor of the liability of the appellant, on the bond she gave to indemnify the asylum on the liability of her husband to it for his support. If in any case these rules may be made applicable to a married woman and her estate, they are wanting in application to the case in hand. The appellant was without authority to enter into any such obligation as the one here sued on, and it is not binding on her.

Reversed and remanded.

Brickell, Ch. J., and Coleman, J., dissent.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT.

Edwin A. LANDELL, Jr., et al., Appts.,

Matthew HAMILTON et al.

(173 Pa. 327.)

1. The test in equity to determine whether a covenant in a deed runs with the land is the intention of the parties.
 2. A covenant that the "house" on a lot conveyed "shall be forever hereafter restricted from having any building or part of a building attached to the said messuage thereon erected" more than 10 feet high is not limited to the house or building then existing on the land.
 3. A change in the use of premises from residence to business purposes after the making of a covenant restricting erections thereon above a certain height is not sufficient to destroy the effect of the covenant.
- On Rehearing.*
4. Building along the division line and partly on each lot a solid wall higher than a covenant requires the servient lot to remain unobstructed for the purpose of furnishing light and air to the dominant lot will prevent the dominant owner, who builds it, from enforce-ing the covenant in equity as to the space below the top of the wall, but will not absolutely terminate the covenant.

(May 4, 1894.)

APPEAL by plaintiffs from a decree of the Court of Common Pleas, No. 2, for Philadelphia County refusing an injunction to restrain defendants from constructing a building on certain property in alleged violation of a restrictive covenant. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

Messrs. Henry K. Fox and Charles C. Lister, for appellants:

Any words indicating the intention of the parties create a covenant running with the land.

Faschall v. Passmore, 15 Pa. 307; Cromwell's Case, 2 Coke, 71a, and Sheppard's Touchstone, 122; Hartung v. Witte, 59 Wis. 285; Batley v. Foerderer, 163 Pa. 460.

While at common law it would be necessary to make an inquiry as to the relative difference between a condition and a covenant, yet equity goes directly to its substantial elements and inquires what duty does it assure and to whom.

Clark v. Martin, 49 Pa. 297.

The manifest and only purpose of the parties to the covenant was to assure light and air to the properties adjoining the restricted premises.

NOTE.—For restrictions on buildings as easements of light and air, see note to Case v. Minot (Mass.) 22 L. R. A. 538.

31 L. R. A.

Equity will give effect to the intention and spirit of the restriction by restraining any impairment of the light and air.

Clark v. Martin, supra; Muzzarelli v. Ivulshiser, 168 Pa. 646; Ivory v. Burns, 66 Pa. 800; St. Andrews Lutheran Church's Appeal, 67 Pa. 512; Bald Eagle Valley R. Co. v. Nittany Valley R. Co. 171 Pa. 284, 29 L. R. A. 423; Wray v. Lemon, 81* Pa. 273; Philips's Appeal, 98 Pa. 50; Groff v. Bird-in-Hand Turnp. Co. 144 Pa. 152.

The instrument, being the deed of the party to be bound, must be taken most strongly against him.

Beeson v. Patterson, 86 Pa. 27; Miner's Appeal, 61 Pa. 283; Klaer v. Ridgway, 86 Pa. 534.

Many cases have been found where a building restriction has been held to be invalid by reason of the changed conditions of the neighborhood, but for the most part these cases contain conditions or restrictions which affected either the person of the owner or the time to which they were limited, or relating to the character of the use and occupation of the premises.

Columbia College v. Thacher, 87 N. Y. 811; Keates v. Lyon, L. R. 4 Ch. 218; Peek v. Matthews, L. R. 8 Eq. 517; Sayers v. Collyer, L. R. 24 Ch. Div. 180; Roper v. Williams, Turn. & R. 18; Page v. Murray, 46 N. J. Eq. 325; Duncan v. Central Pass. R. Co. 85 Ky. 525; Jewell v. Lee, 14 Allen, 145, 92 Am. Dec. 744; Dana v. Wentworth, 111 Mass. 291.

Messrs. Julius C. Levy and John G. Johnson, for appellees, in support of petition for rehearing:

The construction of a party wall by one owner amounts to a permanent dedication of such wall to the use of both owners as a party wall.

It avails nothing to the appellants to appeal to the restriction.

By their own act they have done that which amounts to an extinguishment. When they crossed the line and built the only wall permissible, i. e., a solid one, they did an act utterly inconsistent with the maintenance of the restriction.

Hoffelot v. Voight, 146 Pa. 636; Evans v. Jayne, 23 Pa. 36; Childs v. Napheys, 112 Pa. 507; Kirby v. Fitzpatrick, 168 Pa. 437; Weigmann v. Jones, 183 Pa. 380; Western Nat. Bank's Appeal, 102 Pa. 188.

The voluntary act of each of the appellants in permanently obstructing the easement extinguished the same.

Moore v. Rawson, 3 Barn. & C. 332; Corning v. Gould, 16 Wend. 539; Taylor v. Hampton, 4 McCord, L. 96, 17 Am. Dec. 710; Washb. Easem. new ed. *559; Innes, Easem. 85; Dyer v. Sanford, 9 Met. 395, 43 Am. Dec. 399; Matts v. Hawkins, 5 Taunt. 30.

The erection by Allen of a party wall to the full depth of his lot notwithstanding the fact that there are some openings therein in the southern part entitles the appellees to the use of such party wall to any height.

The act of each of the appellants in erecting solid party walls, even though they did not extend the whole depth of the lot, extinguishes the restriction, which is invalid if not enforceable to its full extent.

The acts of the appellants in the construction of party walls make it impossible now to perceptibly injure their properties in light and air by the erection of a building south of such walls.

Peek v. Matthews, L. R. 8 Eq. 514; Child v. Douglas, 5 De G. M. & G. 742.

Dean, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In the year 1881, William Hause, being the owner of a lot of ground on the south side of Chestnut street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, fronting on Chestnut 74 feet, and extending back to Sansom street 235 feet, divided it into three lots, giving the middle and western lot, each, a frontage on Chestnut street of 25 feet, and the eastern one 24 feet on the same street, all extending back at right angles to Sansom street. On each of the two outer lots he built a $3\frac{1}{2}$ story brick house, covering the entire front, these main buildings extending back 51 feet 11 inches; then, back, buildings for dining room and kitchen, only two stories high, but extending 66 feet further back. These back buildings, however, were 5 feet 6 inches narrower than the main building, leaving that width between the walls and the lines of the middle lot. He also built a house on the middle lot, the main building being the same as the other two, but with no back building, the kitchen being in the basement, the windows looking south towards Sansom street. On March 24, 1882, Hause conveyed both the eastern and western lots to Lindsay Nicholson and Rebecca H. Willing, for the consideration of \$19,000 for each lot. In the deeds was this condition: "Under the condition, nevertheless, that no building or part of a building, other than steps and railings, cellar doors, door frames, window shutters, eaves, and cornices, shall hereafter be built or erected on the said hereby-granted lot of ground within 5 feet of the south line of the said Chestnut street. And the said William Hause, for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, doth hereby covenant, promise, and agree to and with the said Lindsay Nicholson, his heirs and assigns, that the house on the lot of ground adjoining to the west of the hereby-granted lot, now belonging to the said William Hause, shall be forever hereafter restricted from having any building or part of a building attached to the said messuage thereon erected of a greater height than 10 feet from the surface of the yard." The numbers of these two lots are 1,206 and 1,210. The title to 1,206, by regular conveyances, all duly recorded, and embodying the condition, in 1888 became vested in this plaintiff, and in 1888 that of 1,210 became vested in George Allen for the consideration of \$125,000. On November 10, 1882, Hause for the consideration of \$16,000, conveyed the middle lot, 1,208, to one Stewart, under whom defendants claim. In that deed, after mentioning that the lot is bounded east by 1,206 and west by 1,210, is inserted the following condition: "Under the condition, nevertheless, that no building, other than steps and railings, cellar doors and door frames, window shutters, eaves, and cornices, shall hereafter be built or erected on the said hereby-granted lot of ground within 5 feet of the south line of the said Chestnut street; and subject to the condition that the house on the lot of ground hereby granted is, and shall be forever, restricted from having any building or part of a building attached to the said message now erected thereon of greater height than 10 feet from the surface of the yard." In the warranty clause it is declared it is "under the condition and subject as aforesaid." There seems to be no doubt that in the intervening sixty-three years between 1832, the date of the first conveyance, and 1895, when defendants took their title, the owners and occupants of the middle lot had, in some particulars, failed to keep within the strict terms of their conveyance. Structures had been put upon the Sansom street end of the lot higher than the limit prescribed in the deed, and some of the buildings on the lot in rear of the main building were of a height slightly in excess of the allowable 10 feet from the surface; but no hostility to right of plaintiffs was intended, and there was no substantial interference with the light and air enjoyable by 1,206 and 1,210 from a practically unobstructed middle lot free from high buildings. The defendants, the last purchasers of the middle lot, are about to take down the old house erected in 1832, with the view of putting upon it a building 100 feet high, extending from Chestnut to Sansom, formerly George, street. The plaintiffs file this bill to restrain them, alleging that such a structure will be a palpable violation of their right under the covenants in the prior deeds of their common grantor. The defendants admitted the facts as we have stated them, but denied that the building they intended to put up was an illegal violation of the restriction. Further, they averred the character of the locality had wholly changed since 1832, when the restriction was first imposed. At that time that part of Chestnut street was taken up by residences; now it is devoted to business. The court below refused to enjoin defendants, and plaintiffs appeal.

We are of opinion the issue turns wholly on the interpretation of the covenant in the deed of March 24, 1832, from Hause to Nicholson, for lot 1,206. The grantor covenants for himself, his heirs, and assigns, with the grantee, his heirs, and assigns, "that the house on the lot of ground adjoining to the west of the hereby-granted lot, now belonging to the said William Hause, shall be forever hereafter restricted from having any building or part of a building attached to the said message thereon erected of a greater height than 10 feet from the surface of the yard." Then the subsequent conveyance of the middle lot imposes on that grantee and his assigns subservience to the restriction in favor of the grantees of the east and west lots. Does the covenant run with the land? If so, the power of the owner of the land out of which he carved three lots to burden the middle one with such a continuing covenant cannot be questioned. It has been decided, as will be noticed from the cases hereinafter cited, that in equity the test by which to determine whether a covenant in a deed runs with the land is the intention of the parties. To ascertain the intention, resort must be had to the words of the covenant read in the light of the surroundings of the parties and the subject of the grant. It is argued, in substance, that a covenant running with the land, so manifestly prejudicial to the enjoyment of the middle lot, could not have been intended by the grantor; that the reasonable construction is, the obligation under it terminates with the removal of the house then upon the middle lot. That this covenant, if a perpetual burden, now most vexatiously restricts the owner of 1,208 in the enjoyment of the property, and very greatly depreciates its value, may be conceded; and, if such result had appeared imminent at the date of the conveyance, this argument would, perhaps, not have been without weight. It will be noticed that, notwithstanding the restriction, the consideration for the middle lot in 1832 was $16,000, and for each of the others $19,000. The owner seems to have received, in enhanced value of the two outside lots, by reason of the additional back buildings and the benefits accruing to them from the restriction in their favor on the middle one, $6,000. He, doubtless, at that day assumed this sum represented the value of the relative advantages and disadvantages to the lots created by the restriction. But he did not foresee the comparatively near future any more than we see ours. In our bargains, to the extent we judge probable, we provide for and guard against proximate future contingencies. As to the very remote or what appears to us the very remote, we are indifferent. The serious effect of the restriction now, after the comparatively short period of sixty years, as affecting the enjoyment of the middle lot, even if his intention had been to hold it for himself and heirs, was not thought probable by him or any other lot owner of that period. The present values of real estate in the present Philadelphia may have been thought possible in a couple of centuries, but not sooner. They knew the growth of the city in the preceding century and a half of its existence, and that it had then reached a population of less than 200,000, but they had no reason to believe that in the next half century the population would reach more than a million, and that new methods of communication and travel would then have placed other millions practically as close to them as was Lancaster county then. They bargained on a knowledge of their future no more limited than ours as to our future, only much more limited than ours of theirs, because we are looking backward. Not one of us would hesitate to place a perpetual burden on land we expected to hold in favor of land we wanted to sell, if thereby a present decided pecuniary benefit resulted, and no serious depreciation was probable in that held for a century or two. To us, with no laws of entail, and no particular passion for perpetuating family landed estates in city lots, that period suggests to the mind a practical "forever," and so it probably appeared to Hause when he burdened what he kept to enhance the price of what he sold. It was not an absurdly bad bargain, tending to negative the intention of a continuing covenant, but was merely such an ignorance of a phenomenal future as exists where men of good business capacity sell land one year which enhances in value, in some instances, the next year, one or two hundred per cent. Of course, they would not have sold if they had known, or had reason to believe, such appreciation probable, and Hause would not have placed the restriction on the middle lot if he had thought it probable that without it the lot would appreciate in value an average of 20 per cent annually, besides yielding the interest on his original investment. Considering the surroundings, we see nothing in the historical fact of the growth in value and change of use of unencumbered lots to negative the intention of the grantor as indicated by his words. And this intention is only the more clear when we consider the subject of the contract. He had built the three houses with a view to such a restriction. By the character of the structures he intended the middle lot should be servient to the other two. For the depth of the main buildings they should be equal, but from these back the east and west lots should be dominant. The middle shall have no building higher than 10 feet erected upon it. For this one he provides a basement kitchen, so that the lot is unobstructed from all three main buildings to the rear. What was the purpose in having the lot thus unobstructed? Manifestly that, as thus arranged by him, all three should enjoy light and air. He then conveys the two outer lots with an expressed intention conforming to the structures. These last measured the extent to which the dominant lots should "forever" enjoy light and air; at the same time did not exclude the occupant of the main building on the middle one from a like benefit. The latter's right to the enjoyment of the surface of his lot for building purposes is alone restricted. The parties were not dealing about houses as houses, but concerning the future enjoyment of land, with light and air, as affected by the plans and size of houses or buildings which were then or might be thereafter erected upon it. The word used, "forever," is not one appropriate to the limited existence of a house or other building, but to the durability of land. The expression, if intended only to restrict while the then house stood, is scarcely less awkward than if, intending to restrict only during the life of the first grantee, the grantor had said, "And during the life of the said Lindsay Nicholson the said Hause and his assigns shall be forever hereafter restricted." A word is used emphatically expressive of a continuance beyond the duration of a life or the existence of an artificial structure, which, if simply omitted, would have indicated the intent claimed by appellees.

The purpose to afford air and light to the dominant lots could only be accomplished by an unlimited—as to time—restriction, and there is nothing to indicate that a change in the nature of the occupancy should affect the expressed right under the covenant. It is probable that deprivation of air is less endurable to the occupants of a dwelling than to those of a store or factory, and generally the latter are less disposed to resist such deprivation; but these elements promote the health and comfort of one class of occupants as fully as the other, and both have the same right to insist on a restriction for their protection. No such change in the use of the land as appears here has ever been held destructive of the original covenant in any of the adjudicated cases in this state; nor, in our opinion, can such judgment be sustained on sound legal principles. Taking the surroundings of the parties at the date of the conveyance, the subject of the contract, the purpose of it, and the words of it, we are of the opinion it was intended to place a restriction upon the middle lot, running with the land, for the benefit of the eastern lot which should forever prevent the obstruction of light and air by buildings higher than 10 feet to the rear of the main building. As long as such restrictions are not unlawful, it is to no purpose to argue that they seriously retard the improvement of the city. We can no more strike down by decree a lawful restriction creating an easement than we can compel the lot owner to erect buildings in accord with the best style of architecture. Contracts such as this, whether construed as covenants or conditions, since Spencer's Case, 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. 9th Am. ed. 174, have been enforced both at law and in equity between the immediate parties to them and their grantees, near and remote. And whether they be personal to the grantor or be limited to a period less than "forever" depends on the intention of the parties, as expressed in the written instrument. Clark v. Martin, 49 Pa. 297; Muzzarelli v. Hulshizer, 183 Pa. 646; Bald Eagle Valley R. Co. v. Nittany Valley R. Co. 171 Pa. 284, 29 L. R. A. 423. We concede some of the cases decided in other states are in apparent conflict with our decision. But what this court has uniformly held, and now holds, is that where the restriction, notwithstanding the change of use of the land and buildings, still is of substantial value to the dominant lot, equity will restrain its violation, if relief, as here, is promptly sought. There may be, and doubtless will occur, cases where the restriction has ceased to be of any advantage. In such cases equity would not interpose and retard improvements simply to sustain the literal observance of a condition or covenant. And three of the cases relied on by appellees are of this very character, and therefore clearly distinguishable from the one before us. In Columbia College v. Thacher, 87 N. Y. 811, the agreement was between owners of dwelling houses that one of them would not erect, carry on, or establish any stable, schoolhouse, engine house, community house, or any kind of manufactory, trade, or business whatsoever on the land. His grantees opened up and carried on many kinds of business in violation of the original covenant. The purpose of the covenant was, manifestly, to secure privacy and freedom from noise in the dwelling houses. But by the construction of an elevated railroad its desirability for dwellings had been practically destroyed; privacy and quiet could no longer be enjoyed. The court refused to enjoin the use of the land for business and manufacturing purposes, because, by the change consequent upon the construction and operation of the railroad, the purpose of the restriction had been defeated. Equity would not lend its aid to the enforcement of a mere legal right, where no damage resulted to plaintiff from nonenforcement. In Page v. Murray, 46 N. J. Eq. 325, the restriction was to protect the land from cheap tenement buildings, and encourage its occupation by a superior class of residents. To this end it provided that for a period of twenty years no building should be erected costing less than $3,000, and no hotel, tavern, lager-beer saloon, livery stable, etc., should be erected thereon. In the meantime buildings of a low class had been erected in all the surrounding neighborhood. The purpose to make the land desirable for another class of occupants was thereby defeated, and this, together with the fact that the twenty-years term had nearly expired, induced the court to refuse an injunction to restrain violation of the condition. The court would not enjoin that which could not damage the plaintiff. In Jewell v. Lee, 14 Allen, 145, 92 Am. Dec. 744, there was a condition in the grant, that the land bordering on the ocean should be used for no other purpose than access to the water for bathing and boating, and low bath houses. It was held, from the facts in that case, that the intention of the grantor was to create a restriction in favor of adjoining land which he continued to hold; that, as this land had passed to other grantees in separate lots, they could not insist on a restriction personal to the original grantor; and the court says: "Where it is apparent that the condition was annexed to a grant for the purpose of improving or rendering more beneficial and advantageous the occupation of the estate granted when it should become divided into separate parcels and be owned by different individuals, or when the manifest object of a restriction on the use of an estate was to benefit another tract adjoining to or in the vicinity of the land on which the restriction is imposed," equitable relief will be afforded. Not one of these cases is in conflict with our decision here; on the contrary, they support it. While cases are cited which support the contention of appellees, the weight of authority is the other way, and we see nothing to induce us to depart from the settled rulings on this question as announced in our own cases already cited.

The decree of the court below refusing an injunction is reversed, and injunction is awarded as prayed for in plaintiffs' bill. It is further ordered that appellees pay the costs.

A petition for rehearing having been filed, Dean, J., on July 15, 1896, handed down the following response:

At the first hearing in this case, both in oral argument and on the paper books, the case turned on but a single question, viz., whether the restriction as to building placed by the original grantor on lot No. 1,208, in favor of lots 1,206 and 1,210, was perpetual, or whether it ended with the existence of the house then upon the middle lot. After a careful consideration, we decided the restriction was continuing, and directed that an injunction issue in conformity to the prayer of the petitioner. The effect of this was to restrain defendants from putting any building on 1,208 to the rear of the house upon it in 1882, higher than 10 feet from the surface of the lot. The defendants then petitioned the court for a modification of the decree, for the reason that, even if the judgment of the court that the restriction was a continuing one were well founded, the plaintiffs, by their own acts, had relinquished the right to assert it to the full extent set out in House's deed of 1882. The case is fully reported. Landell v. Hamilton, 175 Pa. 327, ante, 227. The court ordered a reargument only on the question as to whether the decree should be modified, and, if so, to what extent. This reargument was heard on the 27th of May, 1896. As will be noticed in the reported case, Landell's lot is 1,208, the eastern one; the defendant's, 1,208, the middle one; and Allen's, 1,210, the western one. It now appears on reargument, that as to Landell's lot either he or his grantors, years prior to the filing of the bill to restrain defendants, had built a solid wall 17 feet high, from the rear of the old building on 1,208, south towards Sansom street, a distance of not quite 19 feet, and then continued the same kind of wall, at the height of 12 feet, 37 feet further. The defendant calls this a party wall. There is no evidence that it is such, or was so intended by the builder, except that it extends over the line of 1,206, and rests partly on 1,208. The character of the structure, 12 feet in height for 37 feet in length, and then 17 feet high for about 19 feet, rebuts the inference that it was ever intended as a party wall in the legal significance of that term, to be used by both lot owners for building purposes. The most that can be said for it on the evidence is that it was a partition or division wall, the same as a partition fence dividing the two lots. It may have been a trespass on 1,208 to the extent it rests on that lot. If so, the owner or owners submitted to it; but by their submission they acquired no right inconsistent with the restriction imposed upon the middle lot by the covenant in the deed. The right to a party wall is statutory. It is not a right to at any time, and in any manner, use the land of another. One of two adjoining owners, for building purposes, may, subject to limitations consistent with the right of each, encroach upon his neighbor with a party wall. But, manifestly, this, was no such structure, and conferred on defendants no right to assume that it absolutely terminated the restriction in favor of the Landell lot; for, even if a party wall, at most it gave the middle lot owner the right to use it as a party wall to the height of 10 feet, the limit of the restriction. But the wall was solid to the height and length it was built. The purpose of the restriction was to afford light and air to 1,206, and the extent of the enjoyment was measured by the extent of the restriction on 1,208. That restriction was, no building or part of a building should be added to the house upon the lot to the rear, higher than 10 feet from the surface of the lot. But Landell or his grantors themselves erect a solid wall along the line of 1,206 and 1,208, 56 feet in length from the rear of the old building on the middle lot, through which neither light nor air could penetrate. By their own act, plaintiffs have said, "For 19 feet we do not ask for light and air, except at the height of 17 feet, and for 37 feet further we do not ask for either except at the height of 12 feet." Clearly, equity will not compel defendants to award plaintiffs that which, by their own distinct and unequivocal act, they have declared is valueless to them.

It is alleged now the ownership of plaintiff to 1,206 does not extend to Sansom street, but only 149 feet from Chestnut, leaving about 86 feet to which the injunction should not apply. To this it is replied the bill alleges and the answer admits, plaintiffs, Landell et al., own back to Sansom street; and there is no proof to the contrary. So far as we can discover from the pleadings and proofs, the title of Landell et al., or any part of it, is nowhere disputed; therefore we can make no modification of the decree in this particular. The restriction here by the covenants in the original deeds, renders it impossible to make such modification of the original decree as will preserve the apparent right of defendant as against each of these parties. The middle lot is servient to both the eastern and western; but the owner of neither the eastern nor western can, by his independent act or deed, relinquish that subserviency so as to affect the other. Here the owner of 1,206 has declared that for 19 feet light and air from 1,208 are valueless to him below a height of 17 feet, and for 87 feet further they are valueless below 12 feet; thus, for a distance of 56 feet, waiving the strict terms of the restriction. The owner of 1,210 has also waived the restriction by building his wall 56 feet to a height of 13 feet 9 inches. We cannot say, because the one waived the restriction for 19 feet to the height of 17 feet, therefore the other did so too; or because one waived it for 87 feet to the height of 13 feet 9 inches, therefore the other is bound, when by his own act he only waived to a height of 13 feet for that distance. As we have said, neither could, by his independent act or deed, affect the right of the other. But it seems to us the correct conclusion is that to the full extent they have equally gone in dispensing with the restriction both can in equity be made subject to our decree. Therefore we modify the original decree so that it shall not operate to restrain defendants from building to a height of 13 feet 9 inches for a distance of 19 feet from the rear of the old main building of the middle lot. Further, from the end of the 19 feet thus specified it shall not operate to restrain defendants from building to a height of 12 feet from the ground for a further distance of 87 feet. The costs of this case to be taxed as part of the original decree.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

Re Appraisal of ESTATE OF Augustus WHITING, Deceased.

(150 N. Y. 27.)

1. Bonds of a foreign corporation, as well as bonds and certificates of stock of domestic corporations, when deposited in a safe-deposit vault within the state, although owned by a nonresident, are "property within the state," within the meaning of the transfer tax act of 1892.

2. Bonds issued by the United States were not intended to be made subject to tax by the transfer tax act of 1892, as property over which the state "has any jurisdiction for the purposes of taxation."

(Gray and Haight, JJ., dissent.)

(October 6, 1894.)

APPEAL by the executors, etc., of Augustus Whiting, deceased, from an order of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, First Department, affirming an order of the Surrogate for New York County assessing for succession tax the estate of decedent. Modified and affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

Mr. George L. Rives, for appellants:

A debt cannot be regarded as property in a state in which neither the debtor nor the creditor resides.

People, Hoyt, v. Commissioners of Taxes, 23

N. Y. 224; People, Westbrook, v. Trustees of Ogdensburg, 48 N. Y. 390; People v. Willis, 133 N. Y. 388; People, Jefferson, v. Smith, 88 N. Y. 576; Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558; 1 Desty, Taxn. 64, 826; Johnson v. Oregon City, 8 Or. 13; Ankeny v. Multnomah County, 4 Or. 277; Orcutt's Appeal, 97 Pa. 179; State v. Dalrymple, 70 Md. 294, 3 L. R. A. 372; Re Enston's Will, 113 N. Y. 174, 3 L. R. A. 464; Re Romaine's Estate, 127 N. Y. 80, 12 L. R. A. 401; Small's Estate, 151 Pa. 1; Coleman's Estate, 159 Pa. 281; Re Phippe's Estate, 77 Hun, 825; Re James, Id. 211.

Any attempt to impose taxes on nonresidents in respect to property outside the jurisdiction is void, because the tax laws of a state have no extraterritorial operation.

Northern O. R. Co. v. Jackson, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 262, 19 L. ed. 88; Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania ("State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds") 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179; Re Enston's Will, supra; People, Darrow, v. Coleman, 119 N. Y. 137, 7 L. R. A. 407.

Bonds of the United States are bonds of a foreign corporation.

Re Merriam's Estate, 141 N. Y. 479; Orcutt's Appeal, supra.

The state has no power to impose a legacy or succession tax in respect of bonds of the United States owned by a nonresident.

Strode v. Com. 52 Pa. 181; Re Swift's Estate, 137 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709; Re Merriam's Estate, supra; Re Hoffman's Estate, 143 N. Y. 327; Homs Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594,

NOTE—As to the situs of property for purposes of taxation, see numerous cases in a note to Com. v. Delaware Division Canal Co. (Pa.) 2 L. R. A. 798; also Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors (La.) 16 L. R. A. 56.

As to the situs of debts evidenced by notes and 34 L. R. A.

mortgages for the purpose of taxation, see Boyd v. Selma (Ala.) 16 L. R. A. 729, and note; also Holland v. Commissioners of Silver Bow County (Mont.) 27 L. R. A. 797.

See also the following case, Re Houdayer's Estate (N. Y.) post, 285.

33 L. ed. 1025; McCulloch v. Maryland, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579; Weston v. Charleston, 37 U. S. 2 Pet. 460, 7 L. ed. 485; Bank of Commerce v. New York, 67 U. S. 2 Black. 620, 17 L. ed. 451; New York, Bank of the Commonwealth v. New York City & County Tax & A. Comrs. ("Bank Tax Case"), 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 200, 17 L. ed. 793; New York, Bank of New York Nat. Bkg. Assn., v. Connelly ("The Banks v. The Mayor"), 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 16, 19 L. ed. 57; First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 853, 19 L. ed. 701; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 33 L. ed. 772.

Messrs. Emmet R. Olcott, Edgar J. Levey, and Jahiah Holmes, Jr., with Mr. Elliot Danforth, for respondent:

The state of New York possesses jurisdiction, for purposes of taxation, over bonds of foreign corporations actually within the state, regardless of the domicile of the owner; such bonds being in themselves "property" and being capable of having a situs of their own, away from the domicile of their owner.

Burroughs, Taxn. § 6, and cases cited; Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. 21, and cases cited.

Personal property as now defined by statute makes the bond itself property, and not the mere evidence of debt.

Rev. Stat. pt. 1, chap. 18, title 1.

Bonds are now recognized as personal property, and not as mere evidences of debt or of an incorporeal right, and have a situs where found.

Burroughs, Taxn. § 50; People, Jefferson, v. Smith, 88 N. Y. 685; Beers v. Shannon, 73 N. Y. 299; People, Westbrook, v. Trustees of Ogdensburg, 48 N. Y. 590; Von Hesse v. Mackaye, 55 Hun. 368, 121 N. Y. 694; People, Edison Electric Light Co., v. Campbell, 138 N. Y. 547, 20 L. R. A. 453; People, Day, v. Barker, 185 N. Y. 656; Re Houdayer, 3 App. Div. 474.

The fiction Mobilis sequuntur personam does not give these bonds a situs in a foreign state.

People, Jefferson, v. Smith, 88 N. Y. 576; Re Romaine's Estate, 127 N. Y. 80, 12 L. R. A. 401; Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania ("State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds"), 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179; People, Edison Electric Light Co., v. Campbell, 138 N. Y. 543, 20 L. R. A. 453; Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 593; Re James, 144 N. Y. 6.

In the event of a dispute as to the ownership of bonds their presence in the state gives jurisdiction to our courts.

Von Hesse v. Mackaye, 55 Hun. 367, 121 N. Y. 694.

The situs, for purposes of taxation, of railroad bonds and government, state, and municipal bonds, is to be determined by reference to the actual location of the instruments themselves.

Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania ("State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds"), supra; People, Darrow, v. Coleman, 119 N. Y. 137, 7 L. R. A. 407; People, Edison Electric Light Co., v. Campbell, supra; People v. Barker, 185 N. Y. 656; Collin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 158, Approved in People, Hoyt, v. Commissioners of Taxes, 23 N. Y. 232; American Coal Co. v. Allegany County Comrs. 59 Md. 185; Baltimore v. Baltimore City Pass. R. Co. 57 Md. 81; People, Jefferson, v. Smith, supra.

The tax being on the right of succession, and 34 L. R. A.

not on the property, it is immaterial whether the property would be taxable under the general tax laws.

Re Knoedler's Will, 140 N. Y. 390.

The value of the United States bonds was properly included in determining the amount of the tax.

Strode v. Com. 52 Pa. 181; Wallace v. Myers, 88 Fed. Rep. 184, 4 L. R. A. 171.

The tax is upon the privilege of succeeding to property, and not upon property per se, which is only used as a medium for ascertaining the value of the succession so as to fix the amount of the tax.

Re Swift's Estate, 137 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709; Re Merriam's Estate, 141 N. Y. 479; Re Hoffman's Estate, 148 N. Y. 829; Re Oullum's Will, 145 N. Y. 598.

The Supreme Court of the United States has repeatedly upheld taxes imposed on the value of the franchises of corporations or upon the value of privileges granted, when it has been necessary to include the value of the United States bonds in determining the amount of the tax.

People v. Home Ins. Co. 92 N. Y. 328; Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 598, 33 L. ed. 1029; Society for Sav. v. Coite, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 594, 18 L. ed. 897; Provident Inst. for Sav. v. Massachusetts, 78 U. S. 6 Wall. 681, 18 L. ed. 913; Mager v. Grima, 49 U. S. 8 How. 490, 12 L. ed. 1168.

Vann, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Augustus Whiting, a resident of Newport, Rhode Island, died there on the 23d of July, 1894, leaving a will by which he gave his entire estate in trust for his infant daughter. At the time of his death he had money on deposit in a bank in this state, and owned certain bonds and certificates of stock that were found in a box rented by him in a safe-deposit vault in this state. The stocks and bonds were issued partly by domestic and partly by foreign corporations, and there were also bonds of the United States to the amount of $52,545. All except the stock of foreign corporations were included in the appraisalment, which was sustained by the surrogate and by the appellate division. The theory upon which the supreme court, by a divided vote, proceeded to judgment, was that the written instruments were physically within the state, and constituted property here subject to taxation. They were regarded as tangible, and apparently as in the nature of chattels. I think this is a sound conclusion, warranted by the Romaine Case, which was decided before the act "to tax gifts, legacies, and collateral inheritances" was expanded into the present statute "in relation to the taxable transfers of property." Re Romaine's Estate, 127 N. Y. 80, 12 L. R. A. 401; Laws 1887, chap. 713; Laws 1892, chap. 399. I think, moreover, that the written instruments issued by domestic corporations, including their bonds and the interests represented by them, are subject to a succession tax, independent of the fact of their physical presence in this state, as I have already attempted to show in an opinion filed in the Bronson Case (argued and decided at the same time as the case in hand), 150 N. Y. 1, post, p. 238. This involves the conclusion that the legislature intended to tax the investment itself when practicable, otherwise the evidence of the investment, in the form of a certificate, when that is habitually kept in this state. The law clearly distinguishes "written instruments themselves" from "the rights or interests to which they relate" (Laws 1892, chap. 677, §§ 1, 4, 32), and makes either taxable. The main use of certificates is for convenience of transfer, and they are treated by business men as property for all practical purposes. They are sold in the market, transferred as collateral security to loans, and are used in various ways as property. They pass by delivery from hand to hand, are the subject of larceny, and are taxable generally when in possession of an agent in this state. They are the only evidence of transfer required by the corporations issuing them in order to make the actual transfer on the books. There is obvious propriety in subjecting the instrument of transfer to a transfer tax when it is left in this state for safe-keeping. It is subject to the jurisdiction of our laws, and hence is within the intent of the transfer tax act. When the design of the legislature is to tax the transfer of everything that it has power to tax, there is no inconsistency in taxing in one form, if another is not available. Indeed, perfect consistency is not always practicable in a scheme of taxation that is intended to let nothing escape that can be owned or transferred. Thus, the legislature intended, as I think, to repeal the maxim Mobilia personam sequuntur, so far as it was an obstacle, and to leave it unchanged, so far as it was an aid, to the imposition of a transfer tax upon all property in any respect subject to the laws of this state. I think this intention plainly appears from the history of legislation upon the subject, the decisions of the courts, some of them in effect repealed, and from the sweeping language of the statute, which subjects everything that can be owned in this state to a succession tax, except so far as expressly exempted. The legislature possessed and exercised the power to employ the maxim when necessary, and to disregard it when necessary, to attain that object. That dominant purpose is the key to the construction of the act, and it should not be thwarted by the conservatism of the courts, even if, in order to embrace all kinds of property, it is necessary to make it so pliable in application as to conform to all methods of doing business, and all ways of holding property.

A majority of my associates, however, are of the opinion that the United States bonds, although physically present in this state, are not subject to a transfer tax. By their direction I announce, as the conclusion of the court, that the certificates of stock in question as well as all of the bonds, except those issued by the United States, were properly held by the courts below subject to taxation under the transfer tax act on account of their physical presence in this state; that, although the state may have the power to impose a succession tax upon United States bonds, it has not yet done so; that the phrase, "property . . . over which this state has any jurisdiction for the purposes of taxation," refers to the jurisdiction actually exercised through contemporary statutes, rather than to the entire jurisdiction actually possessed by the state; that hence the order appealed from should be so modified as to exempt from taxation the bonds owned by the decedent that were issued by the United States, and, as thus modified, affirmed, without costs in this court to either party.

O'Brien, J., concurs.

Andrews, Ch. J., and Bartlett and Martin, JJ., concur in the result.

Gray, J., dissenting:

I cannot concur in the opinion that the bonds of foreign corporations, which formed a part of the nonresident decedent's estate, were subject to appraisal for taxation purposes under the transfer tax act, because they happened to be, at the time of his decease, deposited within this state. Holding, as we do, and must, in conformity with authority and reason, that the property represented by the bonds is the debt which follows the creditor's person, I am unable to perceive how they can be dissociated from that indebtedness. Nor do I perceive any good reason for taking a view which permits of double taxation. The claim for the comptroller is that, both by the terms of the act and by force of the statutory construction law of the state (chap. 677, Laws 1892, § 4), these bonds could have a situs here, where found at their owner's death. The argument is that, inasmuch as personal property is defined to include written instruments by which any debt or official obligation is created or evidenced, bonds are expressly made property of a tangible nature, having a situs where physically present. There are, however, several considerations which militate strongly against our reading into the transfer tax act the provision of the general statutory construction act. In the first place, it was passed prior to the statutory construction act, and itself gave a definition to the word "property" as used in the act, which ought to control; especially so as it permits of a construction which is consistent with rules of law, and with a greater dignity of purpose on the part of the state in its efforts to raise revenue. In the second place, we should not assume that the legislature had any intention, through the statutory construction act, to change a settled rule of law, which regards the debt as the creditor's property, having its situs at his domicile. And nothing seems to compel such an assumption with respect to an act which contains within itself a complete system for the taxation of transfers of property in cases of testacy and of intestacy. Why shall we unnecessarily impute to the legislative body an intention to include for the purpose of this tax that which is only the evidence of property, when the property itself is beyond the reach of state laws? I think such a construction to be unreasonable and oppressive. We cannot afford, however desirable it may be to increase the revenues of the state at the least sacrifice of its inhabitants, to put a construction upon its laws which will make them appear to be unwise, if not unconscionable. Mr. Justice Patterson, who spoke for the majority of the members of the appellate division in this case, in his able opinion, amply conceded that the bonds, as evidences of indebtedness, could have no situs different from the domicile of their owner, and clearly showed that to be an incontrovertible proposition, borne out by cases in the United States Supreme Court and in this court. In the Boston Case, 113 N. Y. 181, 8 L. R. A. 464, Andrews, J., speaking of bonds of foreign corporations which were owned by a nonresident decedent, but were in the hands of her agent within the state, said: They "were not, in a legal sense, property within this state, and they were not, under the general laws or the policy of the state, taxable here. On the contrary, they were, by the general policy of the state, exempted from taxation here." It is unnecessary to review the authorities upon the evident proposition that these bonds could have no situs different from the domicile of their owner. In the Bronson Case I had occasion to express views which I shall not repeat here. It seems to me that the policy of the law is satisfied when it has reached, for taxation purposes, those many and varied objects of possession which have a tangible and visible existence, and in the words of Judge Comstock in the Hoyt Case, 28 N. Y., at page 240, are "capable of a situs away from the owner or his domicile." That the bonds and obligations of a foreign corporation held by a nonresident, but happening to be in this state, might be included by the legislature for taxation purposes,—that it may ignore their legal existence elsewhere,—I need not now deny; but, without some clear warrant in the terms of the law, is any wise policy subserved by construing language, certainly admitting of a doubt, in such wise as to justify state officers in assessing the paper evidence of the indebtedness in order to exact the tribute of a tax? If depositories and depositories in this state are availed of by a nonresident for the temporary custody of his bonds, can it be said that he has placed his property in the debt within the dominion of the state? Clearly not. The bond is not property, as distinguished from the debt it evidences. It may be destroyed, and the creditor loses no right to recover the debt.

The state has no jurisdiction over a right of succession which accrues under the laws of the foreign state. That is something in which this state has no interest, and with which it is not concerned. The legal title to these bonds vested in the personal representatives of the decedent by force of foreign laws, and we have held that an executor's title will be recognized by the laws of this state without any grant of letters by its courts. Toronto General Trust Co. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 128 N. Y. 45. As before suggested, when the state undertakes to reach those objects of property of the nonresident decedent which have a tangible and visible existence within this state, and imposes a tax upon the right to succeed to their ownership, its right to do so is not without support in reason and authority. For it to undertake to collect from the estate of a nonresident decedent a tax based upon and measured by such possessions as the bonds of foreign corporations, which happen, at the time of his death, to be within this state, may be justified upon the principle that might is right, but not, in my opinion, by sound public policy. There is a reasonable basis for taxing the transfer by will, or under the intestate laws, of the personal estate of the resident decedent, whether within or without the state. Being subject to its jurisdiction, and having had the privileges and protection of its laws in the accumulation and enjoyment of his property, the exertion of the legislative authority, in imposing a tax on the right to the succession of whatever composed the personal estate and constituted the wealth of the resident within its borders, rests upon some appreciable legal principle. If the claim of the comptroller is upheld, I cannot but regard it, to use Mr. Justice Field's language in the Foreign Bonds Case, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179, as "in fact a forced contribution levied upon property held in other states, where it is subjected, or may be subjected, to taxation upon an estimate of its full value." Is it at all necessary, for the purposes of justice, that the legal situs of such property as is now in question should be deemed other than at its owner's domicile? If so, I am unable to perceive it, and I do not think that the court should commit the state to any policy that is not justifiable in the law, and based upon the highest principles of government. I think that the order appealed from should be reversed.

Haight, J., concurs.

Re Appraisal of ESTATE OF John F. HOU-DAYER, Deceased.

(150 N. Y. 37.)

Money of a nonresident, deposited by him in a bank within the state, although commingled with trust funds in an account opened by him as trustee, constitutes "property within the state," within the meaning of the New York transfer tax act of 1893, which includes property of a nonresident decedent if within the state.

(Gray and Haight, JJ., dissent.)

(October 6, 1896.)

A PPEAL by the comptroller of the city of New York from an order of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, First Department, reversing an order of the surrogate for New York County appraising the estate of John F. Houdayer for a transfer tax. Reversed.

NOTE.—As to the place for taxation of trust property, see Richmond County Academy v. Augusta (Ga.) 20 L. R. A. 151, and note.

See also, in connection with this case, that of Re Whiting's Estate, ante, 232.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

Mr. Emmet R. Olcott, for appellant:

The property subject to the tax includes all property or interest therein "over which this state has any jurisdiction for the purposes of taxation."

The legislative power of every state extends to all property within its borders.

Green v. Van Buskirk, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 307, 18 L. ed. 699; Hervey v. Rhode Island Locomotive Works, 98 U. S. 671, 23 L. ed. 1008; Harkness v. Russell, 118 U. S. 679, 30 L. ed. 291; Walworth v. Harris, 129 U. S. 855, 32 L. ed. 712.

Unless restrained by the provisions of the Federal Constitution the power of the state as to the mode, form, and extent of taxation is unlimited where the subjects to which it applies are within her jurisdiction.

Re McPherson, 104 N. Y. 316, 58 Am. Rep. 502; People v. Equitable Trust Co. 96 N. Y. 387; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Gordon v. Cornes, 47 N. Y. 608; People, Crowell v. Lawrence, 41 N. Y. 187; Howell v. Buffalo, 4 Trans. App. 505; Brewster v. Syracuse, 19 N. Y. 116; Guilford v. Chango County Supers. 18 N. Y. 143; People, Griffin v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419; Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U. S. 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. ed. 939.

The state has power to tax personal property, even when separated from its owner.

Story, Conf. L. §§ 297-311, 550; Green v. Van Buskirk, supra, and 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 139, 19 L. ed. 109; Hervey v. Rhode Island Locomotive Works, 98 U. S. 664, 23 L. ed. 1008; Harkness v. Russell, 118 U. S. 663, 30 L. ed. 285; Walworth v. Harris, supra; Whart. Conf. L. §§ 297-311; Lewis v. Woodfolk, 2 Baxt. 25; Doe, Biruhtistle, v. Vardill, 5 Barn. & C. 438; Atvany v. Powell, 2 Jones, Eq. 57; American Coal Co. v. Allegany County Comrs. 59 Md. 185; Baltimore v. Baltimore City Pass. R. Co. 57 Md. 31.

For the purposes of taxation personal property may be separated from its owner, and he may be taxed on its account at the place where it is, although not the place of his own domicile, and even if he is not a citizen of the state which imposes the tax.

Lane County v. Oregon, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 71, 19 L. ed. 101; Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania ("State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds"), 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179; Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787; Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 490, 22 L. ed. 189; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 663; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715; Marye v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. ed. 94; People, Jefferson v. Smith, 88 N. Y. 580; People, Westbrook, v. Trustees of Ogdensburg, 48 N. Y. 390; Williams v. Wayne County Supers. 78 N. Y. 561; Re Hoardman v. Tompkin's County Supers. 85 N. Y. 359; Re Romaine's Estate, 127 N. Y. 80, 12 L. R. A. 401.

The money on deposit in the trust company was property subject to taxation under the act, whether treated as "money" or a "thing in action"—a claim by the representatives of decedent against and an obligation of the trust company.

People, Westbrook, v. Trustees of Ogdensburg, 84 L. R. A.

48 N. Y. 397; Morejon's Estate, Sur. Dec. 1891, 307; Bowden's Estate, Sur. Dec. 1891, 115; Simons's Estate, N. Y. L. J. Jan. 20, 1896.

With the presence of the property from its arrival within the state all the laws of the state relating to the transfer of the property of the owner, living or dead, attached themselves to the property.

Re Swift's Estate, 137 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709.

Such moneys were not transiently here as upon the person or in the baggage of a man suddenly dying within this state.

Re Enston's Will, 118 N. Y. 182, 3 L. R. A. 464; Re Romaine's Estate, 127 N. Y. 88, 12 L. R. A. 400; Re Phipps's Estate, 77 Hun, 325.

Mr. J. Culbert Palmer, for respondent:

The law in question imposes a special tax and must be strictly construed against the state.

Re Enston's Will, 118 N. Y. 178, 3 L. R. A. 464.

The courts will incline against a construction involving double taxation, which would result should the order herein appealed from be sustained, as the estate is clearly taxable in the state of New Jersey, the place of the decedent's domicile.

Re James, 144 N. Y. 6.

The decedent having mingled his own funds with those of the trust estate, his representatives, on his decease, succeeded merely to a right to an action for an accounting; which having been held, or other settlement made, the administrators would still hold merely a chose in action in the nature of a claim against the trust company, because the relation of a bank to its depositor is that of debtor and creditor.

Chapman v. White, 6 N. Y. 412, 57 Am. Dec. 464; First Nat. Bank v. Clark, 134 N. Y. 369, 17 L. R. A. 580.

The situs of a debt is the domicile of the creditor, and not the debtor.

Re Phipps's Estate, 77 Hun, 325, 143 N. Y. 641; Guillander v. Howell, 35 N. Y. 662; People, Hoyt, v. Commissioners of Taxes, 23 N. Y. 224; People, Westbrook, v. Trustees of Ogdensburg, 48 N. Y. 397; Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 553; Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania ("State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds"), 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179.

The property in or claim to the deposit as distinguished from the deposit itself was consequently never located within this state, but was actually in the state of New Jersey. Therefore being the property of a nonresident decedent and situated out of this state it does not fall within the purview of this act.

Re James, 77 Hun, 211, 144 N. Y. 6.

A debt held by a nonresident decedent against a resident of this state is not taxable under this act.

Re Phipps's Estate, 77 Hun, 325, 143 N. Y. 641; Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania ("State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds"), supra; People, Hoyt, v. Commissioners of Taxes, 23 N. Y. 228.

Assuming that this claim against the trust company can be regarded as in the nature of property, it is still not taxable because property transiently within the state is not taxable.

Re Phipps's Estate, 143 N. Y. 641; Re Romaine's

Estate, 137 N. Y. 83, 12 L. R. A. 401; Re Enston's Will, 113 N. Y. 174, 3 L. R. A. 464; Gustlander v. Howell, 35 N. Y. 67; People, Hoyt, v. Commissioners of Taxes, 23 N. Y. 224; Re Tulane, 51 Hun. 213; Herron v. Keeran, 59 Ind. 473, 26 Am. Rep. 87.

Vann, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 21st of May, 1895, John F. Houdayer died intestate at Trenton, New Jersey, where he had resided for a number of years. In 1876 he opened an account with the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, of the city of New York, as trustee under the will of Edward Husson, deceased, in which he made deposits, from time to time, of moneys belonging to the trust estate, as well as moneys belonging to himself. This continued as an open running account until his death, when the balance on hand was the sum of $78,715, of which $2,000 belonged to him as trustee, and the remainder to himself as an individual. The appraiser deducted $3,500 for the payment of debts and expenses, and included $68,215 in the appraisal, which was affirmed by the surrogate, but reversed by the supreme court. The theory upon which that learned court decided the case appears in the following extract from its opinion: "It is well settled that the legal relation which existed between the decedent, as such trustee, and the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, was that of debtor and creditor. The deposits became the property of the trust company, and thereupon the company became indebted to the depositor for the amount so deposited. Here, however, even this relation existed only between the decedent in his representative capacity, as trustee under the will of Edward Husson, and the company. Individually he occupied no contract relation towards the company. His individual deposits simply went to swell the trust account. Ordinarily it would have required an accounting in equity to separate the individual from the trust deposits, and to appropriate the general bank balance in accordance with just principles. Here this separation was amicably arranged between the decedent's estate and the trust estate, but this was merely a friendly substitute for an accounting. Precisely what the decedent had individually within this state was the right to an accounting in equity with regard to a debt due from the company to himself as Husson's trustee. We do not think that the debt was property within this state, within the meaning of the taxable transfer act. Much less was the right to an accounting with respect to such debt." In my judgment, this is sound reasoning upon an unsound basis, because it places form before substance. It enables a large sum of money, invested and left in this state, and enjoying the protection of its laws, to escape taxation because the decedent had voluntarily commingled his own funds with those of an estate he represented, and for the further reason that his rights as against the trust company were intangible. But what were his rights, or those of his successors, as against the state of New York, in view of the command of its legislature that all property, or interest in property, within the state, susceptible of ownership, should be subject to a transfer tax upon the death of its owner, whether he was a resident or nonresident? What was the real thing—the essence of the transaction—that gives rise to this controversy? The decedent brought his money into this state, deposited it in a bank here, and left it there until it should suit his convenience to come back and get it. While the commingling of funds may complicate administration, it does not change the facts as thus stated. If he had deposited in specie, to be returned in specie, there can be no doubt that the money would be property in this state subject to taxation. But, instead, he did as business men generally do,—deposited his money in the usual way, knowing that, not the same, but the equivalent, would be returned to him upon demand. While the relation of debtor and creditor technically existed, practically he had his money in the bank, and could come and get it when he wanted it. It was an investment in this state, subject to attachment by creditors. If not voluntarily repaid, he could compel payment through the courts of this state. The depositary was a resident corporation, and the receiving and retaining of the money were corporate acts in this state. Its repayment would be a corporate act in this state. Every right springing from the deposit was created by the laws of this state. Every act out of which those rights arose was done in this state. In order to enforce those rights, it was necessary for him to come into this state. Conceding that the deposit was a debt, conceding that it was intangible, still it was property in this state, for all practical purposes, and in every reasonable sense within the meaning of the transfer tax act. Re Romaine's Estate, 127 N. Y. 80, 89, 13 L. R. A. 401.

While distribution of the fund belongs to the state where the decedent was domiciled, as such distribution cannot be made until his administrator has come into this state to get the fund, possibly, after resorting to the courts for aid in reducing it to possession, the fund has a situs here, because it is subject to our laws. A reasonable test in all cases, as it seems to me, is this: Where the right, whatever it may be, has a money value, and can be owned and transferred, but cannot be enforced or converted into money against the will of the person owning the right, without coming into this state, it is property within this state for the purposes of a succession tax. Thus, the right in question is property, because it is capable of being owned and transferred. It is within this state, because the owner must come here to get it. It is subject to taxation, because it is under the control of our laws. It has a money value, because it is virtually money, or can be converted into money upon demand. It is subject to a transfer tax, because the passing, by gift or inheritance, of "all property, or interest therein, whether within or without this state, over which this state has any jurisdiction for the purposes of taxation," comes within the expressed intention of the legislature. I regard further discussion as unnecessary, as I have fully expressed my views as to the scope of the statute in the Bronson Case (decided herewith), 150 N. Y. 1, post, 238.

While a majority of my associates concur in the result reached by me, they do not all concur in the reasons given therefor. They are of the opinion that a deposit of money in a bank, although technically a debt, is still money, for all practical purposes, and as such is taxable under the transfer tax act.

The order of the Supreme Court should therefore be reversed, and the order of the surrogate affirmed, with costs.

O'Brien, J., concurs. Andrews, Ch. J., and Bartlett and Martin, JJ., concur in result.

Gray, J., dissenting:

When the deceased made deposits with the trust company, they became the property of the depository, and the relation which sprang up between them was that of debtor and creditor. The right of the decedent as a depositor was a mere chose in action. More than that, as the account in the trust company was with the decedent as trustee of Husson's will, there was, of course, no clear liability, to him individually. The sum owing to him could only be established as the result of an accounting, or by amicable arrangement in lieu thereof. Thus, all that the decedent owned in this state at the time of his decease, to put it in its strongest expression, was the right to an equitable accounting with respect to the debt due to him as Husson's trustee. To say that that constituted "property," within the meaning of the act, would be to carry the doctrine of the inheritance tax laws too far for support in law or in reason. I think the order appealed from should be affirmed, with costs.

Haight, J., concurs.

Re Appraisal of ESTATE OF Henry BRONSON, Deceased.

(150 N. Y. 1.)

1. Bonds of a domestic corporation, which are in another state in possession of a nonresident owner, are not "property within the state," within the meaning of the transfer tax act of 1892, imposing a tax on the transfer from a nonresident decedent of property within the state.

2. Shares of capital stock of a domestic corporation, although the certificates are in another state in possession of a nonresident owner, constitute "property within the state," within the meaning of the transfer tax act of 1892, taxing a transfer of property within the state from a nonresident decedent.

(Vann and O'Brien, JJ., dissent.)

(October 6, 1896.)

APPEAL by the comptroller of New York from an order of the Appellate Division of NOTE.—See also Re Whiting's Estate, ante, 232; Re Houdayer's Estate, ante, 235.

84 L. R. A.

the Supreme Court, First Department, reversing an order of the surrogate of New York County appraising the estate of Henry Bronson, deceased, for a transfer tax. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

Mr. Emmet R. Olcott, for appellant:

The property subject to the tax includes all property or interest therein "over which this state has any jurisdiction for the purposes of taxation."

Every state has the right to regulate the transfer of property within its limits, and whoever sends property into it impliedly submits to the regulations concerning its transfer in force there, although a different rule of transfer prevails in the jurisdiction where he resides.

Green v. Van Buskirk, 73 U. S. 5 Wall. 307, 18 L. ed. 599; Hervey v. Rhode Island Locomotive Works, 93 U. S. 671, 23 L. ed. 1003; Harkness v. Russell, 118 U. S. 679, 30 L. ed. 291; Walworth v. Harris, 129 U. S. 355, 32 L. ed. 712.

Unless restrained by the provisions of the Federal Constitution the power of the state as to the mode, form, and extent of taxation is unlimited where the subjects to which it applies are within her jurisdiction.

Re McPherson, 104 N. Y. 316, 58 Am. Rep. 502; People v. Equitable Trust Co., 96 N. Y. 387; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 163, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Gordon v. Cornes, 47 N. Y. 608; People, Crowell, v. Lawrence, 41 N. Y. 137; Houell v. Buffalo, 4 Trans. App. 505; Brewster v. Syracuse, 19 N. Y. 116; Grafford v. Chenango County Supers., 13 N. Y. 143; People, Griffin, v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419; Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U. S. 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. ed. 939.

The right to inherit or succeed to property is not an inherent, natural, or an absolute right; neither is the right to dispose of property after one's death by bequest or devise. These rights are clearly the creatures of the civil or municipal laws, and accordingly are in all respects regulated by them.

2 Bl. Com. chap. 1, 10-13; Strode v. Com., 52 Pa. 183.

By the civil law strangers cannot make a testament or other disposition of their property in view of death.

2 Domat, Civil Law, 279, 280.

The right to take property is the creature of the law.

Eyre v. Jacob, 14 Gratt. 422, 73 Am. Dec. 367; Stroud v. Com. supra; Wallace v. Myers, 88 Fed. Rep. 185, 4 L. R. A. 171; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co., 157 U. S. 577, 39 L. ed. 817; Scholey v. Rew, 90 U. S. 23 Wall. 331, 23 L. ed. 99; Mager v. Grima, 49 U. S. 8 How. 490, 12 L. ed. 1168; Re Elwes, 8 Hurlst. & N. 719.

This tax is upon the succession to property. Re Swift's Estate, 137 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709; Re Merriam's Estate, 141 N. Y. 479; Re Hoffman's Estate, 143 N. Y. 829; Re Cultum's Will, 145 N. Y. 693; Re Hamilton's Estate, 148 N. Y. 310.

The old rule expressed in the maxim Mobilia sequuntur personam, by which personal property was regarded as subject to the law of the owner's domicile, grew up in the middle ages when movable property consisted chiefly of gold and jewels which could be easily carried by the owner from place to place or secreted in spots known only to himself. In modern times since the great increase in amount and variety of personal property not immediately connected with the person of the owner, the rule has yielded more and more to the lex situs, the law of the place where the property is kept and used.

Green v. Van Buskirk, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 307, 18 L. ed. 599, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 139, 19 L. ed. 109; Hervey v. Rhode Island Locomotive Works, 93 U. S. 664, 23 L. ed. 1003; Harkness v. Russell, 118 U. S. 663, 30 L. ed. 285; Walworth v. Harris, 129 U. S. 855, 33 L. ed. 712; Story, Conf. L. § 550; Whart. Conf. L. §§ 297-311.

For the purposes of taxation personal property may be separated from its owner, and he may be taxed on its account at the place where it is, although not the place of his own domicile, and even if he is not a citizen of the state which imposes the tax.

Lane County v. Oregon, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 71, 19 L. ed. 101; Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania ("State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds"), 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179; Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 529, 21 L. ed. 787, 791; Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 490, 22 L. ed. 189; State Railroad Tax Cases, 93 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 663; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715; Marye v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. ed. 94; People, Jefferson, v. Smith, 88 N. Y. 580; People, Westbrook, v. Trustees of Ogdensburg, 48 N. Y. 890; Williams v. Wayne County Supers. 78 N. Y. 561; Re Boardman v. Tompkins County Supers. 86 N. Y. 859; Re Romaine's Estate, 127 N. Y. 80, 12 L. R. A. 401; People, Hoyt, v. Commissioners of Taxes, 23 N. Y. 226.

The court may give the shares of stock held by individual stockholders a special or particular situs for the purposes of taxation, and may provide special modes for the collection of the tax levied thereon; and it is often convenient, as well as perfectly just, to take that course.

Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. 23; American Coal Co. v. Allegany County Comrs. 59 Md. 185; Baltimore v. Baltimore City Pass. R. Co. 57 Md. 31.

The fiction upon which the rule is based exempting property of a nonresident decedent actually within the taxing state did not originally relate to questions of taxation but was based merely upon questions of comity between states or nations. It never had any application to creditors of the deceased in the state where the property actually was situated, and should not exist against a state tax which the citizen is compelled to pay.

Thomson v. Advocate General, 12 Clark & F. 28; Bruce v. Bruce, 2 Bos. & P. 229, note; Catlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 158; People, Hoyt, v. Commissioners of Taxes, 23 N. Y. 232; Whart. Private International Law, 11-13, 297; Green v. Van Buskirk, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 150, 19 L. ed. 113; Hervey v. Rhode Island Locomotive Works, 93 U. S. 664, 23 L. ed. 1003; Lewis v. Woodfolk, 2 Baxt. 25; Doe, Birtwhistle, v. Vardill, 5 Barn. & C. 438; Albany v. Powell, 2 Jones, Eq. 51; State v. Dalrymple, 70 Md. 294, 3 L. R. A. 273; Pullman's Palace Car Co. 34 L. R. A.

v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595.

Wherever convenience appears to demand that personality be situated there it is deemed to be situated.

Story, Conf. L. § 880.

The bonds and stocks of the domestic railroad corporations standing in the name of the decedent and owned by him at the time of his death were "property within the state."

Such corporations are the creatures of statute. They can have no legal existence out of the boundaries of the sovereignty by which they are created; they must have their domicile and residence in the place of their creation. Ang. & A. Corp. 11th ed. § 104, and cases cited; Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 598.

And their existence, powers, capacities, and mode of exercising them must depend upon the law of their creation and upon their objects.

Ang. & A. Corp. 11th ed. § 111, and cases cited.

Hence the holdings of owners of stock in such corporations, its transfer of ownership, the imposition of any tax thereon, the lien and payment of such tax, are all under the regulation of the legislature; for the corporations are its own creations, "whose rights and obligations it may limit, define, and control."

Re Prime's Estate, 136 N. Y. 860, 18 L. R. A. 718.

The physical presence of the paper writings representing registered bonds or certificates of stock was not necessary for the purposes of taxation.

Plimpton v. Bigelow, supra; Jermain v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 492; Burr v. Wilcox, 23 N. Y. 556; Re Enston's Will, 118 N. Y. 181, 8 L. R. A. 464; Cook, Stock & Stockholders, 8d ed. § 15.

The legislature has attached as a condition precedent for the privilege of succession to property within the state, of nonresidents, that the tax known as the transfer tax shall be paid—not on the property itself, but on the privilege; and the person in whom the estate of the nonresident decedent vests, who comes to this state to secure possession of his property, comes here possessed only of the legal title to the property, less the tax; for eo instante at the moment of the death of the decedent the state of New York "appropriates for its own use a portion of the property and only allows the balance to pass;" and the right of succession is not conferred by the laws of the state where the decedent resided and died except as to such balance.

Re Swift's Estate, 187 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709; Re Merriam's Estate, 141 N. Y. 479; Re Hoffman's Estate, 143 N. Y. 329; Re Cultum's Will, 145 N. Y. 593; Re Hamilton's Estate, 145 N. Y. 810; Mager v. Grima, 49 U. S. 8 How. 491, 12 L. ed. 1169; Frederickson v. Louisiana, 64 U. S. 23 How. 447, 16 L. ed. 578; Wallace v. Myers, 38 Fed. Rep. 185, 4 L. R. A. 171; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 578, 39 L. ed. 818; State v. Dalrymple, 70 Md. 294, 3 L. R. A. 272.

Mr. Howard Mansfield, for respondents:

The facts must make an undoubted case of application of the act to the bonds and stocks in question before the tax can be imposed as to either.

Re Enston's Will, 118 N. Y. 174, 8 L. R. A. 464; Re Swift's Estate, 187 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709; Re James, 144 N. Y. 6.

There should be no question that the bonds are exempt from the tax.

The purpose of the act is plainly limited by the language employed to the property of a nonresident within the state at the time of his death, and ought not by any refinements of reasoning to be extended in scope.

Re James, supra.

Bonds of railroad corporations are property; but being debts are property in the hands of the holders only, and not property of the company.

Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558; Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Peniston ("State Tax on Foreign held Bonds"), 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 800, 21 L. ed. 179; Re Swift's Estate, 187 N. Y. 85, 18 L. R. A. 709; Re James, 144 N. Y. 12; People, Manhattan R. Co., v. Barker, 146 N. Y. 304.

The prohibition in § 9 of the act against the assignment or transfer by a foreign executor, administrator, or trustee of stock or obligations of a decedent is expressly limited to such stock or obligations as are "within this state" and "liable to any tax."

Re Enston's Will, 118 N. Y. 180, 8 L. R. A. 464.

Nor is there any sound legal theory on which the stocks can be consistently declared subject to the transfer tax.

The relations between the stockholder and the corporation give him no such legal position as that of a joint owner of its property.

Queen v. Arnaud, 9 Q. B. 806; Hyatt v. Allen, 56 N. Y. 558; Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 592; Burrall v. Bushwick, R. Co. 75 N. Y. 216; Jermain v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 492.

Nor can the further theory be maintained that the property of a domestic corporation is necessarily within the jurisdiction of this state and has the protection of its laws and administration, since corporations formed under our laws may carry on their business and own their property wholly in other states or in foreign countries.

Gen. Corp. Law, § 14.

The legal situs of the stocks of these domestic corporations owned by the resident decedent must, for purposes of taxation, be held to be where the shareholder had his domicile.

People, Jefferson, v. Smith, 88 N. Y. 576; People, Edison Electric Light Co., v. Campbell, 188 N. Y. 548, 20 L. R. A. 458; San Francisco v. Mackey, 22 Fed. Rep. 602; People, Hoyt, v. Commissioners of Taxes, 28 N. Y. 228.

The weight of authority within and without the state is decisively against the application of the transfer tax law to stocks of a domestic corporation owned by a nonresident decedent.

Alexander's Estate, 4 Pa. L. J. 448; Commonwealth's Appeal, 11 W. N. C. 492; Del Busto's Estate, 23 W. N. C. 111; Bacon's Estate, 8 Del. County Rep. 608; Coleman's Estate, 159 Pa. 281; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Sharp, 53 Md. 581; People, Jefferson, v. Smith, supra; Re James's Estate, 144 N. Y. 12; Re Merriam's Estate, 141 N. Y. 479; Re Enston's Will, 118 N. Y. 174, 8 L. R. A. 464.

84 L. R. A.

Gray, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The decedent was domiciled in the state of Connecticut, where he died in 1893, leaving, by his will, his residuary estate to his two sons also residents of that state. A part of the residuary estate consisted in shares of the capital stock and in the bonds of corporations incorporated under the laws of this state, and which were in the testator's possession at his domicile. They had been handed over to the residuary legatees, prior to the institution by the comptroller of the city of New York of this proceeding to appraise them for the purposes of taxation under the transfer tax act (chap. 399, Laws 1892). It was held by the appellate division of the supreme court, reversing the decree of the surrogate's court in the county of New York, that the executors were not liable to pay a transfer tax upon the basis of the stocks and bonds in question. The claim of the comptroller is that, both by the terms of that act and by force of the statutory construction law of the state, and upon the theory that these bonds and shares represent interests in corporations incorporated under the laws of this state, they were, although not physically within the state, properly assessed for the purposes of such taxation. The act under which this tax was sought to be collected was passed in 1892 (Sess. Laws, chap. 399), and is known as the "Transfer Tax Act." By § 1, a tax is imposed upon the transfer of any real or personal property of the value of $500 or over, in the following cases, viz.: "When the transfer is by will or by the intestate laws of this state from a resident decedent; or when the transfer is by will or intestate law of property within the state and the decedent was a nonresident at the time of his death." The important words to be noticed in this section, which imposes the tax, are, in the case of a nonresident decedent, "property within the state." Their importance is evident, inasmuch as the attempt of the state to collect a tax, where the decedent was not subject to its jurisdiction, is limited to that which possesses the legal attributes and characteristics of property here. In that connection, reference may be made to § 22 of the act, which defines the word "property," as used in the act, as meaning all property, or interest therein, "over which this state has any jurisdiction for the purposes of taxation." In the endeavor to ascertain the intention of the legislature with respect to what should be assessable for the purposes of taxation as property under this act, we need go no further than the act itself, which, in imposing the tax, undertakes, in addition, to give a definition to property the transfer of which by will, or by the intestate laws of the state, creates the liability to taxation. It seems unimportant to consider that section of the statutory construction law which gives a definition to the term "personal property" (Laws 1892, chap. 677, § 4), if, indeed, applicable. The act contains within itself a complete system for the taxation of transfers of property in cases of testacy and of intestacy, and also controlling definitions for such words used in its sections as, in the judgment of the legislature, might seem to require definition. The section of the statutory construction act, in terms, is only applicable, as I think, to a statute where its general object, or the context of the language construed, or other provisions of law, do not indicate that a different meaning is intended.

Whatever may be argued in support of the right to subject the bonds of domestic corporations to appraisement for taxation purposes under this act, when physically within the state, upon some theory that they are something more than the evidences of a debt, and constitute a peculiar and appreciable species of property, within the recognition of the law as well as of the business community, such argument is certainly unavailing in this case, where the bonds themselves were at their owner's foreign domicil. They did not represent "property within the state" in any conceivable sense. What property they represented consisted in the debt of their maker, and that species of property, unquestionably, must be considered to be, as a chose in action, the holder's and owner's, and to be inseparable from his personality. The Supreme Court of the United States held in the Foreign-held Bonds Case, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179, where the state of Pennsylvania assumed to tax the interest payable upon bonds issued by a Pennsylvania corporation, secured by a mortgage upon its property, and held by a nonresident, that the tax was invalid. It will be profitable to quote some of the language of the opinion in that case, the soundness of which has never been questioned: "But debts owing by corporations, like debts owing by individuals, are not property of the debtors in any sense. They are obligations of the debtors, and only possess value in the hands of the creditors. With them they are property, and in their hands they may be taxed. To call debts property of the debtors is simply to misuse terms. All the property there can be, in the nature of things, in debts of corporations, belongs to the creditors, to whom they are payable, and follows their domicil, wherever that may be. Their debts can have no locality separate from the parties to whom they are due. The principle might be stated in many different ways, and supported by citations from numerous adjudications, but no number of authorities and no forms of expression could add anything to its obvious truth, which is recognized upon its simple statement." It seems difficult to furnish an argument in support of the view that the debt owing to a creditor is the property which follows him everywhere, and not the written or printed obligation expressing the indebtedness, that is not presumed in the foregoing opinion. In our consideration of the question, we should not lose sight of the fact that the state, through the transfer tax act, is exerting its taxing power only over that as to which it had jurisdiction for the purposes of taxation; and we should not be confused, in that consideration, by statutes or decisions which bear upon the exercise of that power over residents within its territorial limits.

The "Inheritance Tax Act," or, as it is known to-day, the "Transfer Tax Act," imposes a tax upon the right of succession. Re Swift's Estate, 187 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709; Re Merriam's Estate, 141 N. Y. 479; Re Hoffman's Estate, 143 N. Y. 829. It was said of it by Judge Andrews, in the Eaton Case, 113 N. Y. 34 L. R. A.

Y. 181, 8 L. R. A. 464: "It is not a general but a special tax, reaching only to special cases and affecting only a special class of persons." And, as he also observed, in substance, there must be a clear warrant in the law for the imposition of the tax. In the Swift Case, 187 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709, it was decided that the personal property of a resident decedent, wheresoever situate, within or without the state, is subject to the tax. The act of 1885 was under discussion, and the general theory of the inheritance tax law was considered; and it was held to be a fundamental requirement that there should be jurisdiction over the subject taxed, or an actual dominion over the subject of taxation at the time the tax is imposed. In the Phipps Case, 77 Hun, 826, which was affirmed here upon the opinion of the general term (143 N. Y. 641), the question was whether the right to an unpaid legacy left to a nonresident decedent in the will of a resident decedent was property within this state, and, as such, assessable for purposes of taxation under the act of 1887. It was held that it was not such property, upon the principle that the residence of the debtor does not fix the situs of the debt, but the domicil of the creditor. It was there observed that "a mere chose in action, a right to recover a sum of money, has never, as yet, been given the attribute of tangibility." By the act of 1887 (chap. 718), the legislature had amended the inheritance tax law, as it existed under the act of 1885, so as to impose a succession tax with respect to the property of nonresident decedents, which should be within this state. In the James Case, 144 N. Y. 6, we had occasion to consider the operation of that act. An Englishman, who died abroad, left property deposited within this state, consisting in stocks and bonds of corporations of this and of other states. The question was considered whether, in view of these words in the act "which property shall be within this state," it was its intentment to reach, for purposes of taxation, any personal property that was not within the state, either in fact or because of the domicil here of its owner. We thought not, and that it would be highly improper to impute to the legislature an intention to tax that over which there was no jurisdiction. It is obvious that the state has no jurisdiction over a right of succession which accrues under the laws of the foreign state. That is something in which this state has no interest, and with which it is not concerned. The legal title to these bonds, or the debts they represent, vested in the personal representatives of the decedent by force of foreign laws. The decedent was a creditor to whom the obligors in the various bonds were indebted, the extent and terms of whose obligation were evidenced by those bonds. The legal situs of the indebtedness was at the creditor's domicil, and, as the actual situs of the bonds themselves was also there, upon no theory can it be held that the provisions of the transfer tax act could reach them in its operation. The logical result of the proposition which has been established, that the tax is upon the right of succession to property, is, in my opinion, to confine the operation of this law, where nonresidents' estates are concerned, to cases of property having a tangible and visible existence, and being the actual subject of the ownership.

But, with reference to the shares of capital stock owned by the decedent, I think we are compelled to differ with the appellate division. The attitude of a holder of shares of capital stock is quite other than that of a holder of bonds towards the corporation which issued them. While the bondholders are simply creditors, whose concern with the corporation is limited to the fulfillment of its particular obligation, the shareholders are persons who are interested in the operation of the corporate property and franchises, and their shares actually represent undivided interests in the corporate enterprise. The corporation has the legal title to all the properties acquired and appurtenant, but it holds them for the pecuniary benefit of those persons who hold the capital stock. They appoint the persons to manage its affairs. They have the right to share in surplus earnings, and, after dissolution, they have the right to have the assets reduced to money, and to have them ratably distributed. Each share represents a distinct interest in the whole of the corporate property. As said in Jermain v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 492, it "represents the interest which the shareholder has in the capital and net earnings of the corporation;" or, as Parke, B., put it, in Bradley v. Holdsworth, 3 Mee. & W., at page 423, it is "a right to have a share of the net produce of all the property of the company." Corporate shares must be regarded as "property," within the broad meaning of that term. Certificates of stock, in the hands of their holder, represent the number of shares which the corporation acknowledges that he is entitled to. In legal contemplation, the property of the shareholder is either where the corporation exists or at his domicile, accordingly as it is considered to consist in his contractual rights, or in his proprietary interest in the corporation. In the case of bonds, they represent but a property in the debt, and that follows the creditor's person. Hence it cannot be said, if the property represented by a share of stock has its legal situs either where the corporation exists or at the holder's domicile, as we have said in the Enston and James Cases (Re Enston's Will, 118 N. Y. 181, 8 L. R. A. 464; Re James, 144 N. Y. 12), that the state is without jurisdiction over it for taxation purposes. As personality, the legal situs does follow the person of the owner; but the property is in his right to share in the net produce, and, eventually, in the net residuum of the corporate assets, resulting from liquidation. That right as a chose in action must necessarily follow the shareholder's person; but that does not exclude the idea that the property as to which the right relates, and which is, in effect, a distinct interest in the corporate property, is not within the jurisdiction of the state for the purpose of assessment upon its transfer through the operation of any law, or of the act of its owner. The attempt to tax a debt of the corporation to a nonresident of the state, as being property within the state, is one thing, and the imposition of a tax upon the transfer of any interest in or right to the corporate property itself is another thing. The corporation is the creation of state laws, and those who become its members, as shareholders, are subject to the operation of those laws, with respect to any limitation upon their property rights, and with respect to the right to assess their property interests for purposes of taxation.

It results from these views that the order appealed from must be reversed to the extent that it reversed the order of the surrogate affirming an assessment upon the estate of the decedent based upon an appraisal of the shares of stock of domestic corporations, and the determination of the surrogate in that respect is affirmed. In other respects the order appealed from is affirmed, and the matter is remitted to the surrogate's court, to be proceeded with in conformity with our opinion. Under the circumstances, no costs are awarded to either party.

Andrews, Ch. J., and Bartlett, Haight, and Martin, JJ., concur.

Vann, J., dissenting:

Henry Bronson, for many years a resident of New Haven, Connecticut, died in that city on the 26th of November, 1893, leaving a will, which was admitted to probate in the state of Connecticut, but was never proved or filed in the state of New York. By this will, after making some gifts to his grandchildren, he gave the bulk of his estate to his two sons, now his executors, both of whom are nonresidents of this state. At the time of his death he owned bonds of the value of $18,200, and stocks of the value of $487,898.25, all issued by corporations organized under the laws of the state of New York. Said securities, as written instruments, were not within this state when the decedent died, but were in the state of Connecticut, where he had his domicile. They had never been kept in the state of New York, either for safety or any other purpose; and, before the initiation of these proceedings, they had been formally transferred by the executors to themselves, as residuary legatees. Upon the report of the appraiser, who included both bonds and stocks in his appraisal, the surrogate decided that they were subject to a transfer tax, and made the usual order, which was affirmed by him on appeal; but his determination was reversed by the appellate division, and the case is now here upon appeal from their order of reversal.

Two questions are presented for decision, etc.: (1) Whether capital invested by a nonresident, or by his assignor, in corporations organized and doing business in this state, for which certificates of stock in such corporations were issued to him, is subject to a succession tax under our laws, when such certificates, although standing in his name as registered on the books at the date of his death, were habitually kept by him in the state where he resided; (2) whether capital lent to such corporations by a nonresident, or his assignor, for which bonds were issued to him, is taxable under like circumstances.

In order to determine these questions, it is necessary to construe certain sections of a statute passed in 1892, entitled "An Act in Relation to Taxable Transfers of Property." Laws 1892, chap. 889. The first legislation upon the subject in this state was in 1885, when an act was passed "to tax gifts, legacies, and collat teral inheritances in certain cases." Laws 1885, chap. 483. This statute was so crude in structure and doubtful in meaning as to cause much litigation, which led to its amendment by the legislature, even before the first questions that arose had been passed upon by the courts. Laws 1887, chap. 718; Re Enston's Will, 113 N. Y. 174, 8 L. R. A. 464; Re Romaine's Estate, 127 N. Y. 80, 12 L. R. A. 401. Other amendments followed in quick succession (Laws 1889, chap. 307; Laws 1889, chap. 409; Laws 1890, chap. 553; Laws 1891, chap. 215; Laws 1892, chap. 169), until finally, owing in part to conservative construction by the courts, and in part to the growth of public sentiment upon the subject, the statute was thoroughly revised, so as to meet the difficulties encountered in its enforcement, and the result was the act now before us for consideration. That act, as we have already declared, "was passed with knowledge of our decisions and in view of our construction, and was obviously intended in some respects to compel on our part different conclusions." Re Hoffman's Estate, 143 N. Y. 327, 831. The history of legislation upon the subject shows a constant advance in the grasp of the statute, as nearly every amendment reached out further and took in more, until at last the intention of the legislation was limited only by its power, for its command was to "include all property or interest therein, whether situated within or without this state, over which this state has any jurisdiction for the purposes of taxation." Laws 1892, chap. 390, § 22. This sweeping intention on the part of the legislature doubtless, had its origin in the fact that personal property, as a general thing, when its great value is taken into account, escapes taxation during the lifetime of its owner. Real estate, owing to its fixed location, presents a problem of slight difficulty to the legislator in his effort to provide means for the support of government, for it cannot escape the view of either the assessor or collector, and the result is that it pays an undue proportion of the annual tax levy. Personal property, however, especially when it exists, practically, in such a form that, to the extent of millions of dollars, it can be carried in one's pocket, has long perplexed the legislator and the statesman, owing to its adroitness and success in avoiding taxation. In 1891 the governor, in his annual message to the legislature, made pointed allusions to the difficulty of reaching personal property, and recommended such legislation as I am now about to consider, in order that, as stated by him, "personal estate can, at least, be subjected to one tax, although it may never have been able to be reached during the life of the decedent." Dos Passos, Collateral Inheritance Taxes, 2d ed. § 5. It is evident from this that the executive regarded the laws then existing as too narrow, and that he thought public policy required statutes of broader scope. The legislature, apparently, was of the same mind, for, not long after, the act was passed which it is now our duty to construe.

While the courts should carefully gather the intention of the legislature, so far as may be, from the language of the statute, they should also bear in mind the facts which led to the enactment in its present form; for the evil to be remedied, the difficulty of applying the remedy, and the changes made in order to force a construction in harmony with the growth of legislative purpose, may be of material aid in reaching the correct conclusion. The object of the statute, as indicated by the title, is no longer simply "to tax gifts, legacies, and collateral inheritances," but to bring under taxation all "taxable transfers of property." This broad purpose pervades the entire act, as a careful reading of its provisions will show. The statute provides that, subject to certain exceptions, "a tax shall be . . . imposed upon the transfer of any property, real or personal, . . . or of any interest therein, or income therefrom, . . . when the transfer is by will or by the intestate laws of this state" of property of a resident, or "when the transfer is by will or intestate law of property within the state, and the decedent was a non-resident of the state at the time of his death." Sec. 1. Two classes of cases are thus provided for: (1) The property of residents, passing under the laws of this state, without regard to where the property may be; (2) the property of nonresidents, passing under the laws of another state, when the property is within this state. What is meant by the phrase "property within the state" is a question so difficult that we are unable to unite in declaring its meaning, but are compelled to decide it by the vote of a majority. The question, in concrete form, is whether the stocks and bonds under consideration, or the interests they represent, are "property within the state." Light is thrown upon the subject by § 9, formerly § 11, but radically changed, which provides that "if a foreign executor, administrator, or trustee shall assign or transfer any stock or obligations in this state standing in the name of a decedent, or in trust for a decedent, liable to any such tax, the tax shall be paid to" an officer designated, "on the transfer thereof." The phrase "liable to any such tax" refers to such "stocks and obligations" as are not expressly exempted, owing to the limited value of the entire estate and the close relationship to the decedent of the persons to whom it passes. Sec. 2. What did the legislature mean by "stock or obligations in this state standing in the name of the decedent?" This is the same question in another form as that previously asked, but the change from general to specific words of description in the statute has much significance. The same section commands depositaries, both corporate and personal, "holding securities or assets of a decedent," not to "deliver or transfer the same to the executors, administrators, or legal representatives of said decedent, unless notice of the time and place of the intended transfer" is given to the proper authorities, and a failure to give the notice renders the depositary personally liable "to the payment of the tax." The word "assets," as thus used, is the most comprehensive that could be used to expand the meaning of the statute.

There is but one more section that has a direct bearing upon the question in hand, and that is the 22d, which relates to "definitions," and is of especial importance, not only because it is new, but because it emphasizes the purpose of the statute. It provides that "the words 'estate' and 'property,' as used in this act, shall be taken to mean the property or interest therein of the testator" or "intestate . . . passing or transferred to those not therein specifically exempted from the provisions of this act, . . . and shall include all property or interest therein, whether situate within or without the state, over which this state has any jurisdiction for the purposes of taxation." This language, although not as specific as could be used, is so comprehensive as to include whatever the legislature has power to subject to taxation. It does not mean jurisdiction as theretofore exercised through other statutes, for it does not say so, but it means whatever jurisdiction the state can exercise. Both the words used and the growing purpose of the legislature show this. The section further provides that "the word 'transfer,' as used in this act, shall be taken to include the passing of property, or any interest therein, in possession or enjoyment, present or future, by inheritance, descent, devise," or "bequest . . . in the manner herein described."

Partial directions for the construction of the act are found in § 25, which requires that such parts as "are substantially the same as those of laws existing on April 30th, 1892," which was the day before the statute took effect, "shall be construed as a continuation of such laws, modified or amended according to the language employed in this act, and not as new enactments." This is the rule of construction provided by the statutory construction law, that is "applicable to every statute, unless its general object, or the context of the language construed, or other provisions of law, indicate that a different meaning or application was intended." Laws 1892, chap. 677, §§ 1, 82. It does not exclude from our consideration, when construing the transfer tax act, the definition of "personal property," as laid down in the statutory construction law, which is retroactive as well as prospective in its effect, and applies to all statutes, except as otherwise provided. "The term 'personal property,'" as defined by that law, "includes chattels, money, things in action, and all written instruments, themselves, as distinguished from the rights or interests to which they relate, by which any right, interest, lien, or encumbrance in, to, or upon property, or any debt or financial obligation, is created, acknowledged, evidenced, transferred, discharged, or defeated, wholly or in part, and everything, except real property, which may be the subject of ownership." Laws 1892, chap. 677, § 4. It is difficult to conceive a definition more comprehensive than this, for it includes intangible property, as well as tangible, written instruments as such, and everything, except real property, that is capable of being owned or transferred. Thus, the legislature has declared its intention to subject to a transfer tax everything owned by a resident at the time of his death, and everything within this state owned by a nonresident at the time of his death, with certain exceptions not now important. It has specifically mentioned "stocks and obligations in this state standing in the name of a decedent," as well as "securities and assets," and has prohibited the transfer thereof, except upon notice to an agent of the state; and, finally, it has summed up its purpose by saying that the succession to whatever may be the subject of ownership, whether within or without the state, that it can tax, it intended to tax.

The question at once arises, What limitation is there upon the power of the legislature with reference to the subject of taxation? In answering this question, it must be borne in mind that the tax under consideration is not a tax upon property, but upon the transfer of property, under succession laws, on the death of the owner. Re Merriam's Estate, 141 N. Y. 479; Re Swift's Estate, 187 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709. The position of the Supreme Court of the United States upon the subject appears from the following authorities: Mager v. Grima, 49 U. S. 8 How. 490, 12 L. ed. 1168; Green v. Van Buskirk, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 307, 18 L. ed. 599; Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania ("State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds"), 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 800, 319, 21 L. ed. 179, 186; Hertey v. Rhode Island Locomotive Works, 93 U. S. 664, 23 L. ed. 1003. In deciding the case last cited, the court declared "that every state has the right to regulate the transfer of property within its limits, and that whoever sends property to it impliedly submits to the regulations concerning its transfer in force there, although a different rule of transfer prevails in the jurisdiction where he resides." Page 671, L. ed. p. 1004. The Foreign-held Bonds Case involved a tax upon property, not held upon the right of succession to property. This right was not considered by the court, and it rests upon principles utterly different from those applicable to taxation upon property itself. It would be a startling proposition for that learned court to hold that a state may not regulate the transfer of property within its own limits by subjecting it to any reasonable condition. Property owned by a resident gives rise to no question, for there is jurisdiction of the person of the decedent and of his personal representatives. Tangible property, which is apparent to the senses, presents no difficulty, even when it belonged to a nonresident decedent, provided it is physically present in the state. Intangible property, however, because it has no physical presence, has long perplexed both those who make and those who expound the law. It may exist, as it were, in the air, for it may consist of a right, which, if denied, must be established by parol evidence. Such rights are ordinarily regarded as attached to the person of the owner, but they are not inseparable from him, because creditors are permitted to seize them for the payment of debts, even in a state where the owner never resided and never was personally present. Plimpton v. Bigelow, 98 N. Y. 592, 596, 600; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 648, 2478. See also Laws 1880, chap. 320, § 16; Beers v. Shannon, 73 N. Y. 292; Story, Conf. L. § 380; Cullin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 158; Atvany v. Powell, 2 Jones, Eq. 51; State v. Dalrymple, 70 Md. 294, 8 L. R. A. 272. In Plimpton v. Bigelow, supra, this court said: "We do not doubt that shares [of stock in a domestic corporation] for the purpose of attachment proceedings may be deemed to be in the possession of the corporation which issued them, but only at the place where the corporation by intentment of law always remains, to wit, in the state or country of its creation." P. 600.

There is nothing, therefore, in the nature of the most intangible right, such as a debt without any written evidence thereof, to prevent the legislature from giving it a situs apart from the residence of its owner; but, in order to permit this, it must have some practical existence in the state that assumes jurisdiction over it either for the purpose of taxation or the collection of debts. In the latter case the residence of the debtor is deemed to give the debt a practical existence in the state where the debtor resides, because the nonresident creditor, if his claim is not paid voluntarily, must go where his debtor is, and invoke the aid of the laws in force there, in order to collect it. If the legislature has jurisdiction over intangible property for the purpose of enabling creditors to collect debts, why has it not jurisdiction over it in order to provide means for the support of government, including the courts and other agencies provided to enable nonresidents, as well as residents, to enforce collection of their claims? The most serious obstacle thus far encountered in the effort to subject to taxation the transfer of all the personal property of nonresident decedents, which has a practical existence in this state, is the legal maxim, Mobilia sequuntur personam. This is a mere fiction of the law, and is not, as we have seen, universal in its application. It is based partly on comity between states, and partly on convenience of administration. Long as it has stood, and well embedded in the law as it is, it is not paramount to a statute, and must stand aside whenever the legislature directs it to give way. As said by Judge Comstock: "Like other fictions, it has its special uses. It may be resorted to whenever convenience and justice so require. In other circumstances the truth and not the fiction affords, as it plainly ought to afford, the rule of action. . . . Accordingly there seems to be no place for the fiction of which we are speaking, in a well-adjusted system of taxation." People v. Commissioners of Taxes, 28 N. Y. 224, 228. So, Judge Story said that the legal fiction "yields whenever it is necessary for the purposes of justice that the actual situs of the thing should be examined. . . . Hence it is that, whenever personal property is taken by arrest, attachment, or execution within a state, the title so acquired under the laws of the state is held valid in every other state; and the same rule is applied to debts due to nonresidents, which are subjected to the like process under the local laws of a state." Story, Conf. L. § 550. Mr. Justice Gray, of the Supreme Court of the United States, referring to this maxim, said that it "grew up in the Middle Ages, when movable property consisted chiefly of gold and jewels, which could be easily carried by the owner from place to place, or secreted in spots known only to himself. In modern times, since the great increase in amount and variety of personal property, not immediately connected with the person of the owner, that rule has yielded more and more to the lex situs. . . . For the purposes of taxation, as has been repeatedly affirmed by this court, personal property may be separated from its owner; and he may be taxed, on its account, at the place where it is, although not the place of his own domicile, and even if he is not a citizen or a resident of the state which imposes the tax." Pullman' Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 22, 35 L. ed. 613, 616, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595. Long ago the legislature subjected to general taxation certain kinds of debts due to nonresidents, and the act was unanimously sustained by the commission of appeals. Laws 1851, chap. 871; People, Westbrook, v. Trustees of Ogdensburgh, 48 N. Y. 890.

Another statute, which virtually repealed the maxim pro tanto as to foreign capital invested in banking business in this state, was referred to by this court as "designed to remedy an evil then existing, which mainly consisted in persons residing near the borders of our state carrying on trades and business here in competition with our own citizens, and, while enjoying the protection of our laws, escaping all the burdens of taxation by having their residences beyond the boundary line." Laws 1855, chap. 87; Williams v. Wayne County Supers. 78 N. Y. 561, 568. In People, Jefferson, v. Smith, 89 N. Y. 576, 581, Judge Earl said: "That choses in action can have a situs away from the domicile of the owner for the purpose of taxation and for other purposes, is frequently manifested in the statutes of this state. . . . I think it may safely be said that the legal fiction that choses in action always attend the owner and have a legal existence only at the place of his domicile has been frequently ignored by the legislature in framing our system of taxation." That the legislature intended to do away with this fiction, so far as it tended to restrict the scope of the act, and to give personal property a special situs for the purposes of taxation, is evident from the quotations already made from the statute, and especially from the declaration that "all property or interest therein" capable of ownership shall be included, "whether situated within or without this state, over which this state has any jurisdiction for the purpose of taxation;" that foreign executors shall not "transfer any stock or obligations standing in the name of a decedent," without payment of the tax; and that no depositary shall transfer "securities or assets of a decedent" without giving the required notice. Laws 1892, chap. 899, §§ 9, 22. "Stock . . . in this state standing in the name of a decedent" apparently refers to shares of stock in a domestic corporation. What are shares of stock, and what rights does the owner thereof enjoy? Judge Andrews answered this question when he wrote in Plimpton v. Bigelow, supra, that "the right which a shareholder in a corporation has by reason of his ownership of shares, is a right to participate according to the amount of his stock in the surplus profits of the corporation on a division, and ultimately on its dissolution, in the assets remaining after payment of its debts." Chief Justice Shaw answered it when he said "that the right is, strictly speaking, a right to participate, in a certain proportion, in the immunities and benefits of the corporation; to vote in the choice of their officers, and the management of their concerns; to share in the dividends of profits, and to receive an aliquot part of the proceeds of the capital, on winding up and terminating the active existence and operations of the corporation."

Fisher v. Essex Bank, 5 Gray, 377. Judge Earl, referring to, the same subject, has said that "a share of stock represents the interest which the shareholder has in the capital and net earnings of the corporation. The interest is of an abstract nature, that is, the shareholder cannot by any act of his, nor ordinarily by any act of the law, reduce it to possession." Jermain v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 492. "A share of stock is an incorporeal, intangible thing." Neiler v. Kelley, 69 Pa. 407. "The expression 'shares of stock,' when qualified by words indicating number and ownership, expresses the extent of the owner's interest in the corporation property. The interest is equitable, and does not give him the right of ownership to specific property of the corporation. But he does own the specific stock held in his name, and, under the rules of law, the property of the corporation is held by the corporation in trust for the stockholders." Bridgman v. Keokuk, 73 Iowa, 42. Shares of stock should be distinguished from certificates of stock which are merely evidence as to the number of shares to which the holder of the certificate is entitled. Jermain v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 488, 492. The same rights exist whether any certificate is issued as evidence of those rights or not. Formerly no certificates were issued, and the only evidence of the existence of the right was upon the books of the corporation. 28 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 484; Cook, Stock & Stockholders, § 1.

What was the nature of the investment made by the decedent when he became the owner of stocks in various corporations organized and doing business in this state? Necessarily he was either an original investor of capital when the corporation was organized, or he acquired the rights of one who was such investor at that time. In either event his rights were the same, and the nature of his investment was the same. For instance, he owned stock in a bank doing business in the city of New York. That stock represented an investment of money, either paid in by him when the bank was organized, or by someone else, whose rights, or a part of them, he subsequently purchased. Whether he was an original proprietor, or acquired the rights of an original proprietor, he made an investment in a banking business in this state at the moment that he became the owner of the stock. Was that investment property "within this state," under the comprehensive statute now before us? It was capital invested in a corporation organized here, doing business here, having its principal office here, and earning money here with which to pay dividends to the decedent and others. He was one of the owners of the franchise, and had an equitable interest in all the property of the corporation. He assisted, or had the right to assist, in the management of the business, through his power to vote for directors. That right he could exercise only by coming here in person, or by sending someone with authority to act for him here. He placed his money physically within the state of New York when he invested it in a New York enterprise, and he left it here under the protection of our laws, and thereby gave it a local habitation here. Under these circumstances should a fictitious situs prevail over the actual situs located by himself? If he had invested money, in his own name, in tangible personal property in this state, it would have been subject to a succession tax upon his death, although he resided in another state. Re Swift's Estate, 187 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709. If, on the other hand, he had invested the same money, in the name of a corporation owning the same property, would the investment be free from such tax? If so, by virtue of what provision of the statute would it escape? While there is a difference in form, I see no difference in substance of the two investments. If a transfer tax can be imposed on the tangible property of a nonresident decedent in this state, why not on the intangible? There is nothing to prevent it except a fiction that has never prevailed against creditors, and why should it against taxation? That fiction is as foreign to questions of revenue as it is to the collection of debts; and it should not be allowed, under the sweeping provisions of the statute, to create a constructive presence in another state, and enable it to prevail over an actual presence, for all practical purposes, within this state. This accords with the position of the court, as declared in the Enston Case, decided under the act of 1885, where it was said that "the situs of the property owned by a shareholder in a corporation is either where the corporation exists, or at the domicile of the shareholder." Re Enston's Will, 113 N. Y. 174, 181, 3 L. R. A. 484. The same thing was said in the James Case, decided under the act of 1887. Re James's Estate, 144 N. Y. 6, 12. The fiction prevails until changed by statute, and that it was repealed as to money invested in this state was expressly held in the Romaine Case, 127 N. Y. 80, 88, 12 L. R. A. 401. Since then the statute has been radically changed in furtherance of the principle that prevailed when that decision was made. Moreover, the state has the right to regulate all transfers of property made within its limits. The name of the decedent as a shareholder, and the number of shares to which he was entitled, were recorded on the stock books of the corporations in which he held stock in this state. No effective transfer of his stock could be made except by changing the record upon the books in this state. That transfer is a corporate act, involving a change upon the records of the corporation; and ordinarily the issue of a new certificate; and it must be performed by the corporation in order to vest the title in the foreign executor or legatee. The old certificate must be brought here and surrendered, or, if lost, the loss must be accounted for here. If the transfer is not made voluntarily resort must be had to the courts of this state, in order to compel it. So, the owner must come here to get his dividends, as well as to get his final share of the surplus upon the dissolution of the corporation. The capital was not only invested here, but it still remains here, represented by property here, and the owner must come here to get it. If his rights are withheld, the courts of no state but this can restore them. The decedent placed his property in this state, and thereby impliedly committed it to the jurisdiction of our laws, then in force and such as might be enacted thereafter; and property subject in any respect to the laws of a state, even if only as regards the transfer thereof, must, if required, pay its share towards the enforcement of those laws. Look for a moment at the consequences of holding otherwise. Business corporations might be organized in this state wholly upon foreign capital, a few shares being held in the name of resident directors to make the organization regular, and yet none of the stock, however valuable, be subject to a succession tax. This would tend to drive business corporations into foreign ownership. If the stock of a corporation belonged one half to residents and one half to nonresidents, the former would be taxable, but the latter not; and thus an unfair discrimination would be made against inhabitants of this state. It is a matter of common knowledge that stocks in domestic corporations are owned to a vast amount by persons doing business in this state, and having their business residence here, but their actual residence in an adjoining state. Did the legislature intend to offer a premium to nonresidents, by exempting them from burdens that our own citizens have to bear? Did it intend to encourage men of wealth to move out of the state? It is possible that substantially all the stock representing a great property like that of the New York Central Railroad Company or the Western Union Telegraph Company, in both of which the decedent was a large shareholder, might be owned outside of the state. Should such investments, which are under the exclusive protection of the laws of this state, escape the payment of a tax upon the privilege of succession? Considering its emphatic language, is it reasonable to believe that the legislature intended such a result?

It is urged that the stocks in question may be taxed in the state of Connecticut, and thus be subjected to double taxation. As it happens, this cannot be the result, for the inheritance tax act of that state does not apply to lineal descendants, although it covers in terms all property within the jurisdiction of the state passing to collateral relatives "whether belonging to inhabitants" there "or not, and whether tangible or intangible." Conn. Stat. 1889, chap. 180. Even if it were otherwise, while double taxation is admitted to be an evil, still it is better that the same property should, at long intervals, be twice taxed than to open such an avenue of escape from taxation as would release millions of foreign capital enjoying the protection of our laws. The great object of the statute is to cause all property, and especially all personal property, subject in any degree to the laws of this state, to pay a reasonable tax, once during every generation, under such circumstances as to make the burden as light as taxation ever can be, because it is paid for the privilege of succeeding to property, without earning it or paying for it.

The bonds of which the decedent died the owner present a different, but not a difficult, question, provided the proper conclusion has been reached in relation to stocks owned by him. An investment in corporate bonds, being practically a loan of capital to the corporation, differs from an investment in stocks, which represent capital employed by its owners in the business of the corporation.

In the latter case there is an interest in the corporation itself, as well as indirectly in its property, while in the former there is the relation of debtor and creditor. Where the bonds are registered, however, as it was asserted on the argument by the appellant, and not denied by the respondent, that these bonds were, the transfer can only be effected at an office designated by the corporation, Cook, Stock & Stockholders, § 15. It would be necessary, upon this assumption, for the person entitled to succession to these bonds to come into the state of New York, directly or indirectly, to complete his title. The transaction, by virtue of the contract itself, would become localized, for the transfer would require a corporate act in this state done under the sanction of our laws, and possibly by virtue of an appeal to our courts. As an examination of the record, however, does not disclose the fact that the bonds were registered, we must proceed upon the basis that they were not. The bald question is therefore presented whether money lent by a nonresident to a resident corporation, or a bond given as evidence of the debt thus created, is subject to a transfer tax. While such a bond can be transferred without the state, it cannot be collected against the will of the corporation without coming into this state. Even if collected through the Federal courts, it must be within this state. The fact that property of the corporation found in another state may be attached there does not change the general rule that the bond represents money lent in this state, and that the holder thereof must come here to get it. If secured by a mortgage, the recording act of this state controls. If not paid when the corporation is dissolved, the statutes of this state apply. The power of the corporation to borrow or pay depends on our laws, and hence there is an obvious distinction between corporate and private debts. While an individual can contract a debt without the aid of legislation, a corporation cannot borrow nor give a valid bond except under the authority of some statute, general or special. The state makes the bonds property, and preserves them as property. Their value rests on the action of the state government, both in their creation and in the protection subsequently afforded. A debt which owes its existence to our laws, and which could not have been contracted under the laws of any other state, has a local existence for the purpose of taxation. A bond is personal property, not only created, but protected, by the state, and protection and taxation are reciprocal. As the protection is the same whether the bond is owned by a resident or nonresident, why should the accident of residence affect the power to provide the means of protection? The exercise of the power does not impair the obligation of contracts, because every contract is made in view of possible taxation, and the parties are bound to anticipate that there may be legislation to that end. Tax laws and police laws may lawfully be applied to prior contracts. The place where the contract is made and is to be performed, and where the corporate borrower resides, and must always reside, is the place where the legislature may reasonably declare the debt of its own creature to exist as property, so as to be taxed. While at common law it follows the person of the owner, it may be given a fixed habitation by statute. This does not result in any discrimination between resident and nonresident bondholders, for succession to the bonds of either is taxed in the same way. I think that whatever the state government can reach and lay its hands on—as, beyond question, it can on a debt through the process of attachment—has a practical existence here, and is subject to the control of our legislature for the purpose of taxation. While I concur in the result reached by the court that the stocks in question are taxable, I am constrained to dissent from its conclusion that the bonds are not taxable. The order of the appellate division should be reversed, and that of the surrogate affirmed, with costs.

O'Brien, J., concurs.

William V. PENOYAR et al., Appts.,

William E. KELSEY et al., Resp'ts.

(180 N. Y. 77.)

1. A statute authorizing the granting of a warrant of attachment against one who makes a false statement in writing to obtain credit will be strictly construed in favor of those against whom it may be employed, as it is in derogation of the common law.
2. The making of a false written statement as to financial ability, for the purpose of obtaining credit, does not make one liable to an attachment in favor of a creditor who had no knowledge of such statement until after the credit was given, under Laws 1894, chap. 736, § 1, authorizing the granting of an attachment where defendant, for the purpose of procuring credit, makes a false statement in writing as to his financial responsibility.

(October 6, 1896.)

APPEAL by permission by plaintiffs from an order of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Fourth Department, affirming an order of a Special Term for Niagara County vacating an order of attachment. Affirmed.

The appellate division certified for the consideration of the court of appeals the following question:

"It is hereby certified that a question has arisen under § 636 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which provides that an attachment may issue, viz., where, for the purpose of procuring credit, or the extension of credit, the defendant has made a false statement in writing, under his own hand or signature, or under the hand and signature of a duly authorized agent, made with his knowledge and acquiescence, as to his financial responsibility or standing, whether an alleged false statement in writing by a debtor, which does not come to the knowledge or notice of a creditor until after credit has been given to the debtor, is sufficient to authorize the granting of a warrant of attachment under such provisions."

Mr. Stillman F. Kneeland, with Mr. Charles P. Norton, for appellants:

Statutes relating to attachments are entitled to a liberal construction.

The object of the act of 1894 was to provide for all creditors present security from a debtor who has been proved dishonest in his commercial transactions.

In this state the plaintiff in attachment is never required to go beyond the terms of the statute.

Treadwell v. Lawlor, 15 How. Pr. 8; Camman v. Tompkins, 12 Barb. 265.

The language of the act of 1894 being plain and unambiguous the courts must ascertain by its terms the intention of the lawgivers. They have no power to add to its terms or change its tenor.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 55; People, Bockes, v. Wemple, 115 N. Y. 302; Novell v. People, Phelps, 7 N. Y. 67; Gibbons v. Ogden, 22 U. S. 9 Wheat. 188, 6 L. ed. 63; People v. Purdy, 2 Hill, 81.

Mr. J. B. Tuttle also for appellants.

Mr. Norman D. Fish, for respondents:

The remedy of attachment was unknown to the common law, and is strictly a creature of statute, and as such involves the involuntary dispossession of the owner, and antagonizes the common-law idea of property right.

1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 894; Kneeland. Attachm. § 3; Rowles v. Hoare, 61 Barb. 271; Re Denny, 2 Hill, 220.

Statutes are to be construed with reference to the principles of the common law, for it is not to be presumed that the legislature intended to make any innovations upon the common law further than the case absolutely required.

1 Kent, Com. 464; Bertles v. Nunan, 92 N. Y. 157, 44 Am. Rep. 361; Potter's Dwar. Stat. 185; Linderman v. Parquharson, 101 N. Y. 434; Fitzgerald v. Quann, 109 N. Y. 445; Smith, Const. & Stat. Constr. §§ 701-703; White v. Wager, 32 Barb. 250.

In the construction of statutes effect must be given to the intent of the legislature whenever it can be discerned, though such construction seem contrary to the letter of the statute.

Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 336; Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 437, 36 L. ed. 227; 1 Kent, Com. 368; People v. Utica Ins. Co. 15 Johns. 380, 8 Am. Dec. 243; Hayden v. Pierce, 144 N. Y. 516; Vail v. Broadway R. Co. 147 N. Y. 377, 80 L. R. A. 626; Cleveland Fire Alarm Teleg. Co. v. Metropolitan Fire Comrs. 55 Barb. 293.

That which is within the manifest intention of the lawmakers is to be deemed within the law as much as that which is within its letter. Stowel v. Lord Zouch, 1 Plowd. 366; Riggs v. Palmer, 115 N. Y. 506, 5 L. R. A. 340.

The legislature never intended, in enacting the statute in question, to give a summary remedy by attachment to persons who had in no wise been injured by the false representations specified in the statute. And the failure of the plaintiffs to show injury to themselves

NOTE.—On the question what fraud will sustain a judgment, see note to Weare Commission Co. v. Druley (Ill.) 30 L. R. A. 466.

34 L. R. A.

by reason of the representations complained of is fatal to their attachment.

Haber v. Nassitts, 13 Fla. 610; Louenstein v. Bew, 68 Miss. 266; Montague v. Gaddis, 87 Miss. 453; White v. Wilson, 10 Ill. 21; Ridgeway v. Smith, 17 Ill. 38; Stewart v. Cole, 46 Ala. 648; Pickard v. Samuels, 64 Miss. 832; Drake, Attachm. § 68; Warder v. Thrillkeld, 53 Iowa, 184; Lyons v. Mason, 4 Coldw. 525; Russell v. Wilson, 18 La. 867.

Vann, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The question certified to us for determination depends upon the construction of § 636 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which prescribes "what must be shown to procure" a warrant of attachment against property. The learned counsel for the respective parties differ as to the rule of construction that should be applied; the one contending that it should be strict, because the provision is in derogation of the common law, while the other insists that it should be liberal, because the statute does not derogate from the common law, but merely amplifies a well-known common-law remedy. The process of attachment, as it existed under the common law, differed in its nature and object from the provisional remedy now known by that name. Its original purpose was to acquire jurisdiction of the defendant by compelling him to appear in court through the seizure of his property, which he forfeited if he did not appear or furnish sureties for his appearance. 3 Bl. Com. 280; 1 Rolle, Abr. Customs of London, K. 13; Kneeland, Attachm. § 6; Drake, Attachm. § 5; Ashley, Attachm. 11; Locke, Foreign Attachm. 12. It was part of the service of process in a civil action through a species of distress, in which the goods attached were the ancient vadii or pledges. Bond v. Ward, 7 Mass. 123, 128; Gilbert, Law Distress, 24. As said in the case last cited: "The practice of attaching the effects of a defendant, and holding them to satisfy a judgment, which the plaintiff may recover, when, perhaps, judgment may be for the defendant, is unknown to the common law, and is founded on our statute law." Its present purpose is not to compel appearance by the debtor, but to secure the debt or claim of the creditor. It is a proceeding in rem, and the process may issue, in certain cases, whether the defendant has been served with a summons or not, although inability to serve, through the fault of the defendant, is a ground upon which the warrant may be granted. It exists as a provisional remedy only when authorized by statute, and, as such, is comparatively recent in its origin. While attachments were permitted in justices' courts by the Revised Statutes, and were extended somewhat by the nonimprisonment act, they were proceedings in the nature of original process, by which the action was commenced. 2 Rev. Stat. p. 274; Laws 1831, chap. 800; Bradmer, Attachm. 2. See also 1 Webster & S. 286; 2 Rev. Laws 1813, p. 157. Attachment as a provisional remedy, with the object of securing a debt by preliminary levy upon property to conserve it for eventual execution, was created by the Code of Procedure, and has been continued and extended by the Code of Civil Procedure. Code, Proc. § 227; Code Civ. Proc. § 635. Unlike the attachment against absent or absconding debtors under the Revised Statutes or the Stillwell act, which sequestered the property of the debtor for the benefit of all the creditors alike, this proceeding is for the benefit of the attaching creditor alone. It is not only created by statute, but has substantially none of the features peculiar to the common-law remedy. As said by a recent writer: "It amounts to the involuntary dispossession of the owner, prior to any adjudication to determine the rights of the parties. It violates every principle of proprietary rights held sacred by the common law. It is, to some extent, equivalent to execution in advance of trial and judgment. Property is taken, under legal process, at the instance of one without even a claim of title, from the possession of another whose title is unquestioned. And, though the mere taking does not work any change in the ownership of the property, it seriously affects some of the most important incidents of that ownership, and may even be the means of thwarting the owner in his endeavors to meet the just demands against him." Wade, Attachm. § 2.

Owing to the statutory origin and harsh nature of this remedy, the section in question should be construed, in accordance with the general rule applicable to statutes in derogation of the common law, strictly in favor of those against whom it may be employed. Ibid.; Sharpe v. Speir, 4 Hill, 76, 80; Waples, Attachm. § 23. Nonresidence, departure from the state, or concealment therein, with intent to defraud or to avoid the service of process, were at first the only grounds upon which an attachment might issue. Code Proc. 1849, § 239. Afterwards the statute was so extended as to provide that, in addition to the foregoing grounds, if the defendant "has removed, or is about to remove, property from the state, with intent to defraud his creditors," or if he "has assigned, disposed of, or secreted, or is about to assign, dispose of, or secrete, property, with the like intent," a warrant might be issued. Code Civ. Proc. 1891, § 636. The section continued in this form until 1894, when the clause now in question was added in these words: "Or where, for the purpose of procuring credit, or the extension of credit, the defendant has made a false statement in writing, under his own hand or signature, or under the hand or signature of a duly authorized agent, made with his knowledge and acquiescence, as to his financial responsibility or standing." Laws 1894, chap. 786, § 1. It will be observed that prior to this amendment the grounds upon which attachments might be issued were not personal to any creditor, but affected all alike. They were of two classes: (1) Those relating to the person of the defendant, such as nonresidence, departure from the state, or concealment therein; (2) those relating to his property and his fraudulent conduct in connection therewith. None of them related to the creation of the debt, and, with a single exception, all were founded upon acts done with a furtive intent, which injured one creditor the same as another, either by preventing the service of process, or depleting assets in which all were interested. The exception, nonresidence, while not wrongful, related to jurisdiction, and applied to all creditors with the same force. As all of the grounds were general and impersonal, affecting all of the creditors in the same way, of course any creditor could take advantage of any ground that existed. By the amendment of 1894, however, a new element was introduced, which the defendants claim is personal to the creditor giving or extending the credit, but which the plaintiffs claim is general in its effect, and designed to provide immediate security for all creditors whenever the debtor is proved to have been guilty of making written misrepresentations as to his financial standing for the purpose of procuring credit. If the intention was to extend the remedy only to a creditor injured by the fraud, the statute is not a radical departure in legislation, for the practice of fraud, provided it results in lawful damages, is an authorized ground for an order of arrest. If, however, the plaintiff's contention is correct, an unprecedented rule has been made, which may destroy the credit system, and bring confusion to the transaction of business. While the statute prescribes the purpose of the false statement, it does not, in terms, prescribe the effect, nor require that the statement should result in procuring credit; yet it would be unreasonable to hold that the legislature intended that a statement which, although false and made with evil motives, was absolutely harmless, should be followed by such grave consequences. It would be an anomaly in commercial law to permit a wrongful act that injured no one to disrupt a man's business by allowing any creditor to seize his property at any time. The law furnishes a remedy only for such wrongful acts as result in injury. That is the theory upon which actions are founded, and upon which all provisional remedies are allowed, except where the debtor is not amenable to ordinary process, and it is necessary to proceed against his property, because there is no jurisdiction of his person. Wrongs not simply designed, but executed, or in process of execution, are those recognized by the law. Abstract wrongs are disregarded, because they do no harm. If a false statement is made for the purpose of procuring credit, but without having that effect, no creditor is injured. If it is made to one who does not believe it, or does not act upon it, why should it become the basis of this summary remedy? If made to a commercial agency, and it rests quietly upon the books without coming to the knowledge of anyone who relies upon it, no reparation is needed, because no mischief has resulted. No right has been violated, no wrong suffered, and no damages sustained. Although the statute is silent upon the subject, we think that the strict rule of construction that we have adopted requires us to hold that the false statement must be successful in procuring credit from someone in order to authorize an attachment. But suppose the specified fraud has been successfully practiced upon one creditor, does that allow another to take advantage of it, although it had not come to his notice when he gave or extended credit to the debtor? We think not, for the reasons already given, but mainly because he was not injured. He was neither deceived nor defrauded by a statement of which he had not heard when his debt was contracted. He gave no credit on the strength of a representation made at some other time to some other person. We think that the remedy, so far as it is based upon the clause under consideration, is confined to the creditor defrauded, and that no one can resort to it except those who gave an extended credit to the debtor, relying upon his statement as true. The inconvenience and injustice resulting from any other construction are so manifest as to bear strongly upon the intention of the legislature, for a statute should be so construed, when the language will permit, as to make it practicable, just, and reasonably convenient. Rosenplanter v. Roessle, 54 N. Y. 262, 265. It is unreasonable to suppose that the legislature intended that a single false statement should follow a man through life, and expose his property to attack by his creditors at any time they chose. This would virtually withdraw from his property for all time the safeguards which protect the property of all other persons. It would be perpetual outlawry applied to his property, and would tend not only to drive him out of business, but to expel him from the state. It would violate every precedent and all analogies, and we think that, if the legislature intended to impose such a severe penalty for possibly a single false step, it would have said so in plain terms. We are thus led to answer the question certified in the negative, and to affirm the order appealed from, with costs.

24 L. R. A.

All concur.

FLORIDA SUPREME COURT.

Harry SINGLETON, Pff. in Err.,

STATE of Florida.

(.....Fla.....)

- *1. The 12th section of article 4 of the Constitution of 1885 conferred power upon the governor, justices of the supreme court, and attorney general, or a major part of them, of whom the governor shall be one, to permanently remit fines and forfeitures, to commute punishment and grant pardons after conviction, in all cases except treason and impeachment, subject to such regulations as may be prescribed by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons, and the pardoning power thus conferred is exclusive, and cannot be exercised by the legislature.
2. By the amendment of § 12, article 4, adopted this year, the secretary of state, comptroller, and commissioner of agriculture take the places of the justices of the supreme court, as members of the board of pardons.
3. A full pardon of an offense not only blots out the crime committed, but removes all punishment and disabilities resulting from the conviction. When extended to a convict in prison, it relieves him and removes his disabilities, and, when granted after his time of imprisonment has expired, it removes all that is left of the consequences of conviction—his disabilities.
4. By statute the conviction of the

*Headnotes by MARRY, Ch. J.

NOTE.—Legislative power to grant pardon or amnesty.

I. After conviction.

II. Before conviction.

III. Incidental or implied pardon.

I. After conviction.

The Constitution of the United States and the constitutions of the various states, with few exceptions, confer upon the executive the power to grant pardons and reprieves without any express declaration as to the power of the legislative department in such matters. Most of the state constitutions expressly provide that the governor may grant pardon "after conviction;" in some instances the language is general and merely provides for pardon, without specifying whether it shall be before or after conviction. In a few states the pardoning power is conferred, not upon the governor alone, but upon a board of pardons.

The above case of SINGLETON V. STATE is the first in which the power of the legislature to grant a pardon to a particular person after conviction has been denied by a direct adjudication, although there are cases referred to in the next subdivision of this note in which legislative pardon or amnesty before conviction has been held unconstitutional.

There has been much contrariety of opinion among judges and legal writers on the question of the relation between the legislative and executive departments with respect to this subject of pardon and amnesty. As to the legislative power to grant amnesty or pardon before conviction, it will be seen in the later division in this note that the weight of authority is in favor of the power. But as to the legislative power to pardon after conviction, the decisions, while not altogether satisfactory or reconcilable, are on the whole against the power. The position of the Florida case above reported, that the express grant by the Constitution of the pardoning power "after conviction," to the crime of larceny in the courts of this state disqualifies the convict as a witness, and his pardon for this offense has the effect to restore his competency to testify as a witness.

5. An act of the legislature provided that a party who had been convicted of the crime of larceny should be restored to civil rights. Held, without deciding whether a restoration to civil rights would include the restoration of competency as a witness, lost by reason of the conviction of the crime, that before the party could testify it must have such effect, and, so construed, it was not competent for the legislature to so enact.

6. An accused is entitled to be tried by an impartial jury, and when it is made to appear to the trial judge that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the county where the offense was committed, he should direct that the accused be tried in another county. This is a matter left largely to the discretion of the trial court, and its ruling on such matters will not be disturbed unless it appear from the facts presented that the court acted unfairly and committed a palpable abuse of sound discretion.

(November 17, 1886.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Hillsborough County to review a judgment convicting defendant of murder. Reversed.
The facts are stated in the opinion.

governor and other officers constituting a board, is exclusive, is based on well-known principles of constitutional interpretation, and is strengthened by the constitutional provision separating the departments of government and providing that no person properly belonging to one of them shall exercise powers appertaining to either of the others except when the Constitution expressly provides for it. On the other hand, the chief authority relied upon by the court is that of State v. Sloss, 26 Mo. 201, 69 Am. Dec. 467, which, as will appear in the next division of this note, can hardly be regarded as authority, at least under Constitutions which say the governor may pardon "after conviction."

In a later Missouri case, Ex parte Parker, 106 Mo. 551, the court said: "We all agree the legislature cannot pardon a defendant convicted of crime, but we think affixing an alternative punishment is wholly unlike a pardon. Changing a fine to imprisonment is not pardoning the crime." This was said in upholding a statute which gave power to a justice to commute a fine to imprisonment for a definite time.

That the legislature cannot commute the punishment fixed by law after a sentence has been given because this is a necessary incident of the governor's pardoning power is also declared in the Opinion of the Justices, 14 Mass. 472.

But in People v. Stewart, 1 Idaho, 546, a statute approved by the governor of the territory remitting the penalty imposed for an offense is sustained as equivalent to a pardon. This was the case of a special statute vacating a judgment on conviction of assault and battery and remitting the fine and imprisonment on the ground that the defendant had been previously convicted and punished under sentence of another court for the same offense. The opinion is very brief, and merely holds that it is competent for the legislature to pass a law remitting punishment. This, it will be noticed, was a Messrs. Wall & Stevens for plaintiff in error.

Mr. William B. Lane, attorney general, for the State.

Mabry, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error was indicted, tried, and convicted of murder in the first degree, and from the sentence of the court imposing the death penalty a writ of error has been sued out.

An error was committed during the progress of the trial of the cause that will necessitate a reversal of the judgment rendered against the accused. The state introduced as a witness one Howard Bishop, who testified to material and damaging facts against the accused. It is not deemed necessary to set out the testimony of the witness, as there can be no doubt that it bore directly upon defendant's guilt, was calculated to influence the jury, and, if improperly admitted, was harmful, and cannot be considered otherwise than as reversible error. An objection was made to Bishop's testifying on the ground that he had been convicted in a court in this state of the crime of larceny, and under the statute he was not a competent witness. It was conceded that the witness, Howard Bishop, had been convicted at the spring term, 1889, of the circuit court for Marion county, of the crime of larceny, and was sentenced to six month's imprisonment in the jail of said county; but to remove and obviate the objection on account of this conviction the state offered in evidence and read to the court the Act of 1895, chapter 4457, entitled "An Act to Restore Howard Bishop, late of Marion County, Florida, to Civil Rights." In the preamble to this act the conviction and sentence of Bishop, in the Marion county circuit court, for the larceny of a watch, is recited; also that about a year subsequent to the conviction it was established to the satisfaction of the party to whom the watch belonged that Bishop was not guilty of the crime for which he had been convicted, and for the last five years he had lived in the city of Tampa, served on the police force of the city, and had conducted himself uprightly as a man and officer. The provision of the act is "that the said Howard Bishop be and is hereby restored to civil rights." Section 1096 of the Revised Statutes provides that persons convicted in any court in this state of murder, perjury, piracy, forgery, larceny, robbery, arson, sodomy, or buggery shall not be competent witnesses. The Constitution provides (§ 11, art. 4) that "the governor shall have power to suspend the collection of fines and forfeitures, and grant reprieves for a period not exceeding sixty days, for all offenses, except in cases of impeachment. In cases of conviction for treason he shall have power to suspend the execution of sentence until the case shall be reported to the legislature at its next session, when the legislature shall either territorial case and no constitutional or statutory provision as to the pardoning power was referred to, although the power of the governor of a territory to grant pardons was conferred by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1844.

So, in two Georgia cases, Bird v. Breedlove, 24 Ga. 623, and Bird v. Meadows, 25 Ga. 251, the validity of a legislative pardon was sustained by implication. In these cases the controversy was as to the right to recover compensation for services to secure the pardon from the legislature, and recovery was allowed, but no constitutional question seems to have been raised in either of them.

An act for relief from a forfeiture on a bail bond was held valid in People v. Bircham, 12 Cal. 50, on the ground that the judgment was property of the state, and could be released by the legislature in such form and on such conditions as it chose to prescribe. But it does not appear that any question was raised as to infringement thereby on the governor's pardoning power.

On the other hand, a statute for the repayment of money paid by sureties on the bond of a clerk to satisfy a fine was held unconstitutional in Haley v. Clark, 26 Ala. 439, on the ground that it amounted to a pardon and infringed upon the governor's function.

General pardons, "when found expedient, have been issued under the sanction of an act of Parliament." 1 Chitty, Crim. L. 771. But the constitutional question which is presented under our form of government cannot arise in case of an act of Parliament.

II. Before conviction.

In three cases the power of the legislature to grant general pardon or amnesty to a class of offenders, although they have not yet been convicted, has been denied. One of these is the case of State v. Sloss (1857) 25 Mo. 291, 69 Am. Dec. 467. The statute in this case attempted to relieve from prosecution all persons indicted for offenses under a dram-shop act committed before a certain date, provided they should pay the costs and a certain fee to the district attorney. The court held this act unconstitutional, and said: "It is as effectually a pardon as though it were one in form." Another ground of the decision was that the act interfered also with the functions of the judicial department. The constitutional provision as to pardon was not quoted in this case, but it seems to have been decided while the original Missouri Constitution of 1820 was in force, which in art. 4, § 6, provided in general terms for "reprieves and pardons" by the governor, without specifying whether or not they could be granted only after conviction.

This was followed by the case of State v. Todd, in 26 Mo. 175, which was little more than a memorandum case, and followed the prior case without additional discussion.

Later Missouri constitutions expressly limit the governor's power to pardon by the words "after conviction."

The third case was that of State v. Fleming, 7 Humph. 153, 46 Am. Dec. 73, in which it was held that a statute prohibiting any fine, forfeiture, or imprisonment to be imposed or recovered for any offense under a certain prior statute is unconstitutional as applied to pending indictments for prior offenses, although convictions have not yet been reached. But this decision was rendered under a Constitution which gave the governor power to grant pardons "after conviction." Whatever may be the effect of constitutional grant of power to the executive to grant "pardons" without limiting it to cases after conviction, it seems unreasonable to find in a grant of power to pardon "after conviction" any restriction on the legislative power in the matter before conviction.

Such is the view taken in the Arkansas case of State v. Nichols, 28 Ark. 74, 7 Am. Rep. 600, where the court decided that the governor's constitutional power to pardon "after conviction" does not exclude legislative power to grant pardon and am-pardon, direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve; and if the legislature shall fail or refuse to make disposition of such case, the sentence shall be enforced at such time and place as the governor may direct." Provision is also made in the section for reports to the legislature by the governor of the fines or forfeitures remitted, or reprieves, pardons, or commutations granted. The 12th section of the same article, as it stood when the act of 1895, supra, was passed, provided that "the governor, justices of the supreme court, and attorney general, or a major part of them, of whom the governor shall be one, may, upon such conditions, and with such limitations and restrictions as they may deem proper, remit fines and forfeitures, commute punishment, and grant pardons after conviction, in all cases except treason and impeachment, subject to such regulations as may be prescribed by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons." Under the amendment to this section, adopted this year, the secretary of state, comptroller, and commissioner of agriculture take the places of the justices of the supreme court. Article 2 of the Constitution divides the powers of government into three departments—legislative, executive, and judicial—and provides that no person properly belonging to one of the departments shall exercise any powers appertaining to either of the others, except in cases expressly provided for by the Constitution. In the distribution of the powers of government the framers of our Constitution had the right to lodge the pardoning power where they saw proper in the departments of government. We know from judicial history that the pardoning power was a part of the royal prerogative in England, and Chief Justice Marshall, in speaking for the court in United States v. Wilson, 82 U. S. 7 Pet. 150, 8 L. ed. 640, says: "As this power has been exercised from time immemorial by the executive of that nation whose language is our language, and to whose judicial institutions ours bear a close resemblance, we adopt their principles respecting the operation and effect of a pardon, and look into their books for the rules prescribing the manner in which it is to be used by the person who would avail himself of it." As to the exercise of the power under our system of government we must look to our organic law, the Constitution. By the 11th section of article 4 the governor alone is given power to suspend the collection of fines and forfeitures, and grant reprieves for a period not exceeding sixty days, for all offenses, except in cases of impeachment, and in cases of conviction for treason the legislature can pardon on the suspension of the sentence by the governor. The 12th section of the article, as amended, confers power upon the governor, secretary of state, comptroller, commissioner of agriculture, and attorney general to permanently remit fines and forfeitures, commute punishment, and grant pardons after conviction, in all cases nesty before conviction. The court distinguishes the cases of State v. Sloss, and State v. Fleming, supra, on the ground that they were decided under constitutions which did not limit the governor's power to pardon to cases after conviction, and says the language used therefore amounts to an absolute grant of all the pardoning power of the state to the executive, and therefore is an inhibition against the legislative branch interfering with it. It further distinguishes the case of State v. Fleming on the ground that Fleming was convicted before he knew of the legislative resolution prohibiting his punishment, and stood before the court in the light of one who had waived his pardon.

The Arkansas case of State v. Nichols, supra, was one of those which arose under statutes of various southern states granting amnesty and pardon for offenses committed during the time of the war. The Arkansas statute gave amnesty for all crimes except rape committed between May 6, 1861, and July 4, 1865, if convictions had not yet been had. A similar statute in North Carolina granted amnesty to all soldiers of the United States or of the confederate states or of the state for acts done in discharge of their duties or under orders as soldiers prior to January 1, 1866. State v. Blalock, Phill. L. 242.

This act is held applicable to homicide growing out of war matters. State v. Shelton, 65 N. C. 294.

But it is held inapplicable to any crime that did not grow out of any war duties or war passions. State v. Cook, Phill. L. 535; State v. Haney, 67 N. C. 467.

These amnesty acts are held to be irrevocable and to give a vested right which cannot be taken away by a repeal. State v. Keith, 63 N. C. 140; State v. Nichols, 26 Ark. 74, 7 Am. Rep. 600.

But, to the contrary, it was held in Michael v. State, 40 Ala. 261, that a repeal of such a statute would preclude its operation as a defense in favor of one who had not previously accepted it.

The Kentucky amnesty act was held inapplicable 34 L. R. A.

to guerrillas or other unlicensed trespassers and limited to soldiers of either army for acts done under color of or by compulsion of military authority. Haddix v. Wilson, 3 Bush, 523.

In the Kentucky, North Carolina, and Alabama cases the power of the legislature to enact such amnesty laws is assumed without question.

The power of Congress to grant amnesty has been the subject of much discussion and conflict of opinion. Congress has assumed the power in many instances by special acts to remove the disabilities of certain individuals for participation in rebellion. Some of these acts of Congress named a single individual, others named a great number of individuals. Section 13 of the confiscation act of July 17, 1862, purporting to confer upon the President power to grant pardon and amnesty in certain cases. But while President Lincoln made reference to this act of Congress, in his proclamation of December 8, 1863, proclaiming full pardon and restoration of all rights of property, except as to slaves, to persons in rebellion on condition of their taking and keeping an oath of loyalty, he began his proclamation by saying: "Whereas in and by the Constitution of the United States it is provided that the President shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons," and very plainly showed that he based his authority to grant the proclamation upon the provisions of the Constitution, and not upon the act of Congress. His reference to the act of Congress was: "Whereas the congressional declaration for a limited and conditional pardon accords with well-established judicial exposition of the pardoning power." It is also matter of history that the sweeping proclamation of amnesty issued by President Johnson was based entirely upon his constitutional right, and that the attempt of Congress to limit the effect of this amnesty and pardon was held by the Supreme Court of the United States to be ineffectual. United States v. Klein, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 123, 20 L. ed. 519; Ex parte Garland, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 333, 18 L. ed. 366.

But the power of the legislative department to except treason and impeachment, subject to such regulations as may be prescribed by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons, and we are of the opinion that the pardoning power after conviction, conferred by this section upon the board of pardons designated, is exclusive, and that the legislature cannot exercise such power. The Constitution of Missouri vested the pardoning power in the governor, and it was decided in State v. Sloss, 25 Mo. 291, 69 Am. Dec. 467, that such power belonged exclusively to the executive department, and could not be exercised by the legislature. The Constitution of the United States confers upon the President the power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment, and Judge Story says (on the Constitution, vol. 2, § 1404) that "no law can abridge the constitutional powers of the executive department, or interrupt its right to interpose by pardon in such cases." It was held in Ex parte Garland, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 838, 18 L. ed. 366, that the pardoning power conferred on the President was not subject to legislative control. In this case it is said, in reference to the effect of a pardon, that it "reaches both the punishment prescribed for the offense, and the guilt of the offender. When the pardon is full, it releases the punishment and blots out of existence the guilt, so that in the eye of the law the offender is as innocent as if he had never committed the offense." This has been approved in an opinion of the justices of this court (Re Executive Communication, 14 Fla. 818). It is settled law that the pardon of an offense not only blots out the crime committed, but removes all disabilities resulting from the conviction. "Imprisonment and hard labor are not the only punishments which the law inflicts upon those who violate its commands. Besides these are disabilities which are the consequences of conviction, and which remain after incarceration has ceased. A pardon is supposed to be granted to one who has been improperly convicted, or who has sufficiently expiated his offense. If it was only efficacious when the party was in duress, its effects would only be a half-way relief. The doctrine, now well recognized upon this subject, we believe, is that a pardon gives to the person in whose favor it is granted a new character and makes of him a new man. When extended to him in prison, it relieves him and removes his disabilities; when given to him after his term of imprisonment has expired, it removes all that is left of the consequences of conviction,—his disabilities." State v. Baptiste, 26 La. Ann. 131.

Under the section of the Revised Statutes referred to a conviction of the crime of larceny in the courts of this state disqualifies the convict as a witness, and there can be no question that a pardon in such a case would restore his competency in this respect. From the constrict the pardoning power of the executive is not within the scope of this note. It may be observed, however, that in many states the Constitution provides that the executive shall exercise the pardoning power subject to such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by law.

By U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5294, Congress authorized the remission of certain penalties by the Secretary of the Treasury. The constitutionality of this provision was attacked on the ground that it infringed on the President's pardoning power, but the section was held valid "in view of the practice in reference to remission by the Secretary of the Treasury and other officers which had been sanctioned by statute and acquiesced in for nearly a century." Pollock v. Bridgeport S. B. Co. ("The Laura"), 114 U. S. 411, 29 L. ed. 147, Affirming 8 Fed. Rep. 612.

While the special acts of Congress granting pardon or amnesty have not been brought into the courts for adjudication of their constitutionality, there is a declaration in favor of the power of Congress to pass acts of general amnesty made by the Supreme Court of the United States in Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591, 40 L. ed. 819, 5 Intern. Com. Rep. 369, where the court, in upholding the act of Congress exempting a witness from prosecution on account of any transaction to which he may testify before the Interstate Commerce Commission, says: "The act of Congress in question securing to witnesses immunity from prosecution is virtually an act of general amnesty, and belongs to a class of legislation which is not uncommon either in England (2 Taylor, Ev. § 1455, where a large number of similar acts are collated), or in this country. Although the Constitution vests in the President power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment, this power has never been held to take from Congress the power to pass acts of general amnesty."

The distinction between amnesty and pardon is said by the court in this case to be "of no practical importance," and the court quotes from the opinion in the case of Knote v. United States, 95 U. S. 34 L. R. A.

S. 149, 152, 21 L. ed. 442, 443, as follows: "The Constitution does not use the word 'amnesty;' and, except that the term is generally employed where pardon is extended to whole classes or communities, instead of individuals, the distinction between them is one rather of philological interest than of legal importance." But the opinion in the case of Brown v. Walker further proceeds to say: "Amnesty is defined by the lexicographers to be an act of the sovereign power granting oblivion, or a general pardon for a past offense, and is rarely, if ever, exercised in favor of single individuals, but is usually exerted in behalf of certain classes of persons, who are subject to trial, but have not yet been convicted."

III. Incidental or implied pardon.

It is perfectly plain that all the effect of a pardon or grant of amnesty before conviction, so far as the criminal is concerned, can be achieved by the legislature through the repeal of a statute creating the offense without any saving clause. The rule that all pending prosecutions fall, and all prior offenses not yet prosecuted are wiped out by such a repeal, is too well established to need discussion or citation of authorities. But there are some other cases in which statutes not so directly granting amnesty as the act of Congress upheld in Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591, 40 L. ed. 819, 5 Intern. Com. Rep. 369, have an incidental effect which has been alleged to be equivalent to a pardon. Thus, a statute providing for good-time credits to a convict was held as to all prior sentences to amount to an unconstitutional pardon in State, Johnston, v. McClellan, 87 Tenn. 52. (For good-time credits as affecting delinquency of sentence, see Howard v. United States (C. C. App. 8th C.) post., —, and note.

So, in People v. Cummings, 88 Mich. 249, 14 L. R. A. 235, a statute authorizing a parole or conditional release by the board of control of persons of a prisoner sentenced for an indefinite time, whereby he remains in the legal custody of the board, although outside of the prison and subject to be taken back on the order of the board if he violates clusions stated, it is evident that an attempt on the part of the legislature to exercise any part of the pardoning power exclusively conferred upon the board of pardons by § 12, article 4, of the Constitution, would be in conflict with that instrument, and therefore void.

The act relied on to qualify the witness, Bishop, provides for his restoration to "civil rights." There is, in a section in the suffrage and eligibility article of the Constitution, a provision that no person convicted of felony by a court of record shall be qualified to vote at any election unless restored to civil rights, and within the meaning of this provision it may be that the elective franchise is embraced within the civil rights contemplated. To accomplish the purpose for which the act of 1895 is invoked, it must have the effect to relieve Howard Bishop from the disability of not being able to testify as a witness attaching, under the law, to the conviction of the crime of larceny. This disability is as much a part of the pains and penalties of the violated law as incarceration, and after conviction it attaches as surely as any other part of the punishment. In our judgment the power to commute punishment and grant pardons for crimes after conviction has been conferred upon the governor, the secretary of state, comptroller, commissioner of agriculture, and attorney general, and it is not competent for the legislature to exercise such power. In this view it is not necessary to determine definitely whether the restoration to civil rights as provided in the act would include the restoration of competency to testify as a witness, lost by reason of the conviction of crime, as Bishop could not testify by virtue of the act unless it had such effect, and to so construe it would place it in antagonism to the Constitution. Bishop should not have been permitted to testify, and for the error in this respect the judgment must be reversed. In addition to the authorities cited, the following bear on the subject of pardons and its proper exercise: State v. Foley, 15 Nev. 64, 87 Am. Rep. 458; People v. Bowen, 48 Cal 439, 18 Am. Rep. 148; People, Forsyth, v. Monroe County Ct. of Sessions, 141 N. Y. 288, 23 L. R. A. 856; Haley v. Clark, 26 Ala. 439; State v. Fleming, 7 Humph. 152, 46 Am. Dec. 78; Ogletree v. Dozier, 59 Ga. 800; Halkin v. Scoggin, 15 Ark. 427; State v. Nichols, 20 Ark. 74, 7 Am. Rep. 600; Sterling v. Drake, 29 Ohio St. 457, 23 Am. Rep. 762; Atty. Gen., Taylor, v. Brown, 1 Wis. 518; People v. Moore, 62 Mich. 496; State v. McIntire, 1 Jones, L. 1, 59 Am. Dec. 566, and note.

The accused made an application for a change of venue, upon which affidavits pro and con, were filed. The application was denied. There was also a plea in abatement of the indictment, alleging certain defects in the organization of the grand jury that presented the indictment, and there were certain proceedings on this plea. We do not think there was reversible error in the rulings on the application for change of venue and plea in abatement.

the condition of his parole, or release, is held to violate a constitutional provision giving the pardoning power to the governor as well as the provision giving judicial power to the courts. (With the above case is a note as to suspension of sentence for good behavior, and as to conditional pardons.)

But, on the other hand, in State, Atty. Gen., v. Peters, 43 Ohio St. 629, a statute providing that the board of penitentiary managers may establish rules and regulations for the parole of prisoners is upheld as valid against the contention that it interferes with the executive power to reprieve or pardon.

So, a statute authorizing a court to suspend sentence is sustained in People, Forsyth, v. Monroe County Ct. of Sessions, 141 N. Y. 288, 23 L. R. A. 856. The court denies that this statute encroaches on the governor's power to reprieve and pardon, since it holds that this power to suspend sentence is a common-law power of the court, and totally distinct and different from the power to grant reprieves and pardons; but the court says there can be no doubt that if the amendment distributed any part of the pardoning power conferred upon the executive to some other department of the government, the legislation would be in conflict with the Constitution and invalid.

So, a statute giving an appellate court power to stay sentence of death or of fine, pending an appeal, is sustained in Parker v. State, 135 Ind. 634, 23 L. R. A. 856, and it is held that the governor's power to grant reprieves and pardons is not infringed thereby.

So, a statute providing a board of pardons to investigate the facts on a petition for pardon and report to the governor with recommendations, if the recommendations have no binding force upon him, is sustained in Rich v. Chamberlain, 104 Mich. 438, 21 L. R. A. 573. The basis of the decision is that the governor's power is in fact unrestricted by the act of the board, since he is entirely at liberty to disregard their recommendations.

34 L. R. A.

So, a statute which authorizes the suspension of certain penalties of a prohibitory liquor law in any town or city upon certain conditions, including the consent of a specified portion of the electors, is held valid, and the act is held not to constitute an infringement of the governor's pardoning power. State, Witter, v. Forkner (Iowa) 28 L. R. A. 212. The court says: "The power to pardon must not be confounded with the power of dispensation or suspension. The former is undoubtedly a prerogative of the executive, while the latter must be exercised by the legislative department of the government." Reference is also made to somewhat similar statutes which are said to have passed unchallenged for years, such, for instance, as that which provides for the discharge of a person convicted for intoxication and the remission of his fine upon giving information under oath as to the person from whom he obtained the intoxicating liquor, and the statutory provision as to the effect of marriage to bar an indictment for seduction, and the provisions for the bar of certain prosecutions upon a compromise.

But a statute to authorize county commissioners to change the sentence of a court from work on a chain gang to the hire of the convict to a private person for private work is held to infringe on the governor's exclusive power to commute sentences. Ogletree v. Dozier, 59 Ga. 800.

On the other hand, a Missouri case upholds a statute giving a justice power to commute a fine to imprisonment for a definite time on the ground that such an alternative punishment is wholly unlike a pardon. Ex parte Parker, 106 Mo. 551.

These cases, so far as they support legislation which has the effect to relieve from punishment, are based on distinctions between the powers actually exercised and the pardoning power, without at all deciding that the legislature can exercise the power to pardon.

B. A. R.

Under the laws of this state an accused is entitled to be tried by an impartial jury, and when it shall appear to the trial judge that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the county where the offense was committed, he should direct that the accused be tried in another county. Under our decisions this matter is left largely to the discretion of the trial court, and its ruling on such matters will not be disturbed unless it appear from the facts presented that the court acted unfairly and committed a palpable abuse of a sound discretion. We cannot anticipate what the evidence will be on another trial of the case, and do not consider the instructions of the court to the jury; but we direct attention to the general proposition stated in one of the instructions, that an aggressor in a personal difficulty can never be heard to acquit himself of liability for its consequences on the ground of self defense. Without considering now whether this portion of the charge, in the terms stated, contains a correct proposition of law under any state of circumstances, it may, so far as we can see, be omitted or modified in this case.

The judgment will be reversed and a new trial ordered.

KENTUCKY COURT OF APPEALS.

W. R. BELKNAP et al., Appts.,

v.

City of LOUISVILLE et al.

(.....Ky.....)

1. A special election upon the question of issuing municipal bonds cannot be held where the Constitution provides that not more than one election shall be held in each year, but such question must be submitted at a general election.
2. Two thirds of the voters voting at an election to be held for that purpose, whose assent is necessary to authorize municipal indebtedness, means two thirds of all the votes cast for any purpose at the election, where but one election can be held during the year, at which all questions to be submitted to the voters must be decided.
3. An ordinance providing for the submission to the voters of the question whether or not park bonds shall be issued, at a specified general election, and authorizing the issuance of the bonds "in the event that two thirds of those voting at said election shall vote in favor," requires a favorable vote of two thirds of all those voting at the general election.

(Landes, J., dissents from Proposition L.)

(June 12, 1893.)

APPEAL by plaintiffs from a judgment of the Chancery Court for Jefferson County in favor of defendants in an action to enjoin defendants from issuing bonds for park purposes. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Randolph H. Blain, for appellants:

The question upon the issue of park bonds could only be submitted or voted on at a general election.

Ky. Const. §§ 147, 148.

Where a question is required and can only be submitted and voted on at a general election, and is made to depend on a majority of the votes cast at such election, a majority of all the votes cast at the election is required, and not merely a majority of the votes cast on the particular question.

People, Wheaton, v. Wiant, 46 Ill. 263; People, Mitchell, v. Warfield, 20 Ill. 160; People, Davenport, v. Brown, 11 Ill. 478; Bayard v. Klings, 16 Minn. 249; Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 107; Everett v. Smith, 22 Minn. 53; Engart v. Hanover Twp. Trustees, 25 Ohio St. 618; State, Cope, v. Foraker, 48 Ohio St. 677, 6 L. R. A. 422; State, Jones, v. Lancaster County Comrs. 6 Neb. 474; People, Crowell, v. Lawrence, 36 Barb. 186; State v. Winkelmeier, 85 Mo. 108; South Bend v. Lewis, 188 Ind. 512.

In Armour Bros. Bkg. Co. v. Finney County Comrs. 41 Fed. Rep. 321, it is said: "The words 'a majority of all the votes cast' do not mean cast at a poll opened for the purpose of a general election, but cast for the purpose of such assessment, at a poll opened for that purpose."

Marion County Comrs. v. Winkley, 29 Kan. 36; State, Crooker, v. Echols, 41 Kan. 1; Cass County v. Johnston, 95 U. S. 369, 24 L. ed. 417; Walker v. Oswald, 68 Md. 146; Gillespie v. Palmer, 20 Wis. 544; Sanford v. Prentice, 23 Wis. 358.

Courts are steadfastly opposed to the presumption that a "majority of all the legal voters" is intended, because that would lead to an inquiry outside of the ballot box and require proof as to who is a legal voter, which is the first case.

Carroll County Supers. v. Smith, 111 U. S. 556, 28 L. ed. 517.

If the ballot shows that a minority has voted on a question submitted at a general election, it shows that it is a minority and not a majority of those voting. If the lawmaker intends to confine the evidence to those voting on the question, it should so express it in the act, otherwise the rule should control.

The debates in the constitutional convention, and the statutes of Kentucky on the subject, conclusively show that by the expression "two thirds of the voters voting at an election to be held for that purpose" was meant two thirds of all voting at a general election, and not simply two thirds of those voting on any particular question submitted.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes a sufficient majority to carry an election, see note to Lawrence v. Ingersoll 84 L. R. A.

gersoll (Tenn.) 6 L. R. A. 810; also People, Wells, v. Berkeley (Cal.) 23 L. R. A. 832.

Messrs. Humphrey & Davis, with Mr. H. S. Barker, for appellees:

In testing the validity of the election to be held for that purpose to determine whether these bonds should or should not be issued, the only question to be considered is whether the votes in favor of issuing the bonds were more than two thirds of those voting for that purpose, i. e., more than two thirds of those voting for and against the issue of the bonds.

When the Constitution comes to define what "elections" shall be held on the 1st Tuesday in November it carefully limits it to the election of "officers."

Fidelity Trust & S. F. Co. v. Morganfield, 96 Ky. 564.

The question whether bonds should be issued by the city of Louisville was a question which was not constitutionally to be submitted on the day in November at which the elections for officers were to be held, but could have been submitted to a vote of the people on any day and at any time that the legislature should fix.

No one would have pretended if this election had been fixed and held in August or September that the question submitted to the voters was to be decided otherwise than by adding up the total vote cast on this "question submitted to them" and seeing whether two thirds of those voting on the "question so submitted" were in favor of the issuing of the bonds.

Carroll County Supers. v. Smith, 111 U. S. 556, 28 L. ed. 517; McCrary, Elections, 8d ed. § 173.

The fact that the legislature or the city ordinance happened to fix, for the sake of economy, the same day on which elections were being held for other purposes or to elect candidates cannot in any manner change the principle or the result.

When a matter is submitted to the vote of the people the question of its passage or rejection is to be determined by the vote of those people who choose to express themselves upon that subject—for or against it; and is not to be determined by persons not voting upon it.

Gillespie v. Palmer, 90 Wis. 544; Thomp. Corp., § 728; Carroll County Supers. v. Smith, 111 U. S. 556, 28 L. ed. 520.

Where a question is to be settled by a vote of the majority or two thirds of the "voters voting at an election to be held for that purpose," it means that it is to be settled by the votes cast on the question submitted, and not by the votes cast in elections held for other purposes or upon other questions.

Armour Bros. Bkg. Co. v. Finney County Comrs. 41 Fed. Rep. 821; Walker v. Oswald, 68 Md. 155; St. Joseph Twp. v. Rogers, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 644, 21 L. ed. 328; Cass County v. Johnston, 95 U. S. 360, 24 L. ed. 416; State, Lara-see, v. Barnes, 8 N.D. 319; Metcalfe v. Seattle, 1 Wash. 802; Gillespie v. Palmer, supra; Marion County Comrs. v. Winkley, 29 Kan. 36; State, Durrheimer, v. Grace, 20 Or. 154; State, Crooker, v. Echols, 40 Kan. 1; Sanford v. Prentice, 28 Wis. 558; Holcomb v. Davis, 56 Ill. 418; Constitutional Prohibitory Amendment, 24 Kan. 791; Smith v. Procter, 180 N. Y. 819, 14 L. R. A. 403.

Neither parol evidence, nor registration lists, nor the records of the numbers of voters in previous elections, can be looked to, to show that the majority cast for a proposition—at a special election where it alone is voted for—is not the real majority in fact of the actual number of voters in the district.

Carroll County Supers. v. Smith, 111 U. S. 556, 28 L. ed. 517; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 685, 25 L. ed. 971; Bassett v. State, Renick, 37 Mo. 270; State v. Binder, 38 Mo. 450; Knox County v. Ninth Nat. Bank, 147 U. S. 99, 37 L. ed. 96; Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 277; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 779; McCrary, Elections, 3d ed. 173; First Parish in Sudbury v. Stearns, 21 Pick. 154; Vance v. Austell, 45 Ark. 406; Richardson v. McReynolds, 114 Mo. 641; Yeater v. Seattle, 1 Wash. 808.

Were the language of the Indiana Constitution like ours, the Indiana court would hold the way we contend for.

Lamb v. Cain, 129 Ind. 486, 14 L. R. A. 518; Rushville Gas Co. v. Rushville, 121 Ind. 209, 6 L. R. A. 815.

The law does not permit the absent or indifferent to neutralize the efforts of the public spirited and enterprising, but compels every one who would make his influence effective to attend the meeting and vote in the manner provided by law.

Smith v. Procter, 180 N. Y. 819, 14 L. R. A. 408.

As the Constitution does not derive its force from the convention which framed, but from the people who ratified it, the intent to be arrived at is that of the people; and it is not to be supposed that they have looked for any dark or abstruse meaning in the words employed, but rather that they have accepted them in the sense most obvious to the common understanding, and ratified the instrument in the belief that that was the sense designed to be conveyed.

Exchange Bank v. Hines, 8 Ohio St. 47; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 80, 81.

The proper construction of this clause had been thoroughly settled by the courts long before it was adopted into our new Constitution, and where a clause or language has received a construction by the courts of the states where it was formerly used, and it is then adopted by a convention or legislature of our state, it will be considered as adopted within the construction previously given.

Metropolitan R. Co. v. Moore, 121 U. S. 558, 30 L. ed. 1022; Coolam v. Doull, 133 U. S. 223, 33 L. ed. 597; Allen v. Ramsey, 1 Met. (Ky.) 637; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 66, note; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 530; McDonald v. Hovey, 110 U. S. 619, 28 L. ed. 269.

The phraseology of this section of the new Kentucky Constitution has often been construed before its adoption here.

Metcalfe v. Seattle, 1 Wash. 802; Walker v. Oswald, 68 Md. 155; Carroll County Supers. v. Smith, 111 U. S. 556, 28 L. ed. 517; Sanford v. Prentice, 28 Wis. 558; Knox County v. Ninth Nat. Bank, 147 U. S. 99, 37 L. ed. 96; Vance v. Austell, 45 Ark. 406; Richardson v. McReynolds, 114 Mo. 641; Yeater v. Seattle, 1 Wash. 808; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 679, 25 L. ed. 969; Cass County v. Johnston, 95 U. S. 369, 24 L. ed. 417; South Bend v. Lewis, 138 Ind. 512; McCrary, Elections, § 173; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 530; Franklin County Ct. v. Deposit Bank, 87 Ky. 882; People, Mitchell, v. Warfield, 20 Ill. 168; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Davidson County Ct. 1 Sneed, 692, 62 Am. Dec. 424; Bridgeport v. Housatonic R. Co. 15 Conn. 475; State, Bassett, v. Renick, 87 Mo. 270; St. Joseph Twp. v. Rogers, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 644, 21 L. ed. 328; Everett v. Smith, 22 Minn. 58; State v. Binder, 38 Mo. 450; People, Gaines, v. Garner, 47 Ill. 253.

Du Relle, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought for an injunction to restrain the city of Louisville from issuing $1,000,000 of bonds for park purposes. There were two grounds alleged for the injunction, the first and main ground urged being that at the election of November 6, 1894, the question of the issue of bonds was submitted to the voters of the city, and that the proposition to issue did not receive the assent of two thirds of the voters thereof, within the meaning of § 157 of the Constitution, and § 2854 of the Kentucky Statutes. It appears that at the election there were cast in the city of Louisville a total of 32,425 votes, and that on the question of the issue of park bonds there were cast only 9,204 votes, of which 6,483 were cast in favor of the issue, and 2,721 against it. Section 157 of the Constitution provides that "no county, city, town, taxing district, or other municipality, shall be authorized or permitted to become indebted in any manner, or for any purpose, to an amount exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for such year, without the assent of two thirds of the voters thereof, voting at an election to be held for that purpose; and any indebtedness contracted in violation of this section shall be void." It is contended for appellants that, the total number of votes cast at the election in favor of the bond issue being less than two thirds of the whole number cast at the election, the bond issue failed to carry, upon the ground that the section referred to requires that two thirds of the total vote cast at the election shall be cast in favor of the issue. Appellees contend that the words, "two thirds of the voters thereof voting at an election to be held for that purpose," restrict us to the consideration of the total number of votes cast for and against the question of issuing bonds, and that, therefore, more than two thirds of the votes of those voting "for that purpose" were cast in favor of the bond issue. In other words, appellees' contention is that, in the "election held for that purpose," only the votes cast for that purpose—for and against the bond issue—can be considered, and that no account can be taken of votes cast for other purposes, such as the election of officers, although cast on the same day.

Great stress was laid by appellees' counsel upon the argument that the legislature might have provided for the submission of the question of the bond issue at a special election, held on a different day from the regular annual election, and at which no other question or election was determined; and as at such special election only the votes cast upon the bond issue could be considered, though the vote might, and probably would, be much less than the vote cast at the regular annual election.

therefore "a question submitted to the voters" is not in any way dependent on or connected with an election of officers, although submitted on the same day and by means of the same ballots; and, as the Constitution left it to the legislature to determine whether the question should be submitted on the day of the general election or on some other day, the action of the legislature in fixing the submission for the same day as the general election did not commingle or make them interdependent. In support of this contention the case of Fidelity Trust & S. V. Co. v. Morganfield, 96 Ky. 564, is relied on. In that case it was held that the submission of an issue of bonds for municipal purposes might be upon a different day from that of the general election. After careful consideration by a full bench, a majority of the court are unable to adhere to the doctrine laid down in that opinion. Section 147 of the Constitution, requiring elections by the people to be by secret official ballot, provides that "the word 'elections' in this section includes the decision of questions submitted to the voters, as well as the choice of officers by them." Section 148 provides that "not more than one election in each year shall be held in this state or in any city, town, district, or county thereof, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution. All elections of state, county, city, town, or district officers shall be held on the 1st Tuesday after the 1st Monday in November." It is otherwise provided as to elections for school trustees by § 155, which excepts those elections from the provisions of §§ 145 to 154 inclusive, and as to elections for taking the sense of the people of a county, city, etc., as to whether liquors shall be sold therein, by § 61, which provides: "All elections on this question may be held on a day other than the regular election days." In this section the word "election" is used in the sense provided in § 147, and this provision indicates clearly that the word is used in § 148 to include questions submitted to the people, for otherwise there would be no need for the permission given by § 61. By § 152 vacancies in the general assembly may be filled at a special election. It seems clear that the provision of § 148, that not more than one election each year shall be held in this state, or in any city, town, district, or county thereof, except as otherwise provided in the Constitution, applies to questions submitted to the voters; and the only provision otherwise in the Constitution, in reference to such questions, is the one in regard to the submission of questions as to the sale of liquor. When it is considered that the manifest purpose of the framers of the Constitution, and of the people who ratified and gave it effect, was to put limitations upon the power of the local authorities in the matter of incurring debts which would result in oppressive taxation, and even to limit the power of the people themselves improvidently to authorize the assumption of such obligations, the wisdom of the restriction of such elections to the day of the general election is evident. Not only is a much larger vote usually brought out on the occasion of the general election, but the people at large are usually better informed of the matters upon which they are entitled to vote, by reason of the greater interest taken, and the fuller discussion of such matters.

We come now to the main question presented in this record. By § 157 of the Constitution it is provided: "No city . . . shall be authorized or permitted to become indebted, in any manner or for any purpose, to an amount exceeding, in any year, the income and revenue provided for such year, without the assent of two thirds of the voters thereof, voting at an election to be held for that purpose." The object of this provision was to limit the power of the local authorities and the people to burden themselves and their posterity with taxation, except upon full consideration, and by the assent of the people, given understandingly. In order to effect that object it was provided that no city should be authorized to become indebted in excess of the current year's revenue, without the assent of two thirds of the voters thereof, voting at an election to be held for that purpose. It was sought to protect the people from their own improvidence and that of their local officials, and such a construction must be given to the Constitution as will give effect to its manifest purpose. There could be but one election in the year except in the cases specially provided for. This question was to be submitted to the people at that election. It was one election, though held for several purposes, and was in no sense a collection of elections held on the same day. One of the purposes of the election was to determine this question, which, under authority of the Constitution, the statute, and the ordinance passed in accordance therewith, was to be submitted to the voters of the city. It was required that two thirds of the voters of the city voting at such election should give their assent to the bond issue. Assent implies action, and is not mere failure to dissent. At the election held for the purpose of electing various officers, and for the additional purpose of determining the question of the bond issue, there were cast 32,425 votes, and of all those voters, voting at the election held for those purposes, but 6,483, less than one fifth of the total number, gave their assent to the proposition to impose on the city of Louisville the burden of an additional debt of a million of dollars. The authorities which to a greater or less degree bear upon this question are numerous and conflicting. It may be conceded that, under a provision like the one under consideration, it is not necessary that two thirds of those entitled to vote should actually vote in favor of the proposition, and that, as was said by the supreme court of the United States in Carroll County Supers. v. Smith, 111 U. S. 565, 28 L. ed. 520, "the words 'qualified voters' as used in the Constitution, must be taken to mean, not those qualified and entitled to vote, but those qualified and actually voting. In that connection a voter is one who votes, not one who, although qualified to vote, does not vote." To the same effect are many authorities cited by appellees, and the reason of the rule is well stated in People, Wheaton, v. Wiant, 48 Ill. 263, as follows: "It was held, in People, Mitchell, v. Warfield, 20 Ill. 160, that to give this provision of the Constitution a practical operation we must presume that it was the intention of the framers of that instrument that the voters would all vote, and that the majority of those voting should determine the question. To give it a different construction would involve an inquiry whether there were other voters of the county who had, from any cause, abstained from voting; and this would lead to interminable inquiry, and invite contests in such elections which would be embarrassing and baneful, if it did not destroy all of the practical benefits of laws passed under these provisions of the Constitution."

But we are met with a very different question when the question is required to be submitted at a general election, is one of the purposes for which that election is held, and is required to receive the assent of two thirds of the voters of the city voting at that election. In such case the result depends on a majority of all the votes cast at the election being cast, for the proposition, and not merely a majority of the votes cast on the particular question. In the case of People, Wheaton, v. Wiant, 48 Ill. 263, the Constitution required that a majority of the voters should vote in favor of the removal of a county seat, and the court held, referring to the case in 20 Ill. 160: "In Warfield's Case there was no vote taken at that election, except upon the question of the removal of the county seat, and that vote was adopted as the means of ascertaining the number of legal voters of the county, and whether the majority was in favor of or against removal. In this case, however, there was, at the same time, an election held for circuit judge, which was a regular election. We therefore have, in this case, additional means of ascertaining the whole number of voters of the county. If the return of the various poll books of the county showed a larger number of votes cast for circuit judge or other officer than were cast for and against removal of the county seat, then that should be taken as the number of voters of the county; and it should appear that a majority of the voters at that election had cast their votes in favor of removal before the county seat could be changed. It is not the vote cast upon that single question that is to govern, where it occurs at any other election held at the same time; but it must appear that a majority of all the votes cast at that election were in favor of removal. When there is no other election held at that time, the returns of the officers of votes on that question will govern." So, in People, Davenport, v. Brown, 11 Ill. 478, a case of mandamus to compel township organization, under a constitutional provision that "the general assembly shall provide by a general law for a township organization . . . wherever a majority of the voters of such county, at any general election, shall so determine," the court said: "The language is clear and explicit, and admits of but one meaning. It does not mean a majority of those voting on the question to be submitted, but majority of all the legal voters in the county. In Everett v. Smith, 22 Minn. 53, the Constitution provided that the question should be 'submitted to the electors of the county or county to be affected thereby at the next general election after the passage thereof, and be adopted by a majority of such electors;' and it was held that the provision required a majority of the electors voting at the election, and not a majority of those voting on the question. So, in Ohio (Enyart v. Hanover Twp. Trustees, 25 Ohio St. 618), the legislature had authorized the levy of a tax with this proviso, that the levy should not be made "until a majority of the electors of said township at some regular election shall vote in favor of said levy," and it was held that a majority of all the votes cast at the regular election was required, and not a majority of those voting on the question. And in State, Cope, v. Foraker, 46 Ohio St. 877, 6 L. R. A. 422, a provision of the Constitution, that "if a majority of the electors voting at such election shall adopt such amendments, the same shall become a part of the Constitution," was held not to be complied with by a majority of the votes cast on the amendment. The Ohio Constitution had another provision requiring the adoption of amendments which had been agreed upon by conventions "by a majority of those voting thereon," and the court called attention to the difference in language, saying that, "if the framers had had the same intention in framing § 1 as in framing § 8, as to how the majority for the adoption of an amendment should be ascertained, they would have provided in that section, as in § 8, that it should be a majority of those voting thereon, instead of a majority of the electors voting at such election." This is directly in point in the consideration of the case at bar, for in § 256 of the Kentucky Constitution we find it provided that the passage of an amendment to the Constitution shall be determined by "a majority of the votes cast for and against an amendment," and in § 64 it is provided that no county shall be divided, etc., "unless the majority of all the legal voters of the county voting on the question shall vote for the same." So that, in two other sections of the instrument, the convention was at no loss for apt words with which to limit the decision to the determination of those only who should vote upon the question. In State, Jones, v. Lancaster County Comrs. 6 Neb. 474, the Constitution provided for a township organization "whenever a majority of the legal voters of such county, voting at any general election, shall so determine"; and it was held that, as the affirmative vote on the question submitted was less than a majority of those voting at the election, the proposition was defeated. In State v. Winkelmeier, 35 Mo. 103, authority was claimed under a legislative grant of power, "whenever a majority of the legal voters" authorized the same, and the majority of those voting on the question were in favor of the grant; but the court said: "It is evident that the vote of 5,000 out of 13,000 voters is not the vote of a majority." The case of Hogg v. Baker (Ky.) 81 S. W. 726, was under § 64 of the Constitution as to the removal of a county seat, which requires "two thirds of those voting" to decide. That case, however, was decided largely on the ground that the voters were misled, and nothing appears in the record of the case at bar to show that the voters of Louisville were misled, except as it may be argued inferentially from the language of the statute and the ordinance and the smallness of the vote cast upon the question.

Little weight can be given the argument drawn from the fact that at a general election candidates for various offices may be elected, notwithstanding other candidates for other offices may have received more than twice as many votes. The statute of elections provides the person receiving the highest number of votes for any office shall be declared elected to that office, and the election is decided by a plurality of votes. Moreover, it may well be considered that there is an essential difference between the action of electors in voting for a candidate for office, and in assenting to the creation of a municipal debt. The former is the exercise of a political privilege, the mere selection of a person to perform officially duties which have been annexed to a particular office; and it is fair to presume that those who do not participate in the election consent to be governed by those who do. But the latter is the authorization of a contract by which the people of the locality incur obligations, and bind their property to the payment of a debt; and it is natural to expect that the language used in relation to it will be different, that definite action will be required of a majority of the voters, and that it will be required that their assent thereto shall be expressed. And so we find it in the Constitution and the statute. If the submission were permitted to be, and were, in fact, submitted at an election at which no votes were cast except upon the proposition, it might very well be concluded that the words "two thirds of the voters of the city" meant two thirds of those who see fit to exercise their privilege, and that the ballot box is the only test to be applied. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Davidson County Ct. 1 Sneed, 637, 63 Am. Dec. 424. In this case the test of the ballot box shows that only one fifth of the voters who voted at the election gave their assent to the proposition.

There were many authorities cited on both sides of this question, but it would be unprofitable to review them in detail. A very interesting analysis of a large number of them is given in South Bend v. Lewis, 38 Ind. 512. It will be found that they have turned, in some cases, upon the settled policy of the Constitution which was under consideration, as in the case of Metcalfe v. Seattle, 1 Wash. 302, which at first blush appears to be directly in point against the conclusion reached by this court. In most of the cases, the court's conclusions were reached by considering, not only the language of the provision in question, but all other relevant sections of the instrument, as well as its general intent. These differ in the different cases, and it is not surprising that the courts have apparently differed in the weight which they have attached to the arguments drawn from them. Several of the cases cited have been doubted or qualified in subsequent cases. One of them (Gillespie v. Palmer, 20 Wis. 544), much relied on by counsel for appellees, has since been referred to by the chief justice of the Wisconsin court as one of a number of cases "which have long been a reproach to the court," as "judgments proceeding upon policy rather than upon principle." Bound v. Wisconsin C. R. Co. 45 Wis. 543. In all of the cases the object sought was the intent of the instrument.

In the case at bar not much consideration has been given to the debates of the convention, though the members who spoke appear to have given § 157 the same construction with this court; "for, as the Constitution does not derive its force from the convention which framed it, but from the people who ratified it, the intent to be arrived at is that of the people, and it is not to be supposed that they have looked for any dark or abstruse meaning in the words employed, but rather that they have accepted them in the sense most obvious to the common understanding, and ratified the instrument in the belief that that was the sense designed to be conveyed." Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. pp. 80, 81. "Its terms must be taken in the ordinary and common acceptation, because they are supposed to have been so understood by the framers and by the people who adopted it." State, Jones, v. Lancaster County Comrs. 6 Neb. 474. These considerations have led us to reject the construction contended for by appellees, of which it may be said, in the language of the Ohio court in State, Cope, v. Foraker, 46 Ohio St. 677, 6 L. R. A. 422: "But one of the most obvious objections to this construction is, that it requires to be demonstrated by such a labored process of occult reasoning upon the meaning of words and phrases, so different from the apparent meaning, as to warrant the belief that it never occurred, either to the framers of the Constitution, or to the people who adopted it." And in this case we cannot believe that any considerable number of the voters who read § 157 of the Constitution before voting for its adoption thought for a moment that that provision, upon its face restrictive of the power to create additional indebtedness, could be so construed as to authorize the creation of a $1,000,000 debt, upon the vote of some 6,000 out of thirty-odd thousand voters actually at the polls. We are not unmindful of the need for parks in a great city, and the benefits of a park system such as the one proposed and in part instituted in the city of Louisville, but the people who are to bear the burden must give their assent to the creation of the debt to be incurred for the purpose.

There is another ground upon which this conclusion might be rested. The constitutional provision is restrictive. It forbids the creation of the debt unless upon the assent of two thirds of the voters, etc. Had § 157 provided, as in § 64, that it should not be authorized unless two thirds of the voters of the city "voting on the question shall vote for the same," that would not have required the legislature to authorize the submission of the question, nor the city authorities to submit it. So, as the right to submit might have been denied altogether, it might be given with additional restrictions, as the requirement of a three-fourths vote; and when the city council, by ordinance, provided for the submission to the vote of the people, it might have imposed an increased restriction. So that, if we were of opinion that the Constitution required only two thirds of those voting on the question, we must still look to the act and the ordinance to find if they, or either of them, require any additional prerequisite to the bond issue. The statute is as follows: "Sec. 2854. For the purpose of raising money for the purchase or improvement of lands for park property, the general council of a city may, by ordinances, submit to the qualified voters of the city the question as to whether the city shall issue bonds, with interest coupons attached, to the amount and of the character set forth in such ordinances; and when such ordinance is passed, it shall, at the next November election, be submitted to the qualified voters of the city; and if it receives assent of two thirds of those voting, the bonds so voted shall be issued by the city, and delivered to the board of park commissioners." This requires the proposition to be submitted at the November election to the qualified voters of the city, "and if it receives assent of two thirds of those voting, the bond so voted shall be issued," etc. What is meant by those voting? Clearly, those voting at the November election. The ordinance is still more explicit. It provides: "Sec. 5. At the November election of 1894, there shall be submitted to the qualified voters of the city of Louisville, the question as to whether the city shall issue said bonds, and the said bonds shall not be issued unless, at said election, two thirds of those voting shall vote in favor of the issuing of said bonds as herein provided. In the event that two thirds of those voting at said election shall vote in favor of issuing said bonds, then the fact that they have done so shall be certified to by the mayor, upon said bonds, and the said bonds shall then, but only in that event, be issued by the city, and delivered by the mayor to the board of park commissioners of the city of Louisville, to be by the said board of park commissioners used and disposed of for the improvement of lands for park property as provided by law." This requires the submission at the November election of 1894, and provides that the bonds shall not be issued "unless at said election [i. e. the November, 1894, election] two thirds of those voting shall vote in favor of issuing said bonds. . . . In the event that two thirds of those voting at said election [the November election] shall vote in favor of issuing," etc. It is obvious that both the statute and the ordinance require the favorable vote of two thirds of those voting at the general election.

Landes, J., dissents from that part of this opinion which holds that questions submitted to the people must be submitted at the regular election, being of opinion that the provision in § 157, requiring the assent of two thirds of the voters "voting at an election to be held for that purpose," requires that there shall be a special election held "for that purpose," and that such special election cannot be held on the regular election day, the words quoted being a mandatory provision otherwise within the meaning of § 148. Landes, J., concurs, however, in the other principles stated in the opinion.

The other questions raised in the record need not be considered. For the reasons given, the judgment is reversed, with directions to sustain the demurrer to the first paragraph of the answer, and for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

CALIFORNIA SUPREME COURT (Department 1).

John MULLAN, Appt.,
v.
STATE of California, Respt.

(.....Cal.....)

1. The courts are charged with knowledge, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1875, of whatever is established by law, and of all public as well as private acts of the legislative, executive, and judicial departments of the state.
2. A mere concurrent resolution of the legislature to which the executive approval is not affixed, as in case of a statute, although it is passed upon the governor's recommendation to ratify his appointment of an agent for the state, and expressly directs him to allow a certain compensation, is not an "express authority of law" which can authorize a contract which will be the basis for a claim against the state, under Const. art. 4, § 32, requiring "express authority of law" therefor, and § 15 of the same article providing that "no law shall be passed except by bill."
3. A state is not estopped from denying the validity of a contract made without authority, because the contractor has in good faith performed services under it, since he must at his peril know the authority of those who seem to act for the state.

(October 24, 1896.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Superior Court for the City and County of San Francisco in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover compensation for services rendered to the state. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Reddy, Campbell, & Metson, for appellant:

It is not the office of a demurrer to state facts but to raise an issue of law upon the facts stated in the pleadings demurred to.

Cook v. De la Guerra, 24 Cal. 287; Wise v. Williams, 72 Cal. 544; Harmon v. Page, 62 Cal. 448; Cameron v. San Francisco, 68 Cal. 891.

The words "authority of law" have a broader meaning than that of a valid statute law enacted in the manner prescribed in the Constitution for the passage and approval of a bill.

Miller v. Dunn, 72 Cal. 462; Lycoming F. Ins. Co. v. Wright, 60 Vt. 515.

The sovereignty of a state gives it inherent powers to contract.

Piqua Branch of State Bank v. Knoop, 57 U. S. 16 How. 375, 14 L. ed. 979.

The legislature cannot create law otherwise than by a formal bill passed and approved by the executive.

Brooks v. Fischer, 79 Cal. 173, 4 L. R. A. 429.

The state is now estopped from denying the validity of the contract made with plaintiff.

Davis v. Gray, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 203, 21 L. ed. 447; Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5, 26 L. ed. 302; Indiana v. Milk, 11 Fed. Rep. 309; Piqua Branch of State Bank v. Knoop, supra.

Messrs. W. F. Fitzgerald, Attorney General, and W. H. Anderson, for respondent:
The alleged contract of employment was in each instance made without express authority of law, and was and is void.

The governor had no authority to make this employment.

People v. Talmage, 6 Cal. 256; San Francisco & F. Land Co. v. Banbury, 106 Cal. 130.

A joint resolution does not meet the constitutional requirements of express law.

People v. Toal, 85 Cal. 383; Collier & C. Lithographing Co. v. Henderson, 18 Colo. 259.

The questions involved in this case can be raised by demurrer.

San Francisco & F. Land Co. v. Banbury, 106 Cal. 129; Branham v. San José, 24 Cal. 604; People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 188; Whiting v. Townsend, 87 Cal. 515; Faekler v. Wright, 86 Cal. 210; Cole v. Segraves, 88 Cal. 105; DeBaker v. Southern California R. Co. 106 Cal. 257.

The state is not estopped.

Martin v. Zellerbach, 88 Cal. 300, 99 Am. Dec. 365.

Van Fleet, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Appeal from the judgment entered upon failure to amend after demurrer sustained to the complaint. The complaint is in two counts. The first count alleges the following facts: That between the 12th day of December, 1878, and the 1st day of May, 1891, the plaintiff rendered services to the defendant, at its special instance and request, as the agent of said state, in acting in its behalf in the matter of recovering certain moneys paid by the state to the United States under the provisions of a certain act of Congress approved August 5, 1861, entitled "An Act to Provide Increased Revenue from Imports to Pay Interest upon the Public Debt, and for Other Purposes;" that the defendant promised to pay plaintiff therefor 20 per cent of all such moneys collected by him from the United States; that thereafter plaintiff collected from the United States, as such agent, and caused to be paid to said state, the sum of $216,357.87; that no part of said 20 per cent of said sum has been paid to plaintiff; and that said plaintiff has presented his claim for the sum due him to the state board of examiners, as provided by law, and said board has refused to allow said claim, either in whole or in part. The second count is upon a similar cause of action for a smaller amount. The demurrer was sustained upon the ground that the alleged employment of plaintiff was unauthorized and void, and created no valid obligation against the state. It is suggested by appellant in limine that this objection does not arise on demurrer; that the allegation that plaintiff was employed by the state as its agent is one of fact, and is admitted by the demurrer; that, if such employment was not legal because made in a manner not binding upon the state, that NOTE.—As to resolution as distinguished from statute, see also State, Cranmer, v. Thorson (S. D.) 33 L. R. A. 582; State, Wineman, v. Dahl (N. D.) ante 97.

34 L. R. A.

For resolution distinguished from ordinance, see Crawfordville v. Braden (Ind.) 14 L. R. A. 268; Shaub v. Lancaster (Pa.) 21 L. R. A. 661.

question can only be raised by answer and disclosed by evidence, but does not appear upon the face of the complaint. But the court will take cognizance of the fact that there could be no valid employment of plaintiff by the state for the purpose alleged without authorization by the lawmaking power; and, as we are further charged with knowledge of whatever is established by law, and of all public as well as private acts of the legislative, executive, and judicial departments of the state (Code Civ. Proc. § 1875, subds. 2, 3), the complaint must be regarded as laying before us whatever of authority there may exist in the law for plaintiff's employment, to the same extent as if such authority were expressly alleged. Whiting v. Townsend, 57 Cal. 515; Fackler v. Wright, 86 Cal. 210; Cole v. Seagraves, 88 Cal. 105.

Proceeding, then, to inquire as to the authority under which plaintiff assumed to act in the premises, we find that the only thing relied upon as tending to establish any special legislative authorization for the alleged employment is based upon these facts: In his biennial message to the legislature at its twenty-fifth session the governor made a statement that he had received information with reference to proceedings before Congress looking to the reimbursement of this state for certain expenditures made by it in suppressing Indian hostilities during the Modoc war, and in repelling prior Indian invasions and hostilities, and also of certain sums assessed against this state under the act of Congress approved August 5, 1861, to pay the interest on the public debt, and for other purposes, and wherein it is stated that he had appointed Capt. John Mullan to represent this state in said matters before the authorities at Washington, and recommends to the legislature "that these appointments be ratified and confirmed by you, and that you provide for his compensation to be paid out of the sums he may recover for the state, contingent, however, upon his success, it having been expressly understood that such compensation should be left entirely to your judgment and discretion." (Volume 1. Appendix to Journal of Senate and Assembly, 25th Sess. pp. 22, 23.) Acting upon this recommendation of the governor, the legislature, on March 3, 1863, adopted the following resolution:

Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 20, relative to directing the governor to fix the compensation for services rendered by Captain John Mullan in collections of claims due the state from the United States.

Whereas, the governor and state surveyor general of this state have heretofore appointed Captain John Mullan, of San Francisco, California, agent and attorney, to represent the interests of the state of California before the authorities of the United States at Washington, D. C., in the matter of the claim of this state to the 5 per cent net proceeds of the sales of the public lands by the United States in this state; and also in the matter of the direct tax levied upon this state by the United States, under the act of Congress of August 6, 1861; and also of her claim arising during the Modoc war in 1872; and also under the provisions of the act of Congress of June 27, 1862; therefore, be it resolved by the assembly of California, the Senate concurring, that the appointments so conferred upon Captain John Mullan by the governor and surveyor general, respectively, are hereby ratified and confirmed, and the governor of this state be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to fix the compensation for the services by Captain John Mullan heretofore, and that may be by him hereafter rendered, at 20 per cent of each of the sums or claims that may be by him collected from the United States, and to pay to him such per cent out of the moneys that may be collected by him and paid to this state on account of each of the foregoing matters respectively; provided, however, that the state shall not in any event become liable for any expenses, fees, and salaries of any nature whatever other than such contingent commission.

34 L. R. A.

The resolution further provides for the turning over to Captain Mullan of all papers and vouchers with reference to the claims involved, and the taking of his receipt therefor. The references in the resolution to the appointment of Mullan by the surveyor general to represent the state in its claim to the 5 per cent proceeds on sales of lands is not here involved.

It is contended by the attorney general, and we think correctly, that these proceedings did not constitute any competent basis for the contract alleged within the provisions of the Constitution of this state. Section 32 of article 4 of our Constitution, so far as pertinent to the question involved, provides: "The legislature shall have no power . . . to pay or to authorize the payment of any claim hereafter created against the state . . . under any agreement or contract made without express authority of law; and all such unauthorized agreements or contracts shall be null and void." And § 15 of the same article provides that "no law shall be passed except by bill." That the action of the governor and legislature did not constitute the enactment of a "law" within the purview of the Constitution is quite obvious. It is, in fact, not contended that the resolution is to be regarded as a "bill" within the meaning of the Constitution, but it is urged that the words "express authority of law," as there used, have a broader signification than that of a valid statute law enacted with all the formalities requisite in the case of a bill, and that it was competent for the legislature to ratify the act of the governor in assuming to appoint the plaintiff by a resolution such as the one here quoted, and that such action constitutes "express authority of law." But we are unable to coincide in this view. The language of the Constitution is in itself a complete answer to the proposition. It provides in express terms that there shall be but one mode of enacting a "law" thereunder, and that mode is the exclusive measure of the power of the legislature in that regard. A mere resolution, therefore, is not a competent method of expressing the legislative will, where that expression is to have the force of law, and bind others than the members of the house or houses adopting it. The fact that it may have been intended to subserve such purpose can make no difference. The requirements of the Constitution are not met by that method of legislation. "Nothing becomes law simply and solely because men who possess the legislative power will that it shall be, unless they express their determination to that effect, in the mode pointed out by the instrument which invests them with the power, and under all the forms which that instrument has rendered essential." Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 155, chap. 6. It is true, as contended, that legislation for certain limited purposes by means of resolutions or legislative orders is in use to some extent in certain of the states and in Congress. But it will be found that in most, if not all, instances, it is under a Constitution which either expressly recognizes it, as does the Constitution of the United States, or one which at least does not forbid it. And it will be usually found to take the form of a resolution, requiring the assent of the executive to give it effect. In Congress this form of legislation is regarded as a bill, and treated with the same formalities. Even if this mode of legislation were competent under our Constitution, the resolution relied upon would not arise to the dignity of law, since it lacks the essential of executive approval. In Collier & C. Lithographing Co. v. Henderson, 18 Colo. 259, under a Constitution containing restrictions similar to those found in that of California, it was held that a resolution adopted by both houses of the legislature for a purpose not dissimilar in principle from that intended to be subverted by the one under consideration was not "a law of the state," as it "was not passed by bill." And see People v. Toal, 85 Cal. 333.

The case of Miller v. Dunn, 73 Cal. 462, is cited by appellant as authority for the proposition that the language "express authority of law" is not confined in its meaning to a statute law enacted in the manner prescribed in the Constitution. But in that case the statute under which the contract was made and the service performed had in fact been passed with all the formalities requisite under the Constitution to a valid law, and it was held that such an act, although unconstitutional, was nevertheless a "law" in the sense that it would support an appropriation to pay for the work done under color of its apparent grant of authority, and before its invalidity had been declared by the courts. In this case the legislature did not pretend to follow the formal requirements of the Constitution in its attempt to grant authority for the contract, and its action lent no color of regularity to plaintiff's employment. Moreover, we are not disposed to extend the doctrine announced in Miller v. Dunn. The case of Brooks v. Fischer, 79 Cal. 173, 4 L. R. A. 420, merely holds that under § 8 of art. 11 of the Constitution, a city charter adopted by the freeholders of a municipality may be approved by a concurrent resolution of the two houses of the legislature, without the consent of the executive, because that provision only requires the assent of the "legislature," and does not contemplate the passing of an act for the purposes of such approval; it being expressly held "that the legislature is one thing and the law-making power of the state another." It is not authority for the proposition that the legislature can enact "laws" without submitting them to the governor for his consent.

84 L. R. A.

There is no merit in the claim that the employment of plaintiff was authorized by § 380, subd. 5, of the Political Code, which, in defining the powers of the governor, provides that "whenever any suit or legal proceeding is pending against this state, or which may affect the title of this state to property, or which may result in any claim against the state, he may direct the attorney general to appear on behalf of the state, and may employ such additional counsel as he may judge expedient." That provision has no application to the facts of this case. The action of the governor was not attempted to be taken under that section, nor is the action brought upon any such theory. The complaint does not aver that plaintiff was employed as counsel, or even that he was an attorney at law, and so eligible for the character of employment there provided for. He was employed as a mere agent. While an attorney might be employed as agent, one not an attorney could not be employed for the service contemplated in that section. Nor is there anything in the point that the state is now estopped from denying the validity of the contract with plaintiff, since he has in good faith performed the service. The question of equity or good faith cannot affect our consideration in this case. It is not like a transaction between private individuals. As suggested in Miller v. Dunn, supra: "There is no moral obligation on the part of the state which can be enforced upon equitable principles, nor does the good faith of the party dealing with the state cut any figure in the case, if, in fact, the work was done 'without express authority of law,' for this provision was placed in the Constitution to cut off all claims based upon mere good faith and equity." And says Mr. Bishop: "The government is never estopped, as an individual or private corporation may be, on the ground that the agent is acting under an apparent authority which is not real; the conclusive presumption that his powers are known rendering such a consequence impossible. So that the government is bound only when there is an actual authorization." Bishop, Cont. § 993. One dealing with public officers is charged with the knowledge of, and is bound at his peril to ascertain, the extent of their powers to bind the state for which they seem to act. And, if they exceed their authority, the state is not bound thereby to any extent. Throop, Pub. Off. § 551. See also State v. Horton, 21 Nev. 466.

We think the demurrer was properly sustained, and the judgment is affirmed.

We concur: Harrison, J.; Garoutte, J.

(In Banc.)

H. W. PHILBROOK, Admr., etc., of John Levinson, Deceased, Appt.,

v.

William J. NEWMAN et al., Respds.

(.....Cal.....)

1. The basis for fixing the purchase price of a deceased partner's interest is fixed by articles of partnership at the inventory and appraisement provided for therein to be taken annually as the basis of estimating profits, where the articles further provide that in the event of the death of one partner "the inventory provided for herein shall be taken as expeditiously as possible," allowing a representative of the estate to participate in the business until all is settled, and providing that the amount ascertained to be due the estate shall be paid in twelve equal monthly instalments, but giving the surviving partners an option to continue the partnership with the estate of the decedent as a member. [Court equally divided on this point.]

2. A contract is not void as allowing surviving partners to fix their own purchase price of the interest of a deceased partner when it permits a representative of his estate to participate in the inventory, fixes a definite amount for the value of store and office fixtures, and provides that the merchandise shall be taken at its actual value, not exceeding the original cost, and solvent debts taken at their face value.

3. The goodwill of the business passes to surviving partners upon their purchase of the interest of the deceased at its inventoried and appraised value, under a provision of articles of association giving them and their successors the right and privilege of continuing the business under the firm name.

4. Legatees of full age, who demand and compel a distribution to them of the proceeds of a sale by an executor of the interest of a deceased partner, although protesting at the same time that they do not admit that this is all that is due, thereby ratify the sale, and cannot afterwards deny the executor's power to make it, or claim anything additional on account of the goodwill of the business for which nothing was received. [Per Beatty, Ch. J., Henshaw and Temple, JJ.]

(November 4, 1896.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from an order of the Superior Court for the City and County of San Francisco in favor of defendants in a proceeding brought to compel an accounting of the affairs of the partnership of which plaintiff's testator was a member. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

Mr. H. W. Philbrook for appellant.
Messrs. Reinstein & Eisner and E. R. Taylor for respondents.

Garoutte, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

William J. Newman, Benjamin Newman, and the deceased, John Levinson, were partners in the merchandise business, and held interests therein in proportion to the amount of capital invested by each. The last articles of copartnership between these parties were entered into January 24, 1889; and, among other things, they provided in detail the manner in which an inventory and appraisement of the partnership business should be taken annually, which inventory and appraisement should form the basis in estimating the net profit going to each partner. The articles further provided as follows: "In the event of the death of one of the copartners the inventory provided for herein shall be taken as expeditiously as possible, and without unnecessary delay. The surviving partners, if requested so to do, shall admit to the place of business of the firm at least one person selected, designated, and empowered by the heirs or legal representatives of the deceased partner to represent the interest of his estate in the copartnership. Such person so representing the interests of the estate of the deceased partner shall have accorded to him access to all the books, papers, and accounts of the firm, and may, at his election, remain and continue at the place of business thereof until all matters relating to the interests of the deceased partner shall have been fairly and satisfactorily arranged and settled and adjusted, and the total amount due to the estate of the deceased partner shall have been ascertained and determined. The total amount ascertained and determined to be due the estate of the deceased partner on account of his interest in the copartnership shall be paid to the heirs or legal representatives of the deceased partner in twelve successive and equal monthly instalments, commencing within one month from the time the amount due has been ascertained and determined; for the amount of which instalments the surviving partners shall execute and deliver to such heirs or legal representatives their promissory notes, payable as aforesaid, without interest, and satisfactorily secured by indorsement or otherwise; provided, however, that the surviving partners shall have the option to continue the said copartnership; the estate of the deceased partner taking the place of the decedent on such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon between the surviving partners and the legal representatives of the deceased partner, but it shall not be obligatory upon the surviving partners so to do. The surviving partners and their successors shall also have the right and privilege of continuing the business under the said designation and name of Newman & Levinson."

Levinson died February 25, 1890, and forthwith the Newmans made an inventory and appraisement of the partnership business, as provided by the articles of partnership, by which inventory and appraisement it was determined that the net amount of Levinson's

NOTE.—As to the rights of surviving partners to carry on business, see also Stewart v. Robinson (N. Y.) 5 L. R. A. 410, and note; Valentine v. Wysox (Ind.) 7 L. R. A. 788, and note.

As to transfers of goodwill, including the name of the establishment, see Vonderbank v. Schmitt (La.) 15 L. R. A. 462, and note.

24 L. R. A.

As to goodwill of partnership, see Brass & L. Works Co. v. Payne (Ohio) 19 L. R. A. 82, and Knoedler v. Glaszner (C. C. App. 2d Cir.) 20 L. R. A. 728.

interest in the assets of the firm was the sum of $30,790.88. For this amount defendants prepared, and procured to be properly indorsed, their notes, twelve in number, for the sum of $1,782.57 each, bearing date February 26, 1890, payable at successive monthly intervals following that date, and within one month after Levinson's death tendered them to Raveley, the executor of the will of said deceased, who had then received letters testamentary from the superior court. In July, 1890, the Newmans filed a petition in the court, alleging that they were ready and willing to purchase the interest of the deceased in the partnership upon the terms stated in the articles, and had requested the executor to allow them to do so; that he had refused; and praying an order directing him to convey that interest to them. The court sustained a demurrer to such petition, on the ground that it had no jurisdiction to grant the order prayed for. Thereafter, on September 6, 1890, Raveley, the executor, being of the opinion that he had the power to accept the terms proposed by the Newmans, received the said notes, and on that day executed to them two certain papers, the first of which acknowledged the delivery of the notes "in pursuance of the provisions of the articles of partnership . . . for the interest of the estate of said Levinson in said partnership." The other paper set out the transaction more in detail, and stated that the amount of such notes was the amount of Levinson's interest in the assets of the firm, as determined by the said inventory and appraisement, and that the notes were received by the executor "in full payment and satisfaction of the amount due the estate of John Levinson, deceased, for the interest of said deceased and of his said estate in the copartnership firm as the same has been ascertained, as above stated." Levinson's residuary legatees were his mother and two sisters, all of full age. They, in writing, notified the Newmans on March 5, 1890, that they did not desire to employ any person to assist in taking the inventory of the assets of the late firm, then in progress, and the estate of the deceased had no representative in that undertaking, though the executor was often about the place of business, and both he and the legatees knew what was being done. No account of the goodwill of the firm was taken in the inventory made by the defendants, nor was it in the inventory and appraisement of the estate returned to the court by the executor. In the inventory and appraisement returned by the executor the value of the interest of Levinson in the partnership assets was stated at the same sum as that fixed by the appraisement of the defendants, to wit, $30,790.88, and was adopted by the appraisers on the strength of that appraisement. The omission to value the goodwill as part of the estate by the executor was resented by the legatees, and on this ground they petitioned the court to remove Raveley from his office of executor. He thereupon resigned; his accounts were settled; successive administrators with the will annexed carried on the administration, until finally H. W. Philbrook was appointed, and he has been substituted as 84 L. R. A.

plaintiff of record herein. This action is essentially one in equity, sounding largely in fraud, and asking for an accounting of the partnership affairs. The case has been before us in the past upon an appeal from the judgment (107 Cal. 602), where may be found an outline of the purposes of the action and the general framework of the pleadings.

Fraud is charged in the body of plaintiff's bill, and upon that ground relief in a great measure is sought. But in the opinion of the trial judge Hon. W. T. Wallace, which opinion is set forth in the record, it is stated that there is no evidence whatever to support such a charge. And, after a careful examination of the evidence, we find nothing therein even tending to show the practice of any fraud upon the heirs and legatees of the dead partner. It follows that all question of fraud is out of the case, and the only important question remaining is: Had the executor, under the articles of copartnership, the right to consummate the transfer of the deceased partner's interest in the business to the surviving partners for the consideration specified in said articles? Although this interrogatory presents a clear-cut proposition of law, still it is well to say that, if this transfer of the partnership interest should be set aside, as is here sought by appellant, and all parties be placed in statu quo, as of the day the transaction was had, no substantial results favorable to appellant's interests would ensue. It would be a valueless victory, for, as said by the trial judge, upon an accounting the sum realized by the legatees would fall far short of the amount actually paid by the surviving partners to them. In appellant's brief the law is conceded to be: "Where the copartners in the partnership contract—articles of partnership—do actually contract that on the death of a partner the partnership property and business belongs to the survivor or survivors, fixing the price at which it is to be taken by the survivor or survivors, such contract is binding according to its terms." Upon such concession we are brought face to face with the articles of copartnership for the purpose of weighing and testing them by the formula furnished by appellant; and at the threshold of the investigation we are met by the objection that, at the date when those articles were entered into, the deceased partner, Levinson, was incapable, by reason of mental incapacity, of entering into any contract whatever. The mental incapacity of Levinson at the time was not even suggested in plaintiff's bill, and his mental status does not appear to be an element of the case that attracted serious attention at the trial. But some evidence came before the court upon the question without objection, which, even in the absence of direct issues raised by the pleadings, should be considered as bearing upon the question. Crowley v. City R. Co. 60 Cal. 628. There are various good reasons why this evidence should not be held sufficient to invalidate the articles of copartnership, and as an all-sufficient reason we suggest that the implied finding of the court was against any such contention. Appellant's principal witness to the point testified that, if Levinson had read the articles of copartnership, he would have understood them, and there is no evidence in the record that he did not read them. As a salient circumstance bearing upon Levinson's mental capacity at that particular time, it may be noticed that some few days thereafter he executed his last will and testament, the will under which this administrator is now acting in prosecuting this litigation. It further appears that, upon his return from Europe after the execution of these articles, for several months, and up to the time of his death, he gave his personal attention to the business of the firm, as he had always done in the past. We are satisfied there is nothing in the point.

We have quoted in detail that portion of the partnership contract which declares what shall be done with the business in case of the death of one of the partners. In this respect the provision of the contract is not well drawn. It is not clear, but, upon the contrary, somewhat vague and indefinite. At the same time, when carefully read and considered, but one conclusion can be arrived at; and that is that, upon the death of one of the partners, the surviving members of the firm had at least the privilege and option of buying the interest of the deceased partner in the business upon certain terms. It is claimed upon the part of the Newmans that under the contract they were bound to do so. But to support the validity of the contract in this regard they are not compelled to go to such length; for, if they had an option by the articles of copartnership to purchase upon stated terms, then they had the undoubted right to exercise that option, and take the interest of the deceased partner, if they were so disposed. Harbster's Appeal, 126 Pa. 3. In that case it is said: "It requires no argument to show that the interest of the deceased partner ended when the firm gave notice that they would take it in accordance with the terms of the agreement." And in the case at bar, if the Newmans simply held an option to purchase the interest, there can be no question but that they exercised that option in favor of purchasing. If it should be held that the copartnership articles did not give the surviving partners a right to purchase, then the presence of all that portion of the contract providing for the mode and manner of payment by the Newmans for the deceased partner's interest would be inexplicable. It is provided in great detail that they should give their equal monthly instalment notes, running over a period of twelve months, in payment of the interest of the deceased partner. Such provision beyond question contemplated a sale, and that a sale to the surviving partners in case of the death of one of the firm was in the minds of all parties when the contract was made, does not admit of doubt. There can be no other reasonable construction of the contract.

It is insisted that the language here used provides no fixed and definite amount of money to be paid by the surviving partner for the interest of the deceased partner, and it is claimed that for such reason there is no contract, at least no contract sufficiently clear and explicit to be capable of enforcement. There is no case cited by appellant that goes to the length here insisted upon. But, upon the contrary, that is certain which may be made certain, and many of the cases bearing upon this question rest upon this principle. Numberless cases might be cited where courts have recognized the right of the partners to stipulate in the copartnership articles that the purchase price for the interest of a deceased partner shall be fixed by an inventory and appraisement to be taken after the death of such partner. In the very nature of things, a fair purchase price of an interest in the firm at an indefinite future time would be incapable of ascertainment. To fix the amount in advance would be simply a speculative gamble upon the part of all parties concerned, and hardly justifiable either in morals or law.

It is further contended that there is no mode whatever provided in the articles by which to ascertain the value of the interest of the deceased partner; and it may well be conceded that the provisions of the contract in this regard are not what they should be. In this particular the instrument is unhappily drawn, and well serves the purpose of being an invitation for litigation. As we have already seen, the articles provide for an annual inventory and appraisement, in order that the actual financial status of the concern may be determined. This inventory and appraisement was provided for in order that the annual profit or loss of each partner might be known. A succeeding subdivision of the contract, which we have heretofore quoted in full, then in part declares: "In the event of the death of one of the copartners, the inventory provided for herein shall be taken as expeditiously as possible, and without unnecessary delay. The surviving partners, if requested so to do, shall admit to the place of business of the firm at least one person selected . . . by the heirs or legal representatives of the deceased partner, to represent the interest of his estate in the copartnership, . . . and may at his election remain and continue at the place of business thereof until all matters relating to the interest of the deceased partner and his estate shall have been fairly and satisfactorily arranged and settled and adjusted, and the total amount due to the estate of the deceased partner shall have been so determined. The total amount ascertained and determined to be due the estate of the deceased partner on account of his interest in the copartnership shall be paid to the heirs or legal representatives of the deceased partner in twelve successive and equal monthly instalments." If the language of the contract had included the words "and appraisement" after the word "inventory," there would have been no question of indefiniteness, and no possible technical objection as to the matter of construction. But the absence of those two words should not nullify the contract. It would be carrying the doctrine of technicality too far, if we should so hold. The true intent of the parties is plainly apparent from the language used. And that intent was that an inventory and appraisement, as provided for in the articles, should furnish the basis for fixing the purchase price of the deceased partner's interest. Such is the fair construction of the language, taking it altogether, and, indeed, the only construction which can be given it. To say that the parties to the contract, while providing for a sale, and also providing for the manner and time for payment, never intended to provide as to the amount which should be paid, or to fix any mode by which the amount could be determined, would be going to lengths entirely unauthorized by the instrument itself. We hold that the mode and manner of fixing the amount of the purchase price are found within the language of the instrument itself, and that mode and manner is the inventory and appraisement provided for in a previous portion of the contract.

Conceding that the inventory and appraisement mentioned in the articles of copartnership were intended by the partners to be used as the basis for fixing the value of a deceased partner's interest, then appellant contends that the contract was void as placing it in the power of the surviving partners to fix their own purchase price. There is no force in this contention. The contract contemplates the presence of a representative of the deceased partner during all these times, and incidentally it may be suggested that the executor was present during the time, more or less, and that both he and the legatees had full knowledge of what was being done, and ample opportunity to be present at all times and upon all occasions, to assist either personally or by agent. Again, as to the store and office fixtures, the value is fixed at a certain and definite amount. As to the stock of merchandise on hand, it is to be appraised at its actual value, but not to exceed its original cost. All solvent debts are to be taken at their face value. We see nothing so indefinite in these facts as to nullify the contract. The actual value of a piece of merchandise can be determined, and likewise it can be determined what is and what is not a solvent account. They are matters capable of ascertainment, and every partnership in the country is constantly engaged in determining them. There is certainly nothing so indefinite and uncertain as to the valuation to be fixed upon these assets as to in any way render the contract nugatory. In Harbster's Appeal, cited by appellant, the purchase price was fixed at the previous annual appraisement, with the proportion of profit or loss for the present year added or deducted, as the case might be. It certainly in that case was no easier to fix the amount of the profit or loss than it was in this case to fix the actual value of the stock, or determine what debt was a solvent account. Indeed, both of those factors of the business were necessary elements to be determined before the profit or loss could be fixed. In another of appellant's cases—Blake v. Barnes, 26 Abb. N. C. 208,—the purchase price by the surviving partners upon the death of a member of the firm was to be determined by an inventory and appraisement to be made as follows: “(b) Accounts overdue at a fair estimate, to be determined, if necessary, by arbitration. . . . (c) . . . Rejected machinery or any other property or merchandise for which the firm is not willing to allow the valuation inventoried, or hereinbefore provided for, at the price offered by the highest bidder. (d) For the stereo and electrotype plates, engravings, . . . a sum equal to the gross profits of the firm for the last two complete business years preceding the time of settlement.” It was not suggested that such a character of valuation avoided the contract, although the case was bitterly contested on other grounds. The case of Simmons v. Leonard, 8 Hare, 581, goes away beyond the cases just cited. It was there provided that the surviving partners should take the interest of the deceased partner at a valuation shown by the last annual accounting, the articles having provided for annual accounts. A partner died, and no annual accounts had been taken. The representative of the deceased partner, as in this case, contended that there could be no sale, as the purchase price was not fixed. The vice chancellor said: “The rule which justice and common sense would apply in such a case is, I think, too clear for serious argument, the proviso for sale in one event, that of the term running out, and the proviso for paying out a deceased partner's share (dying during the term) by instalments, is conclusive evidence of an intention and agreement, that the death of a partner during the term should not work a dissolution of the whole partnership, but that the survivors should have a right to carry it on, with the accommodation of paying off the executors of a deceased partner by instalments.” And, in conclusion, he held the contract for a sale good, and that the purchase price should be determined by an accounting.

In Dinham v. Bradford, L. R. 5 Ch. 519, it is held, in effect, that the articles of copartnership might provide that the purchase price of a deceased partner's interest in the business should be fixed by three disinterested parties. In Quintinan v. English, 44 Mo. 46, the value of the interest of a deceased partner was to be fixed by an appraisement made after his death, and, in case of a dispute as to the valuation of the stock, the matter was to be submitted to three arbitrators. The court held such an agreement valid and binding. Indeed, it may be suggested that the authorities are practically unanimous that any question of indefiniteness or uncertainty as to the amount of the purchase price, or the manner or mode in which such price is to be arrived at, in no way affects the right of the surviving partners under the partnership contract to buy. And it is held in many cases that such conditions only result in casting the burden upon the trial court to take an accounting and fix the price. We conclude that the contract is valid and binding in all respects; that the amount of the purchase price for the deceased partner's interest in the business was fixed by the articles with such sufficient certainty as to deny the court the right to hold a general accounting. And, in the absence of a showing of fraud, to some extent at least, in the making of the inventory and appraisal ment which formed the basic element in fixing the purchase price, the transaction should be upheld.

While this litigation, judging by the size of the transcript and briefs before us, has now assumed somewhat mammoth proportions, there was a time in its early history when but a single matter was involved. And that matter arose upon the contention of the administrator that the goodwill of the business was not included in the inventory and appraisal of the property of the deceased returned by the executor to the probate court. Owing to the views we entertain as to the validity of the contract, this contention may be disposed of in a few words. The contract of partnership provided: "The surviving partners and their successors shall also have the right and privilege of continuing the said business under the said designation and name of Newman & Levinson." We have no doubt that the goodwill of the business passed to the surviving partners under this provision of the contract, and in no sense formed an asset of the estate. Much could be said upon this question showing the instability of appellant's claims in this regard, but we deem it unnecessary.

The order appealed from is affirmed.

We concur: McFarland, J.; Van Fleet, J.

Beatty, Ch. J., and Henshaw and Temple, JJ. :

We concur in the judgment. We do not think we can say, over the implied finding of the trial court, that the execution of the partnership articles was procured by fraud, or by the use of undue influence. The question is argued on the assumption that the Newmans were contracting with the expectation that they would be the survivors. We do not think we can assume that. Such a consideration was proper to be urged upon the trial court under the charge of fraud, and evidence could have been addressed to that point. It does not appear that any such question was tried. It does appear that Levinson was then ill, but we do not find that the illness was deemed mortal. He lived more than one year thereafter, and during a portion of that time was able to attend to business. But the advantages of the agreement are not all on one side. In case of a dissolution by death it would have been the privilege of the surviving partners, in case there was no provision made for such an event, to have stopped the business and to have gone into liquidation. In such case the goods would have been sold at a sacrifice, and the estate would have realized nothing for the goodwill.

As to the construction and effect of the twelfth article of the partnership agreement between the defendants and their deceased partner, our views do not coincide with those expressed in the preceding opinion. The meaning of that article is, of course, the main question in the case, and for two years after the death of Levinson it was the only question; the attack upon the validity of the agreement based upon the alleged mental incapacity of Levinson and the charge of undue influence by his surviving partners being an evident afterthought. So much stress, however, has been laid upon this matter in the argument, and it forms so large and so essential a part of the charge of fraud, to the elaboration of which the voluminous brief of appellants is mainly devoted, that it cannot be ignored. The fact that the validity of the partnership agreement is affirmed by the implied finding of the superior court, and that there is substantial evidence to support such finding, is sufficient, as shown in the preceding opinion, to put an end to the question so far as it is material to the decision of this appeal, but with respect to the matters so vehemently and intemperately argued upon the part of appellant, and especially with reference to the torrent of vituperation poured out upon Mr. Justice Harrison, it is important to note that never upon any occasion during the time that he was acting as attorney for executor Raveley was there the slightest hint or suggestion to the effect that the partnership articles were in any respect invalid, or that Levinson, at the time he signed them, was mentally incapacitated, or subjected to the slightest degree of undue influence. On the contrary, the whole dispute from the beginning, and for two years after the death of Levinson, was as to the construction of the agreement, and in particular whether, according to its terms, the estate of Levinson was entitled to separate and additional compensation for his interest in the goodwill of the business of the firm. The mother and sisters of Levinson—all adults—and Mr. Philbrook, their attorney, assumed as a fact unquestioned that the contract was entirely valid, and that the rights of all parties were dependent upon its proper construction. Under these circumstances it would have been strange, indeed, if the attorneys for the executor had not taken the same view. Naturally and inevitably they confined their attention to the meaning of the contract, and to the steps necessary to be taken in carrying it out according to the intention of the parties. They (the firm of Jarboe & Harrison) had been employed by the executor within a few days after the death of Levinson, and Mr. Philbrook shortly afterwards was employed by the mother and sisters of the decedent to look especially after their interests. From the very first there was an open difference of opinion between these attorneys as to the meaning of the partnership agreement with respect to the right of Levinson's estate to be paid an additional compensation for his interest in the goodwill of the business, over and above the appraised value of his interest in the stock of goods, fixtures, accounts, and other tangible assets of the firm. Jarboe & Harrison took the position, which they always maintained openly and unequivocally, that, according to the proper construction of the agreement, the surviving partners took the whole interest of the deceased partner, including the right to continue the business under the name of Newman & Levinson, upon payment of the appraised value of his share of the assets, to be ascertained by an inventory and appraisal according to the annual custom of the house, and that no separate allowance for goodwill was contemplated or provided for. Mr. Philbrook took the opposite view, which he likewise consistently maintained. There was no other difference between the parties or their legal advisers, and, when the inventory and appraisal were made, their fairness and correctness, so far as they went, were not disputed, the only objection on the part of Mr. Philbrook and his clients being that it made no allowance for the value of the goodwill. No charge of fraud, or undervaluation of assets, or overstatement of liabilities in the appraisal, was then, or ever during Judge Harrison's connection with the case, made or suggested. The dispute was wholly upon a question of law,—i. e. the construction of a contract,—and as to this there was, as above stated, no equivocation or concealment whatever.

Mr. Philbrook, however, seems to think that Jarboe and Harrison were guilty of a species of disloyalty to his clients, because, notwithstanding their opinion to the contrary, they did not sustain him in his position, and advise their client accordingly. But this contention is utterly unreasonable. They were attorneys for the executor, who was trustee not only of the legatees, but also of the creditors of his testator, and it was their imperative duty to advise him to proceed according to the true construction of the agreement as they interpreted it, and especially to see that he wasted no portion of the estate in fruitless litigation. In view of the difference of opinion between them and the attorney for the legatees, it was natural that they should take time to consider, before deciding a question so delicate and so important, and equally natural that they should wish to submit the decision of the matter to the probate court. But when that court, in the proceedings instituted by the Newmans to compel the executor to transfer to them the interest of the deceased partner, declined to give a construction to the agreement upon the ground that it had no jurisdiction to decide upon the matter, the responsibility was thrown upon the attorneys for the executor to decide whether he should accept or reject the tender which the Newmans had made of the appraised value of Levinson's interest. Being obliged to take the responsibility of deciding, they naturally decided according to their own construction of the contract, and not according to Mr. Philbrook's. Differing, as we do, from the views which they entertained, we should never have thought of imputing a bad motive for their decision, if for no other yet for the simple reason that, if wrong, it could harm no one but themselves and their client. A large part of Mr. Philbrook's tirade is based upon the assumption that Jarboe and Harrison did not really entertain the opinion which they expressed, and that they only advised the executor to the course that he took because they were acting in collusion with, and in the interest of, the Newmans. The absurdity of this position is manifest from the fact that any settlement between the executor and the Newmans, not made in accordance with the true construction of the contract, could only involve the parties to such settlement in loss and difficulty, and could not possibly foreclose or prejudice the rights of the residuary legatees.

By accepting the money and notes tendered by the Newmans in full payment for the interest of his testator in the firm, the executor placed himself in the position of unequivocally refusing to proceed against the surviving partners on account of the value of the goodwill, and thereby gave to the residuary legatees the right to ask, as they ultimately did, for his discharge, upon the ground that he was neglecting the duties of his trust. As to the executor, this was the sole effect of erroneous advice on this point. As to the Newmans, the effect of a settlement unauthorized by the probate court, and unwarranted by the terms of the partnership agreement, would simply be to expose them to an action for an accounting,—this very action,—in which the most rigorous and burdensome rules for computing the interest of Levinson in the assets of the firm and profits of the business would be enforceable against them at the option of the administrator with the will annexed. To suppose, as the argument does, that the attorneys for the executor were deliberately giving him advice which they knew to be bad, in order to serve the interest of the Newmans at the expense of the legatees, when the only effect of the course advised would be to expose the executor to censure and punishment, and the Newmans to certain loss, is rather too heavy a draft on human credulity. But it is not alone the acceptance of the tender made by the surviving partners, and the advice upon which the executor acted, that furnish grounds for Mr. Philbrook's suspicions. It is the secrecy of the transaction, and the fact that the receipts or acknowledgments given by the executor were in the handwriting of, and were witnessed by, a gentleman who, at the date of the settlement, had been nominated by a leading political party of the state for a seat on this bench, that excites his deepest indignation. He can see in these circumstances nothing but a deliberate attempt to defraud his clients and to corrupt this court.

As to the secrecy of the transaction, the simple truth is that Mr. Philbrook and his clients were not called in to witness the payment of the money or the delivery of the receipts, and there was no reason why they should be present. It was not necessary that they should be there to protest in order not to be bound by the settlement. Their rights were not being concluded, or in any wise prejudiced. The fact that the notes and money were in the hands of the executor was nothing to them. The time for presentation of claims of creditors had not elapsed, the time for filing a first annual account had not arrived. No part of the money in the hands of the executor could then, or for months thereafter, be applied in payment of claims or legacies; in short, neither the executor nor the Newmans could gain the slightest advantage, nor the legatees suffer the slightest loss, by concealment of the fact that the settlement had been made. And accordingly we find that upon the very first occasion calling for a disclosure of the fact and the terms of the settlement, such disclosure was fully and unreservedly made in the most direct and certain terms. The settlement was made in September, and in November following, in response to a demand for an amended inventory of Levinson's estate, which should include the item of goodwill of the business, the surviving partners served upon Mr. Philbrook their written answer, which contained, among other things, the following passage: "And deny that said William J. Newman, or said Benjamin Newman, has not fully accounted to said executor of said estate for any and all moneys, interests, and claims due to said estate from said William J. Newman or said Benjamin Newman, or either of them, and aver, on the contrary, that they have fully accounted for any and all claims, payments, and sums due said estate in the manner set forth in said memorandum in writing, and in this behalf said William J. Newman and said Benjamin Newman aver that after the appointment of said S. W. Raveley as the executor of the last will and testament of said John Levinson, deceased, said executor requested them—said William J. Newman and Benjamin Newman—to account to him for the interest of said decedent in said copartnership, and said William J. Newman and said Benjamin Newman did thereupon account to him and exhibit to him, said executor, all the books and assets of every kind belonging to said copartnership, and it appeared therefrom that the entire interest of said decedent in the assets of said copartnership amounted to the sum of $20,790.80; and thereupon said William J. Newman and said Benjamin Newman elected and decided, under and in accordance with the provisions of said memorandum in writing, to purchase and pay for the interest of said decedent in said copartnership, and thereupon executed to said S. W. Raveley, as executor aforesaid, twelve certain promissory notes, bearing date the 26th day of February, 1890, payable at monthly intervals thereafter, each for the sum of $1,732.57½ (said promissory notes aggregating the sum of $20,790.80), in full payment and discharge of the interest of said decedent in said copartnership business, as the same had been ascertained and determined by the inventory and appraisal thereof, made in accordance with the provisions of said memorandum in writing." Mr. Philbrook knows the meaning of a plain statement in plain English, and therefore it is not to be doubted that from and after the 19th day of November, 1890, he and his clients knew that executor Raveley had accepted from the surviving partners their notes for $20,790.80, in full payment for his testator's interest in the copartnership. He knew then and ever afterwards that Raveley, acting under the advice of his attorneys, would refuse to prosecute an action against the Newmans for a further accounting, and that the legatees, if they desired to have such an action instituted, must procure the removal of the executor, and the appointment of an administrator with the will annexed, who would be guided by his advice. This is the course which was taken just one year after Mr. Philbrook was advised of the settlement, and, since he allowed a whole year to elapse after receiving the information before taking the only action that the settlement called for, he can hardly complain that the fact was not disclosed two months sooner than it was. As to the fact that Mr. Harrison, after his nomination for justice of the supreme court, continued to advise Executor Raveley in a matter in which he had been employed long before his nomination, and the further fact that he drew up and witnessed the papers which passed upon the settlement, it seems scarcely credible that a normal mind could regard them as evidence of fraud, or as an attempt to corruptly influence the decision of this court. But it is out of these simple circumstances that Mr. Philbrook has constructed his elaborate theory of fraud and corruption. The truth is there is not only no foundation for the argument upon this point, but the fact which it seeks to establish is totally irrelevant. The motives which may have prompted Raveley's attorneys in giving their advice, the advice itself, and the action taken in consequence of it, have not in the slightest degree affected the rights of Levinson's mother and sisters. If the advice was correct, as held in the preceding opinion, there never was any ground of complaint. If it was incorrect, the settlement did not bind the estate, and the Newmans remained accountable for the true value of Levinson's interest at the time of his death, or at the option of his representatives, for the profits of the business which they continued to carry on.

If these views are correct,—and we have no doubt that they are,—the whole question of fraud and corruption so gratuitously imported into the case may be dismissed from further consideration, and attention confined to the questions upon which the decision of the appeal necessarily depends.

The agreement between the Newmans and Levinson, which by the preceding opinion is held to be a contract of sale, properly bears the construction put upon it. It was within the terms of the agreement and the contemplation of the parties that in some way a purchase by the survivors should be made. If the contract were in other respects free from objection, the case would be the not unusual one where the partners provide for the purchase by the survivors of the interest of a deceased member of the firm. Upon the exercise by the survivors of their right, the sale would be complete, and the surviving partners would become debtors to the estate of the deceased partner, with the duty of accounting with his representative for the value of the deceased partner's interest. Cases are not rare where contracts of this nature have been entered into and enforced. But, when upheld, it is because they are certain and specific in their terms, and unobjectionable upon any equitable consideration. The plan adopted by these partners for arriving at the value of their annual profits by deducting from their assets the amount of their liabilities was feasible and satisfactory while all the partners were living, but upon the death of Levinson, not the profits merely, but the whole of his interest, was in some manner to be determined and withdrawn from the assets of the firm. While all of the partners were alive it did not matter how the assets were valued, or the liabilities estimated, for what they did not take out as profits they retained in the assets of the firm. But, when one died, it became highly important that his share, then to be wholly withdrawn, should be fairly and fully valued. The apportionment of profits involved no transfer of title, to the remaining capital; but such a transfer was necessarily involved in the transaction contemplated upon the death of a partner. Frequently, says Lindley (Partn. p. 429), in order to prevent the ruin consequent on the sale when a partnership happens to be dissolved by the death of a partner, it is provided that the share of the deceased may be taken by the survivors at the value shown by the last settlement agreed to by him, with the addition of any subsequent profit. But here a new valuation was to be made, and, either no method is provided in the contract for arriving at that valuation, or, if a method be found, it can only be the method actually adopted,—the valuation being made by the surviving partners themselves. But, in the first instance, if no mode is prescribed, there is the absence of an essential element of a contract of sale which equity cannot supply,—the price, or the manner of determining the price. If the second, and the mode adopted, be the one contemplated by the contract, then, if the contract be valid, it must result in holding that the surviving partners, trustees of the deceased partner's share, may not only purchase that share, but may fix the value which they will pay for it. But, if we understand respondents, they do not contend, nor could they successfully, for the latter proposition, but they claim that by their agreement with the executor such value was legally ascertained; and herein it is claimed that the executor, in effecting that settlement, was merely carrying into effect the contract of his testator, as expressed in the articles. But something more was necessary. The testator's contract did not determine the amount of the consideration to be rendered by the survivor for his interest, and the exercise of a further act of discretion, judgment, and assent was necessary to ascertain the amount. Morrison v. Rossignol, 5 Cal. 65; Breckenridge v. Crocker, 78 Cal. 529; Vickers v. Vickers, L. R. 4 Eq. 529. It is said that these were cases where specific performance was sought, while in this instance the contract has been executed. This is true, but we are now dealing with the question of power in the executor, and these cases illustrate the proposition that in making the adjustment with defendants the executor necessarily supplied the missing terms of his testator's contract by the exercise of his own will and discretion.

Had the executor that authority? Defendants claim it for him by virtue of his general powers, and independently of the articles. At the common law such power was unquestionably his, but at common law the executor or administrator held the title of the personal property of the decedent, while with us title to personalty as well as to realty vests in the heirs, subject only to the right of the executor to take possession of it for specific purposes. At common law, then, the representative could sell personal property without restraint, so long as his acts were not fraudulent, but here his power to sell is dependent upon the assent of the superior court. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1517, 1561; Wickersham v. Johnston, 104 Cal. 407; 2 Woerner, Administration of Law, § 331. The provisions of the articles for the transfer of Levinson's interest were incomplete, in that no price was fixed, and that no disinterested person was named who should fix the price. The executor, by assenting to the valuation put by the Newmans on the partnership interest, assumed to supply the omission of the contract, and to fix a sum at which they might take the interest. It is not claimed that the executor derived authority to make the sale from the will of deceased. As the articles fall short of conferring that power, he could necessarily derive it only from the court in the manner prescribed by statute. But under the statute it could be sold only "in the same manner as other personal property," namely, by authority and consent of the superior court. Had the contract of partnership determined the price, or prescribed some legal mode of ascertaining the price, the cases cited in the preceding opinion would be directly in point. Then the executor would have needed only to abide by the terms of the contract. Janin v. Browne, 59 Cal. 87. The wisdom or policy of the contract would have been none of his concern. But, under the facts, the necessity for the supervisory power of the court to order a sale, and for the caution of the statute that, before confirming the sale of the partnership interest the court or judge must carefully inquire into the condition of the partnership affairs, and must examine the surviving partner (Code Civ. Proc. § 1524), was as manifest as if there had been no contract.

But it is further said that the inventory and appraisement were made in the manner usual during Levinson's life, and that this established a custom by which the articles are to be interpreted. But a customary mode of valuing assets, with a view of determining and withdrawing profits, is radically different from the requisites of a fair and reasonable estimate of all assets with a view to segregating the share of a deceased partner for purchase by the others. We think the conclusion inevitable that the executor exceeded his authority in the settlement with defendants; that he did not, as is admitted, follow the statutory mode in making the settlement, and that there was no power for him to do so under the articles.

Leaving aside for the moment the question whether or not the goodwill was included in the settlement, we think the evidence overwhelmingly establishes, as the trial court held, that the sum found by the Newmans under the inventory and appraisement to be the value of Levinson's interest, and by the Newmans paid into the estate of Levinson, and received by the executor thereof, was not only a just amount, but, indeed, a very liberal amount. The evidence seems to be without conflict, and at least is strongly in favor of the respondents, that the appraised value put by the Newmans upon the interest of their deceased partner was greater than its actual worth. It was paid over and received, with knowledge then or soon afterwards acquired of the claim of the Newmans that by the payment they took to themselves the deceased's interest and title in the assets of the copartnership, and acquired the right to continue to conduct the business under the firm name. Thereafter the heirs, who were all of age, and who were represented throughout all court proceedings by their attorney, petitioned for, and, despite the protests of the executor, obtained, a decree of partial distribution, distributing to them as of the property of the estate a portion of the moneys thus obtained from the Newmans. At the time when this decree was sought and obtained the source from which the moneys came, and the circumstances under which it had been paid over to the estate, and the claims of the Newmans in regard thereto, were well known to them. Their opposing claim during all of this time seems to have been solely the one that the goodwill had not passed to the Newmans, and was still personal property, and a part of the assets of Levinson's estate. Having, under these circumstances, demanded and received the moneys so paid by the Newmans, the price having been fair, and the transaction without fraud, we are of opinion that they are estopped from questioning the settlement while retaining the benefits of it, and from denying that there passed to the Newmans whatever would have passed under the terms of the contract had it been free from the defect above discussed. What, then, would have passed, and what are appellants estopped from denying did pass? Unquestionably there passed to the Newmans Levinson's interest in the assets, as shown by the inventory and appraisal upon which the settlement was based. But the articles provide further that the survivors shall have the right to continue the business under the firm name of Newman & Levinson. This clause may be construed either as dependent or independent of the covenant to purchase. If construed as dependent, then the contract was that, upon purchasing under the inventory and appraisal, the survivors would acquire the right to continue the business under the firm name. In this view appellants would also be estopped from denying that there passed to defendants the right to conduct the business under the firm name. If, however, this clause is to be construed as independent, it is of itself valid and operative, and conferred this right upon defendants regardless of other considerations. In either case it must follow that the right to conduct the business under the firm name passed to the defendants.

There thus comes under consideration the question which originally, and for a long time, was the sole point of difference between the parties,—the question of the disposition of the goodwill; for it appears that, while the heirs from a very early date insisted that the goodwill still remained a part of the property of the estate, and should be inventoried and appraised as such, they made no objection to the valuation put upon the deceased partner's interest, nor to the sale of that interest, saving that therein the goodwill had not been valued. There was no concealment nor secrecy nor fraud in this. The heirs were informed that the goodwill was not included, the contention of the executor and of the Newmans under the advice of counsel being that the goodwill, under the circumstances, did not become a part of the assets of the estate, but vested in the surviving partners. While some of the earlier cases lean to the doctrine that, upon the death of one partner, the goodwill goes to the survivors, the great weight of later decisions is to the contrary. Thus, it is said by Bates (2 Bates, Partn. § 658): "It was once thought that, upon the death of a partner, his interest in the goodwill ceased, and it survived to the surviving partner as his own property. This was doubted in Crawshaw v. Collins, 15 Ves. Jr. 218, and it is not now anywhere regarded as the law in trade partnerships, and though inseparable from the business, is an appreciable part of the assets in which the estate of a deceased partner can participate." Lindley says: "In the event of dissolution by death, it has been said that the goodwill survives, and there is a clear decision to this effect. But this is not in accordance with modern authorities; they are wholly opposed to the notion that the value of the goodwill, as such, belongs to the survivor." 2 Lindley, Partn. *443. And our Code declares (Civ. Code, § 993): "The goodwill of a business is property transferable like any other. It is not necessary to enter upon a discussion of the character of this intangible property known as 'goodwill.'" The Code solves many doubts by defining it to be the "expectation of continued public patronage." Civ. Code, § 992. Now, the Newmans had purchased the interest of the estate in the assets as shown by the inventory, and had likewise acquired, as has been discussed, the right to continue the business under the firm name. We are unable to perceive any difference between the acquirement of a right to conduct this business under a firm name and the acquirement of the goodwill of the business. In other words, every possible "expectation of continued public patronage" to the business was gone when the right to conduct it under the firm name was parted with. If there were left anything of value, however shadowy and unreal, it might be ground for saying that the goodwill yet remained to the estate, but the interest in the assets, together with the interest in the right to conduct the business under the firm name, having passed to the Newmans, nothing in the nature of goodwill was left.

But there is another and equally convincing view which may be taken of these matters. Counsel have cited some cases in which it is said that it is the duty of the survivors to sell the property, and the business as a going business, and also to continue the business until this can be done. It may be that when a firm name is not composed of the name of the partners, but is a tradename only, different equities may arise, but we are sure in this case the Newmans could not have been required, in the interest of Levinson's estate, to sell the right to continue the business in the firm name nor to sell the goodwill. There is not only the goodwill which belongs to the firm, but in a successful business each partner may have gained a business standing and a reputation which is of value to him. One who sells the goodwill of a business warrants by that very act that he will not endeavor to draw off any of the customers. Civ. Code, § 1776. If the surviving partners can be required to do this, they are practically prohibited from pursuing the same business at that place, and that may be their only means of gaining a livelihood. When a partnership is dissolved by death, the survivors are absolved from all obligations except to close out the partnership affairs and to account to the estate. They do not owe a duty to the estate of the deceased to abstain from business even in the same line as that in which the partnership was engaged. We are forced to believe in this case that the articles of copartnership failed to provide effectively for a transfer of the interest of Levinson's estate in the copartnership to the surviving partners. The executor and his counsel were of the opinion that it did so provide, and acted accordingly. Though we are convinced that they were mistaken, we do not doubt that the estate of Levinson realized much more from the property than would have been possible if the firm had gone into liquidation, as they must have done in the absence of the agreement. We, think, therefore, that the agreement which the parties supposed they had made was to the material advantage of all concerned, and, had they provided for a valid method of determining the value of the interest of Levinson, it would have been just as well as legal. For the lack of such method, however, the transfer to the Newmans was unauthorized and void. The legatees, however, of Levinson's estate, were all of age, and the estate was solvent. Knowing all of the essential facts, they demanded and received the proceeds of the sale over the protests of the executor and of the Newmans. These protests amounted to the claim that, unless the transfer to the Newmans was valid, the money should be returned to them. If the transfer was regarded as invalid, plainly that should have been done. The court could not distribute the money except upon the theory that it properly belonged to the estate. The Levinsons solicited and obtained such an adjudication, and they received the money so distributed. No rights were or could have been reserved by the protest, styled a "stipulation," which was filed by the Levinsons. The money was not voluntarily paid after the protest was made, but the payment was forced by the legatees. The protest does show, however, that the legatees knew, or at least suspected, that the executor and the surviving partners claimed that the money in the hands of the executor was all that was coming to the estate from the partnership. It is stated, after admitting that the money was received by the executor "on account of the interest of said estate in the partnership assets," as follows: "But it is not admitted by said petitioners, or any of them, that no further sum remains due, or is to become due, from said surviving partners, or either of them, or assigns, to said estate, or to said petitioners, or any of them." There would have been no purpose in guarding against the implication if it had not been believed that the claim was that this was all. That the legatees well knew the claim made by the surviving partners abundantly appears from the other evidence. This was a ratification of the sale on the part of the legatees which can be avoided only for fraud discovered afterwards, and then only upon a rescission and a restoration of all that they have received, or a showing of some excuse for not doing so. The action is to compel the surviving partners to account for the interest of Levinson in the copartnership. But the moneys which were distributed upon the application of the legatees were paid for the entire interest of Levinson in the copartnership. To compel an accounting is to set aside or ignore that transaction. The money was not paid on account, and the legatees must have known that no such sum was due from the surviving partners to the estate, except upon the theory that they had purchased the interest of Levinson. The acceptance of the sum by the executor materially affected the condition of the surviving partners. But for that the concern would most likely have gone into liquidation, and large liabilities for goods would not have been incurred. They did not understand that they were assuming these liabilities and the risks of trade for the benefit of the estate of Levinson, but for themselves.

TENNESSEE SUPREME COURT.

MEMPHIS NATIONAL BANK

v.

Mary B. NEELY et al., Exrs., etc., of William M. Sneed, Deceased, Appls.

(.....Tenn.)

1. The mental incompetency of an accommodation indorser at the time of signing a note in renewal of one which he indorsed when fully competent to do so does not prevent his estate from being liable on the renewal note when the holder took it in good faith and thereupon extinguished and surrendered the old note so that he cannot be restored to his original position.

2. The knowledge of one member of the discount committee of a bank, who

NOTE.—Renewal of obligations by incompetent person.

This subject seems to be one which the courts 34 L. R. A.

have not been frequently called upon to consider, but one case having been discovered aside from the principal case, and a dictum in Wirebach v.

was not present when the renewal of a note was taken, and had no part in the transaction, is not enough to charge the bank with notice of the fact, known to him, that the indorser of the note had become incompetent to do business.

(June 20, 1896.)

APPEAL by defendants from a decree of the Chancery Court for Shelby County in favor of plaintiff in a suit brought to enforce the liability of decedent as indorser of a promissory note. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Myers & Banks, for appellants:

The two notes sued on herein must stand as original transactions as of the date of the same, to wit, October 8 and 22, 1892.

2 Dan. Neg. Inst. 4th ed. §§ 1260-1266, 1266c; 2 Parsons, Notes & Bills, 201; Bank of the Commonwealth v. Letcher, 3 J. J. Marsh. 195; Nichol v. Bate, 10 Yerg. 429; Hill v. Bostick, Id. 410; Slaymaker v. Gundacker, 10 Serg. & R. 75; Cherry v. Frost, 7 Lea, 5.

A lunatic signing a note as surety for an antecedent debt is not bound thereby although the other contracting party was ignorant of his infirmity.

Van Patton v. Beals, 46 Iowa, 62.

It will not do to say that the renewal of the notes and extension of the time of payment was a benefit received by the indorser, William M. Sneed, which went to increase or swell the corpus of his estate, for such is not the fact.

Leary v. Miller, 61 N. Y. 498.

A person of unsound mind is not responsible for his contract although the other contracting party did not know that he was of unsound mind at the time, and such contracts are void.

1 Dan. Neg. Inst. §§ 209, 210, and note; Moore v. Hershey, 90 Pa. 196; Edwards v. Davenport, 20 Fed. Rep. 756; Dexter v. Hall, 32 U. S. 15 Wall. 9, 21 L. ed. 78.

The insanity of the maker or indorser of a promissory note may be set up as a defense to an action on the note.

11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 148; McClain v. Davis, 77 Ind. 419; Hannah v. Sheldon, 20

Mich. 378; Rice v. Peet, 15 Johns. 503; Davis v. Tarter, 65 Ala. 98; Seaver v. Phelps, 11 Pick. 304, 23 Am. Dec. 373; Wirebach v. First Nat. Bank, 97 Pa. 543, 39 Am. Rep. 821; Moore v. Hershey, supra; 1 Parsons, Notes & Bills, 149; Edwards, Bills & Notes, 63, 69.

The test of the liability of a lunatic on his contracts is whether it is for necessities, or whether he actually received the money or property, whether the contract was executed or executory is not material.

Re De Silver's Estate, 5 Rawle, 111, 28 Am. Dec. 645; Rogers v. Walker, 6 Pa. 371, 47 Am. Dec. 470; Seaver v. Phelps, 11 Pick. 306, 23 Am. Dec. 372; Clark v. Caldwell, 6 Watts, 139; Imhoff v. Witmer, 81 Pa. 243; Yates v. Boen, 2 Strange, 1104; Gore v. Gibson, 13 Mees. & W. 638; Pearl v. M'Dowell, 3 J. J. Marsh. 658, 20 Am. Dec. 199; Bensell v. Chancellor, 5 Whart. 374, 34 Am. Dec. 561.

A contract of one so far deprived of his reason as to be unable to manage his affairs is not binding.

M'Elroy's Case, 6 Watts & S. 451; Com., Euchenberg, v. Schneider, 59 Pa. 328.

The Memphis National Bank, through its president, H. M. Neely, had notice of the condition of W. M. Sneed prior to October 8, 1892. Notice communicated to him anywhere except where he is totally dissociated from his official duties would affect the corporation with knowledge of the fact communicated.

4 Thomp. Corp. §§ 5228, 4657, pp. 5228, 3494; Porter v. Bank of Rutland, 19 Vt. 410; Bank of America v. McNeill, 10 Bush, 54.

The existence of knowledge in the agent, however acquired, when acting for the principal, is knowledge to the principal.

Tagg v. Tennessee Nat. Bank, 9 Heisk. 479; Union Bank v. Campbell, 4 Humph. 394; Raht v. Union Consol. Min. Co. 5 Lea, 63.

Notice to a director, president, or member of the finance committee as to insanity is notice to the bank.

Thomp. Corp. 5191 and note 1, 5194, 5195, 5197, 5199.

First Nat. Bank set forth below, which is exactly in point.

The case referred to is Snyder v. Laubach, 7 W. N. C. 464, set forth in the opinion in the principal case and followed by it, holding that a person who is a lunatic and has been so adjudged is liable on an accommodation indorsement of a promissory note made while he was insane, where it was a renewal of a note for a similar amount upon which he had also been an accommodation indorser, and there had been several renewals, at each of which, as well as at the execution of the first note, he was unquestionably of sound mind.

So in Wirebach v. First Nat. Bank, 97 Pa. 543, 39 Am. Rep. 821, in which it was sought to recover upon an accommodation indorsement by a lunatic without consideration where he had derived no benefit from his indorsement, the note indorsed having been used to take up other notes of different makers upon which he had been also accommodation indorser, which was known to the holder, the lunatic was held not liable though the holder was a bona fide one and without knowledge of the lunacy, and it was said that if he were sane when he indorsed the prior note, and insane at the time he indorsed the note in suit, he would not be liable on the latter as it was not a mere renewal note.

Owing to the scarcity of judicial expression on the subject, a few other cases which might be deemed to have some bearing upon it have also been included, though they might not ordinarily be considered as strictly within its boundaries.

Thus, in Page v. Krekey, 43 N. Y. S. R. 468, it was held that where a person was sober at the time he agreed to sign a paper the fact that he was under the influence of liquor when he actually signed it is immaterial and no defense to an action based thereon.

In Bush v. Breinig, 113 Pa. 310, 37 Am. Rep. 469, however, it was held that one who buys real estate at a public sale and afterwards signs a contract to complete the purchase, and pays a part of the purchase money while so intoxicated as not to know what he was doing, may avoid the contract and recover the money so paid though his intoxication was voluntary.

And in Schmidt v. Ittman, 46 La. Ann. 888, in which an action was brought in an account for goods sold for which notes were afterwards given which became due, but remained unpaid, insanity having been alleged as a defense, a recovery was had on the ground that the purchaser had not been interdicted and was not notoriously insane at the time of the purchasing; but it was said that had the action been brought on the notes no recovery could have been had as the maker was notoriously insane on the day they were made.

F. H. B.

In order to sustain an action on a note made by a lunatic, such a consideration must be shown to have been received that justice and equity would require the debt to be paid out of the lunatic's estate.

Hicks v. Marshall, 8 Hun, 327; Sentance v. Poole, 8 Car. & P. 1; Dunnage v. White, 1 Wils. Ch. 67; Hall v. Warren, 9 Ves. Jr. 605.

No consideration having been shown or benefit to Sneed in this case the complainant should fail.

Seaver v. Phelps, 11 Pick. 304, 23 Am. Dec. 372; Rice v. Peat, 15 Johns. 503; LANCASTER COUNTY NAT. BANK v. MOORE, 78 Pa. 407, 21 Am. Rep. 24; La Rue v. Gilkyson, 4 Pa. 375, 45 Am. Dec. 700; Beals v. See, 10 Pa. 56, 49 Am. Dec. 573.

Messrs. William M. Randolph & Sons, for appellee:

An indorser for the accommodation of the drawer or maker of the note is liable to a bona fide holder for value, although he received no consideration for his indorsement.

Harris v. Bradley, 7 Yerg. 810; 1 Parsons, Notes & Bills, 184; Marr v. Johnson, 9 Yerg. 1; McDonald v. Magruder, 28 U. S. 3 Pet. 475, 7 L. ed. 746; Edwards, Bills & Notes, 819; Byles, Bills, 94; 1 Dan. Neg. Inst. §§ 167, 790; 2 Parsons, Notes & Bills, 436, 438; Swift v. Tyson, 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 1, 10 L. ed. 865; Goodman v. Simonds, 61 U. S. 20 How. 853, 15 L. ed. 934; Brown v. Spofford, 95 U. S. 474, 24 L. ed. 508.

Where a contract is executed upon a valuable consideration on the one side of which the alleged lunatic has in legal contemplation had the benefit, and the parties cannot be placed in statu quo, the courts will enforce the contract regardless of the fact of insanity, if it turns out that it did exist when the contract was made.

Niell v. Morley, 9 Ves. Jr. 478; Price v. Bergrington, 7 Eng. L. & Eq. 258; Molton v. Camroux, 2 Exch. 487, 4 Exch. 17; Wilder v. Weakley's Estate, 84 Ind. 181; Addison, Cont. 1033, 1034; Smith, Cont. 5th ed. 843, 844; Beals v. See, 10 Pa. 56, 49 Am. Dec. 573; LANCASTER COUNTY NAT. BANK v. MOORE, 78 Pa. 407, 21 Am. Rep. 24; Snyder v. Laubach, 7 W. N. C. 464; Wirebach v. First Nat. Bank, 97 Pa. 543, 39 Am. Rep. 821; Moore v. Hershey, 90 Pa. 196; Young v. Stevens, 48 N. H. 133, 2 Am. Rep. 203; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Hunt, 79 N. Y. 541; Riggs v. American Tract Soc. 84 N. Y. 887; Re Beckwith, 3 Hun, 443; Canfield v. Fairbanks, 63 Barb. 461; Sims v. McLure, 8 Rich. Eq. 286, 70 Am. Dec. 196; Behrens v. McKenzie, 23 Iowa, 338, 92 Am. Dec. 428, and note; Ashcraft v. De Armond, 44 Iowa, 229; Rusk v. Fenton, 14 Bush, 490, 29 Am. Rep. 413; Yauger v. Skinner, 14 N. J. Eq. 389; Loomis v. Spencer, 2 Paige, 153; Matthiessen v. McMahon, 38 N. J. L. 543; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. 2d ed. ¶ 946; Abbott v. Creal, 56 Iowa, 175; Gribben v. Maxwell, 84 Kan. 8; Jackson, Cadwell, v. King, 4 Cow. 207, 15 Am. Dec. 356.

In order to charge the principal with knowledge of an agent, and especially so in regard to corporations, the agent must have acted for his principal in the particular transaction.

Union Bank v. Campbell, 4 Humph. 394; Tagg v. Tennessee Nat. Bank, 9 Heisk. 479; 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. ¶ 540c.
84 L. R. A.

The court should consider the notes sued on in the position or occupying the place and stead of the notes originally given, and will enforce them accordingly.

First Nat. Bank v. Buchanan, 87 Tenn. 32, 1 L. R. A. 199.

Beard, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The complainant in this cause, by its bill, sought to recover on two promissory notes, one for $7,500, dated 3d of October, 1892, due at ninety days, and the other for $3,000, dated 22d October, 1892, and due at four months, made by W. A. Sneed, to the order of and indorsed by W. M. Sneed. At maturity the notes were presented for payment to the maker, and, this being refused, they were protested, of all which the indorsee had due and legal notice. No defense was made by the maker of this paper, but Mrs. Neely, the executrix of W. M. Sneed, resisted recovery upon the ground that her testate was non compos mentis at the time he indorsed the same. Upon the trial, the chancellor rendered a decree, not only against the maker, but also against the estate of the indorser. From this decree, the executrix alone prosecuted an appeal to this court.

The notes sued on were renewal notes, the last of two series made and indorsed by the same parties, the originals of which were discounted for the maker by the complainant bank in 1890. On all these notes W. M. Sneed was an indorser for the accommodation of W. A. Sneed, without any interest whatever in the proceeds of the discount. So far as the facts are concerned on which rests the contention of the executrix that her testate was of unsound mind when he entered into these two contracts of indorsement, it is sufficient to say that he had been for more than twenty years an active and prosperous member of the Memphis bar, and at the same time was interested in, and for a considerable period controlled, large enterprises outside of his profession. He was a man of energy, integrity, and sound business judgment, as the result of which he succeeded in acquiring a high reputation in the commercial community, and in accumulating a large fortune. Unremitting attention to his various duties, according to the testimony of experts, finally brought on an attack of paresis, a disease which is described as attacking the organic brain structure, which, though slow in its progress, culminated on or about 15th of October, 1892, in serious mental disturbance. Up to that time we think it is clear from this record, whatever may have been the course of the disease, that he was in possession of his mental faculties, and was fully able, at the time he indorsed, to bind himself by contract on the $7,500 note, of date the 3d of October. After the 15th, up to and including the 22d of that month, his mind was the subject of delirium; and while he continued his daily visits to his office, and his attention to his numerous business interests, yet we think the testimony in the case shows that on the 22d of October, 1892, when he indorsed the $3,000 note, he was, to a considerable degree, non compos mentis. Of this fact, however, the bank had no notice when it canceled and delivered the old note, maturing that day, to the maker, and took from him this new note in its room and stead.

Upon the finding of the facts, there is only the question left for determination whether the estate of W. M. Sneed can escape liability in the indorsement on the ground that he was insane at the time of making it. It is admitted that, as a general rule, the contract of a lunatic may be avoided. To this, however, there is this well-recognized exception: That where a contract has been entered into in good faith, without fraud or imposition, for a fair consideration, without notice of the infirmity, and has been so far executed that the parties cannot be restored to their original positions, it will not be set aside by the court. 5 Lawson, Rights, Rem. & Pr. § 2889; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 946. It is said that such a contract is enforced against the party non compos mentis, not so much upon the idea that it possesses the legal essential of consent, but rather because, by means of an apparent contract, he has secured one advantage or benefit, which cannot be restored to the other party, and therefore it would be inequitable to permit him, or those in privity with him, to repudiate it. Lincoln v. Buckmaster, 82 Vt. 652; Matthiessen v. McMahon, 88 N. J. L. 536. The reports are full of cases which seem to illustrate this exception to the general rule. A few only will be referred to. In England, Molton v. Camroux, 2 Exch. 489, affirmed in 4 Exch. 17, is a leading case on this subject. In the opinion of the court reported in 2 Exch. 489, it is said: "We are not disposed to lay down so general a proposition as that all executed contracts bona fide entered into must be taken as valid, though one of the parties be of unsound mind; we think, however, that we may safely conclude that when a person apparently of sound mind, and not known to be otherwise, enters into a contract for the purchase of property which is fair and bona fide, and which is executed and completed, and the property, the subject-matter of the contract, has been paid for and fully enjoyed, and cannot be restored so as to put the parties in statu quo, such contract cannot afterwards be set aside, either by the alleged lunatic, or those who represent him." This rule, or rather this exception to the general rule, is recognized and applied by the chancery courts in a great variety of cases. In Wibler v. Weakley's Estate, 34 Ind. 181, an action was maintained against the estate of a lunatic on an account for whiskey, etc., sold to him in good faith, and without knowledge of his lunacy. The court there said: "It is laid down by an elementary writer, that, 'if a party to a contract was, at the time he entered into the engagement, a lunatic or of unsound mind, and any imposition appears to have been practiced upon him, or any advantage taken of his infirmity by the other contracting parties, the contract will be void as having been procured by fraud; but if the contract is a fair and honest contract, and bears no symptoms of the infirmity of mind of the party sought to be charged thereon, the courts will enforce it like any other contract. . . . An action for the price of goods sold and delivered, or of work done, or for the hire of horses, carriages, or servants, cannot be defeated by showing that the defendant had been found by inquiry to be a lunatic at the time he received the goods, or had the benefit of the work or the use of the horses, carriages, and servants.'" In Beals v. Ses, 10 Pa. 56, 49 Am. Dec. 573, the plaintiff as administrator of one Dom, sought to recover the value of certain goods purchased by Dom from the defendant, on the ground that his intestate was a widow at the time of the purchase. The testimony showed that the goods were unsuited to the object for which they were bought; that the price agreed upon exceeded their market value; and that the plaintiff had tendered them back to the defendant. On these facts, the court found for the defendant, and, in its opinion, distinctly based its conclusions upon this exception to the general rule. Lancaster County Nat. Bank v. Moore, 78 Pa. 407, 21 Am. Rep. 24, was a case where a bank in good faith, and without any knowledge of his infirmity, discounted a note for a lunatic, and paid over the awards, and in it the same principle was applied.

While conceding that these cases were properly decided, and that the doctrine announced by them is sound within proper limitations, it is insisted by appellant that as all of them involved the purchase of property by, or the loan of money to, the lunatic,—transactions by which something was added to his estate,—they afford no authority for the contention of complainant in this case. As we understand these cases, their underlying principle is this: A lunatic or his privies will not be permitted to repudiate a contract from which he has received a clear benefit, where the other contracting party acted in good faith, without notice of the infirmity, and where, upon repudiation, the statu quo of the parties cannot be restored. That this is a sound distinction, we entertain no doubt. The question, then, is: Did Mr. Sneed, the insane accommodation indorser of this note, receive any benefit from the transaction, and if so, in the event it is set aside, can the parties be placed back in their original positions? In reply to the first part of this question, we say that it is apparent to us that he did receive a benefit, which was a consideration to him for his indorsement. He was of sane mind when he put his name on the back of the original note and of all the intervening renewal notes, including that which matured on the 22d of October. By his indorsement he undertook that the paper would be honored by the maker when it fell due, and that, if dishonored, then, upon due presentment, non-payment, and notice, the holder might proceed at once against him (the indorser). Tiedeman, Com. Paper, § 259; 2 Randolph, Com. Paper, § 742. This promise or undertaking, while conditional, was none the less a binding, legal obligation, maturing on the same day as did the positive obligation of the maker. Now, when the bank surrendered the note which fell due on the 22d, and took in its stead the one in controversy, the effect of which was to give a further indulgence of four months, it conferred a valuable benefit upon both maker and indorser so far as this record discloses. The benefit or advantage which accrued to the indorser was quite as great as that to the maker, because there is no suggestion here that the latter was either able or ready to meet the note that fell due that day. If he did not, then, upon proper steps being taken, it would have been the duty of the indorser at once to have discharged it. We think there can be no doubt, in the light of the authorities, if the indorser had gone to the bank on the 23d, and, by his solicitation, had obtained a renewal of this paper, in order that he might be saved from making good his obligation, which was likely to mature that day, and it had granted him indulgence without notice of his infirmity, that neither he nor his executrix would be heard to say that as he was insane that day, and received no benefit in the way of goods purchased or money borrowed from the bank, there should be no recovery on his indorsement. And we can see no difference, as a matter of principle, between that case and the one presented at the bar, where the same result is accomplished for him by the maker. He has been placed in position on this indorsed paper, in order that it might be used to that end. Not only was there a benefit conferred upon the indorser in this matter, but it is evident that it is impossible for the original positions of the parties to be restored. The old note has been extinguished and surrendered. It cannot be revived, and, if it could be, the day for payment and protest is long since past. The result is that unless the bank can hold his estate upon this renewal paper, which he contributed to induce the bank to take, by indorsing it, and intrusting it to the maker, from which he derived the benefit already mentioned, then the bank must lose its claim against his estate. It acted in good faith and in accord with sound business principles.

The diligence of counsel, supplemented by a careful search by the court, has been able to discover but one case that furnishes an analogy to the one at bar. That is the case of Snyder v. Laubach tried in a common pleas court of Pennsylvania, and reported in a law periodical published in Philadelphia. 7 W. N. C. 464. As that publication is not generally accessible to the profession, it is thought proper to state the facts of the case and the conclusion of the court with some fullness: "On June 9, 1873, J. H. Lilly borrowed from the Dimes Saving Institution of Bethlehem the sum of $1,500, upon his promissory note, to the order of Robert Yost, which was indorsed by Yost as an accommodation indorser. To secure Yost against his indorsement Lilly upon the same day confessed judgment to Yost for the amount of the note, which was entered up on the next day. The note was renewed every three months until sometime in February, 1875, when Lilly sold the store and lot of ground upon which the judgment was a lien to William H. Buss, who, assuming Lilly's indebtedness, took up the old note and gave the bank in its place his own note for $1,500 to Yost's order and with Yost's indorsement, the latter consenting to indorse for him. At the same time there was a written agreement between Lilly and Buss that the judgment given to secure the old note should remain a lien on the above real estate, as collateral security for future indorsements of the note, it being the same debt. Lilly on his part agreed to indemnify Yost against his indorsements for the note,

84 L. R. A.

Yost continued to indorse for Buss up to February 16, 1876, the date of the last renewal. Upon that day when Buss took the note to Yost for his indorsement, although he noticed that there was something wrong with Yost, he did not from his conversation think him crazy. Buss took the note to the bank, which accepted it and returned the old note canceled." The note was protested by the bank for nonpayment; and suit afterwards brought thereon, against the administrator of Yost. The administrator refused payment, on the ground that his testator was insane at the time of indorsement. The court found as a fact: "There was no evidence to charge the bank with notice of his lunacy." The opinion of the court is very brief, and is as follows: "However it might have been had the note in suit been an original note indorsed by the alleged lunatic for the accommodation of Buss, yet the case was different when it appeared that it was a renewal of a note for a similar amount, upon which he was also an accommodation indorser. There had been several renewals, at each of which, as well as the execution of the first note, Yost was unquestionably of sound mind. He had taken and held a judgment against the original maker as collateral security for the note. Yost was clearly liable on the note of which the note in suit was a renewal. There was full consideration therefor, and the case is directly within the decisions of this court in Lancaster County Nat. Bank v. Moore, 78 Pa. 407, 21 Am. Rep. 24 [referred to supra]." But it is insisted that that case is not an authority in the one at bar, because the court there rested its conclusion in the fact that the indorser, Yost, had recovered, in the judgment lien, collateral security for his indorsement. It is true that the common pleas court, in its opinion, did emphasize this, and did speak of it as a consideration passing to the indorser. Subsequently, however, that case was referred to, and by clear implication approved, by the supreme court, in Wirebach v. First Nat. Bank, 97 Pa. 543, 39 Am. Rep. 821, and that court ignored a controlling element in the case,—the fact that Yost had received collateral security. It said: "Snyder v. Laubach, 7 W. N. C. 464, is where Yost's indorsement of the note was merely a renewal of an indorsement made when he was unquestionably of sound mind; and it was held that he was clearly liable on the note of which the note in suit was a renewal; there was full consideration, and the case was within the decision of Lancaster County Nat. Bank v. Moore, supra. The consideration is a debt for the amount of the renewal note." The case of Van Patton v. Beuls, 46 Iowa, 62, relied upon by the testatrix, is altogether different from the present case. In that it was held that a lunatic signing a note as surety for an antecedent debt was not bound thereby, although the other contracting party was ignorant of his infirmity. This was evidently a case where a lunatic undertook to bind himself for a debt on which he was not antecedently bound, and the court there properly declined to hold him.

Upon a careful consideration of the case at bar, we are satisfied that it falls under the exception to the general rule, which has been heretofore stated, and that the chancellor properly held the estate of the indorser upon the note in question, unless it be true, as urged by the testatrix, that the bank had constructive knowledge of Mr. Sneed's condition when it accepted this renewal note. This contention rests upon the fact that Mr. Neely was the president of the bank, and a member of the discount committee which passed on this note, and that at that time he was advised of Sneed's insanity. That Mr. Neely did sustain these official relations to the bank, and was informed of the fact in question, when this new note was taken, is clear; but it is equally clear that he was not present with the committee when it was received, and the old note extinguished, and had no agency whatever in the transaction, and, in fact, only obtained knowledge of it the day after it was consummated. Under such conditions, his knowledge could not affect the bank. 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. p. 450c; Union Bank v. Campbell, 4 Humph. 894.

It follows that the decree of the chancellor is in all things affirmed.

CONNECTICUT SUPREME COURT OF ERRORS.

STATE of Connecticut

v.

Charles S. ORR, Appt.

(63 Conn. 101.)

1. An ordinance prohibiting the collection or transportation of garbage without a license therefor is authorized by a charter giving power to regulate by ordinance the collection and removal of garbage, although it makes no express provision for licenses.
2. The fact that garbage is not a nuisance or detrimental to health does not exempt it from the police power or entitle a citizen to engage in its transportation without a license.
3. Any occupation comes within the range of the police power which is such as to be naturally liable to create a nuisance unless subjected to special regulations, whether it be so conducted as in fact to create a nuisance or not.
4. The wrongful refusal to a person of a license for transportation of garbage does not entitle him to pursue the business without a license in violation of an ordinance, but his remedy is by mandamus.
5. "Refuse matter," within the meaning of an ordinance prohibiting the transportation without a license of "such refuse matter as accumulates in the preparation of food for the table," includes only what is abandoned as worthless; but such materials as may be properly utilized for other purposes, when they do not constitute a nuisance, remain property which may be sold or otherwise disposed of at the will of the owner.

(June 25, 1896.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Criminal Court of Common Pleas for Fairfield County convicting him of violating an ordinance of the city of Bridgeport which prohibited unlicensed persons from collecting and transporting garbage. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. David B. Lockwood and Alfred B. Beers, for appellant:

The garbage in this case was fresh, and its removal not dangerous to the public health. A by-law which assumes to be a police regulation, but deprives a party of the use of his property without regard to the public good, under the pretense of the preservation of health, when it is manifest that such are not the object and purpose of the regulation, will be set aside as a clear and direct infringement of the right of property without any compensating advantages.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 247, 485, 486; Austin v. Murray, 18 Pick. 121; Corfield v. Coryell, 4 Wash. C. C. 880; Vansant v. Waddel, 2 Yerg. 280; Com. v. Towles, 5 Leigh, 748; Norwich Gaslight Co. v. Norwich City Gas Co. 25 Conn. 19; Hudson v. Thorne, 7 Paige, 261; State, Treman, v. Indianapolis, 69 Ind. 375, 35 Am. Rep. 223; Warner v. Curran, 75 Ind. 809; Chicago v. Rumpff, 45 Ill. 90, 92 Am. Dec. 196.

A by-law which prohibits one person from carrying on a certain business, and allows another to carry on the same business, is void.

Hudson v. Thorne, supra; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 244-246.

The board of health has not the power to assume in advance what is or will become a nuisance or dangerous to public health, and contract for its removal.

Gregory v. New York, 40 N. Y. 278.

Those who make the laws "are to govern by promulgated established laws not to be varied in particular cases, but to have one rule for rich and poor, for the favorite at court and the countryman at the plow."

Wally v. Kennedy, 2 Yerg. 554, 24 Am. Dec. 511; Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 328; Durham v. Lewiston, 4 Me. 140; Holden v. James, 11 Mass. 396, 6 Am. Dec. 174; People v. Frisbie, 26 Cal. 185; Davis v. Menasha, 21 Wis. 491; Millett v. People, 117 Ill. 294, 57 Am. Rep. 869; Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. 431; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 483, 733.

The Constitution, art. 1, § 1, clearly prohibits the legislature from delegating the power to a city to grant to any individual the special privilege of carrying on any ordinary business or calling.

State v. Conlon, 65 Conn. 478, 31 L. R. A. 55; Norwich Gaslight Co. v. Norwich City Gas

NOTE—As to monopoly in contract for removal of garbage, see Smiley v. MacDonald (Neb.) 27 L. R. 34 L. R. A.

A. 540, and note; also Walker v. Jameson (Ind.) 28 L. R. A. 679.

Co. 25 Conn. 84; Re Lowe, 54 Kan. 757, 27 L. R. A. 545; Logan v. Pyne, 43 Iowa, 524, 22 Am. Rep. 261; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 485; State v. Fire Creek Coal & C. Co. 33 W. Va. 188, 6 L. R. A. 859; Millett v. People, supra; Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Baty, 6 Neb. 37, 29 Am. Rep. 856; Wally v. Kennedy, supra; Durkes v. Janesville, 28 Wis. 464, 9 Am. Rep. 500.

The privilege of contracting is both a liberty and a property right of which one cannot be deprived without due process of law.

Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L. R. A. 79; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L. R. A. 789; People v. Marz, 99 N. Y. 887, 52 Am. Rep. 34; Ex parte Whitwell, 98 Cal. 73, 19 L. R. A. 727; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L. R. A. 257; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 451-483, 485; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 515, 30 Am. Rep. 823; Tiedeman, Pol. Power, 489-493; Citizens' Sav. & L. Assn. v. Topeka ("Loan Association v. Topeka"), 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 655, 22 L. ed. 455.

Municipal ordinances placing restrictions upon lawful conduct or business or the use of lawful property must, in order to be valid, specify the rules and conditions to be observed in such conduct or business or the use of such property; and must not admit of the exercise of any arbitrary discrimination by the municipal authorities as between citizens who will comply.

Richmond v. Dudley, 129 Ind. 112, 18 L. R. A. 587; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 856, 30 L. ed. 220; Newton v. Belger, 143 Mass. 598; Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 217, 38 Am. Rep. 239; Re Frazee, 68 Mich. 396; Anderson v. Wellington, 40 Kan. 173, 2 L. R. A. 110; Trotter v. Chicago, 38 Ill. App. 206; Barthel v. New Orleans, 24 Fed. Rep. 563; Bills v. Goshen, 117 Ind. 221, 3 L. R. A. 261; Grafty v. Rushville, 107 Ind. 502, 57 Am. Rep. 128; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 484, 485; Fraser v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L. R. A. 492; Ramsey v. People, 142 Ill. 380, 17 L. R. A. 853; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 23 L. R. A. 340; Hocking Valley Coal Co. v. Rosser, 53 Ohio St. 12, 29 L. R. A. 386.

Nor will the board of health prohibit the carrying on of a lawful business not necessarily a nuisance, but which may be conducted without injury or danger to the public health.

Weil v. Ricord, 24 N. J. Eq. 169; Ex parte Sing Lee, 96 Cal. 854.

Ordinances must be reasonable, and not inconsistent with the policy of the state.

Hayden v. Noyes, 5 Conn. 397; State v. Speyer, 67 Vt. 502, 29 L. R. A. 573; People v. Armstrong, 73 Mich. 248, 3 L. R. A. 731; Anderson v. Wellington, 40 Kan. 173, 2 L. R. A. 110; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 240-247; Tugman v. Chicago, 78 Ill. 405; River Rendering Co. v. Behr, 77 Mo. 91, 48 Am. Rep. 6; Ward v. Greenville, 8 Baxt. 228, 35 Am. Rep. 700; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 889; Caldwell v. Alton, 33 Ill. 416, 75 Am. Dec. 282; Bloomington v. Wahl, 46 Ill. 489; Bethune v. Hughes, 28 Ga. 560, 78 Am. Dec. 789; Kip v. Paterson, 26 N. J. L. 298; Barling v. West, 29 Wis. 307, 9 Am. Rep. 576; St. Paul v. Traeger, 25 Minn. 248, 33 Am. Rep. 463; Hudson v. Thorne, 7 Paige, 261; Hawes v. Chicago, 158 Ill. 653, 30 L. R. A. 225.

34 L. R. A.

The right to regulate a business does not include the right to prohibit.

Ex parte Burnett, 30 Ala. 461; Austin v. Murray, 16 Pick. 121; Portland v. Schmidt, 13 Or. 17; Bronson v. Oberlin, 41 Ohio St. 476, 52 Am. Rep. 90; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 246.

A municipality cannot create a monopoly. Altgelt v. San Antonio, 81 Tex. 436, 18 L. R. A. 883; Tiedeman, Pol. Power, 815, 816.

The defendant could not be deprived of the privilege of contracting for or removing merchandise which the finding shows was not dangerous to life or health.

Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L. R. A. 79; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L. R. A. 789.

If the ordinance unfairly discriminates against the defendant, it deprives him of a constitutional right and is void.

Caldier v. Bull, 8 U. S. 8 Dall. 387, 1 L. ed. 648; Durkes v. Janesville, 28 Wis. 464, 9 Am. Rep. 500; Oincinnati v. Steinkamp, 54 Ohio St. 284.

Messrs. John H. Light and V. R. C. Giddings, for appellee:

The ordinance was clearly within the power of the common council to enact.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 815, 816.

The exercise of municipal authority through by-laws to regulate and suppress nuisances is ancient.

Pierce v. Bartrum, Cowp. 269; Com. Dig. By-Law, B 8.

A section providing that no person should collect garbage and offal without a permit from the board of health is valid.

Re Vandine, 6 Pick. 187, 17 Am. Dec. 351; Re Nightingale, 11 Pick. 163; Com. v. Stodder, 2 Cush. 574, 48 Am. Dec. 679; People v. Gordon, 81 Mich. 306.

The people of this state have not by the Constitution parted with any portion of their power to protect themselves, nor have they put any limitation upon themselves as to the exercise of it. It is now as fully in the legislature as at the beginning it was in the people.

State v. Wordin, 56 Conn. 226; Dunham v. New Britain, 55 Conn. 378; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 24 L. ed. 1086; Coates v. New York, 7 Cow. 535.

The legislature can invest municipal bodies with the same police power it has itself.

Ex parte Shrader, 33 Cal. 279; Johnson v. Simonton, 43 Cal. 242.

The benefit of a by-law is generally the touchstone of its validity.

Zylstra v. Charleston, 1 Bay, 332; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 869.

The courts will not interfere with the legislative exercise by municipal bodies of their police powers by which the peace, health, comfort, and general welfare are secured or promoted.

Weil v. Ricord, 24 N. J. Eq. 169.

Ordinances having for their purpose the protection of the public health and of the same exclusive scope as this garbage ordinance have been universally upheld.

Ex parte Cusinello, 62 Cal. 538; Green v. Savannah, 6 Ga. 1; State v. Freeman, 38 N. H. 426; Chicago v. Bartee, 100 Ill. 57; St. Louis v. Knox, 74 Mo. 79; Cronin v. People, 82 N. Y. 818, 37 Am. Rep. 564; Carthage v. Frederick, 122 N. Y. 268, 10 L. R. A. 178; State v. Schlemmer, 42 La. Ann. 1166, 10 L. R. A. 185; Com. v. Patch, 97 Mass. 231; Taunton v. Taylor, 116 Mass. 254; Ashbrook v. Com. 1 Bush, 139, 89 Am. Dec. 616; Singer v. State, 72 Md. 464, 8 L. R. A. 551.

Where a municipal corporation can pass ordinances in regulation of the doing of anything in its tendency prejudicial to health, the doing of such thing can be prohibited unless in accordance with a permit or license issuable by some officer or board.

Com. Dig. By-Law, B 3; Welch v. Hotchkiss, 89 Conn. 140, 12 Am. Rep. 883; People, Larabee, v. Mulholland, 83 N. Y. 324, 87 Am. Rep. 563; Chicago v. Bartee, 100 Ill. 57; Kinsley v. Chicago, 124 Ill. 359; Boehm v. Baltimore, 61 Md. 259; St. Louis v. Knox, 74 Mo. 79; St. Johnsbury v. Thompson, 59 Vt. 300, 59 Am. Rep. 781; Johnson v. Simonton, 43 Cal. 242; Charleston v. Pepper, 1 Rich. L. 364; Frankfort & P. Pass. R. Co. v. Philadelphia, 58 Pa. 119; Johnson v. Philadelphia, 60 Pa. 445; Atterton v. Chicago, 6 Fed. Rep. 558; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253.

The validity or invalidity of the refusal to issue such a permit is not relevant to this criminal prosecution.

Even a contract with a municipal corporation whereby the contractor shall have the exclusive right to collect, remove, or dispose of all garbage or offal, does not tend to create a monopoly, but is consonant with a valid exercise of the police powers relative to health.

Smiley v. MacDonald, 42 Neb. 5, 27 L. R. A. 540; Walker v. Jameson, 140 Ind. 603, 28 L. R. A. 679; Louisville v. Wible, 84 Ky. 290; Swift v. New York, 83 N. Y. 528; Alpers v. San Francisco, 32 Fed. Rep. 503; National Fertilizer Co. v. Lambert, 48 Fed. Rep. 458; State v. Payson, 47 La. Ann. 1029; State v. Fisher, 52 Mo. 174; River Rendering Co. v. Behr, 7 Mo. App. 345; Rae v. Flint, 51 Mich. 526; Re Lowe, 54 Kan. 757, 27 L. R. A. 545.

The general assembly has the most plenary power as to all matters relative to the protection of the lives, health, and general well being of the citizens of the commonwealth.

Woodruff v. Catlin, 54 Conn. 277; Woodruff v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 59 Conn. 63; Scovill v. McMahon, 62 Conn. 878.

For the purpose of exercising and carrying out this police power authority can be delegated to such bodies as the legislature thinks best. Every city charter contains such a delegation. So the power can be delegated to any committee or board already existing or thereto expressly constituted.

Raymond v. Fish, 51 Conn. 80, 50 Am. Rep. 3; Woodruff v. New York & N. E. R. Co. supra; State, New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Asylum Street Bridge Commission, 63 Conn. 91.

Any contract made under legislative authority is of binding force.

Hartford v. Hartford Electric Light Co. 65 Conn. 324; Train v. Boston Disinfecting Co. 144 Mass. 580, 59 Am. Rep. 118; Baker v. Boston, 12 Pick. 184, 22 Am. Dec. 421; 2 Hare, Am. Const. Law, 779; Com. v. Tewksbury, 11 Met. 55; La Claire v. Davenport, 18 Iowa, 210; Intoxicating-Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751, 37 Am. Rep. 284; Blair v. Kilpatrick, 40 Ind. 312; State v. Brennan's Liquors, 25 Conn. 278; Met- ropolitan Bd. of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657; Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 501, 24 L. ed. 1115; State v. Addington, 77 Mo. 118; Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 129, 21 L. ed. 929.
34 L. R. A.

Baldwin, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The charter of the city of Bridgeport conferred upon the common council ample power to regulate by ordinance the collection and removal of garbage and offal. The ordinance brought in question upon this proceeding deals only (§ 2) with "such refuse matter as accumulates in the preparation of food for the table." "Refuse matter," as the term is thus employed, can embrace nothing which has not been refused or rejected as unsuitable for table use. It may be thus rejected because it has little or no value for human food, or because it is decayed or unwholesome. It must, in its nature, be perishable, and can include little which is not liable to become decomposed or offensive if left where it falls. The common council therefore had authority to regulate its disposition in such a way as to prevent it from becoming the occasion of a nuisance. Much, however, that is of the nature of garbage and offal, and has slight value for table use, may be not unsuitable for the food of animals, for manure, or as materials for manufacture. Construing this ordinance with the strictness properly applicable to municipal legislation of a penal nature, the term "refuse matter" can only extend to matter which is in fact noisome, or which has been refused and rejected by the owner as worthless. Meat trimmings, potato parings, specked apples, and many other things of a like character, might be thrown aside in preparing table dishes, and yet properly utilized afterwards for other purposes. The mode of regulation of the disposition of kitchen refuse which is contained in this ordinance seems to be one of an alternative character. The board of health is empowered to take such measures as it may deem effectual for the removing of this refuse from the whole city or any portion of it, and to this end to employ or make contracts with one or more persons, subject to certain rules, of which the following are the leading ones: No person shall collect and transport such refuse in the city without first having obtained a permit from the board. It shall all be carried through the city in water-tight, covered carts, so loaded as not to spill; each to be plainly marked "City Garbage Cart," with the name of the contractor, and number of the cart, and of the ward, and to be used only when inspected, approved, and licensed by the clerk of the board. All such refuse is to be placed by the person on whose premises it originates in suitable covered vessels, set there in a position convenient for removal, or in some place designated by the clerk of the board, so that it "may be called for by the garbage contractor of said city; provided, however, that any person may be excepted from the provisions of this section upon obtaining a permit to that effect from the clerk of the board of health." No other matter whatever can be placed in such a vessel. "The garbage contractor or other person employed by the board of health shall call regularly at all dwellings, tenements, hotels, restaurants, or other buildings designated by the said board, and remove promptly and in as cleanly a manner as possible all garbage or offal that may be offered, and shall return the receptacles to the place on such premises from which the same were taken. All garbage and offal which shall be removed through said city shall be carried and deposited in such places as may be designated and approved by the board of health, and shall be disposed of in such manner as not to create a nuisance, and the covers of all carts, wagons, or vessels used for the purpose of removing such garbage or offal shall be kept tightly closed while they are being transported through the streets of the city. No deposit of garbage or offal shall be made within the limits of the city of Bridgeport, or upon any wharf, or upon any vessel lying at any wharf, except by permit from the board of health." The clerk of the board is to enter in a record book "all contracts entered into, or licenses issued by authority of said board." -

Under these provisions and the authority of the special act of 1895, the board of health might contract with a single person to collect and remove garbage from the entire city, or with several persons to collect and remove it from as many different portions of the city. It might also make such contracts with respect to part of the city, or to certain buildings in part of the city, and leave the collection and removal of garbage from other places open to those who obtained from its clerk a proper permit, and provided proper means of transportation. By neither method of procedure would any monopoly be created by which the common rights of citizenship would be infringed upon. Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 894; Alpers v. San Francisco, 32 Fed. Rep. 508; National Fertilizer Co. v. Lambert, 48 Fed. Rep. 458. Nor did the absence in the charter of any express provision as to the grant of licenses to engage in this business prevent the common council from resort to that mode of regulation, since it was a business which, as usually carried on, is in its nature dangerous to the public health; and as carried on in Bridgeport might, under the act of February 28, 1895, have been made by the board of health the subject of a public contract. Over any such occupation a strict watch must be kept, and the general police powers vested in the city by § 24 of its charter, in connection with the act of 1895, justify the implication of a right to limit the number of those who pursue it. State v. Wordin, 56 Conn. 216, 226; Re Vandine, 6 Pick. 187, 17 Am. Dec. 851.

The defendant offered evidence to show that he had been for many years engaged in the business of collecting and removing garbage in Bridgeport, in carts so constructed as to satisfy the requirements of the ordinance; and that he had applied to the clerk of the board for a license or permit, and met with a refusal. He also offered evidence, which was excluded, that permits had been previously issued to others; but that, before he applied, the board had instructed its clerk to issue no more to anyone. This evidence was properly excluded. The board of health having the right to limit the number of those engaged in this particular occupation, the defendant had no absolute title to a license. If the number which it had issued was unreasonably small, and if an inquiry into that subject was open to him in any proceeding, it was certainly not open in this, to which the board was not a party. He could not thus assume to take the law into his own hands, and pursue the business without a license, because a license had been wrongfully refused. His remedy, if he had any, would be to apply by mandamus to compel the board to grant him one.

The defendant offered evidence to show that all the garbage collected by him came from certain restaurants, with the proprietors of which he had contracts for its removal. This also was properly excluded. It was not claimed, and cannot be assumed, that such engagements had been entered into before the adoption of the ordinance. Without inquiring whether, had the fact been otherwise, the law would have been otherwise, it is sufficient, as the case stands, to say that no contract to perform an unlawful act can justify its performance.

The defendant further offered evidence to prove, and claimed that it did prove, that the garbage he collected was fresh, and some of it fit for food; and there was no evidence on either side tending to show that any of this garbage "was sour or putrid, and for that reason dangerous to the public health." In view of this, the defendant asked the court to instruct the jury that "the privilege of contracting to transport garbage is a liberty and property right, of which one cannot be deprived without due process of law, unless the jury find that such garbage, at the time of its transportation, is a nuisance, and detrimental to health." Such instructions were properly refused. It was a violation of the ordinance to collect and transport the kitchen refuse which was its subject, whether such of it as was being transported at the time of the act complained of was noxious or innoxious. It was enough that it was "such refuse matter as accumulates in the preparation of food for the table." There is so much of this kind of matter that is offensive and dangerous to the health of the community that all may be properly made the subject of public supervision and control. The ordinance does not extend to everything that is separated and thrown aside in the preparation of food for the table. Whatever of this description is not abandoned as worthless, remains property which, so long as it does not constitute a nuisance, may be sold or otherwise disposed of at the will of the owner. If the evidence had shown both that the contents of the defendant's cart, while they had been rejected for table use, were not offensive, and that they were in his possession as the agent or vendee of the original owners, he might have been entitled to a verdict, for he could not then have been engaged in the business for which a license was required.

The court of common pleas was requested, but declined, to instruct the jury that, "the board of health has no power to assume in advance that garbage is or will become a nuisance, and detrimental to public health, and so contract arbitrarily for its removal, or prohibit its removal by purchasers thereof; that the board of health cannot prohibit the carrying on of a lawful business not necessarily a nuisance, and which may be conducted without injury or danger to the public health; that the common council has no power, under the charter of the city of Bridgeport, to refuse a citizen the right to exercise a lawful calling, or to prohibit his exercise of the same when not dangerous to public health or safety." There was no error in refusing these instructions. Ample authority is found in the charter and the act of 1895 for dealing with the business of disposing of garbage and offal as one dangerous to the public health. Any occupation comes within the range of the police power which is such as to be naturally liable to create a nuisance unless subjected to special regulations, whether it be so conducted as, in fact, to create a nuisance or not. The prevention of nuisances is quite as important as their abatement. Raymond v. Fish, 51 Conn. 80, 96, 50 Am. Rep. 8. There is no error in the judgment appealed from.

The other Judges concur.

FLORIDA SUPREME COURT.

John M. HENDRY et al., Appts.,

v.

Samuel BENLISA, Admr., etc., of Moses E. Levy, Deceased.

(31 Fla. 609.)

1. The generic term "money" covers everything that by common consent represents property, and passes as money in current business transactions; and the payment of a debt or judgment during the late Civil War in Confederate money, and accepted, will be regarded as a full settlement, not subject to be again opened.
2. If, at the time and place of payment in Confederate money, it was generally received in business transactions, and was in fact the current money of the country, an agent's authority to receive it, in the absence of directions to the contrary from a resident principal, will be presumed.
3. The receipt of money due on a judgment, by an officer authorized by law to accept it, will satisfy the debt.
4. Clerks of the circuit court were not authorized by statute, in this state, in 1864, to receive payments of judgments, or to accept money on judgments as paid into the registry of the court, without a judicial order for that purpose; and the payment to such officers on a judgment, without prior authority, or subsequent ratification on the part of the judgment creditor, was no payment to him.
5. Money made on execution can, by statute, be paid to an attorney of record of a party in whose favor the execution issued; but such attorney has no authority, by virtue of such relation, to authorize a clerk of the circuit court, in his official capacity, and standing in no previous relationship of agency to the attorney or the judgment creditor, to accept money on a judgment.
6. A contract for the purchase of real estate was made in 1854, payments to be in three annual instalments. The purchasers did not go into possession, nor make any improvements. Suit was instituted and judgment obtained on the purchase-money notes in 1863, and no valid payment of the judgment was made during the late Civil War, nor any effort to pay since; and the land has greatly enhanced in value, and the purchasers have become insolvent. Held, that specific performance of the contract to convey will not be decreed, on account of the long period of time since the making of the contract, the changed condition of the property as to value, and the laches of the purchasers in not complying with the contract.

7. Generally, when the specific performance of a written contract to convey land is denied, its rescission will be decreed.

(May 19, 1896.)

A PPEAL by defendants from a decree of the Circuit Court for Alachua County in favor of complainant in a suit brought to cancel an agreement for the sale of real estate. Modified.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Angus Paterson for appellants.

Messrs. Cooper & Cooper for appellee.

Mabry, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

David L. Yulee, as administrator of the estate of Moses E. Levy, deceased, filed a bill against appellants, John M. Hendry, Archibald and Norman Campbell, for the purpose of canceling a written agreement for the sale of several sections of land situated in Alachua county, entered into by and between the decedent Levy and appellants. The written contract to convey the land was made in March, 1854, and Levy agreed thereby to sell the sections of land described, for $7,000, in three instalments, evidenced by promissory notes executed by the purchasers, and due, respectively, January 1, 1855, January 1, 1856, and January 1, 1857. The agreement was to convey the lands by warranty deed when the last payment of the notes was made.

The material parts of the bill, as amended, allege the contract of sale from Moses E. Levy to the purchasers, Hendry and the Campbells; the death of the former, and the appointment of David L. Yulee as his administrator; that the defendants wholly failed to pay their said notes when they became due; and that Yulee, as administrator, brought suit in Columbia county on the notes, and obtained judgment

*Headnotes by MABRY, Ch. J.

NOTE.—As to note payable in foreign money, see Hogue v. Williamson (Tex.) 20 L. R. A. 481.

As to contracts specifically calling for payment 34 L. R. A.

in coin, see note to Skinner v. Santa Rosa (Cal.) 29 L. R. A. 512.

against the Campbells. The date of the judgment was in the year 1863, during the late Civil War. It is further alleged that the judgment record and the notes were burned in the court-house of Columbia county in the year 1866, and that no part of the judgment or notes had even been paid, either to Levy in his lifetime, or his administrator since, and that said defendants were insolvent,—without means out of which to collect the purchase money agreed to be paid by them for the lands; that, on account of the failure of defendants to pay the purchase money for the lands, they had forfeited all rights or claim under the contract of purchase, and that complainant was willing and offered to cancel the said judgment obtained, if the court should so direct; that defendants had never been in possession of the lands under the contract, but Levy and his representatives had at all times since the sale been in possession, paid taxes, and exercised ownership, and that the lands, since the contract of sale, had greatly increased in value, and were then worth greatly more than when the agreement to sell was made; that all the other lands belonging to the estate had been sold, under order of court, for division among the heirs, and the lands in question were held by the administrator, under an order of court, to pay a balance due certain of the heirs on account of their distributive portions, and it was important that the estate be closed up at an early day. It is also alleged, on information, that defendant Hendry claimed to have paid certain paper bills or notes, known as "Confederate currency," on the said judgment, to the clerk of the circuit court of Columbia county, which, if true, was not authorized or consented to by complainant, or any person for him, and such pretended payment, if made, was never received or recognized by him; and, further, that said Confederate currency was not such money as he was authorized to receive, or could legally and properly receive, as administrator, in the payment of said debt.

The answer of defendants admits the death of Levy, and grant of letters of administration on his estate to David L. Yulee, and also the written agreement of sale of certain lands, as alleged in the bill, except as to the description of the lands given, and as to this the answer sets out what is alleged to be the correct description of the lands agreed to be conveyed by Levy upon the judgment of the notes given for the purchase money of the same. It is alleged that, upon the execution of the contract, defendants went into possession of the lands, and have held possession ever since. It is admitted that suit was instituted on the notes, and judgment obtained thereon, in Columbia county, in the year 1863; but it is alleged that defendants paid the judgment in full on the 25th day of January, 1864, and had the same fully discharged and satisfied.

Defendants further answered that Moses E. Levy died before either note became due, and when they became due defendants were informed that Levy left a will, and there existed at the time grave doubts as to whether David L. Yulee was authorized to receive payment of the notes and execute a deed, and for that reason tender of payment was not made; that when the judgment was obtained on the notes the currency of the country was Confederate money, and, when levy was about to be made, defendants offered to turn over the lands for the judgment, or pay the same in Confederate money, and that complainant refused to take the lands, but agreed to accept Confederate money; that defendants sold a stock of cattle for Confederate money, and with it paid the judgment in full to James Banks, the attorney of record of complainant, and the money was deposited in the clerk's office, in the registry of the court, by order of said attorney, after taking out his fees and costs.

Defendants allege that they had paid the taxes on the lands, and complainant had not, and that in the year 1864, after the judgment was paid, they were informed that complainant refused to pay the taxes on the lands, and referred the tax collector to the defendants for payment.

It is admitted that the court-house and records in Columbia county were destroyed by fire, but it is alleged that the judgment was paid prior to that time.

Defendants also filed a cross bill, in which they allege fully all the material facts set up in their answer, and pray for the affirmative relief of the specific execution of the written agreement to convey the lands.

The answer to the crossbill admits the allegations as to the agreement to sell the lands, and the judgment rendered in Columbia county in 1863. The allegation as to possession of the lands by complainant in the cross bill is denied, as well as all the other material allegations as to the agreement to accept Confederate money in payment of the judgment, or the authority of anyone to accept the same for defendant. It is alleged that defendant could not, in the execution of his trust, accept Confederate money in payment of the purchase money for the lands, and that he did not insist on, or press, the payment of the said judgment. It is also alleged that complainant was barred by lapse of time and the staleness of his claim, as well as by the statute of limitations, from attempting a specific performance of the contract after so long a time.

After the issues were made up, but before proof taken, David L. Yulee died; and Samuel Benlisa was appointed administrator de bonis non on the estate of Moses E. Levy, deceased, and was admitted as a party in the proceedings, in the place of deceased administrator.

On final hearing the cross bill was dismissed, and the contract for the sale of the lands was canceled, on the allegations and proofs under the original bill.

A material and controlling question on the appeal in this case relates to the alleged payment with Confederate money of the judgment obtained in Columbia county. If this payment was ineffective to discharge the debt, appellants were in great laches in not paying, or offering to pay, for the lands, as it is not shown, or attempted to be shown, that any other payment was made, or offered to be made, on the land notes. It is alleged and not denied, that appellants were insolvent, and had no effects out of which the purchase money could be made; and we think it is clear from the evidence that they were not in possession of the lands before the bill was filed against them. The lands were wild and unimproved, and there is no evidence of any actual possession on the part of appellants before suit was brought. Subsequent to the war, some of the lands were sold for taxes, and parties other than appellants obtained possession under tax deeds; and the administrator sued for, and recovered possession of the lands held under such deeds. It is also shown that he paid taxes on the lands, and had an agent to protect them from depredations. Appellants, it appears, paid some taxes on the lands, and looked after them to some extent; but there was no possession or improvement of the lands on their part, and they have no status on this account, as was the case in Tate v. Pensacola, Gulf, L. & D. Co. (decided at this term) 37 Fla. 439.

The contract for the sale of the lands was made in 1854, and it is alleged, and not denied, that the property had greatly increased in value at the time the bill was filed. On account of the long period of time since the making of the contract of purchase, and the changed condition of the property as to value, there can be no basis of any equity for a specific performance of the contract, unless the judgment on the notes, and the alleged payment with Confederate money, changes the case. Knox v. Spratt, 23 Fla. 64. In proof of the payment of the judgment, appellants put in evidence a receipt as follows:

Lake City, Florida, Jan'y 25th, 1864.

State of Florida, Columbia County.

Be it remembered that, on this day, received into the registry of this court the full amount of principal, interest, and costs in a suit pending in said court, to wit, David L. Yulee, administrator of Moses E. Levy, vs. John M. Hendry, Archibald Campbell, and Norman Campbell, at the hands of John M. Hendry.

Witness my name and seal of office, day and date above written.

[Signed] Samuel R. Mattair,

Clerk C. C. C. C.

It appears, both from the pleadings and proof, and is conceded by counsel for appellants, that the amount received by the clerk and referred to in the receipt, was in Confederate money; and the first contention is that the payment of the amount due on the judgment, to the clerk was of itself a valid payment and satisfaction of the same. It is not contended that the administrator ever received the money from the clerk. The proof is clear that he never received it, and that he informed Hendry, within three months after the payment to the clerk, that he could not and would not accept it. There is no showing that the administrator himself gave any directions to the clerk to receive the money. The authorities cited by counsel, in support of the contention that payment, of itself, to the clerk was a discharge of the judgment, sustain the view that the receipt of money due on a judgment, by an officer having authority, in his official capacity, to accept it, will satisfy the debt. In the case of Governor v. Read, 88 Atl. 252, where a payment to a clerk was held to be a discharge, he was authorized by statute to receive payment in money after the judgment was rendered. And so in the cases of Harvey v. Walden, 23 La. Ann. 162; Royd v. Suits, 39 Ga. 73, and Henly v. Franklin, 8 Coldw. 472, 91 Am. Dec. 296, where payments were made to sheriffs, they were authorized officers to receive payment. In the present case it is left in doubt whether any execution ever issued on the judgment in question, but, however that may be, there was no payment to the sheriff; and we need not consider the effect of such a payment, if it had been made. We find no statute existing at the time authorizing the clerk to receive payment of judgments, or to accept money as paid into the registry of the court on judgments, without a judicial order for that purpose; and our conclusion is that the clerk had no authority, by virtue of his capacity as clerk, to accept the money and discharge the judgment.

The allegation in both the cross bill and answer of appellant is that the Confederate money was paid to the attorney of record of Levy's administrator, and deposited in the clerk's office, in the registry of the court, by order of said attorney. It is now further contended that the Confederate money was paid to the clerk under the direction of the attorney of record of the administrator, and that such attorney was authorized to satisfy the judgment. In reference to the right of an agent to receive paper currency issued by the Confederate government, the decisions have not been harmonious. No court, since the war, has held, so far as we know, that Confederate treasury notes were issued by lawful authority; but "money" has been recognized generally by the courts as a generic term, covering anything that by consent is made to represent property, and pass as such in current business transactions, and that when a judgment or debt has been paid in Confederate money, and accepted, the transaction must be regarded as settled, and cannot be opened. Several decisions go to the extent that if at the time and place of payment Confederate money was generally received in business transactions, and was in fact the current money of the country, the agent's authority to receive such money, in the absence of any directions to the contrary, may be presumed. This rule has been applied, not only when the creditor and debtor were within the same state, but when the creditor resided in a state not a member of the Confederacy, and the debtor was within the Confederate lines. King v. King, 37 Ga. 205; Westbrook v. Davis, 48 Ga. 471; Rodgers v. Bass, 46 Tex. 505; Burford v. Memphis Bulletin Co. 9 Helsk. 691; Pidgeon v. Williams, 21 Gratt. 251; Hale v. Wall, 29 Gratt. 424; Robinson v. International L. Assur. Soc. 42 N. Y. 54, 1 Am. Rep. 400; Glasgow v. Lips, 117 U. S. 827, 29 L. ed. 901; Martin v. United States, 2 T. B. Mon. 90, 15 Am. Dec. 129. Other decisions hold that the rule should not be applied where the creditor was within the Federal lines, with communication between him and his agent in the Confederacy destroyed. In such a case it has been held that no implied authority to receive Confederate money existed, and that a payment to the agent or attorney did not discharge the debt. Harper v. Harvey, 4 W. Va. 539; Alley v. Rogers, 19 Gratt. 366; Waterhouse v. Louisiana Citizens' Bank, 25 La. Ann. 77; Fryer v. Storer, 89 U. S. 23 Wall. 198, 22 L. ed. 769. In the present case the receipt for the money—the record evidence of the payment made at the time of the transaction—does not disclose any agency of any attorney in connection with it. The clerk who executed the receipt states, as a witness, that he received the money under the directions of James Banks, as the attorney; and his recollection was that Banks was the attorney of record, if signing the docket, and having the direction and control of the case, make him an attorney of record. The witness had no recollection as to what lawyer or lawyers signed the præcipe for the writs when the suit was commenced. He repeats that he took the money under the directions of Banks, whom he regarded as the attorney of record managing the case, and that, after asking if it was right for him to receive the money, Banks said it was, and that he governed the case; that he (Banks) dictated the receipt, made the calculation, and, after costs and fees were paid, the balance was left with the witness, in what Banks called the "registry of the court." Hendry testified that the money was paid into the registry of the court, as evidenced by the receipt under the instructions of James Banks, attorney for the administrator, and that the attorney was present, and consented to the payment. On cross examination, in answer to the question to whom he paid the money, he said "the clerk was representing the sheriff at the time. He said the sheriff was out of town. Col. Banks was present, as I have stated, and the money was left in the clerk's hands." The testimony of George R. Fairbanks establishes the fact that he was the attorney of record who instituted the suit of the administrator against appellants. He produced an original summons in the case, which had been left in his hands, with his name indorsed on it as sole attorney. It is true he did not obtain the judgment and was absent when it was rendered, but it is evident from his testimony that he was the attorney who originally commenced the suit. The statute (Thomp. Dig. p. 359, § 9) provides that "all moneys made upon executions in this state shall be paid to the attorney of the party in whose favor execution shall have issued. . . . And in any case when the name of more than one attorney shall appear upon the records of the court, the money shall be paid to the attorney who originally commenced the suit, or to him who made the original defense." We think the testimony is not sufficient to overcome the answer to the cross bill, and establish the fact that the money was paid to James Banks as attorney for the administrator. If he intended to receive the money, it is strange that he did not accept it, and execute a receipt for it in his own name. He died before the present suit was instituted, and his testimony could not be produced, but, on the showing made, the most that can be affirmed is that he consented to, or directed the clerk to receive the money. Knowing the fact that he was not the attorney who originally instituted the suit, it may have been his purpose not to receive the money himself, but have it deposited with the clerk, for the administrator to accept. If it be conceded that Banks was the attorney for the administrator when the judgment was obtained, we do not see that he had any authority, express or implied, to authorize the clerk to receive the money. The latter stood in no previous relation of agency to either Banks or the administrator, and was not authorized by law to receive the money. Dickson v. Wright, 52 Miss. 585, 24 Am. Rep. 677. The decree dismissing the cross bill must, in our judgment, be affirmed.

The failure of appellants to show any valid payment of the judgment leaves them, as before stated, in great laches in not complying with their contract of purchase. Aside from the fact that judgment was obtained on the notes, the court would not hesitate to cancel the contract. Under the circumstances of the case, and in view of the insolvency of appellants, as shown, we are of the opinion that the court was right in canceling the contract.

Appellants are in no condition to ask for a specific performance of the contract, and, in general, when a specific performance is denied a rescission will be decreed. Kirby v. Harrison, 2 Ohio St. 826, 59 Am. Dec. 677. The complainant in the original bill offered to cancel the judgment, and the decree should have so directed, and to this extent it will be modified. The judgment record was burned in 1866, and has never been re-established, so far as is shown, but the decree in the present case should provide against any possible claim under the judgment.

The decree is affirmed, with the modification indicated, and an order will be entered accordingly.

GEORGIA SUPREME COURT.

John D. BAGLEY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

COLUMBUS SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

(.....Ga.)

*1. A justice's court has no jurisdiction of an action for damages to realty.

*Headnotes by SIMMONS, Ch. J.

NOTE.—How far crops are personal property for the purpose of levy and sale is considered in a note to Polley v. Johnson (Kan.) 23 L. R. A. 258, 84 L. R. A.

2. Fences permanently affixed to land constitute a part of the realty; and, as a general rule, unmaturing crops growing upon land belonging to the owner of the crops are to be regarded as part and parcel of the land.

3. It follows that a justice's court has no jurisdiction of an action for damages alleged to have been occasioned by the negligence of a railway company in setting fire to and burning fences inclosing the plaintiff's land, and causing damage to his pasture and to a crop of unmaturing cotton growing in his field.

For sale or mortgage of future crops, see note to Dickey v. Waldo (Mich.) 23 L. R. A. 442.

(June 18, 1896.)

ERROR to the Superior court for Chatham County to review a judgment reversing a judgment of a justice of the peace in plaintiff's favor in an action brought to recover damages for injuries caused by fire set out by one of defendant's locomotives. Affirmed.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion.

Mr Leonidas McLester, for plaintiff in error:

When trees, either growing or matured, are destroyed by the wrongful act of another, the owner may bring his action, either for the value of the trees so destroyed, or for the injury to the real estate, or his interest in it. Several remedies were open to the injured party. He might elect under either remedy to treat the real estate as personalty and sue for value of same.

Bailey v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 3 S. D. 581, 19 L. R. A. 658; Smith v. Gonder, 22 Ga. 353; Yahoola River & C. O. Hydraulic Hose Min. Co. v. Irby, 40 Ga. 482; Coody v. Gress, Lumber Co. 82 Ga. 793; Heard v. James, 49 Miss. 245.

Messrs. Miller, Wynn, & Miller, for defendant in error:

Under the Constitution of Georgia a justice of the peace shall have jurisdiction in all civil cases arising ex contractu, and in case of injury or damage to personal property when the principal sum does not exceed $100.

Code, §§ 51, 52.

Under the Constitution of 1868 the justice of the peace had jurisdiction to try cases of damage to realty as well as personalty if not involving a sum beyond his jurisdiction, but under the Constitution of 1877 a justice of the peace has no jurisdiction as to damages to realty.

Cartersville v. Lyon, 69 Ga. 577.

A justice's court has no jurisdiction of a claim for damages to a steamboat company by reason of the detention of one of its steamboats at a river bridge.

White Star Line S. B. Co. v. Gordon County, 81 Ga. 47.

A judgment rendered by a justice of the peace where he has no jurisdiction of the subject-matter is void.

Baxter v. Bates, 69 Ga. 587; Williams v. Butler, 76 Ga. 356.

Simmons, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

1. Under the Constitution of 1877, the jurisdiction of a justice's court over actions arising ex delicto is confined to "cases of injuries or damages to personal property." Code, § 5153; James v. Smith, 62 Ga. 845, 347; Cartersville v. Lyon, 69 Ga. 577, 580; White Star Line S. B. Co. v. Gordon County, 81 Ga. 47. It follows that a justice's court has no jurisdiction of a case in which the plaintiff seeks to recover damages for an injury to realty caused by the wrongful act of the defendant.

2. In the present case, which was commenced in a justice's court, the plaintiff alleged that the defendant railway company "did carelessly set fire to and destroy and burn a certain cow pasture, and about 800 yards of fencing, and about $\frac{1}{4}$ acre of cotton growing in the field, the property of complainant, and all of the value of \$25." Whether the magistrate had jurisdiction to entertain the suit must depend, therefore, upon whether the property alleged to have been thus destroyed is legally to be considered and characterized as personalty or as realty.

The burning of the plaintiff's "cow pasture" can scarcely be regarded as anything less than an injury to realty. Indeed, to characterize such an injury merely as damage to personalty would appear to be a euphemism unwarranted under the strict rules of law. If the plaintiff really intended to aver that the grass or other natural herbage growing upon his pasture lands was destroyed by fire, still such damage is to be legally considered as an injury to realty. "Growing crops, if fructus naturales, are part of the soil before severance." 4 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 894. "It is generally held that growing trees, fruit, and grass are parcel of the land." Tyler, Fixtures, 735. As we shall hereinafter more fully discuss the nature of growing crops and their legal status, we may dismiss for the present further consideration of the plaintiff's claim of injury to his pasture, and pass to a discussion of the character of the damage he sustained by reason of the burning of his fences.

"A fence is generally considered to be a part of the realty." 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 905, 906, citing cases. And, to the same effect, see Tyler, Fixtures, 116, 132, 133. Certainly, where the owner of land builds or maintains thereon a substantial fence, as a permanent structure, constituting an improvement of the premises, such fence becomes as much an integral part of the realty as would a house or brick wall erected thereon. Our Code settles this question, for it is declared in § 2319 that "anything intended to remain permanently in its place, though not actually attached to the land, such as a rail fence, is a part of the realty." So, the burning of the plaintiff's fences is likewise to be regarded as damage to realty.

Our main difficulty in disposing of the question of jurisdiction raised in this case has been to properly determine the legal character of the third item of damage claimed by the plaintiff, arising out of the destruction of unmaturing cotton growing in his field. Many of the modern text-books and numerous adjudicated cases have been adverted to during the course of our investigation, but with a result tending rather to confusion than practical aid, so far as concerns a correct determination of the question whether, at common law, growing crops were characterized as personal or as real property. For instance, Mr. Freeman says: "Crops, whether growing or standing in the field, ready to be harvested, are, when produced by annual cultivation, no part of the realty." 1 Freeman, Executions, § 113. And, in support of his text, he cites cases to show that unmaturing crops are "liable to voluntary transfer as chattels," "may be seized and sold under execution," and pass "to the executor or administrator of the occupier [of the land], if he die before he has actually cut, reaped, or gathered the same." On the other hand, it is broadly stated in the American & English Encyclopedia of Law (vol. 4, p. 887) that "growing crops, before maturity and unsevered from the soil, are part and parcel of the land on which they grow, and pass with a conveyance of the land." Cases almost innumerable are cited as showing that this rule obtains in nearly every state in the Union. This text is then immediately followed by the statement (p. 891) that "crops ripe for harvest are personal property; they pass to the executor, and not to the heir. They are liable to be seized on execution; and the officer may enter, cut down, seize, and sell the same as other personal estate." On the succeeding page it is said: "Although growing crops are part of the realty, unless severed from the soil, yet, for the purpose of levy and sale on execution, they are suffered to be treated as personalty." Again, we find it stated in 6 Lawson, Rights, Rem. & Pr. § 2681, that "crops, until they are gathered, are things immovable, or real estate, because they are attached to the ground," but, when "crops are gathered, they become movable or chattels personal, because they are no longer attached to the soil. . . . Corn, ripe, but standing cut in the field, passes by deed of the freehold. Unharvested crops go to the devisee of the land, and not to the executor; but, as against the heirs at law, they go to the executor." This statement is met by the assertion to be found in 3 Ballard, Real Prop. § 128, that "annual crops sown by the owner of the soil or by his tenant, and which are the produce of industry and care while growing and immatured, are personal property;" whereas in the first volume of the same work (§ 111) it is said that, "as a general rule growing crops, which have been planted by the owner of the soil, constitute a part of the realty; . . . but this rule is held not to apply to crops which have matured and are ready to be harvested." Mr. Kerr says: "Growing crops planted by the owner of the soil are a part of the realty, and, as a general rule, will pass with it on conveyance. . . . And this seems to be the case even though the crops are at the time standing in the field unharvested, although ripe, and the season for gathering them is long past. . . . It is the general rule that a crop growing on land at the time of a sale under execution passes to the purchaser; and the same is true on a sale under a mortgage foreclosure. . . . And growing crops are a part of the realty as between the successful plaintiff in an action of ejectment and the evicted defendant, where the crops were planted after the commencement of the action in ejectment. But the rule is otherwise where the grain was sown and harvested by one on lands to which he claimed title, and of which he was in actual possession. Crops planted by a tenant who holds under the owner of the soil are, as between the landlord and his tenant, personal property; and the tenant has the right to remove them; they become part of the realty, however, should the tenant voluntarily abandon or forfeit possession of the premises." 1 Kerr, Real Prop. §§ 50, 51. In the second volume of the same work (§ 958) the author says: "Where there are annual crops upon the lands assigned to a widow as her dower, which were growing at the time of her husband's death, they will belong to her, and not to the heirs or executors of the husband; but if there has been a severance by the husband, as where he has assigned the crops to pay his debts, the wife will not be entitled to have dower assigned therein." So far as the offense of larceny is concerned, Mr. Bishop says that standing grain was at common law considered as realty, and it required statutory enactment to constitute an unauthorized taking of crops larceny in the several states where such act is made a crime. 1 Bishop, New Crim. L. § 577. In Preston v. Ryan, 45 Mich. 174, Justice Cooley said: "While it is quite true that the growing crops are a part of the realty, yet, for the purposes of levy and sale on execution, they are suffered to be treated as personalty." And there are numerous cases in which it has been held that where the owner of crops has undertaken to sell the same at private sale, before they matured, or while ripe, though ungathered, such crops, if grain or other agricultural produce raised annually, are to be treated as personalty for the purposes of such sale. The question as to whether such crops were personalty or realty arose in considering the effect of the statute of frauds upon sales of this character. These decisions were confined, however, to sales of such crops only as were termed "emblems" at common law. Clark, Cont. 106. Says Mr. Kerr, in dealing with this subject: "A distinction is to be observed between fructus naturales, or the natural growths of the soil, such as trees, grasses, herbs, fruit on trees, and the like, which at common law are part of the soil, and fructus industriales, or fruits or products the result of the annual labor of man in sowing and reaping, planting and gathering, which, though strictly a part of the realty, as much as those products which the soil brings forth without man's intervention, are treated as personal property for many purposes." 1 Kerr, Real Prop. § 58. Mr. Bishop doubts much the soundness of the distinction made in regard to crops of the latter kind, but says: "The exception of deeming them personalty for most civil purposes, even while attached to the soil, is probably established too firmly in authority to be overthrown." Bishop, Cont. § 1296. For a full discussion of the subject, and a review of the leading cases, English and American, see Browne, Stat. Fr. 5th ed. §§ 235 et seq.; 1 Benjamin, Sales, §§ 118 et seq.; 4 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 893 et seq.; Blackburn, Sales, 5; 1 Addison, Cont. § 206; Baker, Sales, § 153; Tiedeman, Real Prop. § 799; Tyler, Fixtures, 732 et seq.; 8 Washb. Real Prop. 364 et seq.; 2 Addison, Cont. §§ 656 et seq.; 2 Schouler, Pers. Prop. §§ 448 et seq.; Tiedemann, Sales, § 59. In summing up, the author of the work last cited says: "The better opinion, independent of the authorities, would seem to be that any contract which undertakes to pass title to anything annexed to the soil, without severance, is a contract for the sale of an interest in land, whatever may be the character of the thing to be severed, and falls within the fourth section of the statute."

Anyone wishing to further entangle himself in the mystic maze of uncertainty and contradiction in which the law governing growing crops has become involved may profitably direct his attention to the legion of cases cited by the various text-writers to whom we have above referred. The field thus open to him is promising even unto distraction. Such a rich mine of abstruse legal learning is, doubtless, of untold value. It has not, however, proved helpful in the decision of the present case, nor led us to an understanding of the general principle underlying the whole subject. Indeed, we are free to confess that about the only deduction we have been able to draw therefrom is that a growing crop is a sort of legal species of chameleon, constantly changing color to meet the emergency of each peculiar class of cases in which the question arises whether it is to be considered as personality or as realty. Amid all this glare of legal light, we have not been so fortunate as to find any case, or class of cases, like the present, in which this creature of the law has thus arbitrarily volunteered to assume its distinguishing hue. Like a man with many aliases, it presents itself sometimes under one name, at other times under quite another; so that we may not know how, upon special occasion, to address it. Being thus thrown upon our own resources, we feel at liberty, and shall endeavor to classify the plaintiff's unhappy crop of cotton agreeably to our own understanding of the legal status of growing crops at common law, and without regard to the conflicting views entertained by the several authors from whom we have above quoted.

We may at the outset remark that, in our opinion, growing crops, before actual severance from the soil, were consistently regarded at common law as realty. Whatever incongruities may have crept into the law upon the subject as now understood in many jurisdictions we believe attributable alone to a misconception on the part of courts of the present day of the rules which governed this species of property under the feudal system prevailing in England at an early period of its history. Especially would it seem that the principle which underlies the doctrine of emblements has been too often overlooked, disregarded, misunderstood, or misconstrued. Blackstone tells us that in feudal times, when a common recovery suffered by the tenant of the freehold had the effect of annihilating all leases for years then subsisting, estates for years were necessarily of a precarious nature, and of short duration. 2 Bl. Com. 148. The hardship attending a thus sudden termination of the lessee's estate before he could reap the fruits of his toil, by gathering his crops, appealed strongly for his protection. Relief was justly afforded by the courts upon the doctrine of emblements, designed to meet an emergency thus occasioned, whereby the tenant for years was given a right to gather that which he had in good faith planted. Not so, however, if a tenant whose term was certain sowed a crop he could not reasonably expect to be able to harvest before his term expired, or by his own act terminated his estate before his crops were matured and gathered,—in the one case, because "it was his own folly to sow what he could never reap the profits of;" and, in the other case, because his estate terminated by reason of his own default or caprice. 2 Bl. Com. 145. And in like manner was the doctrine applied as to tenants at will. Id. 146. It is proper to further observe that the right established by the doctrine of emblements was something more than a mere naked privilege accorded to the outgoing tenant to sever from the soil his ripened crops (thus converting the same into personality), and carry them off, along with such chattels belonging to him as might happen to be upon the premises at the termination of his estate. Growing and immature crops were also covered by this doctrine, which further gave to the tenant "the right of ingress, egress, and regress so far as needful for due attention to and gathering" the same. 1 Kerr, Real Prop. § 652. "The right to emblements includes the right to the land to cultivate and harvest them." 6 Lawson, Rights, Rem. & Pr. § 2682. So, it will be seen that the effect of the doctrine was to give the departing tenant a right to the use and sustenance of the soil for a period sufficiently long to mature his crops; thus, to this extent, extending the term of his original estate, and, in consequence, depriving his successor in estate of the unrestricted use, and of all profits, of such lands as were necessary to the growing of the crops, until the same matured and were harvested. If the doctrine of emblements extended no further, the tenant at will, the tenant for years, or the tenant pur autre vie, would be fully protected, provided he remained in life; otherwise, his very natural failure and omission to demand and enforce his right would inure to the benefit of his successor in estate, thus unjustly depriving the family and creditors of such tenant of the fruits of his toil. Neither creditors nor his heirs could enter upon the land and gather the crops without committing trespass, were this a right restricted to the tenant himself, although, had the tenant himself exercised this right before his death, his heirs and creditors would have gained a just benefit and advantage by reason of such exercise, the result of which would have been to convert the crops into personality, and render the same capable of due administration and distribution agreeably to law. But this emergency was foreseen. The maxim of the law, Actus Dei nemini facit injuriam, was invoked, and the representatives of the deceased tenant were given the right to enter upon the land and gather the crops, after which, of course, having thus become converted into personal estate, they were subject to administration as such. See 2 Bl. Com. 122. Subsequently, the doctrine of emblements was still further extended to include crops planted by a tenant in fee who died before time for harvest, principally for the protection of creditors (Id. 404); and with much reason, for, as against creditors, the heir to the inheritable estate had no just claim to profits derived therefrom before he succeeded to its possession, certainly not when, indeed, his ancestor may have been enabled to plant and tend such crops solely by reason of credit extended to him by such creditors.

The whole doctrine of emblements was based upon two reasons: (1) Upon natural justice and equity; (2) upon grounds of public policy. The substantial merit of the first reason assigned is apparent. How public policy was subverted by an application of the doctrine is explained by Blackstone when he says: "The encouragement of husbandry, . . . being a public benefit, tending to the increase and plenty of provisions, ought to have the utmost security and privilege that the law can give it." 2 Bl. Com. 122. We have already shown that, where the reason of the doctrine fails, it has no application; as where, for instance, a tenant terminates his estate through his own default or misconduct. In such case the law as it existed prior to the establishment of this doctrine was suffered to apply in all its rigor, whereby a growing crop, until actually severed from the soil, was regarded as a part of the land itself, and passed accordingly. That this is true is evidenced by the fact that the courts of England have uniformly held that, at common law, growing crops were not considered personally before severance, and were therefore not the subject-matter of larceny. 1 Bishop, New Crim. L. § 577; 2 Bishop, Crim. L. 7th ed. § 768; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 781, 782, and notes; 2 Bl. Com. 404. Indeed, if, at common law, standing crops were regarded as personal property, the doctrine of emblements was needlessly devised, so far, at least, as ripened, though ungathered, crops were concerned; for we apprehend it was always the right of a tenant, upon a sudden and unexpected termination of his estate, to demand a reasonable time within which to gather up his household goods and other personal effects before vacating the premises, and, if his ungathered crops constituted a part of his chattels, he would have a reasonable time in which to gather and carry them away. The truth of the matter is, however, that, before the introduction into the law of the doctrine of emblements, the tenant had no right to the usufruct of the land a single day beyond his term, nor to any profits thereof not arising strictly within the period of his right of occupancy. Consequently, after his estate had become fully determined, he would have no better right to claim standing crops than he would plowbote, although, had he gathered his crops or exercised his right as to plowbote before the expiration of his term, his right to carry the one or the other off as personally would certainly exist. The doctrine of emblements is based, and proceeds solely, on the idea that the tenant is justly entitled to gather his crops, even though his term has expired, and without regard to whether such crops are to be considered as in the nature of personality or realty. Nor is the fact that at common law the executor of a deceased tenant was entitled to claim emblements any test as to the legal character of such crops while yet standing in the field. Here we disagree with the conclusion drawn by Mr. Freeman and other writers. Formerly, under the common-law rules of succession, the title to crops severed from the soil could not pass into the executor. Under the doctrine of emblements, however, he was given the right to enter upon the land, in the name of the deceased tenant, and convert the crops into personality, by gathering the same and carrying them away, whereby the rules of succession governing personality were given opportunity to ultimately take effect upon this species of property.

Again, as has been seen, many text-writers call attention to the fact that at common law an execution could be levied on a growing crop—evidently regarding this as persuasive authority for the statement that such crops were considered personality. In this view we cannot concur. As is well known, under the feudal system alienation or encumbrance of estates was strictly prohibited. Even a tenant in fee had no power to sell, mortgage, or otherwise incumber the estate of inheritance held by him; and, so long as this restraint upon alienation continued, the owner in fee was, in effect, no more than a life tenant. Creditors had therefore to look solely for payment to property of their debtor, in which he could, because having a right under the law to alienate the same, claim an unqualified and exclusive interest, and as to which the heir to the inheritable estate had no vested rights. Crops raised by the tenant in fee, being profits arising from the estate of freehold to which he was solely entitled, were, of course, no part of the inheritance. They were therefore held subject to his debts; not upon the idea that they were personality rather than realty, but upon the theory that they were a species of property in which the debtor had an unqualified and exclusive ownership. We believe the doctrine that all the property of a debtor, of every kind and description, of which he is sole owner, should justly be held subject to the payment of his debts, obtains even in this degenerate day. In this regard we find no inconsistency in the common law as to its treatment of growing crops as realty. On the contrary, the distinction between this class of property and mere chattels belonging to the debtor seems to have been strictly observed. The writ of fieri facias was restricted in its operation to the seizure of the "goods and chattels" of the debtor. To reach the profits of his lands (which consisted chiefly of crops grown thereon or rents issuing therefrom), the writ of levavi facias was requisite, which writ remained in use until the writ of elegit (established by statute), conferring greater rights upon creditors, naturally displaced it in general practice. 3 Bl. Com. 417-420. It is, perhaps, proper to note in this connection that, by special enactment in this state (Code, § 3642), it is provided that growing crops shall be exempt from levy and seizure under execution until matured and fit to be gathered, unless the debtor absconds or removes from the county or state. The purpose of this statute was merely to provide against a sacrifice of the debtor's property. In view of the fact that realty, as well as personality, is subject in this state to seizure under execution, it would, of course, be absurd to draw the conclusion that this change in the law as previously existing was a recognition that, at common law, growing crops were considered personality, and that the effect of the statute was to give such crops the character of realty.

We think the whole troublesome subject is pretty satisfactorily explained and relieved of much difficulty by the following extract, which we take from 2 Bl. Com. 404. Says Blackstone: "Emblements are distinct from the real estate in the land, and subject to many, though not all, the incidents attending personal chattels. They were devisable by testaments before the statute of wills, and at the death of the owner shall vest in his executor, and not his heir, they are forfeitable by outlaway in a personal action; and by the statute 11 Geo. II. chap. 19, though not by the common law, they may be distrained for rent errere. The reason for admitting the acquisition of this special property by tenants who have temporary interests was formerly given; and it was extended to tenants in fee, principally for the benefit of their creditors; and therefore, though the emblements are assets in the hands of the executor, are forfeitable upon outlaway, and distrainable for rent, they are not in other respects considered as personal chattels; and, particularly, they are not the object of larceny, before they are severed from the ground." We understand this distinguished writer to mean, when he says, "Emblements are distinct from the real estate in the land," that they constitute no part of the inheritance, as between the heir thereto and the legal representatives of the tenant in fee, but are to be regarded as merely profits arising out of the land, rather than an integral part of the land itself, considered as a vested estate; or, as between a lessee and the owner of the freehold estate, that emblements never become attached to the land in such manner as to constitute a permanent part of the realty comprising such freehold estate, but, as profits to which the lessee alone is entitled, are distinct from the land itself, and vested exclusively in him. In fact, the doctrine of emblements was designed for the very purpose of effecting such a separation, and declaring emblements "distinct" from the "real estate in the land," no matter in whom such estate vested by reason of the sudden expiration of the tenant's term. It will be noted that Blackstone does not say that growing crops are distinct from the land upon which they are grown, but only that they are so after they become "emblements." Of course, where the doctrine of emblements has no application, growing crops cannot be considered as "emblements" at all. As, for instance, when, at the present day, the owner of lands in fee simple has an unqualified and exclusive interest therein, himself plants the crops, and remains in undisturbed possession of the premises, no such distinction between the land and unharvested crops growing thereon is properly to be observed. Thus, it is the almost universal rule in this country that where such owner voluntarily sells his lands, without expressly reserving a right to enter and gather growing crops planted thereon, such crops are to be regarded as realty, and, as such, pass to the purchaser. See the collection of cases cited in 4 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 897.

It will further be observed that Blackstone seems very studiously to avoid characterizing even "emblements" as personality, but very happily, we think, remarks, instead, that they are "subject to many, though not all, the incidents attending personal chattels." And herein we believe he has struck the keynote explaining how, in later times, growing crops have come to be considered personality, simply because, the law having placed upon them many incidents common alike to chattels, no reason ordinarily exists for observing their true status as realty; and therefore the distinction which really still survives between them and mere chattels has not been clearly and consistently kept in view. Under various rules of law, many "incidents" attend, and are alike common to, both real and personal property. For instance, a new and special tax upon property might be laid upon both realty and personality, irrespective of their inherent character, and yet this would really make them no closer kin than they were before. We have already seen that at common law, while estates of inheritance were not subject to be levied on under execution, growing crops were held liable for the claims of creditors, simply because the exclusive ownership of such crops was vested in the debtor, and the heir to the inheritance had no interest therein. As crops raised by the debtor were, perhaps, the only species of realty of which this was true, and as all chattels were held subject to execution, it is not strange that, in course of time, the impression should take root in the minds of those not familiar with or not recalling the history of this rule of law, and the reasons upon which it was based, that no distinction existed between these two kinds of property, especially as in other respects no difference in the treatment of either was observed. That growing crops were subject to forfeiture upon outlaway may likewise be explained upon the idea suggested why crops were subject to execution, viz., that the debtor had an alienable, and therefore exclusive, interest therein. In the initial or preliminary proceedings to outlaway, if the recreant debtor persistently failed to obey the summons of the court, a writ was issued "commanding the sheriff to distrain the defendant from time to time, and continually afterwards, by taking his goods and the profits of his lands, which are called 'issues,' and which he forfeits to the King if he doth not appear." 8 Bl. Com. 280. So, it will be seen that his crops were reached and forfeited, not as chattels, but as "profits of his lands."

We have already explained how emblements came to be vested in the executor, instead of descending to the heir. The remaining "incident" referred to by Blackstone, viz., that emblements "were devisable by testament before the statute of wills," will readily be understood as a natural sequence of the doctrine of emblements. As thereunder the executive was empowered to reduce his testator's crops to possession, the latter could very properly direct in his testament what disposition should be made of the same after they had been so reduced to the executor's possession, and had thereby become converted into personality belonging to the testator's estate.

We shall not in the present case undertake to enter upon any discussion of the effect of the statute of frauds upon private sales of growing crops made by the owner thereof; preferring to make no attempt to successfully cross this dangerous legal bridge until necessity brings us to it. As it would appear an unpromising and impracticable task to try to reconcile the many decisions, English and American, in which this question has been dealt with and discussed, we could hope to gain no fuller light as to how, in point of fact, growing crops were classified at common law. So we may dismiss the topic, merely remarking that if, "for the purposes of such sales, emblements are suffered to be treated as personality," the case with which we are now dealing does not fall within this exception to the general rule, nor, indeed, within any other of the "exceptions" referred to by text writers, of which we are aware.

We cannot refrain from remarking in this connection the embarrassment we have experienced arising out of the practice, which seems to have sprung up in some jurisdictions, of arbitrarily regarding growing crops as personality for one purpose, and as realty for another. In the very nature of things, this species of property, being tangible in form, and possessing many marked inherent characteristics, is capable of being properly classified, and should be given a fixed legal status. Of course, where there is no imperative necessity for strictly observing and remarking the distinction existing between two entirely different species of property,—as where rules of law operating alike upon either class are merely to be construed and enforced,—no vicious consequence or positive harm immediately results from "treating" them as though they were identical in character, or even inaccurately styling something "personality" which should properly be referred to as "realty." But the importance of preserving, if possible, absolute consistency in the entire fabric of our law,—thus rendering the same unequivocal, and therefore more readily and more clearly comprehended,—should by no means be overlooked. The justice of this critical observation is evidenced by the utter confusion in which we find the law upon the subject, with which we are now dealing, to be involved.

That growing crops cannot properly be "treated" as personality under the law as understood in this state seems indisputable, in view of the definition of "realty" contained in § 2218 of the Code, which purports to be declaratory of the common law, and which reads as follows: "Realty, or real estate, includes all lands and the buildings thereon, and all things permanently attached to either, or any interest therein or issuing out of, or dependent thereon." Following this definition, it was held in Cody v. Gress Lumber Co. 82 Ga. 798, that "trees growing upon land constitute part of the realty; and a sale of them, under the statute of frauds, must be in writing." And in Frost v. Render, 65 Ga. 15, wherein it appeared that a sheriff sold, under execution, land upon which was growing a crop of cotton, it was held that, "a levy being on certain land as the property of the defendant in fi. fa., a sale under such levy carries with it the crop growing on the land, and the sheriff cannot limit the sale by an announcement that the rent of the current year is reserved;" for the reason that the law considers growing crops part and parcel of the land itself, following its ownership as a mere element of value incident thereto. This is certainly the general rule which obtains in this state, and we know of no exceptions thereto which have gained any foothold in our law on the subject. A review of the decisions previously rendered by this court in cases wherein the question as to the legal character of growing crops arose shows that they are all in harmony with the conclusion reached in the present case. In Pitts v. Hendrix, 6 Ga. 452, it was held that "a growing crop of corn, after it is laid by, and before maturity, passes to the purchaser of the land." This case was cited and followed in Ferguson v. Hardy, 59 Ga. 758, wherein the question arose as to whether the title to crops growing on lands sold under execution passed to the purchaser, as against the defendant in fi. fa. In the more recent case of Dollar v. Roddenberry (decided at the March term, 1895) 25 S. E. 410, the question was presented whether such a purchaser also acquired title as against a tenant who planted the crops, and whose estate was terminated thus suddenly by a sale of the lands; and, upon the doctrine of emblements, this question was decided in the negative. This decision was, of course, rendered without regard to whether the crops were to be considered as personality or as realty, being based solely upon the idea that the tenant was entitled to the crops as emblements, which, even though a part of the realty, were, nevertheless, not included in the sale of the land; for no greater interest than the landlord had therein could be sold under execution as his property, and, of course, the purchaser got only that which was in fact sold. Again in the case of Scolley v. Pollock, 65 Ga. 389, wherein there was a contest between a judgment creditor of a tenant and one who claimed cotton levied on by virtue of a prior purchase from the tenant of his immatured crop, and who had accordingly entered upon the land, cultivated the crop, and harvested it when ripe, the decision in Pitts v. Hendrix, supra, was cited approvingly, and it was further said: "Before maturity the crops only constitute an element of value, and are not themselves distinct chattels. We know of no ruling to the contrary by this court."

There only remains to be noticed the decision in Hamilton v. State, 94 Ga. 770, wherein the accused was charged with having fraudulently sold and disposed of personal property upon which she had previously given a mortgage, contrary to the provisions of § 4600 of the Code. The indictment against her alleged that, having mortgaged her crops in May, she, in the following November, fraudulently sold and disposed of the same, without the consent of the mortgagee, and with intent to defraud him, whereby he sustained loss. The point was raised that a mortgage given upon a growing crop could not properly be regarded as a mortgage upon personality. The decision of the court in that case was pronounced by the writer of this opinion. In dealing with the question thus raised, the distinction drawn between growths that are "fructus naturales" and those termed "fructus industriales" was stated, and to a limited extent discussed; 1 Corbin, Benjamin, Sales, § 126, and note to Norris v. Watson, 55 Am. Dec. 162, being referred to as showing that this distinction had been recognized and followed by many courts of high repute. The subject did not then, however, receive the careful and laborious investigation which this opinion evidences; and it was not necessary, for we did not rest our decision on the ground that the crops were to be deemed personality at the time the mortgage upon the same was given, but called attention to this widely-recognized distinction merely as persuasive argument tending to show that, in any view of the case, the conviction of the accused was right. As will be perceived from the concluding remarks of the opinion then delivered, the ground upon which we rested our decision was that whatever might be the character of the crops when mortgaged, if the accused fraudulently disposed of the same after maturity, so that they were removed from the land and carried beyond the reach of the mortgagee, the offense with which she was charged would unquestionably be complete. The record before us did not disclose whether she gathered the crops herself, and afterwards carried them off and sold them, or whether the sale took place while the crops yet stood, ripe but ungathered, in the field. But we did not then, nor do we now, think this would make any difference. Even in the latter event, the produce of these matured crops being the subject-matter of sale, and their separation from the land being necessarily contemplated and included in the terms of sale, severance from the soil would be an essential incident to an effectual delivery; and, until actually delivered, the sale would remain executory and incomplete. Unquestionably, the lien of the mortgage adhered to the crops as effectually after severance as before. 1 Cobby, Chat. Mortg. § 380. "A mortgage of a growing crop follows the matured and harvested grain." Id. § 381. And a mortgage lien on a crop is not lost by any natural change in its condition. Id. § 379. Therefore, we concluded that, irrespective of whether such crops should properly be considered as personality while yet immatured and growing in the field, "the crop in question being personality when sold, and being then subject to the mortgage, it does not matter whether it was personality or not at the time it was mortgaged."

The foregoing comprise all the cases of which we have any knowledge in which this court has dealt with the subject presented by the case at bar.

In the foregoing discussion we have faithfully endeavored to dissipate the darkness which overhangs and envelops the subject at the present day, and to show that at common law no inconsistency in the treatment of growing crops as realty, in fact, existed, even though "emblements" were subjected to many of the "incidents" which attached to chattels. Whether or not this attempt has been successful we leave to the reader to determine. That the proper result in this particular case has been reached we are entirely convinced, and cannot regard as even debatable. The plaintiff was the owner, not only of the crop destroyed, but also of the land upon which it was growing. His crop, therefore, cannot possibly fall within the term "emblements," nor properly be considered as even constructively constituting a species of property distinct from the land upon which it was growing at the time it was destroyed by fire.

8. Our conclusion, therefore, is that the justice's court had no jurisdiction to entertain the plaintiff's action. In reaching this result, we have endeavored not to be unduly swayed in our judgment by the importance of this particular case, nor deterred by the thought of the consequences which must inevitably ensue. After deliberate reflection, and after a most painstaking investigation of the law, we are constrained to hold that the recovery of $6 which the plaintiff obtained in the magistrate's court, cannot legally be upheld.

Judgment affirmed.

Atkinson, J., providentially absent, and not presiding.

INDIANA SUPREME COURT.

LOUISVILLE, NEW ALBANY, & CHICAGO RAILWAY COMPANY, Appt.,

Michael LYNCH.

(.....Ind.....)

1. An objection that an allegation is not sufficiently full, clear, and specific cannot be reached by demurrer, but requires a motion to make it more specific.
2. Time for repairs after notice of the unsafe condition of a locomotive boiler cannot be claimed by a railroad company so as to excuse it from liability for injury to a person near the railroad caused by an explosion of the boiler, if it could have avoided the explosion by discontinuing the use of the locomotive.
3. Facts gathered from several findings of a special verdict, although not stated in logical or consecutive order, must be considered as an entirety, and not in fragmentary parts.

4. When the jury has found that defects existed in an engine of which the owner had knowledge a sufficient time to have remedied them before an explosion which injured a bystander, it need not find further facts which raise the inference that the accident arose from the want of some precaution which the owner of the engine ought to have taken, since the question of his duty to have avoided the injury becomes one of law.

5. General instructions as to the ultimate conclusion of negligence are not proper where a special verdict is required.

6. An instruction which was not influential because no finding was made on the point involved therein by the jury which rendered a special verdict is not ground for reversal.

(October 15, 1896.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Starke County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to re-

NOTE.—As to municipal regulation of boilers, see State v. Robertson (La.) 20 L. R. A. 601.

As to the explosion of the generator of a refrigerating machine, see Ryan v. Los Angeles Ice & C.

S. Co. (Cal.) 32 L. R. A. 624.

cover damages for injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. E. C. Field, W. S. Kennan, and Walter Olds for appellant.

Messrs. J. C. Nelson, Steis & Hathaway and G. W. Beeman, with Mr. Q. A. Myers, for appellee:

It is immaterial whether the complaint is defective or not if the special verdict is sufficiently broad.

Jenkins v. Fisher (Ind. App.) 42 N. E. 954; Woodward v. Mitchell, 140 Ind. 406; Douthitt v. Douthitt, 133 Ind. 26; Stephenson v. Boody, 139 Ind. 60.

If appellant desired to know more particularly the character of defects it could have reached that question by a motion to make more specific.

Appellant was bound to know the tendency of machinery to wear out; it was bound to use ordinary care in maintaining it in safe and fit condition for the use to which it was put; it undertook and impliedly agreed that the locomotive was sound and safe for use, free from inherent defects and dangers in its use, and fit for the use to which it was put.

Louisville, E. & St. L. Consol. R. Co. v. Ute, 133 Ind. 265.

Appellant owes no less duty to the public or third persons.

Siak v. Crump, 112 Ind. 504; Mississinewa Min. Co. v. Patton, 129 Ind. 472; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Lowder, 7 Ind. App. 537; Whart. Neg. § 349; Chicago & E. Co. v. Smith, 6 Ind. App. 262; Hunt v. Missouri R. Co. 14 Mo. App. 160; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. State, 92 Ga. 891; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 1st ed. § 590; Spencer v. Campbell, 9 Watts & S. 82; 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 419; Binford v. Johnston, 82 Ind. 426, 42 Am. Rep. 508; Henry v. Dennis, 98 Ind. 452; Worster v. Forty-Second Street & G. S. F. R. Co. 50 N. Y. 208; Cooley, Torts, 660.

It is not necessary that the particular acts of negligence should be averred.

Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Berkey, 136 Ind. 181; Louisville, E. & St. L. Consol. R. Co. v. Hicks, 11 Ind. App. 588; Cleveland, O. C. & I. R. Co. v. Wynant, 100 Ind. 160; Deller v. Hofferberth, 127 Ind. 414; Mitchell v. Robinson, 80 Ind. 281, 41 Am. Rep. 812; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Smith, 5 Ind. App. 560.

A complaint for personal injury in this state is sufficient to withstand a demurrer when it characterizes the act which resulted in the injury as having been negligently or carelessly done without alleging the specific facts constituting negligence.

Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Jones, 108 Ind. 551.

The finding that while in the condition found defendant with full knowledge of such condition "carelessly and negligently permitted said engine to run over its said road" involves both actual and constructive notice.

Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Duell, 134 Ind. 156.

Where the evidentiary fact and the ultimate fact are identical the ultimate finding is properly stated by a jury.

Zigler v. Menges, 121 Ind. 99; Heick v. Voight, 110 Ind. 279; Perkins v. Hayward, 134 24 L. R. A.

Ind. 445; Braden v. Lemmon, 127 Ind. 9; Deller v. Hofferberth, 127 Ind. 417; Albion v. Hetrick, 90 Ind. 545, 46 Am. Rep. 230; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Brunker, 128 Ind. 543.

Negligence is usually a mixed question of law and fact.

16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 463, note 3, p. 465, § 1.

Whether the defendant exercised ordinary care under the circumstances is always one for the jury.

See Id. note 4, 465; Baltimore & O. & O. R. Co. v. Walborn, 127 Ind. 142; Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Stout, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 657, 21 L. ed. 745; Mann v. Belt Baltimore R. & Stock Yard Co. 128 Ind. 138; Cleveland, O. C. & I. R. Co. v. Harrington, 131 Ind. 426.

The duty of remedying the defect was affirmative and absolute. Notice to the defendant of the defect was not necessary. It was their duty to know it.

Worster v. Forty-Second Street & G. S. F. R. Co. 50 N. Y. 205.

Such condition as this locomotive is found to have been in need not be shown for any particular lapse of time.

Indiana Car Co. v. Parker, 100 Ind. 193; Jenney Electric Light & P. Co. v. Murphy, 115 Ind. 563; Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Roesch, 126 Ind. 447; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Percy, 128 Ind. 205; Louisville, E. & St. L. Consol. R. Co. v. Ute, 133 Ind. 269.

An available error cannot be predicated upon either the giving or refusal of instructions as to the law of the case, for the reason that the law is applied to the verdict and where the law is correctly applied to the facts instructions given or refused are immaterial.

Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Frawley, 110 Ind. 18; Wollen v. Wire, Id. 251; Craig v. Fraiser, 127 Ind. 286.

Negligence may be inferred from the explosion or the casualty itself.

Gerlach v. Edelmeier, 15 Jones & S. 293; Cosulich v. Standard Oil Co. 23 Jones & S. 384; Goll v. Manhattan R. Co. 25 Jones & S. 74, Affirmed, 25 N. Y. 714; Volkmar v. Manhattan R. Co. 134 N. Y. 418; Larry v. Ashton, L. R. 1 Q. B. Div. 314; Kearney v. London, E. & S. C. R. Co. L. R. 6 Q. B. 759; Houser v. Cumberland & P. R. Co. 80 Md. 146, 27 L. R. A. 154; Whart. Neg. 421; Walsh v. Missouri P. R. Co. 102 Mo. 582; Lane v. Illinois C. R. Co. 48 La. Ann. 833; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Phillips, 49 Ill. 234; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Houck, 72 Ill. 285; Cooley, Torts, 661, 662.

These cases go upon the theory that the injurious thing was inherently and intrinsically dangerous, hurtful, and insecure, and that it was hence necessary for the defendant to show that he was exercising reasonable care at the time of the accident.

Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Locke, 113 Ind. 404; Mullen v. St. John, 57 N. Y. 567; Pollock, Torts, 421; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Nitsche, 126 Ind. 229, 9 L. R. A. 750; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Troubridge, 126 Ind. 391; Brunmit v. Furness, 1 Ind. App. 401; Chicago, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Barnes, 2 Ind. App. 213.

If there be an explainable cause the duty is imposed upon a defendant to furnish that explanation.

Mullen v. St. John, supra; Allen County

Comrs. v. Bacon, 96 Ind. 81; Wabash County Comrs. v. Pearson, 120 Ind. 426; Snetthen v. Memphis Ins. Co. 3 La. Ann. 474, 48 Am. Dec. 462; Ulrich v. McCabe, 1 Hill. 251.

Hackney, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellee sued the appellant, and recovered a judgment for damages on account of personal injuries sustained from a missile thrown against him by the explosion of the appellant's locomotive boiler. The allegations of the complaint charging the negligence of the appellant were as follows: "That the locomotive engine thus used by the defendant, and which exploded as heretofore mentioned, was at the time it so exploded, and for a long time prior thereto, defective, unsafe, and unfit to use for the purposes intended by the defendant, in this, to wit: That the same was old and worn out; that the stay bolts of the boiler were worn out and burned in two; and that the same was otherwise defective, unknown to plaintiff, and of which defectiveness, unsafeness, and unfitness the defendant had full knowledge, or by reasonable diligence could have known the same. And plaintiff avers that the defendant negligently and recklessly used and attempted to use the same, as aforesaid, with full knowledge of its defectiveness and unsafe condition, or of which he could have known by reasonable diligence, and by reason of which negligence and carelessness of the defendant the said locomotive engine exploded, as hereinbefore mentioned, causing the injury of the plaintiff herein complained of." The appellant insists that its demurrer to the complaint should have been sustained for the reason, as here urged, that it does not appear from the facts alleged that the explosion resulted from any of the defects mentioned. On behalf of the appellee it is urged that the allegations sufficiently connect the result with the causes so alleged; that a motion to make more specific was the proper practice for presenting the appellant's objection to the complaint; and that the special verdict returned distinctly connects the causes alleged, the defects in the locomotive, with the explosion, and thereby cures any weakness in that respect which might be urged against the complaint. A fair construction of the allegation is that the locomotive was defective, including worn-out and burned stay bolts of the boiler, and that by the use of the locomotive in that condition the explosion occurred. The condition with the use alleged was the cause, and the explosion the effect. If, as we think it may, the allegation in question may be regarded as a general allegation of negligence resulting in injury, and the appellant's objection were, as we think it is in effect, that such allegation is not sufficiently full, clear, and specific, such objection could not be reached by demurrer, but required a motion to make more specific. Cleveland, C. O. & I. R. Co. v. Wynant, 100 Ind. 160; Doller v. Hofferberth, 127 Ind. 414; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Berkeley, 136 Ind. 181, and cases cited in each. We conclude, therefore, that the objection urged against the complaint is not available.

Some of the special findings of the jury were as follows: "(3) We find that the plaintiff, Michael Lynch, was at the time of the explosion of said engine engaged in handling hay near a certain barn situated about 100 feet west and off the defendant's right of way, and that the engine exploded when almost opposite and due east from where the plaintiff was engaged at his said work." "(5) We find that the said engine was at the time of said explosion out of repair, unsafe, and defective, and in a dangerous condition. (6) That the boiler, fire box, and part of stay bolts between said boiler and said firebox of said locomotive engine were worn out, weakened, and broken prior to said explosion, and so remained until said explosion, and thereby said boiler and fire box were insufficient, and unable to retain or hold or resist the pressure of steam in the boiler of said locomotive engine. (7) We further find that said engine, numbered 60, that exploded on January 3, 1893, while being handled by defendant company at Francesville, Indiana, had broken bolts, called 'stay bolts,' and that such broken bolts gave no support or strength to the boiler of said engine at the time it exploded; that said broken bolts were located at the left side of the fire box of said engine; and that the explosion occurred at that part of the boiler where such broken bolts were located. (8) That the defendant did know, or could have known, prior to the happening of the explosion, in time to have remedied the same, that said bolts were broken. (9) We further find that defective stay bolts can be detected by placing a piece of iron on one side, and tapping the same with a hammer on the other; that, if the bolts are broken or defective, they give a dull sound; that said bolts can be removed, and new ones put in. (10) That there were at the time of the explosion forty-five broken bolts in the left-hand fire sheet, which were in that condition for at least four weeks prior to the accident. (11) That a boiler having that number of broken bolts in a fire sheet on one side is not of sufficient strength to resist the pressure of 140 pounds of steam." "(15) We find that said engine, numbered 60, was at the time of said explosion old and much worn, and was before said explosion out of repair; that her boiler and pipes were old and worn and leaky; that the stay bolts of the boiler and fire box were rusty, corroded, and broken before said explosion; and that the defendant company had full knowledge of the worn-out and defective condition of said engine as aforesaid during said time, and carelessly and negligently permitted said engine to run over its said road."

By the fifteenth finding it appears that the appellant had knowledge of the condition of the locomotive "during said time." The quoted words evidently refer to the period found in the tenth finding, "four weeks prior to the accident," during which there were forty-five broken stay bolts in the fire sheet. The fact that actual knowledge, prior to the explosion, was proved to have been possessed by the appellant is earnestly denied by its counsel. We find that one witness testified to having served the appellant, as engineer, in running the locomotive in question, from the 15th to the 22d of December, 1892, the explosion having occurred on the 8d day of January, 1893; and that during that period he observed that there were leaks in the flues, flue sheets, and joints and in crown bolts, which extended from the crown sheet to the fire box. This knowledge would probably be sufficient to charge the company, as to one not connected with the company, and not upon its right of way; but it is further shown that each day during said period, said engineer reported the condition of the locomotive to the company. As suggestion is made by counsel as to the requirement that appellant should have notice of the defects a sufficient time in which to remedy them. Our attention has not been called to reason or authority supporting the proposition that time for repairs is an element in considering the duties or liability of the appellant to the appellee with reference to the care and use of its locomotives.

There is nothing in the relations of the parties requiring the use of the locomotive one hour after its defects were known, nor is there any presumption that the interests of the general public would suffer from the discontinued use of the locomotive temporarily or permanently. This may not be true with reference to the discontinued use of some part of the roadbed of a railway company, operating as a quasi public corporation. It may not be true with reference to defects in the public streets of a city or town where their discontinued use is a public inconvenience; and it may not be true where the relations between the parties are those of master and servant, and the servant continues to use a defective appliance which the master has promised to repair. Of the rule which may apply in any of these cases, we are not concerned further than to say that, whatever it may be, it has no application to the present case. We think it may be safely said that notice of the defects, so far as these parties were concerned, was sufficient if for such time that the appellant might have avoided the explosion, either by repairs or by discontinuing the use of the locomotive.

It is objected that the special verdict did not find that the explosion was the result of the defects in the locomotive, found by the jury. It is found that at the time of the explosion, and for four weeks prior thereto, there had been forty-five broken bolts in the fire sheet; that the broken bolts gave no support or strength to the boiler, thereby rendering said boiler insufficient to resist the pressure of steam therein, and was dangerous; that the explosion occurred in that part of the boiler where such broken bolts were located. It is true that these facts are gathered from several of the findings, but there is no requirement that they should have been stated in logical or consecutive order, and it is our duty to consider the findings of the verdict in their entirety, and not in fragmentary parts. The facts so found raise the irresistible inference that the broken bolts, with the use of the locomotive, caused the explosion.

The verdict is challenged, further, as not finding facts from which the inference fairly arises that the accident resulted from the want of some precaution which the appellant ought to have taken. This proposition, we presume, was advanced upon the theory that none of the alleged defects caused the explosion, and that appellant had no notice, prior to the occurrence, of such defects as caused the explosion.

34 L. R. A.

However, when it appears that the defects existed, and that appellant knew of them a sufficient length of time to have avoided the explosion, it then becomes a question of law as to whether the appellant owed the duty to the appellee to exercise a reasonable care to avoid it. That such was its legal duty is not questioned. She owed the duty to the public, whose privileges she exercised in moving her trains by locomotive power, to so exercise that privilege as to not unnecessarily extend the hazards of any member of the public. The question here is unlike that in Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 134 Ind. 16, where the injury resulted from the proper use of a proper appliance, a safety valve, in proper condition.

At the trial, the appellant asked the following charge to the jury: "You are further instructed that the fact that the boiler of the engine numbered 60 exploded when in use by the defendant is, of itself, no evidence of negligence on the part of the defendant, either as to the inspection or repairing of the engine, or in the management of the engine." The court refused that charge, and, instead, gave, of its own motion, the following: "The fact that the boiler of the engine exploded when in use by the defendant is not sufficient evidence of negligence on the part of the defendant either as to the inspection or repairing of the engine, or in the management of the same; but it is a fact that you may consider, in connection with all the other facts established by the evidence, in determining whether the engine was defective, and that the defendant acted carelessly and negligently in allowing said engine to be run in its then condition." The appellant insists that it was error to refuse the first, and error to give the last, of these instructions, and the argument is directed to the question as to what presumptions arise from the mere fact of the explosion. It will be observed that either instruction is as to the force of a fact leading to the ultimate conclusion of negligence on the part of the appellant. It may be said, also, that the special verdict did not return this ultimate conclusion. The ultimate conclusion as to that question, upon the special verdict, was for the court, and not for the jury; and its return by the jury would have left no question for decision by the court. The special verdict would have been, in effect, but a general verdict. The instruction refused was one of a series of general instructions asked, and that given was one of a series of general and special instructions given by the court. It is manifest that general instructions, where a special verdict is required, are inappropriate. As said in Elliott, App. Proc. § 645: "As there is no propriety in giving general instructions, and as the law of the case must be pronounced upon the facts contained in the special verdict, general instructions cannot, as a rule, be influential." Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Frawley, 110 Ind. 18; Johnson v. Outter, 116 Ind. 278; Slayner v. Joyce, 120 Ind. 99; Woolen v. Wire, 110 Ind. 251; Indianapolis, P. & C. R. Co. v. Bush, 101 Ind. 582; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Hart, 119 Ind. 273, 4 L. R. A. 549; Toler v. Keiher, 81 Ind. 388. Since the ultimate conclusion was not returned, it is apparent that the instruction given was not influtal; and, since instructions upon the subject were inappropriate, there was no error in refusing that asked.

It is contended, further, that the damages assessed were excessive. This contention rests upon the appellant's construction of the evidence that the appellee was not permanently and seriously injured, but that his alleged injuries were feigned. We are not at liberty to adopt this construction of the evidence, since, upon the whole evidence, there was conflict upon this question. There was testimony that the appellee had endured intense pain and suffering; that he was permanently disabled from performing manual labor; that he could never again walk actively, but that he must walk with a dragging or shuffling motion of the feet; that he was but twenty-six years of age, and depended upon daily labor for his support; and that prior to the injury he was able-bodied, strong, healthy, and had an earning capacity of $30 per month. Upon the theory that the injuries sustained were not magnified or feigned, we cannot say that at first blush the damages appear to be so large as to suggest that the jury were overreached, or acted corruptly.

No available error having been disclosed by the record, the judgment is affirmed.

NEW JERSEY COURT OF ERRORS AND APPEALS

Lewis, C. POTTER and Wife, Appts.,
v.

Arthur E. BERRY, Guardian of Samuel Dally.

(53 N. J. Eq. 151.)

A person of advanced years devised certain lands to his daughter, and, in-

Headnotes by BRASLEY, Ch. J.

forming her and her husband of the fact, put them in possession, stating that he desired them to hold the property during his own life. A few years afterwards, the father having become a lunatic, his guardian notified the daughter and her husband to yield up the premises. Held, that a court of equity would protect the daughter and her husband in their possession, thus giving effect to the purpose of the father as expressed during his sanity.

NOTE.—Using lunatic's property to carry out his presumed wishes or to fulfil his equitable obligations in the absence of a legal liability.

- I. Power generally.
- II. In support of his family.
- III. In support of illegitimate children, etc.
- IV. For allowances to persons entitled to inheritance.
- V. For allowances to collateral relations.
- VI. For allowances to persons not related.
- VII. For charitable and religious purposes.
- VIII. To continue arrangements made while sane.

I. Power generally.

The court of chancery has power out of the surplus income of the estate of a lunatic to provide for the support of persons not his next of kin and whom the lunatic is not under legal obligation to support, where it specifically appears that the lunatic himself would have provided for such support had he been sane. Re Heeney, 3 Barb. Ch. 284.

And where the income of the estate of a lunatic is much more than sufficient for his support and those members of his family for whom he is bound by law to provide, the court may make an allowance out of the income to his near relatives who are in need of assistance. Re Willoughby, 11 Paige, 57.

So, in Re Windsor, Shelford on Lunacy, 180, Lord Chancellor Brougham recognized the doctrine that an allowance might be made out of the estate of a lunatic for persons other than those whom the lunatic was bound by law to provide for, but refused to make the allowance asked for upon the ground that the surplus income of the lunatic was required for contingent expenses.

The court in making such allowances acts for the lunatic as it supposes he himself would have acted if he had been of sound mind. Re Willoughby, supra.

And the amount and proportion of allowances thus made rest entirely within the discretion of the court. Ex parte Whitbread, 3 Meriv. 90.

The origin of the practice of granting an allowance for the relations of a lunatic other than those whom the lunatic is bound by law to provide for has been traced to the order of Lord Chancellor Thurlow in Re Cotton reported in a note to 2 Meriv. 100, which was made upon an objection to a report allowing maintenance generally without specifying the proportions, which was referred back to a master for review, who thereupon certified that the sum allowed was appropriated, and after specifying the sum allowed for the lunatic himself, stated that the remainder is to be divided among his immediate relations. And Lord Thurlow confirmed the report and directed the allowance to be made. Shelford, Lunacy, 187.

In Re Blair, 1 Myl. & C. 300, 5 L. J. Ch. N. S. 150, however, it was said that the practice of granting allowances to relations of lunatics for whom the lunatic was not legally bound to provide was one which could not be regarded with too much caution, and the principle involved in it ought to be narrowed rather than extended in its operation, and that such jurisdiction should never be exercised without the greatest possible jealousy and caution. But see same case, infra, IV.

II. In support of his family.

Where the father of a family becomes a lunatic the court does not look to the mere legal demands which his wife and children may have upon him, which amount perhaps to no more than to keep them from being a burden upon the parish, but considers what the lunatic would probably do and what it would be beneficial to have done, and makes an allowance for them proportioned to his circumstances. Ex parte Whitbread, 3 Meriv. 90.

Thus, in Re Freak, Shelford on Lunacy, 180, the net annual income of a lunatic was divided into thirty-two equal parts, seventeen of which were allowed for the support of the lunatic, his wife, and

(June 17, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the Chancery Court requiring defendants to surrender possession of certain real estate belonging to plaintiff's ward of which they had taken possession under a contract with him.

Reversed.

Statement by Beasley, Ch. J.:

In the latter part of the year 1886 or 1887, Samuel Dally, of the township of Woodbridge, then about seventy-eight years old, being about to make his will, asked his son-in-law, Lewis C. Potter, to make choice for his wife, Anna M. Potter, among the several parcels into which he had divided his real estate for distribution among his children by will. Potter chose a parcel consisting of three tracts, one of said tracts being a clay bank; and Dally, assenting to such choice, made his will accordingly, which is still in existence, unrevoked. At the same time, and incidental to the testamentary gift, Mr. Dally told his son-in-law, Potter, who was then and still is in straitened circumstances, to take possession of these tracts, and make what he could out of them in the testator's lifetime, without compensation to the testator, and paying only the taxes. Potter accordingly gave up another clay bank which he was then working, and took possession of the bank of his father-in-law, Dally, which he has ever since held, and continued to work as his only means of livelihood down to the filing of the bill and subsequently, making large expenditures for draining and other permanent improvements of the clay banks, in reliance upon said agreement of Mr. Dally. During this period, at one time when it was supposed that a railroad would be built through the property, Potter applied to his father-in-law for some writing to confirm him two unmarried daughters, and the remaining fifteen parts paid to his four married daughters and to the children of a deceased child.

And in Re Drummond, 1 Myl. & C. 627, 6 L. J. Ch. N. S. 58, the allowance made out of a lunatic's estate for the maintenance of himself and daughters was increased in consideration of the intended marriage of one of the daughters, and a portion of such increased allowance was appropriated to the general establishment of her and her husband, and was directed to be settled to her separate use, and a sum of money provided by the master was also ordered to be paid to her out of her father's estate by way of outfit on her marriage.

And in Re Evans, Shelford on Lunacy, 166, an annuity belonging to an insane wife was ordered to be paid to her husband as committee of her estate where she had two sons and the annual income of her husband was insufficient to support her and to educate her children in a proper manner.

So, the wife of a lunatic who had an ample estate is entitled to an order directing his guardian to pay her out of his estate the money necessary to redeem her jewels, which were pawned by the husband with her consent while sane to pay his personal expenses, the proceeds of the loan having been so applied. Re Harrall's Estate, 81 N. J. Eq. 101.

But allowances made to a family of a lunatic greater than is required by law are not made because the family would be entitled to his estate on his death, nor necessarily to the extent of giving them the whole surplus beyond the allowance made for his personal use. Ex parte Whitbread, 2 Meriv. 99.

See also infra, IV., For allowances to persons entitled to inheritance.

III. In support of illegitimate children, etc.

The right to appropriate the lunatic's property would seem to extend to appropriations for the support of his illegitimate children, but the propriety of such provision for the mother of such children would appear to be doubtful.

Thus, in Ex parte Haycock, 5 Russ. Ch. 154, it was held that an allowance should be made out of the lunatic's estate for his illegitimate children, but not for their mother.

And in Ex parte Galpin, and Ex parte Spurrell, set forth in 5 Russ. Ch. 154, allowances were made out of the estate of a lunatic for the benefit and maintenance of his illegitimate children.

And in Re Jodrell, Shelford on Lunacy, 161, the lord chancellor declared that the natural child of a lunatic whom he intended while sane to give a liberal education, whose mother had not sufficient means for the purpose of carrying such intention into effect, ought to be maintained and educated out of the estate of the lunatic, and referred it to the master to inquire and certify what would be a fit and proper sum to be allowed for the past and future maintenance and education of the child.

So, where the commission of lunacy acting in accordance with law finds the fact of the unsoundness of mind of a party and also who are the persons composing his family, and orders the maintenance of the lunatic and such family, it is the business of the committee to obey such orders, and having done so he is entitled to protection, and his duty and rights are not affected by the fact that the lunatic had another wife living, and that the woman provided for was not his lawful wife and the children were not legitimate. Halsey's Appeal, 120 Pa. 209.

IV. For allowances to persons entitled to inheritance.

Allowances out of the estate of a lunatic larger than the law would require are made almost as a matter of course with reference to the children of the lunatic or other descendants who are presumptively entitled to his estate in case of his death, where there is but little or no hope of his recovery. Re Willoughby, 11 Paige, 257.

Thus, in Re Blair, 1 Myl. & C. 300, 5 L. J. Ch. N. S. 150, an allowance was made out of the income of a female lunatic for the benefit, support, and maintenance of her nephews where they would, upon her death intestate, become entitled to her property, and there was no probability that she would ever recover the use of her reason or become entitled to the management of her estate, and the incomes of the nephews were insufficient for their support having regard to their expectations in life.

And in Re Croft, 33 L. J. Ch. N. S. 481, an allowance was made out of the income of a lunatic to a first cousin the next of kin who was in needy circumstances and obliged to subsist upon charity, where the lunatic's income was much larger than was necessary to satisfy his wants.

And in Re Frost, L. R. 5 Ch. 699, 39 L. J. Ch. N. S. 508, 18 Week. Rep. 998, 23 L. T. N. S. 233, weekly allowances were ordered out of the surplus income of a wealthy lunatic to needy persons who were supposed to be her next of kin and for whom she had while sane expressed an intention to make some provision though their title as relatives had not been established.

Allowances out of the income of a lunatic are made, not because the parties benefited thereby are his next of kin or entitled to his property after his death or as such have any right to an allowance.

in possession, at which Dally became quite irritated, and told him to go and make what improvements he saw fit, and he never should be disturbed. In November, 1892, the complainant, Berry, was appointed, by Middlesex county orphans' court, guardian of said Samuel Dally, who had been duly found to be of unsound mind (and to have been so since the 1st day of June, 1892), under a commission out of the court of chancery; his mind having wholly failed from senile dementia. On the 28th of February, 1893, said guardian served upon Potter and his wife notice to quit and deliver possession of said premises on the 1st day of June then next to said guardian, and further to desist at once from digging any clay or sand on said premises or committing any other waste. The Potters not having obeyed said notice, the bill in this cause was filed by said guardian, joining with him the said lunatic as complainant, for an injunction and account and general relief. The defendants answered, setting up the above facts, and also, by way of cross bill, prayed specific performance of the verbal agreement, and also that the arrangement should be continued as a scheme of benevolence initiated and persevered in by the lunatic, and on the principle that the court should do for him in the administration of his estate what presumably he would do himself if sane, alleging that he has ample income aside from the clay bank for support of himself and his wife, who are all his family. The decree appealed from is for an accounting and injunction, and that defendants surrender possession.

Mr. Alan H. Strong for appellant.
Mr. Ephraim Cutler for respondent.

Beasley, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was decided in the court of chan-cell because the court will not refuse to do for the benefit of the lunatic that which it is probable he himself would have done. Re Whitbread, 2 Meriv. 99.

In Re Earl Lanesborough, 7 Ir. Eq. Rep. 606, however an allowance out of the estate belonging to a lunatic to assist in educating children entitled to the estate in remainder after the lunatic, upon petition of the mother, who was entitled to a jointure which would after a coverture be chargeable on the estate, was refused on the ground that it would be taking one man's money to give another.

And a first cousin whom a lunatic had voluntarily aided while sane is not a dependent upon him within the meaning of a statute providing for payment for the support of insane persons in an asylum when their incomes are sufficient, beyond what is needed for the support of persons dependent upon them. Re Hybart, 119 N. C. 359.

V. For allowances to collateral relations.

Allowances may be made in a proper case out of the estate of a lunatic, not only to his children and grandchildren but to brothers and other collateral kindred. Ex parte Whitbread, 2 Meriv. 99.

And where a large property devolves upon an elder son who is a lunatic, as heir at law, and his brothers and sisters are slenderly or not at all provided for, the court will make an allowance to the latter for the sake of the former upon the principle that it would naturally be more agreeable to the lunatic and more to his advantage that they should receive education and maintenance suitable to his condition than that they should be sent into the world to disgrace him as beggars. Ibid.

So, in Re Heeney, 2 Barb. Ch. 323, the committee of a wealthy lunatic was authorized and directed to allow and pay to a surviving sister of the lunatic an annuity which she had theretofore been accustomed to receive from her brother out of the income of his estate, and to pay her physician's bills and such other occasional sums as her brother had been in the habit of giving her from time to time.

And in Re Cotton, 2 Meriv. 100, note, an allowance was made out of the lunatic's income a part of which was appropriated for the support of the lunatic's family and the remainder was divided among his immediate relations.

So, in Elwyn's Appeal, 67 Pa. 397, a sum was allowed out of the lunatic's estate, for the support of his sister who was not one of his family but for whom he had himself provided while sane, without objection upon the part of the committee.

Expenses incurred by the committee of a lunatic in the transfer of property bought by the lunatic for the benefit of his sister, however, will not be allowed against the estate where it does not clearly appear that the lunatic if in the possession of his faculties would in all probability have paid them himself. Re Stephens v. Marshall, 23 Hun, 642, distinguishing Re Heeney, supra, upon the ground that in that case the allowance appeared to be one which the lunatic would have made if sane.

VI. For allowances to persons not related.

The power of the court also extends to allowances for persons not related, the presumed wishes of, or what the lunatic himself would do if sane, being the sole test as to its exercise.

Thus, where the income of the estate of a lunatic is much more than could be expended for the comfort and support of the lunatic and his family in the style in which they ought to be supported, the court has power to make an allowance for the benefit of the daughter of the wife by a former marriage out of the estate in the hands of his wife as committee where it appears that the lunatic would make a provision for her support if he was legally competent to do so. Re Willoughby, 11 Paige, 257.

But such an allowance will not be made where the court is not satisfied that the lunatic would consider her as having such a claim upon his bounty if he were restored to reason, and that he considered her as entitled to support from him or as standing in the situation of an adopted child, and there is reason to suppose that she had property of her own which would be sufficient for her support with the addition of what she could obtain by her own exertions. Ibid.

So, where a person while in possession of his faculties placed himself in the situation of a father to two young ladies, supporting them as members of his family and sending them to boarding school, where one of them completed her education and again became a member of his family leaving the other still in school, when he became insane, the court will direct the committee to let those young ladies remain in the family and be supported as they had theretofore been, until their marriage or the death of the lunatic, and to continue the one in school for the same length of time that the other had been kept there by the lunatic, and pay the same allowance for her education. Re Heeney, 2 Barb. Ch. 323.

And in the same case the committee was directed to allow to three aged ladies whom the lunatic while sane had sustained in their younger days and again after the death of their husbands until the time he became insane, the same sum which the lunatic had been in the habit of giving them as a cery on the ground of its purely legal aspect. It was found that the defendants were in the occupation of the lands in question as the licensees of the lunatic, and that the licensor having become of unsound mind, and his guardian having notified them that such license was revoked, they were ordered by the decree to remove from the premises in question, and to account for the profits. Looking at the affair in this aspect, it is difficult to see how a court of equity could take cognizance of the case, for in such a situation an action of ejectment would appear to be the appropriate remedy. But as a cross bill has been incorporated in the answer, presenting for the consideration of the court of chancery certain equities that enter into and modify the strict legal status of the transaction, it has appeared to this court to be the proper course to retain the case, so as to give due force to such conscionable characteristics.

The equities referred to are those inseparable from the fact that the lunatic, who is represented by the respondent in this appeal, had expressed during his sanity, in an unquestionable form, his purpose that the appellants should remain in the possession of the premises in dispute during his own life. This property, by his will, he had devised to his daughter; and, in turning it over to her husband, he said, according to the testimony of the latter: "If I ever needed it, I needed it now. He intended it for his daughter, and he wanted her to be benefited while he was alive." For several years before the father-in-law's lunacy, the appellants continued in the occupation of the premises, spending considerable money in putting them in a productive condition. The son-in-law and the daughter, who were thus provided for, had a large family, and were in somewhat straitened circumstances; and the father, who thus established them, was possessed of an estate that fully warranted his generosity. The question, therefore, arises fixed allowance, and to pay the arrears of such allowance from the time it had been suspended by the incapacity of the lunatic.

And in Re Earl Carysfort, 1 Craig & Ph. 73, an annuity was allowed out of the income of a lunatic's estate as a retiring pension to an old personal servant of the lunatic who was obliged to retire from services by reason of age and infirmity, upon the statement of his committee that they were satisfied that the allowance was one which the lunatic if he should ever recover would approve of.

VIII. For charitable and religious purposes.

The same rule applies to donations for charitable and religious purposes.

Thus, the committee of a wealthy lunatic may be authorized by the court to place at the lunatic's disposal small sums of money for the purpose of charity, so long as the lunatic is competent to judge of the claims of applicants. Re Heeney, supra.

And a woman found by inquisition to be of unsound mind, and for whom a committee had been appointed, may be permitted by the court to make a gift out of her property for the support of certain indigent brothers and sisters, where it appears that she knew there was enough money to enable her to make the gift without encroaching upon her means of support, and it does not appear that her contemplated gift was the fruit of any importunity or undue influence upon the part of the donees. Re Gilbert, 3 Abb. N. C. 222.

But the committee of a lunatic will not be allowed personally to expend any part of the lunatic's estate for general charity or objects of benevolence or piety for which the lunatic himself had not been in the habit of contributing specifically and regularly while sane. Re Heeney, supra.

So, the court may authorize the committee of a wealthy lunatic to pay for the support of an institution of religion in the church where the lunatic and his family had been accustomed to worship, such sums from time to time as the lunatic may desire him to pay for that purpose, not exceeding the amount which the lunatic had been in the habit of paying annually before he became insane. Ibid.

And the committee may provide for the payment of the lunatic's customary contributions to the church which she had been in the habit of attending. Re Knapp's Estate, 18 Misc. 285.

And in Re Strickland, L. R. 6 Ch. 226, 24 L. T. N. S. 530, 19 Week. Rep. 615, the committee of a lunatic who was tenant for life of a large number of houses all in the same neighborhood the rental from which produced a large surplus after providing him with every comfort, the committee being also his heir at law and sole next of kin, was permitted to contribute out of the lunatic's income after a sale of three of the houses for a church site to a new parish, a reasonable sum with reference to the amount of his income towards building a church and parish schools in connection with it.

VIII. To continue arrangements made while sane.

The doctrine of the principal case that the court will give effect to the intentions and carry out the projects of a person expressed and commenced while sane, after he becomes insane, is supported by the cases found bearing upon the subject.

Thus, where an elderly widower without children having a large estate engages his nephew and his family to live with him and take care of him and his estate, taking the nephew from a lucrative business and paying him a salary and supporting him and his family as part of his household, and subsequently becomes afflicted with senile dementia and is adjudged a lunatic, and a committee of his estate is appointed and the nephew is appointed committee of his person and fulfils his duty satisfactorily, the nephew is entitled to receive from the committee of the estate a sufficient monthly allowance to continue the household in the same manner as before the lunacy, and to pay his salary as before upon the ground that it might reasonably be supposed that the lunatic would have continued to do so had he retained his sanity, and that it was apparently best adapted to his peace and comfort. Hambleton's Appeal, 102 Pa. 50.

So the wife of an insane man who lives in his mansion house is not prevented from remaining there and using such supplies provided for the family as may be necessary to maintain her and the family according to their condition in life, by a statute providing for sending insane persons to an asylum and requiring their guardians to support them so long as their incomes may be sufficient for that purpose. Re Hybart, 119 N. C. 359.

And the committee of a lunatic cannot maintain ejectment against the lunatic's wife for the purpose of ejecting her and his children from the home he had provided for them while sane, though it is the only property he owns, especially where she is in possession under the husband not pretending to hold adversely to his title. If in the judgment of the committee the interest of the lunatic and his family would be best promoted by leasing the homestead or a part of it and providing for them elsewhere, he can represent the facts to the court and ask instructions. Shaffer v. List, 114 Pa. 486.

F. H. B.

whether, the father having lost his mind, this benefaction of his towards his own child is to be frustrated and revoked by his guardian. No case has been observed in which a court of equity has permitted such a cruel dispossession. The cases strongly enforce the opposite doctrine. The general rule on this subject is that the court will do that in these matters which it is reasonable to believe the lunatic himself would do if he had the capacity to act. The decisions are numerous, and all to this effect. The following are illustrative cases: Ex parte

Whitbread, 2 Meriv. 102; Re Willoughby, 11 Paige, 257; Re Lacey, 2 Barb. Ch. 826; Campbell v. Mackay, 1 Myl. & C. 624. The result is that the appellants should not, under present circumstances, be disturbed in the possession and use of the property in question, and a decree should be entered to that effect.

Consequently let the decree appealed from be reversed, and a decree entered in accordance with the foregoing view, with costs to be paid out of the estate.

KENTUCKY COURT OF APPEALS.

AMERICAN ACCIDENT COMPANY OF LOUISVILLE, Appl.,

A. CARSON.

(.....Ky.....)

1. Intentional killing by a third person, of an insured person without the latter's connivance or foreknowledge, is an accident within the meaning of an accident insurance policy.
2. The omission of the word "death" from a clause in an accident policy providing that it shall not "extend to or cover intentional injuries inflicted" by "any other person," when it is used in other excepting clauses immediately contiguous, will make the insurer liable in case of the murder of the insured.
3. One suing for the full amount of an accident insurance policy which classifies risks and promises the full amount only when insured is engaged in certain business at the time of injury, must allege that he was employed in such business at the time of injury.

(June 13, 1896.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Jefferson County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due on an accident insurance policy. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. O'Neal, Phelps, Pryor, & Siligman and Bullitt & Shields for appellant.

Messrs. R. C. Warren, M. C. Saufley, W. G. Welch, and D. W. Sanders for appellee.

Haselrigg, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In April, 1891, the appellant company, in consideration of certain agreements, statements, and warranties made in the application of one Stephen M. Carson, and the sum of $7, issued to him, under division A, wherein Carson's occupation was described as that of a druggist, a policy of insurance known as an "accident policy," by which, for the term of three months, the applicant was insured against bodily injuries, effected through "external, violent, and accidental means"—First, which wholly disabled him; second, such injuries as partially disabled him; third, such as resulted in the loss of an eye; fourth, loss of a hand or foot; and lastly, loss of both hands or feet, etc., in which event the full principal sum of $5,000 was to be paid to the insured, if he survived, or, if he died, then to his father, A. Carson, the appellee here. In the body of the policy it was provided that, if the insured was injured or killed in any occupation or exposure classed by the company as more hazardous than that recited in the application, the insured or his beneficiary should be entitled only to such sums as are named in the division so classed as more hazardous. And on the back of the policy, among many other conditions under which the policy was issued, we find the following: "This insurance does not cover disappearances; nor suicide, while sane or insane; nor injuries, whether fatal or otherwise, of which there is no visible mark upon the body; nor accidental injuries or death resulting from or caused, directly or indirectly, wholly or in part, by hernia, fits, . . . ; nor extend to or cover intentional injuries inflicted by the insured or any other person, or injury or death happening while the insured is insane, or under the influence of intoxicating drinks or narcotics," etc. It appears that the insured met his death in May, 1891, and under circumstances to be presently considered. The company denying any liability, the beneficiary, A. Carson, brought this action in the Jefferson circuit court for the principal sum indicated in the policy; and upon peremptory instructions, at the conclusion of the testimony, a verdict was rendered in his favor. From the judgment thereon the company appeals.

After certain preliminary statements, the petition avers that "on the 8th day of May, 1891, and before the said term of insurance had expired, the said Stephen M. Carson was shot through the body by a ball from a gun or pistol, and thereby instantly and intentionally killed, by one Jesse Burton, in the vicinity of Branford, in the county of said Carson's residence, in the state of Florida;" that "the said shooting and killing by the said Jesse Burton was not done in a mutual affray, was not provoked by any misconduct on the part of said Carson, and was not foreseen by him in time to have been avoided, but was wanton, causeless, unprovoked, and unexpected by him." It is evident, and it is so argued, that the pleader's object in setting out the fact that the insured came to his death by a shot fired through his body intentionally by another (thus anticipating the probable defense) was to provoke a demurrer, and thus present fairly to the court for construction the meaning of the words, "nor extend to or cover intentional injuries inflicted by the insured or any other person," found on the back of the policy, and therefore not necessary to be adverted to in declaring on the contract. The expected demurrer was filed and overruled, and thus are presented for our consideration two questions: First, were the "means" producing the death of the insured "external, violent, and accidental?" and second, was the death of the insured "an intentional injury inflicted by another," within the meaning of the policy? On the first point little need be said. While our preconceived notions of the term "accident" would hardly lead us to speak of the intentional killing of a person as an accidental killing, yet no doubt can now remain, in view of the precedents established by all the courts, that the word "intentional" refers alone to the person inflicting the injury, and if, as to the person injured, the injury was unforeseen, unexpected, not brought about through his agency designedly, or was without his foresight, or was a casualty or mishap not intended to befall him, then the occurrence was accidental, and the injury one inflicted by accidental means, within the meaning of such policies. Thus, when one was waylaid and assassinated for the purpose of robbery, his death was held to have been caused through "external, violent, and accidental means." Hutchcraft v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 87 Ky. 800. So death by hanging, at the hands of a mob, was held to be an accident, within the meaning of a policy against injuries through "external, violent, and accidental means." Fidelity & C. Co. v. Johnson, 72 Miss. 383, 80 L. R. A. 206. So the death of a person who is shot by one whom he is trying to eject by force from an hotel office is a death by accident, and "not a risk voluntarily assumed, when he makes the attempt without knowing that the other person is armed." Lovell v. Travelers' Protective Assn. 126 Mo. 104, 80 L. R. A. 209. See also numerous authorities to the same effect in notes to case last cited, in 80 L. R. A. 207.

NOTE.—The prior cases construing the proviso against liability for intentional injuries are found in the note to Fidelity & C. Co. v. Johnson (Mis.) 30 34 L. R. A.

L. R. A. 206, on the question What constitutes an accident within the meaning of an accident insurance policy?

In the Hutchcraft Case, however, and in others cited, a recovery was denied because, while the killings were accidental, within the meaning of the words "external, violent, and accidental," as used on the face of the policy, yet certain conditions or provisos protected the company against loss where "the death or injury may have been caused by intentional injuries inflicted by the insured or any other person." And a consideration of this feature brings us to the second question presented by the demurrer. In the cases to which our attention has been called, involving accident policies in many different companies, it is noticeable in all that the form of the usual protecting proviso against loss from "intentional injuries" is somewhat different from the corresponding clause in the policy before us. The clause in the Hutchcraft Case against the Travelers' Insurance Company well illustrates this. It is as follows: "And no claim shall be made under this ticket, when the death or injury may have been caused . . . by intentional injuries inflicted by the insured or any other person." This is not merely protection against injuries so inflicted, but against death as well. In express terms, that policy excepts death from intentional injuries inflicted by any other person, and does not content itself with providing merely that no claim shall be made when the injuries may have been intentionally inflicted. The language is "death or injury," and the policy protects against either death or injury when caused by intentional injuries inflicted by the insured or any other person. In the present case, as we have seen, the policy is not to extend to or cover intentional injuries inflicted by the insured or any other person. Here we find a difference between the policy under consideration and all others we have examined. The words "death or injury" are used in all of them, and indeed in this policy we find those words separated for the first time in the clause under discussion. We find it provided in the preceding clause that "this policy does not cover accidental injuries or death resulting from hernia," etc.; and immediately succeeding the clause in dispute the language is, "or injury or death happening while the insured is insane," etc. We notice, too, that the policy is not to cover injuries, whether fatal or otherwise, of which there are no visible marks upon the body. And it appears well settled that this exception, without the words "fatal or otherwise," has reference only to cases of bodily injury which do not result fatally; that is, the word "injury" is used in its usual sense, as implying a hurt not resulting in death. McGlinchey v. Fidelity & C. Co. 80 Me. 251. The words "injury or death," and "injured or killed," are used in this policy some eight times or more, and seemingly in sharp contrast, and the significant omission of the word "death" in this particular clause requires us to hold that the exception referred only to nonfatal injuries intentionally inflicted by the insured or any other person. We conclude, therefore, that the petition stated a good cause of action, so far as the points discussed are concerned.

It is insisted, however, that as the plaintiff sued for the full principal sum of $5,000, the ought to have negatived the conditions stated in the face of the policy, under which, if they existed, that sum must have been reduced, and the policy scaled. The insured agreed that, if he was killed in any occupation or exposure classed by the company as more hazardous than that of druggist, his beneficiary was to get only the reduced sum; and it seems evident that his beneficiary must allege, if he can truthfully do so, that the insured was not so killed, else the court could not render judgment for the sum to which the policy, under its terms, entitled him. The policy was made part of the petition, and forms the basis of the action. The claimant must bring himself within its terms and conditions as stated on its very face. It cannot be said that this should come from his adversary. Whether the insured was engaged at the time of his death in a more hazardous occupation or exposure than that of a druggist was peculiarly within the knowledge of the insured and his beneficiary, who must be held to a general knowledge of the divisions and classifications of risks, and to have acted intelligently in accepting insurance in division A. Of course, if the true issue is in fact made, it does not matter from whom the exceptional matter comes; and it is true that the company pleaded that the insured was killed while acting as deputy sheriff, and attempted to plead that he was insured as a druggist or dealer, and not otherwise. But just what its pleas would have been, had the plaintiff been required to set up its cause of action according to the terms of the contract, we do not know; and convinced of this error occurring at the inception of the proceedings, no other questions need be considered.

Judgment reversed for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS, SIXTH CIRCUIT.

William E. WHITELEY, Appt.,

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Appt.,

William E. WHITELEY.

(76 Fed. Rep. 74.)

1. Preference to railroad mortgagees is not gained by payment of a judgment against the railroad company for damages when it is paid after its affirmation on appeal by the surety on a supersedeas bond who signed it when the mortgage was in existence and no default had been made upon it, and when the railroad company was apparently solvent, although the bond may have benefited the mortgagees by preventing a levy on the railroad, which might have worked detriment to them directly or indirectly as substantial owners of the property.
2. An implied vendor's lien in favor of a judgment for damages for breach of indefinite, continuing covenants in a conveyance cannot arise under Ky. Gen. Stat. chap. 63, art. 1, §24, denying a lien for unpaid purchase money unless the deed states what part of the consideration remains unpaid.

(July 8, 1896.)

CROSS-APPEALS from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky in certain suits brought to foreclose a mortgage and to enforce an alleged prior lien against the mortgaged property. Whiteley appealing from so much of the decree as refused the priority to the full extent claimed, and the mortgagee appealing from so much as allowed any part of the priority. Reversed on the trust company's appeal.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Before Taft and Lurton, Circuit Judges, and Hammond, District Judge.

Messrs. J. D. Atchison, Charles S. Walker, and Fairleigh & Straus, for Whiteley:

Whoever makes an agreement to do a thing in the future makes at the same time a contract that in case of default he will pay in money an amount which may be judicially ascertained to be the damage for the breach. The judgment is a contract.

Dayton, X. & B. R. Co. v. Lewton, 20 Ohio St. 411; Howe v. Harding, 76 Tex. 17.

The rule established by the decisions of some courts that no lien exists to secure the performance of independent contracts which are the consideration for the sale of land has no application for the reason that here the agreements are not independent within the meaning of the rule. The agreements run with the land and bind every successor of the railway company. They are embedded in the grant itself and constitute a burden upon the enjoyment of the thing granted.

Toledo, St. L. & K. C. R. Co. v. Cosand, 6 Ind. App. 232.

The question is in all its bearings, so far as the bondholders are concerned, a question between the original parties to the grant.

The mortgage of the railway company was executed to the trustee on the 1st day of February, 1887; the agreement between Taylor and the railway company by which it acquired the right of way was executed on May 17, 1887. Therefore the mortgage could embrace this property only by the force of an after-acquired property clause.

A mortgage intended to cover after-acquired property can only attach itself to such property in the condition in which it comes into the mortgagor's hands.

New Orleans & O. R. Co. v. Mellen ("United

NOTE.—As to the power to gain a preference over a mortgage debt on the property of a railroad or street-railroad company, in favor of a claim for damages, see St. Louis Trust Co. v. Riley (C. C. App. 8th C.) 30 L. R. A. 466, and, contra, Green v. Coast Line R. Co. (Ga.) 33 L. R. A. 306.

As to the power of the receiver of a mere private corporation in distinction from a quasi public corporation to create liens in preference to mortgages, see Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Grape Creek Coal Co. (C. C. S. D. Ill.) 16 L. R. A. 603, and note; also Hanna v. State Trust Co. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 30 L. R. A. 201.

As to the claim of an implied obligation arising out of a receipt of benefits, see Cincinnati, S. & C. R. Co. v. Bensley (C. C. App. 6th C.) 19 L. R. A. 796.

States v. New Orleans R. Co."), 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 865, 20 L. ed. 436.

Whitely paid the judgment as surety upon a supersedeas bond, and this fact creates in his favor a right to reimbursement prior to the mortgages upon the ground that his act of becoming surety on the bond saved the property of the railway company from immediate seizure under execution, and preserved the unity of the property as a going concern to the direct use of the bondholders.

Union Trust Co. v. Morrison, 125 U. S. '81 L. ed. 825; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 71 Fed. Rep. 245.

Messrs. Pirtle & Trabue, Butler, Notman, Joline, & Mynderse, and Alexander & Green, for Central Trust Company of New York:

The Central Trust Company was no party to the suit in which the Taylor judgment was obtained, and is certainly not bound by that judgment nor for any damages or costs assessed in that action.

Hassall v. Wilcox, 130 U. S. 493, 32 L. ed. 1001.

Whitely has no lien on the right of way of the railroad company for any amount whatever. Taylor's deed to the railroad company contained no express reservation of a lien, and there was therefore no contract lien, so if a lien existed it must have arisen by implication.

A vendor's implied lien arises either upon conveyance without payment of the price or where there is an executory contract of sale without conveyance and the price remains unpaid. The lien of the vendor who has made a conveyance may be defeated in many ways, e.g. by showing that he has accepted other security for the purchase money or that from the nature of the transaction no lien was intended by the parties.

Henley v. Stemmons, 4 B. Mon. 182.

No lien existed to secure damages for failure to perform the indefinitely continuing covenants.

McKillop v. McKillop, 8 Barb. 552; Brawley v. Outron, 8 Leigh, 522; Peters v. Tunell, 43 Minn. 473; Bell v. Pelt, 51 Ark. 433, 4 L. R. A. 247; Harris v. Hanis, 37 Ark. 348; McCandlish v. Keene, 18 Gratt. 615; Arlin v. Brown, 44 N. H. 102; Paterson v. Edwards, 29 Miss. 67; Hiscock v. Norton, 42 Mich. 320; Re Brentwood Brick & C. Co. L. R. 4 Ch Div. 562.

The very nature of the transaction precludes the idea of a lien.

This conclusion is not affected by the Kentucky statute, for it is only restrictive upon the creation of a lien, and does not create a lien.

Ledford v. Smith, 6 Bush, 132; Brown v. Ferrell, 83 Ky. 417.

Lurton, Circuit Judge, delivered the opinion of the court:

W. E. Whitely, at the request of the Louisville, St. Louis, & Texas Railway Company, became its surety upon a supersedeas bond executed November 5, 1892. The railway company had been sued in a circuit court of Kentucky in an action at law for damages for breach of covenants contained in a conveyance under which it had acquired a right of way through the lands of one E. P. Taylor, 34 L. R. A.

situated in Daveiss county, Kentucky. The circuit court rendered judgment against the railway company for the sum of $6,406.55, with costs and interest from October 29, 1892.

In order to obtain a review of this judgment in the Kentucky court of appeals, an appeal was prayed and allowed, and a supersedeas bond executed, on which Whitely became bound as surety. This judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals in December, 1894. [Louisville, St. L. & T. R. Co. v. Taylor, 96 Ky. 241.] The railway company, pending the appeal, became insolvent, and passed into the control and management of a receiver appointed by the United States circuit court for the district of Kentucky, under proceedings instituted in that court by general creditors. Subsequently two foreclosure bills were filed by the Central Trust Company of New York, as trustee under two mortgages covering the entire road and its equipment, and the former receivership was extended to these suits. By reason of this subsequent insolvency, Whitely, as surety, has been obliged to pay in discharge of his liability $8,153.10. He has intervened in the foreclosure suits mentioned, and claims that the circumstances are such as to entitle him to payment out of the corpus of the mortgaged property in preference to the mortgagees. The decree of the circuit court gave him a priority as to a large part of his claim, on the theory that the debt paid was purchase money for land, and therefore a prior equitable lien. From this decree both Whitely and the Central Trust Company have perfected appeals.

Two distinct theories have been advanced by counsel for Whitely as furnishing ground upon which priority of payment should be accorded his claim. The first is that his act as a surety on the supersedeas bond operated to keep the property together, and to keep the railroad as a going concern, and that the mortgagees were indirectly benefited, and should, therefore, be postponed until he has been paid. The second is that the covenants in the deed of conveyance of a right of way from Taylor to the railroad company constituted the consideration for the conveyance, and that the judgment for damages for breach of those covenants fixes the money value thereof, and, although no express lien was retained, an equitable lien is implied, which must be discharged in preference to mortgages subsequently executed with record notice of the existence of the covenants set out in the title of the company. We shall consider these questions in the order stated. The case of Union Trust Co. v. Morrison, 125 U. S. 591 et seq., 31 L. ed. 825, is supposed to lend countenance to the first ground upon which this court is asked to give relief to the intervener. Both of the mortgages now being foreclosed were in existence when Whitely stepped forward and assumed the liability of a surety upon the supersedeas bond of the railway company. Both mortgages covered substantially the whole property of the mortgagor company, including its rights of way, depots, depot grounds, rolling stock and equipments of every kind. But it is said that under the law of Kentucky an execution might have been levied upon the equipment of the company, and, although such levy would have been subject to the prior mortgage liens that still such a levy and execution sale would have greatly embarrassed and crippled the operations of the railway company as an active common carrier, and worked great detriment, directly and indirectly, to the mortgagees, as the substantial owners of the property. This is the principal equity which is supposed to bring this case within the logic of Union Trust Co. v. Morrison. The two cases may be assumed to present analogous features, so far as this equity is concerned. But here their identity is at an end. The judgment in Morrison's favor was not rested alone upon the equity stated. A succession of equitable circumstances existed in that case, which unitedly were deemed strong enough to support a decree in his favor. When Whitely became surety on this supersedeas bond, he did so at the request of an apparently solvent company, and presumably as a matter of accommodation, and upon the personal credit of the company. When one becomes a surety under such circumstances, he is presumed to have trusted his principal, and not the property. In no state is this obvious principle more positively recognized than in the state of Kentucky. Johnson v. Morrison, 5 B. Mon. 107; Bank of Hopkinsville v. Rudy, 2 Bush, 829. In Morrison's case he did not trust his principal, but took a chattel mortgage upon four engines. Another most significant circumstance upon which that judgment was rested is entirely absent from Whitely's Case. When Morrison stepped in and prevented a levy upon and sale of the railroad equipment, the railroad company had been long in default upon the interest on its mortgage debts. The mortgagees had an existing right to take possession of the mortgaged property, or to have secured the appointment of a receiver. They had done neither, but had suffered the railroad company to continue in the possession and management of its property. When a levy upon equipment was threatened, and the operation of the railway imperiled, the mortgagees, though legally authorized to prevent such a result, stood by and did nothing, and saw Morrison intervene, and by his act keep the property together, and keep the railroad in operation. In the case before us, the railroad company was not in default as to its interest, and was rightfully and legally in the complete control and management of its property. The mortgagees had no right to interfere with that management, and no right of foreclosure. This furnishes a marked distinction between the two cases.

But a circumstance of greater significance than any yet mentioned lies in the fact that, after a receiver had been appointed for the company, in whose behalf Morrison became surety, the receiver applied to the court for permission to protect Morrison and others, who had become sureties under like circumstances, by paying out of current income the debts upon which they were bound. An order was accordingly made allowing the receiver "to pay out of any money coming to his hands as such receiver, over and above expenses of operation and repairs," all such claims as had been brought to the attention of the court, including the claim upon which Morrison was liable. The mortgagees, though parties, made no objection to this order. Their mortgages were foreclosed, and the property bought in by them, under a decree which obligated them to pay all intervening claims which the court should deem entitled to priority out of the property or assets of the company. The receiver did not pay off this Morrison claim upon the pretense that the income was insufficient. The court, however, found that this was untrue. That the income had been used in the purchase of "new property, real estate, and rolling stock," and that this property, into which income had been diverted, had passed into the hands of the mortgagee purchasers. The income thus diverted to the benefit of the mortgagees was held to be presumably sufficient to have indemnified Morrison, and he therefore entitled to be paid out of the corpus of the property which had been covered by the mortgages and bought in by the mortgagees. No such circumstance exists in Whitely's Case. Justice Bradley carefully guarded the court's opinion by declaring that case to be "a special one." After distinguishing the case from Burnham v. Bowen, 111 U. S. 776, 28 L. ed. 596, and announcing that nothing was intended to be decided conflicting with that case, he concluded by saying of Morrison's claim that it "was presented upon the equities arising in favor of the intervener for taking the action he did, and thus securing the results which followed, and upon the other circumstances of the entire case taken together; and it was upon these grounds that the claim was allowed by the court below." Union Trust Co. v. Morrison, 125 U. S. 618, 31 L. ed. 581.

Such cases as Foadick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 235, 25 L. ed. 839; Miltenderger v. Logansport, C. & S. W. R. Co. 106 U. S. 286, 27 L. ed. 117; Dow v. Memphis & L. R. R. Co. 124 U. S. 652, 31 L. ed. 565, and Sage v. Memphis & L. R. R. Co. 125 U. S. 361, 31 L. ed. 694,—seem to rest upon the doctrine that railroad mortgagees impliedly agree that current earnings shall be first applied to current operating expenses, and, if diverted to the payment of interest on the mortgage debts, may be followed, or such creditors subrogated to the rights of mortgagees, to the extent of such diversion. That those cases have carried the rule of displacing mortgage debts as far as the courts feel justified is made very clear by the emphatic declarations of the supreme court in Kneeland v. American Loan & T. Co. 136 U. S. 97, 34 L. ed. 383; and Thomas v. Western Car Co. 149 U. S. 95, 37 L. ed. 663. See also Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. Co. v. Texas C. R. Co. 137 U. S. 171-194, et seq., 34 L. ed. 625-633.

In the Kneeland Case the court said: "The appointment of a receiver vests in the court no absolute control over the property, and no general authority to displace vested contract liens. Because in a few specified and limited cases this court has declared that unsecured claims were entitled to priority over mortgage debts, an idea seems to have obtained that a court appointing a receiver acquires power to give such preference to any general and unsecured claims. It has been assumed that a court appointing a receiver could rightfully burden the mortgaged property for the payment of any unsecured indebtedness. Indeed, we are advised that some courts have made the appointment of a receiver conditional upon the payment of all unsecured indebtedness in preference to the mortgage liens sought to be enforced. Can anything be conceived which more thoroughly destroys the sacredness of contract obligations? One holding a mortgage debt upon a railroad has the same right to demand and expect of the court respect for his vested and contracted priority as the holder of a mortgage on a farm or lot. So, when a court appoints a receiver of railroad property, it has no right to make that receivership conditional on the payment of other than those few unsecured claims which, by the rulings of this court, have been declared to have an equitable priority. No one is bound to sell to a railroad company or to work for it, and whoever has dealings with a company whose property is mortgaged must be assumed to have dealt with it on the faith of its personal responsibility; and not in expectation of subsequently displacing the priority of the mortgage liens. It is the exception and not the rule that such priority of liens can be displaced. We emphasize this fact of the sacredness of contract liens, for the reason that there seems to be growing an idea that the chancellor, in the exercise of his equitable powers, has unlimited discretion in this matter of the displacement of vested liens."

The case before us is not within any principle to be fairly deduced from Morrison's Case. The conclusion we reach finds strong support in the opinion of Justice Brewer, when a circuit judge, as reported in Blair v. St. Louis, H. & K. R. Co., 23 Fed. Rep. 522; as well as in the able and convincing opinion of Judge Jenkins in Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co., 68 Fed. Rep. 86. For these reasons we concur in the opinion of Judge Barr, in so far as he refused any relief upon the ground just considered.

We come now to consider whether Taylor's judgment constituted a prior lien to which Whitely may be subrogated. That judgment was for damages for breach of the covenants contained in Taylor's deed conveying a right of way and depot site. Those covenants were undoubtedly the principal consideration for the conveyance. They were that the "said railroad and its successors shall put up and keep in good repair a good and lawful fence, made of slat and wire, along both sides of said railroad where it crosses over said land, and to build and keep in good repair stock gaps at reasonable distances along said road, if required by said Taylor, and especially shall such gaps be kept where said Taylor's lands adjoin his neighbors. Said railroad and its successors agree that they will build and keep a good and substantial depot and switch on said Taylor's lands where said railroad intersects the Iceland road, at which all trains on said railroad flagged or signaled shall stop; and said Taylor shall have the use of said switch free of charge for any shipping he may have done on said road; and for the purpose of building said switch and depot said Taylor hereby conveys to said railroad 50 feet fronting on the Iceland road where said railroad intersects the Iceland road, and running back parallel with said railroad 75 feet. Said railroad company agrees to build said depot and switch in a reasonable time after the cars commence running on said road at said point. It is further agreed by said railroad and its successors that said Taylor and his family shall have free travel over the line of said railroad on its trains."

Judge Barr was of opinion that certain of these covenants ran with the land, and bound the successors in title, while others were personal. The former class he deemed a charge on the land in the nature of a vendor's lien, and held that so much of the judgment as was for damages for breach thereof constituted an equitable vendor's lien entitled to payment out of the corpus of the mortgaged property in preference to both the mortgages. The contention of Whitely was, and now is, that the covenants collectively constituted the consideration for the conveyance of the right of way and depot site, the money value of which was fixed by the judgment; and that for this money value a vendor's lien exists. From so much of the decree as refused relief upon part of the judgment he has perfected an appeal. The Central Trust Company, denying that any vendor's lien exists, appealed from the decree in Whitely's favor.

In the view we take of this case it is not necessary to consider how far a successor in title would be bound by the covenants of this deed. If we assume that the covenants were real covenants, following the title, does a lien, enforceable in equity, exist in favor of a judgment for damages for a breach of such covenants? No express lien for the security of such damages or to secure the performance of the covenants is claimed. If one exists at all, it must be upon the ground that an implied vendor's lien arises to secure the performance of covenants entered into as a consideration for the conveyance of land, and that the same equitable lien exists in favor of any judgment for damages for the breach of such covenants, under the principles touching such liens, as are enforced by courts of equity. The equitable lien of a vendor will be recognized and enforced in courts of the United States if in harmony with the law of the state in which the lien is sought to be enforced. Bayley v. Greenleaf, 20 U. S. 7 Wheat. 46, 5 L. ed. 393; Fisher v. Shropshire, 147 U. S. 133-139, 37 L. ed. 109-113; Slide & S. Gold Mines v. Seymour, 153 U. S. 509, 38 L. ed. 802. The doctrine that a lien on land exists for the purchase money may be regarded as very well settled in the jurisprudence of England, as well as that of the state of Kentucky. In Mackreth v. Symmons, 15 Ves. Jr. 329, Lord Eldon has given us a very full historical review of the cases, and has drawn deductions as to the extent of the doctrine. In Bayley v. Greenleaf, cited heretofore, the limits of the doctrine in respect of the obligation of the lien upon subsequent vendees, and the general nature of this most fragile of all equitable liens, received a most thorough consideration by Chief Justice Marshall. Further light was thrown on the subject in a masterly opinion by Justice Story in Gilman v. Brown, 1 Mason, 212, subsequently affirmed in Brown v. Gilman, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 255, 4 L. ed. 564. In Gilman v. Brown, cited above, Justice Story said of the doctrine that "the rule, however, is manifestly founded on a supposed conformity with the intentions of the parties, upon which the law raises an implied contract; and therefore it is not inflexible, but ceases to act where the circumstances of the case do not justify such a conclusion." 1 Mason, 191. What the circumstances are which will determine the existence or nonexistence of the lien is often a question of difficult determination, and has given rise to certain nice distinctions which have crystallized into rules of decision, somewhat arbitrary in their consequence. Thus it seems to be settled that, if the consideration be that the vendee will enter into certain covenants, as for the payment of an annuity to A and a certain sum to another in the event of the death of the vendor, the consideration on one side is the conveyance of the estate, and upon the other side the entering into the covenants; in which case, if no lien be reserved, none will be implied for the performance of the covenants. Clarke v. Royle, 3 Sim. 499; Parrott v. Sweetland, 8 Myl. & K. 656; Buckland v. Pocknell, 18 Sim. 406; Sugden, Vendors, 65, 66; McCandlish v. Keen, 13 Gratt. 615-626, et seq.

The principle upon which Clarke v. Royle and the other cases cited above may be said to rest is that, where the consideration for the conveyance is the entering into an agreement to do or not to do certain things, and the remedy for a breach of such agreement consists in an action for unliquidated damages, the parties will be presumed not to have intended that the land should remain charged with a vendor's lien to secure such unliquidated damages,—damages which may never accrue, and are unascertainable by third persons dealing with the land. The consideration for the deed is deemed to be the entering into the covenants. When this is done, the covenants are deemed a substitute for the price. Indeed, the rule has been very broadly stated by most American courts to be that a vendor's lien will not arise where the consideration is unliquidated, and ascertainable only by an action sounding in damages. The existence of such a lien for the security of a covenant, accepted as the consideration for a conveyance of land, has most often arisen where the deed was in consideration that the vendee would maintain or support the vendor. Where there has been a breach of such a covenant, the great weight of opinion is that no lien exists to secure the performance thereof, unless expressly contracted for. The subject received elaborate consideration from the supreme court of Virginia in the cases of Brawley v. Ontron, 8 Leigh, 522, and McCandlish v. Keen, 13 Gratt. 615, and the doctrine of those cases has been generally accepted as a sound statement of the equitable doctrine touching the nonexistence of a lien where the consideration consists in the entering into covenants to do or perform acts for the breach of which the remedy at law was an action sounding in damages. Hiscock v. Norton, 42 Mich. 320-325; Campbell v. Campbell, 21 Mich. 438; Payne v. Avery, Id. 524-551; Arlin v. Brown, 44 N. H. 102; Harris v. Hanie, 37 Ark. 348; Bell v. Felt, 51 Ark. 433, 4 L. R. A. 247; McDonald v. Elyton Land Co. 78 Ala. 382-384; Walker v. Struve, 70 Ala. 167; Patterson v. Edwards, 29 Miss. 71; Barlow v. Delany, 36 Fed. Rep. 577; Peters v. Tunell, 43 Minn. 473; Chase v. Peck, 21 N. Y. 34 L. R. A.

581; Chapman v. Beardsley, 31 Conn. 115; Meigs v. Dimock, 6 Conn. 458; Jones, Liens, § 1071.

Counsel for appellant Whitely have cited the case of Dayton, X. & B. R. Co. v. Lewton, 20 Ohio St. 401, as supporting their contention. The facts of that case make it an exceptional one. The bargainor had retained the title, and only agreed that the railroad company might enter upon and construct the railway in consideration of $1,500, to be paid in money, and the construction of certain road crossings and cattle guards. There was a judgment at law for the unpaid purchase money, and another judgment for the damages for breach of the agreement as to crossings and cattle guards. Upon a bill in equity to declare and enforce a lien in favor of both judgments as against mortgages, the court held that the retention of the legal title operated to put mortgages upon inquiry as to the rights of the vendor. As to the lien of the judgment for damages, the court held that a lien existed for its payment as the money value of the covenants breached. The ground upon which this case is rested is indicated very plainly by Judge McIlvaine, who delivered the opinion of the court, who, among other things, said: "It may be that this equity of the defendant in error is not, technically, what is commonly called a 'vendor's lien,' inasmuch as the legal title has not been conveyed by him to the purchaser. It is, however, at least as strong a hold upon the property sold as the lien of a vendor after title conveyed; for here not only is an equity retained by the vendor in the property sold to the extent of the unpaid purchase money, but the legal title is also retained by him as additional security. It cannot be said in this case, 'that from the nature and objects of this sale, the vendor did not intend to rely upon the thing sold as security for his payment.' Retaining the legal title is very strong, if not conclusive, evidence that he did intend to rely upon it as security. The presumption, however, in all cases, even where the vendor conveys the legal title, is that he intends to rely upon the property sold as security. And before his abandonment or waiver of such security can be found, it must be shown that he did not intend to rely upon it."

From the fact that the vendor had retained the legal title it is very clear that the Ohio court did not have the question now presented in this case.

There is nothing in the decisions of the Kentucky courts which in any way strengthens the case for a lien. Upon the contrary, the legislation of that state has much modified the general rule so far as third persons are affected by the secret and implied lien of a vendor. Ky. Gen. Stat. chap 63, art. 1, § 24, provides as follows: "When any real estate shall be conveyed, and the consideration, or any part thereof, remains unpaid, the grantor shall not have a lien for the same against bona fide creditors and purchasers, unless it is stated in the deed what part of the consideration remains unpaid."

This statute is restrictive in its character, and does not originate a lien where, under general principles of equity, one would not exist. Long v. Burke, 2 Bush, 90; Ledford v. Smith, 6 Bush, 182; Brown v. Ferrell, 88 Ky. 417. In Long v. Burke, cited above, a part of the consideration was that the vendee "is to pay all the debts which were owing by me the 10th day of March, 1860." Touching the question as to whether a vendor's lien existed for the performance of this covenant, the court held it to be a mere personal covenant, and also held that under the statute no lien existed, because the deed did not state what part of the consideration remained unpaid. As to this, the court said: "It is very clear that a covenant to pay all the vendor's debts existing on a given day does not state the portion of the purchase price unpaid; nothing, in fact, could be more indefinite; it did not give even a clue as to how this amount could be ascertained. Had it even specified to whom these debts were due, without stating the amount to each, it would have been as indefinite as to state that some of the purchase price was still unpaid to the vendor, which the court held to be insufficient." See also Chapman v. Stockwell, 18 B. Mon. 658.

By the statute as it now stands the restriction applies only to bona fide creditors and purchasers. Ross v. Adams, 18 Bush, 870; Tate v. Hawkins, 81 Ky. 582, 50 Am. Rep. 181; Thompson v. Heffner, 11 Bush, 858.

Assuming the mortgagees, through their trustee, the Central Trust Company, to have notice of the covenants of this deed, the deed itself does not expressly state "what part of the consideration remains unpaid." From it a creditor or purchaser might learn that the consideration consisted in covenants, some of which were perpetual, while others might last for several generations. The purpose of the statute was to give definite notice to creditors and buyers of the extent to which the purchase price remained unpaid. The judgment in Long v. Burke seems conclusive. If a covenant to pay all the debts of the vendor due on a certain day was too indefinite to stand as a compliance with this statute, it is difficult to see how indefinite, continuing covenants, such as those found in this deed, can be held to be a definite statement of the part of the consideration remaining unpaid.

The case must be remanded, with direction to enter a decree in accordance with this opinion.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT.

Mary E. FULLER, Deceased, etc., Plff. in Err.,

Edward E. KANE,

(.....Mich.....)

A stipulation in a mortgage that the mortgagor shall pay within the time prescribed by law all taxes upon the premises does not make the mortgagor liable for all taxes in case of the subsequent passage of a law requiring the mortgagee to pay those properly leviable against his interest.

(July 31, 1898.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Wayne County to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action brought to compel defendant mortgagor of certain real estate to pay the taxes which had been assessed upon the interest of the mortgagee. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion. Messrs. Gray & Gray, for plaintiff in error:

The court in Detroit v. Detroit Bd. of Assessors, 91 Mich. 97, 16 L. R. A. 59, sustains the rights of the parties to make agreements for the payment of these taxes so that the obligation to pay them may be shifted from those designated in the law, and says, with respect to existing agreements, "that if the engagement of the mortgagor is sufficiently broad to cover any assessment which may be made on all interests in the land mortgaged, his undertaking is in no way interfered with or abridged by the present statute."

There is such an agreement in the case.

Hammond v. Lovell, 186 Mass. 184.

Mr. Edward E. Kane, in propria persona:

The purpose of this enactment was to make the mortgagee, whether resident or nonresident, pay the tax upon such interest in the mortgaged property as represents the money he has loaned upon it, and thereby relieve the mortgagor from the burden of paying both that and the tax upon his own interest.

Detroit v. Detroit Bd. of Assessors, 91 Mich. 78, 16 L. R. A. 59; Hewitt v. Dean, 91 Cal. 5; Welty, Assessments, 98, and note.

The weight of authority upon the adjudged cases is clearly with defendant.

McCoppin v. McCartney, 60 Cal. 367; Hay v. Hill, 65 Cal. 883; Clopton v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 54 Pa. 856; Tracycross v. Fitchburg R. Co. 10 Gray, 298; Tidwell v. Whitworth, L. R. 2 C. P. 825.

Montgomery, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Prior to 1891, mortgages were assessed against the mortgagee, and the real estate was assessed against the owner. By the act of 1891, the legislature provided for the assessment of mortgages as an interest in lands, and relieved the mortgagor from taxation upon so much of his property as the mortgagee's interest represented. Prior to the enactment of this law, in October, 1889, the defendant executed a mortgage, with a condition to "pay and discharge, or cause to be paid, within the time prescribed by law, all such taxes and assessments as shall by any lawful authority, while the money secured by the presents remains unpaid, be levied and imposed upon said premises above described;" and it is also agreed that "should any default be made in the payment of the taxes and assessments as above provided, or any part thereof, then in such case it shall be lawful for the party of the second part, her heirs or assigns, . . . to pay and discharge such taxes and assessments; and the money thus paid shall be a lien on said premises, added to the amount secured by these presents, and shall be payable on demand, with interest at 5½ per cent per annum."

NOTE.—As to the power to tax mortgages in general, see Detroit v. Bents (Mich.) 16 L. R. A. 59, and note.

34 L. R. A.

The sole question presented in this case is whether the stipulations above quoted imposed upon the mortgagor the duty of paying taxes assessed under a law subsequently passed, providing for an assessment against the mortgagee's interest. The learned circuit judge was of the opinion that this undertaking was not to be so construed, and in that opinion I concur. As was said by Pollock, C. B., in Berwick-upon-Tweed v. Oswald, 8 El. & Bl. 678: "Every contract (which does not expressly provide the contrary) must be considered as made with reference to the existing state of the law, and, if, by the intervention of the legislature, a change is made in the law, which in any degree affects the contract, such contract, made without some clear and distinct reference to the prospect or possibility of a change, does not hold with reference to the state of things as altered by the new law." This opinion is cited with approval by Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 461, where it is said: "The intervention of the legislature, in altering the situation of the contracting parties, is analogous to a convulsion of nature, against which they, no doubt, may provide; but if they have not provided, it is generally to be considered as excepted out of the contract."

In this case we think there is nothing in the language of the contract which evidences a purpose to extend the obligation of the mortgagor so as to make it include the duty of paying taxes which by subsequent legislation it is made the duty of the mortgagee to pay. The case cited above is instructive, and, while the opinion of Baron Pollock is a minority opinion, the conclusion of the majority appears to be based upon the view that language is employed in the contract under consideration which could not be operative if limited to conditions existing under the law in force at the time it was entered into, so that the principle announced by Baron Pollock seems not to have been controverted. We are cited to the case of Hammond v. Lovell, 186 Mass. 184, as sustaining the contention of plaintiff. In that case it is implied in the opinion that, prior to the enactment of the statute making the change in the manner of assessing taxes, the mortgagee, if in possession, was liable to be assessed upon the land, and that in that state the legal title to the mortgaged property is vested in the mortgagee. This would distinguish the cases, as, if such be the state of the law in Massachusetts, the undertaking to pay all taxes and assessments on the premises might, under the prior existing law, have imposed the obligation of paying the mortgagee's taxes. However this may be, we are fully convinced that this provision should not be given the broad construction contended for, under the statutes of this state, and that the judgment should be affirmed.

The other Justices concur.

MARYLAND COURT OF APPEALS.

Lewis MYERS et al., Appts.,

v.

BALTIMORE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS et al.

(33 Md. 385.)

1. The average amount of live stock which cattle dealers have each week, although usually sold within one day after they are received, and most of them are brought from other states, constitutes property within the state which can be taxed under Code, art. 81.
2. The intent of dealers in cattle to export part of them, and the fact that they do export about two thirds of all which they handle, do not prevent the taxation of such cattle to the average amount that they have on hand.
3. Notice of a new assessment or of an increase of taxation, required by Code, art. 81, §145, is necessary in order to sustain such new or increased tax.

(June 17, 1896.)

APPEAL by plaintiffs from a decree of the Circuit Court for Baltimore County in favor of defendants in an action brought to enjoin the collection of certain taxes. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. S. S. Field, for appellants:

These identical cattle have already been taxed once in the state where grazed or fed. This is not a bar to their taxation here, but is to be borne in mind when considering whether the legislature intended by a general provision to tax them. General provisions are to be construed so as to avoid double taxation.

25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 667, 668; Penn.

NOTE.—As to the place of taxation of personal property, see also Com. v. American Dredging Co. (Pa.) 11 L. R. A. 237, and note; Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors (La.) 16 L. R. A. 56.

As to the place of taxation of partnership property, see 34 L. R. A. personal property, see Hopkins v. Baker Bros. (Md.) 22 L. R. A. 477, and note.

As to the place of taxation of trust property, see Richmond County Academy v. Augusta (Ga.) 20 L. R. A. 151.

sylvania Co. v. Com. (Pa.) 15 Atl. 456; State v. Sterling, 20 Md. 520.

And double taxation in this state is illegal. State v. Central Sav. Bank, 67 Md. 292.

Within this state, so far as it relates to tangible chattels like cattle, it is believed to mean the same as the phrase "permanently located," used in art. 8, § 51, of the Constitution, which was before this court in Hopkins v. Baker, 78 Md. 363, 22 L. R. A. 477.

In that case the court says that "abiding place" and "permanent location" are synonymous terms.

Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Baltimore, 23 Md. 311, defines "permanently located" by another phrase, "actually situated."

The cattle upon which appellants were assessed were not ordinarily kept at the stock yards.

Com. v. American Dredging Co. 123 Pa. 886, 1 L. R. A. 287, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 231.

Intangible property and ships which cannot be located in any state are within the state if the owner resides here; but with regard to tangible property the actual situs is the one meant by the tax laws.

Ibid.; Rorer, Interstate Law, 204 (281); People, Hoyt, v. Commissioners of Taxes, 23 N. Y. 225.

The power of taxation, however vast in its character and searching in its extent, is necessarily limited to subjects within the jurisdiction of the state. These subjects are persons, property, and business.

Appeal Tax Court v. Patterson, 50 Md. 367.

Property which is in transit, or which is temporarily within a state or sent into a state for sale, is not subject to taxation there, although entitled to and receiving the temporary protection of the law for the time being.

Rorer, Interstate Law, 2d ed. 281; Burroughs, Taxn. § 47; People, Parker Mills, v. Commissioners of Taxes, 23 N. Y. 243.

Property to be assessable must not only be within this state but must be valued to the respective owners thereof and assessed to them.

Code, art. 81, § 2; Baltimore County Comrs. v. Winand, 77 Md. 522.

Two thirds of all the cattle handled by appellants were export cattle. These cattle were merely in transit. The legislature could not, if it had attempted, authorize a tax upon them.

State, Lehigh & W. Coal Co., v. Carrigan, 89 N. J. L. 35; State, Detmold, v. Engle, 84 N. J. L. 427; Rorer, Interstate Law, 2d ed. 281; Burroughs, Taxn. § 47.

Goods in course of transportation through a state, though detained for a time within the state by low water or other cause of delay, are not taxable.

Oce v. Errol, 116 U. S. 525, 29 L. ed. 718.

As appellants were clearly not taxable upon the cattle sold by them on commission which they never owned, nor upon their export cattle which were merely in transit to Europe, and as the whole were included in one indivisible assessment, the whole assessment is void.

California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 150; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 118 U. S. 395, 30 L. ed. 118.

This assessment was newly made against appellants without notice. Of course the record of the assessment required by law to be kept (Code, art. 81, § 23) is the exclusive evidence of the actual assessment; and the assessment to be valid must be made by the officers designated by law.

25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 210, 211; People v. Ilagadorn, 104 N. Y. 517.

They were the county commissioners. Van Meeter might report to them, but they must assess.

Code, art. 81, §§ 6, 9, 10.

There was (until the late act) no law in Maryland taxing money. Money is not property in the sense in which property is used in the tax laws.

Cooley, Taxn. 279; Johnson v. Lexington, 14 B. Mon. 648; Louisville v. Henning, 1 Bush, 881; Vaughan v. Murfreesboro, 96 N. C. 318, 60 Am. Rep. 418; People v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. 51 Cal. 243, 21 Am. Rep. 704; Mifflintown v. Jacobs, 69 Pa. 151.

These cattle were, in the very language of the Code, "new property not valued and returned . . . by the proper assessor or collector," and the county commissioners were expressly forbidden to place them on the tax books without a notice previously given.

Code, art. 81, § 145; Allghany County Comrs. v. New York Min. Co. 76 Md. 550; Baltimore County Comrs. v. Winand, 77 Md. 522.

Mr. D. G. McIntosh, for appellees, in support of motion for reargument:

There was no ignorance on the part of the taxpayer; there was no want of information to him of what was going to be done; he himself consented to the assessment, or rather he fixed it himself; he did not desire to be heard; and if "the only object of notice is to give the party opportunity to be heard," the appellants had such opportunity and expressly declined and waived the same. A party may waive a right created in his favor by statute as well as any other.

Tombs v. Rochester & S. R. Co. 18 Barb. 585; Shutte v. Thompson, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 159, 21 L. ed. 125.

The effect of the return was to operate as an estoppel to appellants, and takes the case out of the line of decisions referred to in the opinion.

People v. Central P. R. Co. 105 Cal. 593; Central P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 162, 40 L. ed. 927.

It will always be presumed that the assessor acted in accordance with the law, and it is incumbent upon the defendants to show his acts were unauthorized.

San Francisco v. Flood, 64 Cal. 505.

Mr. Jefferson D. Morris also for appellees.

Page, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The bill in this case was filed by the appellants to restrain the collection of certain taxes alleged to be due from them to the appellees. The assessment upon which these taxes were levied is $20,000 on the "stock in trade, capital stock" of the appellants. Myers & Houseman are cattle dealers. Their principal office is at the Union Stockyards in Baltimore county. Their gross annual sales amount to about $2,000,000 per annum. Their cattle are mostly purchased in the western states, thence shipped to Baltimore, and there disposed of by the firm. Some are shipped to Europe and others are disposed of at home. They also receive and sell cattle on commission. The market days at the Union Stockyards are Wednesday and Thursday. On the first-named day the original owners sell to the dealers; and on the next the dealers retail to the butchers and others and ship the remainder. On other days there is no dealing, except when an occasional load arrives from shippers who are ignorant of the custom of the trade. Of the cattle handled by the firm two thirds are exported, one sixth sold to butchers, and the residue are on commission. Of those exported, some are purchased in this state, but the large majority of them come from western states. The course of business is as follows: The cattle are expected to and generally arrive on Wednesday. They are then placed in the pens of the Union Stockyards. There they remain rarely longer than one day; so that by Thursday evening the pens are empty, and so remain until the following Wednesday. Those intended for export are fed, watered, and rested at the yards, and then placed on the ship. Those fit for export are not of such a class as are offered in the Baltimore market, and none of these are sold there except when there are more than are wanted for shipment. The appellants contend this stock was not liable to taxation, because it cannot be considered as property "within this state," as the words are employed in the 2d section of art. 81 of the Code. That provision is as follows: "All other property of every kind, value, and description, within this state, shall be valued to the respective owners thereof in the manner prescribed by this Code, and shall be assessed and taxed as the property of such respective owners according to such prescribed methods of valuation," etc. In Hopkins v. Baker, 78 Md. 863, 22 L. R. A. 477, it was held that a stock of goods is to be regarded as "permanently located" (within the meaning of the words as used in art. 8 of § 51 of the Constitution) at the place where they are to remain until sold. The separate articles, the court says, constituting the stock, may continue the property of the appellees for a day, a week, a month, a year, or longer; but until they are sold they remain permanently in Baltimore, and are not moved from place to place. The stock in trade of the appellants consisted of cattle, and the evidence shows that, while they kept this stock on an average of but one day in the week, they did have, sometimes, every week at least, $20,000 worth of cattle on hand; so that, if the week be regarded as the unit of time, and not the day, they may be said to keep on hand all the time an average of $20,000 worth of cattle. They keep them there for sale, and as they sell, according to the custom and exigencies of the trade, they replenish with other stock. Suppose, instead of not being fortunate enough to sell each week's receipts in one day, it took them ten days to close them out, so that the second week's consignment would be received before the first could all be disposed of, this case would then be substantially like that in 78 Md., and no sufficient reason could be assigned for holding that the cattle, "stock in trade,"

"so held for sale," would not be "within the state" for the purposes of taxation. These cattle are disposed of rapidly, for the simple reason that the expense of keeping them on hand would in a short time destroy the profits of the business. It is an exigency of the trade. Ordinary goods may be kept on the shelf for a considerable period of time without loss, but cattle must be sold. The power of the state to tax an ordinary stock in trade is unquestionable. Can it be that the power is lost by any sort of an exigency that the special trade or class of goods may impose upon the trader? When received by the appellees in Baltimore they are to be kept an indefinite time until sold. The only disposition to be made of them is to be sold; and that this takes but one day is due to the course of trade, and not to the specific purpose of the firm. They buy and bring them to Baltimore, not for the temporary purpose of holding them in Baltimore county one day, but until they are sold, whether it be one day or one year. Therefore they are not temporarily there, but permanently, for sale; or, in other words, to remain there permanently until sold. There seems to be no reason for holding that these cattle, brought into the state by the appellants, residents of the state, for the purpose of supplying their trade, do not have, for the purposes of taxation, the same status as the goods of a merchant who buys in other states merchandise for the purpose of replenishing his stock. When here, they may fairly be "considered as constituting a part of the mass of the property of the state." Appeal Tax Court v. Patterson, 50 Md. 367.

It is said, however, that the assessment is bad, because it includes the cattle exported. This class comprised two thirds of the cattle handled. It is well settled now by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States that property in transit through the state, or from a point in the state to a point outside, is not within the taxing power of the state. That power lies with Congress, under that provision of the Federal Constitution (art. 1, § 8, cl. 3) which declares that it shall have power "to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states and with Indian tribes, and it is exclusive in all matters which require or only admit of general and uniform rules." Cooley v. Philadelphia Port Wardens, 53 U. S. 12 How. 299, 18 L. ed. 996; Brown v. Maryland, 25 U. S. 13 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446, 29 L. ed. 691. But this provision does not prohibit a state from taxing articles brought from another state, so long as there is no discrimination against the product of other states or the rights of its citizens. Woodruff v. Parham, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 123, 187, 19 L. ed. 382, 386; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 623, 29 L. ed. 257. The mere fact, therefore, that these cattle were purchased in other states, and brought to this state, is per se no reason why they cannot be taxed in the usual manner in which such property is taxed in the state, as a part of the general mass of the property of the state. In Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, the supreme court said: "They cannot be taxed as exports; that is to say, they cannot be taxed by reason or because of their exportation or intended exportation; for that would amount to laying a duty on exports, and would be a plain infraction of the Constitution, which prohibits any state, without consent of Congress, from laying any imposts or duties on imports or exports; and, although it has been decided . . . that this clause relates to imports from and exports to foreign countries, yet, when such imposts or duties are laid on imports or exports from one state to another, it cannot be doubted that such an imposition would be a regulation of commerce among the states, and therefore void as an invasion of the exclusive power of Congress. . . . But if such goods are not taxed as exports, nor by reason of their exportation or intended exportation, but are taxed as part of the general mass of property in the state, at the regular period of assessment for such property, and in the usual manner, they not being in course of transportation at the time, is there any valid reason why they should not be taxed?" Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania ("State Freight Tax Case"), 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 252, 21 L. ed. 146. We cannot hold in this case that at the period of assessment any of these cattle were in course of transportation. In the regular course of business the cattle purchased by the appellants are shipped to themselves at Baltimore, to be there disposed of as they may deem most advantageous to their own interests. Once at the Union Stockyards, the transportation ceases, until, at the pleasure of the appellants, they are again shipped. They are not held there to await a steamer or a train, but for the convenience of the owners, in order that they may determine which of them they will sell in the home market and which they will ship to the foreign, or any other disposition they may choose. After this determination is reached, some are disposed of at home to the butchers, and those destined for other markets are delivered to the carrier for their final journey. Now, it is proposed to tax them here, not because they come from another state, nor as exports, but in the same manner and for the same objects, as all other property in the state is taxed. The case of State, Detmold, v. Engle, 84 N. J. L. 425, is not such a one as this. There the coal was mined on their own land by a company in Pennsylvania, and sent by rail to Elizabethport, to be there shipped by water to other markets for sale. The court says: "The power of the state to tax the subjects of commerce where their transit for the purposes of commerce has ceased, and they have become incorporated and mixed up with the mass of property in the community, is well settled. But that a tax on property belonging to a citizen of another state in its transit to market in another state, which is delayed within this state, not for the purpose of sale, but merely for separation and assortment for the convenience of shipment to its destination, is a tax on commerce among states, is too plain to require argument." In this case the place of destination, upon their shipment from the West, is Baltimore county; and in the latter place the owners keep them until they shall have determined what disposition shall be made of them. The property, then, not being in transit, either through the state, or from a point in the state to a point outside, is "property within the state," within the meaning of the statute. But it is contended that, even if this be true, the property is not properly taxed, because the appellants purchased the cattle with the intention to export them; and, therefore, to tax them while in Baltimore county would be within the provision of the Constitution of the United States prohibiting the state from laying imposts or duties on imports or exports. This question was raised in the Supreme Court in the case of Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, but not decided. Justice Bradley, speaking for the court, said: "A duty on exports must either be a duty levied on goods as a condition or by reason of their exportation, or at least a direct tax or duty on goods which are intended for exportation. Whether the last would be a duty on exports it is not necessary to determine." The subject came up again for consideration in the case of Coe v. Errol, 118 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715. The court, after referring to what had been previously held, proceeded: "But no definite rule has been adopted with regard to the point of time at which the taxing power of a state ceases as to goods exported to a foreign country, or to another state. What we have already said . . . will indicate the view which seems to us the sound one on that subject, namely, that such goods do not cease to be part of the general mass of the property in the state, subject, as such, to its jurisdiction, and to taxation in the usual way, until they have been shipped, or entered with a common carrier for transportation to another state, or have started upon such transportation in a continuous route or journey. . . . Until actually launched on its way to another state, or committed to a common carrier for transportation to such state, its destination is not fixed and certain. It may be sold or otherwise disposed of within the state, and never put in course of transportation out of the state." This decision was based on the provisions relating to commerce between the states. But in Turpin v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 504, 29 L. ed. 988, the court declared the same rule applicable where the goods are to be exported to foreign countries. They say: "A general tax, laid on all property alike, and not levied on goods in course of exportation, nor because of their intended exportation, is not within the constitutional prohibition." In Carrier v. Gordon, 21 Ohio St. 608, the rule is stated as follows: "To say that the simple purchase of the property, with an intention to remove it, would relieve it from liability to taxation, would be to make its liability depend upon the mere intention of the owner. . . . The safer and better rule is . . . to consider property actually in transit as belonging to the place of its destination, and property not in transit as property in the place of its situs, without regard to the intention of the owner, or his residence in or out of the state."

34 L. R. A.

It is also objected that cattle sold on commission are included in this assessment. The evidence does not support this contention. It is true that Mr. Myers testified that one sixth of the cattle sold by the appellants were commission cattle, but it does not appear that these were included in the assessment. On the contrary, Myers, and also Houseman, expressly affirm that the statement which places his stock in trade—"capital stock"—at $20,000, is a true return of all the property owned by them. And nowhere in the record is there a word that tends to show that in making up the assessment the commission cattle were taken into account. Myers testified that the valuation was of the capital stock or stock in trade. Some criticism was made upon the words "capital stock" as not referring to the amount of stock kept on hand. As used here, we think the words "capital stock" are intended to refer to the stock of the concern, and not its money. Corson v. State, 57 Md. 286.

There is, however, a fatal omission in the method by which this assessment was made. We do not think it can be regarded as a transfer from the tax books of Baltimore city. It was a new assessment, so far as it affected the taxable basis of Baltimore county, and was therefore within the provisions of § 145 of art. 81 of the Code. By that section, where new property, not valued and returned by the proper assessor or collector, is to be added, the county commissioners must first notify the owner by "written or printed summons, containing" interrogatories, etc., and appointing a certain day "for him to appear and answer; and, secondly, such notice is to be served at least five days before the day of hearing." On that day the owner may appear and answer, and present such testimony as he desires or the commissioners deem necessary to be heard. It is only after the owner has been thus summoned, and has failed to answer in writing on oath, or has appeared and answered orally, and the return day has passed, that the county commissioners can add such new property. The section excepts from these provisions such assessments as are made by the proper collector or assessor whose duty it is to assess and return the same; but this exception does not apply in this case, inasmuch as Van Meeter was merely an agent, with no power to do more than report newly discovered and mixed properties to the commissioners. In this case a memorandum was made by this agent, and the entry of this upon the tax books, by the direction of the county commissioners, constituted the only assessment. This court has said: "Until the property owner was duly notified, and given an opportunity to come in and answer as to the valuation of the property proposed to be affected, or had failed to come in after receiving such notice, the commissioners have no authority or power either to increase the valuation of property already valued and assessed, or to add thereto other property, not valued and returned to them by the proper assessors or collectors, as provided in the statute." "The statute law of the state, applicable to the case," the court proceeds to say, "should have been complied with, and the notice given as required." Alleghany County Comrs. v. New York Min. Co. 76 Md. 557.

This notice not having been given as required by the statute, this assessment cannot be upheld.

Decree reversed, and the cause remanded.

A petition for rehearing having been filed, Page, J., in response thereto, on November 20, 1896, handed down the following opinion:

We have carefully considered the motion for reargument in this case, but do not think there was such notice as is required by the statute. In Alleghany County Comrs. v. New York Min. Co. 76 Md. 556, this court said: "Until the property owner was duly notified, and given an opportunity to come in and answer as to the valuation of the property proposed to be affected, or had failed to come in after receiving such notice, the commissioners have no authority or power either to increase the valuation of property already valued and assessed, or to add thereto other property not valued and returned to them by the proper assessors or collectors, as provided in the statute." Without discussing the matter further, we are of opinion this is conclusive of the case upon this point. The motion for reargument is therefore overruled.

MONTANA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Montana, ex rel. Elmer H. METCALF,

v.

Charles Q. JOHNSON.

(..... Mont.....)

1. A state convention nominating candidates will not be recognized so as to permit the names of the nominees to appear on an official ballot when it was held by only twenty-one persons, representing only one fourth of the precincts of a single county, who met without any call for a convention or any notices given except by word of mouth, or any election as delegates, or any credentials, and immediately assumed to form a new party and organize themselves into a county convention, and then on the same evening into a state convention.

2. A county convention whose nominees will have a right to appear on an official ballot cannot be held by twenty-one persons, coming from but one fourth of the precincts in the county, who met and assumed to form a new party without any credentials or election as delegates, or any call for a convention, or any notice except by word of mouth.

(October 22, 1896.)

APPPLICATION for an injunction to restrain defendant from printing on the official ballots the names of certain persons who were claimed to have been nominated as candidates for public offices to be filled at a coming election. Granted.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Thompson Campbell for relator.

Messrs. F. T. McBride, L. J. Hamilton, and John F. Forbis for respondent.

NOTE.—For the right to nominate candidates in a mass convention under modern ballot laws, see Manston v. McIntosh (Minn.) 28 L. R. A. 606. See 84 L. R. A.

also the case next following, State, Russell, v. Tooker (Mont.) post, 815.

Hunt, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The petitioner asks for an injunction to restrain the county clerk of Silver Bow county from printing upon the official ballot for that county the nominees of the Citizens' Silver party as they appear by the certificates on file with the county clerk of Silver Bow county. Answer was filed, and testimony heard by this court. The facts in evidence before us are these: On October 1, 1896, at 8 o'clock p. m., there assembled at the council chamber of the city hall at Butte a gathering of twenty or thirty persons, electors of Silver Bow county, Montana. These persons met in response to invitations extended by Mr. J. A. Baker and several others. The exact circumstances under which they came together were detailed by Mr. Baker as follows:

Q. Do you know whether there was any call made for this meeting?

A. The manner in which this call was made was from hand to hand and from mouth to mouth.

Q. By whom?

A. By the electors of Silver Bow county.

Q. When was this call given?

A. Several days before the meeting; two days, perhaps three.

Q. Don't you know?

A. I do not know.

Q. You participated?

A. I did. I invited people perhaps three or four days before the meeting was called. I invited gentlemen whom I knew to be in sympathy with the principles of the financial plank of the party.

Q. Were any notices given to any other counties, or electors of any other counties, to come in and participate?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did not?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether anybody else gave any notice?

A. No, sir; I do not know.

Q. Don't you know that they did not?

A. Well, I can't say.

Q. Was there any notice published in the papers?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, when you did assemble, how did you determine as to who had a right in the meeting?

A. The gentlemen who did assemble were supposed to be gentlemen who were invited to the meeting, and were electors of that party.

When thus assembled, Mr. William Thompson was elected as temporary chairman, and Mr. J. A. Baker temporary secretary. These gentlemen were made permanent officers. Then the gathering appointed several committees, and thereafter at once organized itself into a political party to be known as the "Citizens' Silver Party."—"the beginning," testified the secretary, "of a new national party." Directly after this important epoch in the history of this new national organization, and without pursuing the common ceremony of a call for a convention, it proceeded as a "county convention" to consider the report of a committee recommending nominations for candidates for district court judges and county officers of Silver Bow county. The report of the committee recommending certain names was adopted, and a complete ticket nominated forthwith by acclamation. The county ticket so nominated was identical with the Republican county ticket, or "Auditorium ticket," and which we are not asked to disturb. No resolutions or platform was adopted, "it appearing," the minutes recite, "to the convention, from statements made in the convention, that a state convention of the Citizens' Silver party had been called to meet on October 1, 1896, at the council chamber, city hall, Butte, at 8 o'clock p. m. of that day, and that the electors and delegates to that convention were ready to meet upon the adjournment of the county convention, and that the said state convention would probably adopt resolutions setting forth the principles of the party. It was therefore the sense of the convention that the county convention should not adopt any resolutions as a county convention, but would be bound by such resolutions as the state convention should adopt as a declaration of its principles." The "county convention" then adjourned sine die. Then at once followed a "state convention of the Citizens' Silver party." Mr. McMillan was chairman, Mr. Baker, secretary. The same gentlemen who had composed the county convention made up the so-called "state convention;" that is to say, the persons composing the county convention simply assumed to act in a different capacity. Only one roll of delegates was kept for both conventions. It showed twenty-one names of persons as present. The body nominated Hon. Martin Maginnis, Henry L. Frank, and Daniel Brown, Esqs., as presidential electors, and voted to leave the balance of the state ticket blank. Resolutions favoring free coinage of silver by the United States independently of any other nation were adopted, and the "state convention" adjourned. No call for a state convention was ever given; no delegates to the state convention were ever elected by any county convention; no credentials were ever given to any such delegates by anyone; no notice throughout the state, or any county in it, was attempted to be published by way of notice of a state gathering of this new party; and no delegates, other than the twenty-one persons already referred to, participated. The whole history of the party covered one short evening. It originated one minute, convened as a county convention the next, convened as a state convention the next, then promulgated its principles, and adjourned. We doubt if political history records the undertaking of another so vast a work as this in so brief a time!

34 L. R. A.

But, now that the facts are subjected to the severe test of impartial judicial investigation, we find them wholly insufficient to sustain the action of the assemblage either in attempting to nominate county or state officials, and we are satisfied by all the evidence that the real object of the nomination of the Citizens' Silver ticket was to place the Republican nominees beneath the Democratic electoral ticket. Let us grant that a new national party was organized. Yet, even so, how can a few individuals, coming from but one fourth of the voting precincts of one county, without any notice to the electors of the state, organize a state convention representing such an organized party and its principles? The very underlying principle of convention organization is in representation. This principle pervades every political system in our form of popular government. It was recognized in May, 1787, when the Federal system was revised by the Philadelphia convention of delegates from the states at the outset of the government, and has steadily grown to be a common form of giving expression to the choice of the people by whom delegates are usually chosen. As political parties have grown and become the medium of declarations of principles of electors, so the convention system has become a common part of political machinery as the means of putting candidates before the people. National party conventions have nominated presidential candidates since 1832. Somewhat recently, in the growth of electoral reform, legislation has come to recognize the existence of political party conventions; and the statutes of many states, including those of Montana, have briefly put in definite form the rule that a convention is an organized assemblage of electors or delegates representing a political party or principle. This definition cannot be separated into wholly independent, divisible parts. The assemblage must not only be an organized one, but the electors as well must, when so organized, represent a political party or principle. Thus a convention must be a representative body. Now, if we are right in this reasoning, this representation is of electors of the party to whom the candidates of the convention are to be submitted for election to office. And this representation must be what the statute implies,—a gathering of electors springing from the electors who compose a political party or adhere to a political principle. If such electors fail or decline to send delegates to the convention, or if the delegates sent disagree or act unwisely, then other matters may arise; but there can be no representation without the presence of electors fairly representing the party, or without some opportunity having been given to the electors to say whether or not they desire their party or principle to be represented. This was the doctrine of the Woody Case (Mont.) 46 Pac. 370, and is now reaffirmed. Here, in this case, we find an attempted state convention of an organized party, made up of a few persons, without credentials, voluntarily coming from but nine precincts of one county in a great state, and no attempt at giving to the electors of the party in other precincts or counties a chance to participate in the assemblage! The whole theory of representation, as fairly intended by the law, was entirely ignored. The vigorous authority of the electors of the party was lacking, and, unless relief is granted in such cases, the voters of the state who are members of an existing political party may be confronted with a ballot containing the names of persons in whose nomi-ination they had no opportunity whatever to take part by delegate representation. We can not assent to such a method as a convention nomination of candidates. A political convention is to a certain extent a law unto itself, and the right to assemble in convention is one that must be always upheld, but whether there has been a convention with authority to nominate candidates is, under conditions of fact, one that must be determined by applying the statute law of the state. The duty of the court, therefore, in this case is to subject the methods employed to form a convention to such examination as any other case properly presented to a court would be. We have done so, and our conclusion is that there was no state convention held, and the writ must issue as prayed for.

These views apply to the so called "county convention." The electors of the new party in Silver Bow county had no fair notice of any convention, and no opportunity to be represented by delegates, and were not represented, except by a few projectors of the new party. The action of the body, therefore, as a county convention, cannot be sustained, and it must be nullified.

All questions of practice are passed. State, Russell, v. Tooker (Mont.) post, 315.

Let the writ of injunction issued enjoining the county clerk from putting the so-called "Ottizans' Silver Ticket" upon the official ballot be made permanent.

As it appears to the court that the secretary of state has certified the Citizens' Silver party electoral ticket to all of the county clerks throughout the state, the attorney general is hereby directed to notify each and every county clerk of this decision, and to order them to omit the said ticket from the official ballots of their respective counties.

Pemberton, Ch. J., and De Witt, J., concur.

STATE of Montana, ex rel. Edward C. RUSSELL, vs.

John S. TOOKER.

(.....Mont.....)

1. Nominations cannot be made by a petition filed with a county clerk and recorder so as to entitle the names of the nominees to be placed upon an official ticket as candidates of a party.
2. Nominations by a self-constituted county committee of an alleged party cannot be made so as to appear on an official ticket when no power has been delegated to such committee by any convention of the party.
3. A nomination by a political club cannot be recognized as that of a county convention when the participants did not consider themselves a convention and the minutes kept were those of the club, and there had been no call or notice of a convention or any election of delegates, and no primaries had been held.

(October 22, 1896.)

NOTE.—See the preceding case of State, Metcalf, v. Johnson, ante, 313.

PETITION for an injunction to restrain defendant from printing on the official ballots the names of certain persons who were claimed to have been nominated as candidates for certain offices to be elected at a coming election. Granted.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. E. D. Weed and Oliver T. Crane, for relator:

The law provides only two methods by which nominations for office may be made, and the names placed on the official ballot. The first method is by a convention or organized assemblage of electors as provided by §§ 1810, 1811, and 1812, Pol. Code; and the second by a certificate signed by the required number of electors in the manner and as provided in Pol. Code, § 1813.

A certificate signed by the electors, commonly called a petition, does not entitle the persons named therein as candidates to have their names printed on the official ballot under or as part of the Silver Republican party ticket or under any other ticket.

State, Woody, v. Rotwitt (Mont.) 46 Pac. 370; Philips v. Curtis (Idaho) 88 Pac. 405; Atkeson v. Lay, 115 Mo. 538.

A caucus not held at a place where caucuses of the party are usually held or called by any one having authority, for which insufficient notices were given, and not attended by such a number of electors of the party as to take the place of a proper official call and due notice, is not such a primary meeting of electors held under the rules of a party as can make and certify nominations.

Re Wilkesbarre Twp. Nominations, 7 Kulp, 529; Re Ingram, 3 Pa. Dist. R. 272; Re Craig, Id. 274; Allegheny City Elections, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 660.

The entire body of electors belonging to a particular party residing in a county, town, district, circuit, or precinct who are entitled to vote for the candidate at the election, have a right to join in his nomination.

State, Bloomfield, v. Weir, 5 Wash. 84.

A majority of the persons who took part in that alleged convention also took part in the Republican primaries, and some of them in the county Republican convention, and thereby joined in nominating other persons for the same office; and the officers of the so-called convention were members of the Republican county convention.

Philips v. Curtis, supra; State, O'Malley, v. Lesueur, 108 Mo. 253; Re Woodworth, 16 N. Y. Supp. 153.

When persons who are not entitled to vote are permitted to vote by the officers conducting the election or convention, it vitiates the election, and it is void.

Re Gibbons' Nomination, 5 Pa. Dist. R. 194; Re Winton's Nominations, 2 Lack. L. News, 13; McCrory, Elections, p. 441, § 184; Judkins v. Hill, 50 N. H. 140.

A convention having authority to make nominations may delegate authority to a committee appointed by it to fill vacancies or make nominations after the convention fails to nominate. But that committee derives its authority from the convention or primaries, and can only exercise the authority thus specifically delegated.

State, Pigott, v. Benton, 18 Mont. 325.

Messrs. T. C. Bach, E. C. Boon, and J. W. Kinsley for respondent.

De Witt, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action is brought in this court to restrain the county clerk and recorder of Lewis and Clarke county from printing on the official ballot to be voted at the next election the names of certain persons as candidates of the Silver Republican party, which names were certified to the county clerk as of persons having been nominated as candidates of that party by methods which relator asserts are illegal. Objections are made by respondent's counsel to the form of this action. It is argued by relator, however, that the action is properly brought, under the authority of Chumacero v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242; Territory, Tanner, v. Potts, 3 Mont. 384, and other later decisions of this court. If the action is not properly brought, and upon investigation we should be obliged to so hold, the result would be that a new proceeding must be commenced in order to obtain a judgment on the merits. The same remarks apply to five other election ballot cases which are now (October 22d) before us, and the hearing of which has occupied us all of the last four days. These are cases of great public interest. Counsel inform us that the ballots must be published to-morrow, and that there is barely time to print them. For these reasons we shall approve the form of the actions pro forma, but shall not consider this decision as to this matter of practice binding in the future, if the question shall be at any time fully argued, and we have time to deliberately consider it. Public policy and public interest demand an immediate decision of this case on the merits, and justify us in thus passing the question of practice.

It was attempted to get the names of a certain list of persons upon the official ballot of Lewis and Clarke county by three different methods:

First: A petition was filed with the respondent clerk and recorder nominating these persons for their respective offices as candidates of the Silver Republican party. The nominations could not be made by this method, and the procedure did not entitle these persons to be placed upon the official ticket as candidates of the Silver Republican party. State, Woody, v. Rotwitt (Mont.) 46 Pac. 370.

Second: A certificate was filed nominating these same persons, and purporting to certify their nomination as by the county central committee of the Silver Republican party. But no convention of the Silver Republican party had ever delegated this power to a committee. State, Pigott, v. Benton, 18 Mont. 306. This committee, therefore, had no power delegated to them from the convention of their party. There was some attempt to show that this committee derived this power by delegation from the chairman of the state central committee of the Silver Republican party to the member of that committee in and for the county of Lewis and Clarke, and from that member to the county central committee of the Silver Republican party. Testimony was taken by us upon disputed questions of fact, and, among other things, the chairman of the state committee testified that he did not delegate to the member of Lewis and Clarke county the power to nominate a county ticket, nor did he consider that he had power to delegate such authority in local affairs. This disposes of the alleged nomination by petition and by the central committee. They are each wholly invalid.

Third. A certificate was filed nominating these same persons, purporting upon its face to be that of a county convention of the Silver Republican party. Upon this alleged certificate respondent's counsel relies. The question, then, remains for decision whether the alleged county convention purporting to nominate these persons was in fact a convention of the Silver Republican party of the county of Lewis and Clarke. Upon this question evidence was taken.

We think that the only question before us is whether these persons are entitled to go upon the ballot as party nominees; that is, as candidates of the Silver Republican party. State, Woody, v. Rotwitt, supra. The question of their going upon the ballot as Independents, or as nonparty candidates, we do not think is before us. Every fact in the pleadings and evidence contradicts any suggestion that anyone pretended that these persons were Independents or nonparty candidates. There is not a syllable in the testimony to indicate that the persons endeavoring to make these nominations ever intended to attempt to place their candidates upon the ballot as Independents. The question then remains, Did a party convention nominate these people? Section 1810 of the Political Code is as follows: "Any convention or primary meeting held for the purpose of making nominations to public office, or the number of electors required in this chapter, may nominate candidates for public office to be filled by election in the state. A convention or primary meeting within the meaning of this chapter is an organized assemblage of electors or delegates representing a political party or principle." We are of opinion that the only reasonable view of the evidence is that these alleged candidates were nominated simply by a political club in the city of Helena, county of Lewis and Clarke, called the "Republican Silver Club." We have before us the minutes of the club, and the evidence of persons and members who were present at the proceedings. It is perfectly apparent that the club, in acting, was not a convention representing the Silver Republican party; nor, indeed, did those persons participating in the proceedings consider themselves a convention. There is not a minute of a convention. The minutes are all of the Silver Republican Club. To be sure, witnesses on the stand make statements that the Silver Republican Club of Helena and the Silver Republican party were one and the same thing; but we look beyond bare statements and forms of speech, and endeavor to arrive at the real substance of the proceedings. We find that the officers acted as officers of the club, and did not pretend to be officers of a convention. No primaries were ever held. No call for a convention was ever made, nor was any person ever elected as a delegate to a convention, and no notice was given that a convention was to be held. It is in evidence that a daily newspaper in Helena published as news items the proceedings and intentions of this club, but these were simply narrations by a newspaper reporter, and published as news. To pretend that such news items were notices of a convention seems to us to reach the point of absurdity. It is claimed that a banner was strung across the street, which gave notice; but the banner was an ordinary political one, giving the name of the club, and stating that it met every Wednesday evening. It is a very violent stretch of imagination to pretend to call this a notice of a convention. To construe the proceedings of this club as a convention is contrary to all ideas of political conventions among the American people. The Silver Republican party, it was stated in the evidence, was a wing of the Republican party. If it were a wing, it naturally inherited the political practices of the Republican party. No one pretends that the Republican party had any such usages or customs, or ever held conventions in any such manner as this. Upon this question the evidence of the presiding officer of the club, Mr. Reece, is interesting. It was he who signed as chairman the certificate of nomination. After his signature appear these words: "Chairman and Presiding Officer of Said Convention or Organized Assemblage of Electors of the Silver Republican Party. Business: Land attorney. Business address: Helena, Montana." This signature was shown to the witness, and he testified that he did not know what he signed; that Mr. Kinsley asked him to sign it; that he did so hurriedly, as he was leaving his office. This question was asked:

Had you any idea that evening, during the whole process of the meeting, that it was anything else than a meeting of the Silver Republican Club?

A. My understanding was that it was a meeting of the Silver Republican Club.

When did you first know that it was called a convention?

A. After the certificate was filed.

He stated further that he did not believe he was presiding over a convention, and that he did not know that any was called. In reply to a question by one of the justices, he said: "I did understand it was a certificate; that these persons were the nominees of the Silver Republicans; but I did not understand that I presided over a Silver Republican convention."

This testimony, let it be remembered, was that of the presiding officer of the club and the officer who signed the certificate of nomination filed with the county clerk. And we are asked to call this sort of a proceeding a party county convention. We decline to do so. No matter with what force some of the members of the club assert that the club and the party were the same thing, still, when we reach the real substance of the whole proceeding, it seems to us wholly absurd to contend that this proceeding was a convention. Furthermore, it appears that the Silver Republican Club has some 400 members. These proceedings were participated in by 80 to 50 members. It is claimed that this was the action of a political party. We have evidence before us of what the Silver Republican party is claimed to be, and what are a so-called Silver Republican's political principles. These principles are stated by witnesses to be simply that a Silver Republican is one who has been a Republican, and who indorses the whole of the national Republican platform of 1896, except the financial plank; and as to the financial question his position is the advocacy of the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 by the United States, independent of any other nation. Such is the evidence before us, and such, for the purposes of this case, must be considered the fact. We do not pretend to deny the right of a political party in convention assembled to nominate a ticket composed of members of its own party, and also those of other parties, but we think the natural presumption from history is that, as a rule, political conventions nominate candidates from the ranks of their own party. But the alleged convention in this case nominated a ticket composed of Republicans, Silver Republicans, Democrats, and Populists. A very large majority of this ticket—that is to say, a majority of 16 to 8—was of men other than Silver Republicans, and of men already in nomination upon the Republican, Democratic, and Populist county tickets. We are of opinion, therefore, that this is additional evidence tending to show that the assembly which nominated the persons in question was not a convention of the Silver Republican party. Let it be remembered that we do not question the right of a convention to make such nominations if they please; but when the question in controversy is whether or not an assemblage was a convention, the fact that it has done that which is wholly contrary to the history of political conventions is some evidence against the claim of the assemblage to be a convention; for when it nominates a vast majority of its candidates from among the ranks of its enemies it is doing that which is at least extraordinary as convention action.

The respondent's counsel earnestly argue that any number of men, however small, may organize a political party. This will not be denied at this time or place. But that is not the question for consideration.

The question here is whether or not a political party held a convention. We have stated above our reasons for holding that the evidence shows that this was not a convention under the statute or under the usages or customs of political parties. It must be remembered that this is an action in equity, and that this court is sitting as an equity court. It is our duty to arrive at the real substance of things. These cases must each stand upon their own facts,—a doctrine to which we gave particular emphasis in Stackpole v. Hallahan, 16 Mont. 40, 28 L. R. A. 503. Regarding the real facts of this case as they have been presented to us by the pleadings and by the evidence, we cannot, in any equity or good conscience, concede that the assemblage which nominated these persons was in any sense a county convention of the Silver Republican party. It seems to have been sought by the respondent to show by the evidence which the counsel introduced that the alleged convention under consideration was a parallel to the state convention, which convention, representing all the electors of the state, deliberately and formally divided itself into two conventions which two conventions each then proceeded to nominate presidential electors and congressmen. The facts in regard to the state convention were introduced in evidence. But without discussing them at any length at this time we will leave them with the remark that the facts in regard to the state convention are very widely distinguished from the proceedings of the assemblage, which nominated these persons under consideration. The judgment in equity cases is not controlled by the prayer for relief. Davis v. Davis, 9 Mont. 268; Kleinschmidt v. Steele, 15 Mont. 1-8. We are of opinion that the facts shown entitle the plaintiff to an injunction restraining the county clerk and recorder from placing upon the official ballot as candidates of the Silver Republican party all those persons named in the pretended certificate of nomination signed by F. L. Reese, as chairman and W. J. McHaffie, as secretary; and also such persons as pretended to be nominated by petition of electors and by certificate of the Silver Republican party central committee,—that is to say, all those persons who were named in said three certificates, copies of which are annexed to relator's complaint as exhibits.

Let the writ of injunction therefore be made perpetual to the foregoing effect.

Pemberton, Ch. J., and Hunt, J., concur.

MINNESOTA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Minnesota, Resp't.,
v.

Hans C. NELSON, App't.

(.....Minn.....)

*1. Certain provisions of an ordinance of the city of Minneapolis to license and regulate the sale of milk in the city, considered.

*Headnotes by MITCHELL, J.

NOTE.—The question in the above case as to the validity of an ordinance requiring a tuberculin test of milk is one on which there seems to be no precedent.

For an ordinance as to the inspection of milk, see 34 L. R. A.

and held to be authorized by Gen. Laws 1896, chap. 208, entitled "An Act Relating to the Inspection of Milk and of Dairies and Dairy Herds, and to Provide for the Licensing and Regulation of the Sale of Milk in Cities."

2. It is competent for a city council by ordinance to require that an applicant for a license to sell milk within the city shall consent that the dairy herd from which he obtained his milk may be inspected by the commissioner of health of the city, although such dairy herd is kept outside the city limits.

State v. Dupaquier (La.) 26 L. R. A. 162; and as to such an ordinance providing also for the destruction of milk which does not answer the test, see Deems v. Baltimore (Md.) 26 L. R. A. 541.

3. The requirement that he shall consent, as a condition precedent to obtaining such license, that the animals from which he obtains the milk shall be subjected to the "tuberculin test" is not unreasonable.

4. Whether a license from a city under an ordinance passed pursuant to Laws 1896, chap. 203, is, as to the sale of milk in such city, a substitute for the license from the state dairy commissioner provided for in Laws 1889, chap. 247, or whether it is merely supplemental and additional, is not decided. In either view the ordinance is authorized by the act of 1895.

(November 6, 1896.)

APPEAL by defendant from an order of the Municipal Court of Minneapolis denying a motion for a new trial after a conviction for violating a city ordinance. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. F. F. Davis for appellant.

Messrs. David F. Simpson and M. D. Purdy, for respondent:

The ordinance under which appellant was convicted is not extraterritorial in its operation.

The various states of the Union are authorized by their respective constitutions to enact certain laws which shall be operative within their respective boundaries, but no state has the authority to enact a law which shall be extraterritorial in its operation. In this respect a state is endowed by its Constitution with no greater authority or power than is conferred upon a municipal corporation by its charter.

17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 254.

Municipal by-laws which do not assume to operate upon the person or property of people residing outside of the municipality, but which merely seek to impose conditions upon such nonresidents who desire to carry on their business within the municipality, should be upheld by the courts.

People's Mut. Ben. Soc. v. Lester (Mich.) 2 Det. L. N. 244; Ross v. Kimberly & C. Co. 89 Wis. 545, 27 L. R. A. 556.

The ordinance in question is not oppressive or unreasonable in its operation and therefore void.

State v. Kantler, 83 Minn. 69; Wykoff v. Healey, 57 Minn. 14.

The ordinance is not repugnant to the general laws of the state, and therefore ipso facto void.

State v. Oleson, 26 Minn. 507; State v. Ludwig, 21 Minn. 202; State v. Lee, 29 Minn. 445; State v. Harris, 50 Minn. 128; Foster v. Board of Police Commrs. 102 Cal. 484.

Mitchell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Laws 1887, chap. 140, as amended by Laws 1889, chap. 247, entitled an "Act to Prevent Deception in the Sale of Dairy Products, and to Preserve the Public Health, etc.," prohibited, among other things, the keeping of cows for the production of milk for the market in a crowded or unhealthy condition; the sale of impure or unwholesome milk; and provided for the appointment of a dairy commissioner and assistant commissioner, experts and chemists, who should have access to all places used in the manufacture and sale of dairy products. Sections 13 and 14 of the amendatory act (Gen. Stat. 1894, §§ 7004, 7005) provided in substance that everyone who sold or offered for sale milk in any city or town of 8,000 inhabitants or more should obtain a license from the dairy commissioners.

The legislature subsequently enacted Gen. Laws 1895, chap. 203, providing that the city council of any city may by ordinance provide for the inspection of milk and of dairy herds kept for the production of milk within its limits, and issue licenses for the sale of milk within its limits; and regulate the same; and may authorize and empower the board of health to enforce all laws and ordinances relating to the production and sale of milk, for sale or consumption, within such city, and to appoint such inspectors, etc., as are necessary for the proper enforcement of such laws and ordinances, and such inspectors, etc., shall be possessed of such necessary powers within the limits of such city as shall be prescribed by ordinance, but no such ordinance shall conflict with any law of this state. The act further provided that nothing therein contained should affect or interfere with any of the powers and duties conferred on the state dairy commissioners by any law of this state.

In March, 1896, the city council of Minneapolis passed an ordinance to provide for the inspection of milk dairies and dairy herds, and to regulate the sale of milk in the city of Minneapolis. This ordinance is set out in full in appellant's brief as Exhibit C. Its provisions, as far as now material, may be summarized as follows:

Any person desiring a license to sell milk in the city is required to file with the commissioner of health of the city an application thereof, stating, among other things, the location or place from which the applicant obtains the milk, and, if he is not a producer of milk, then the name of the person from whom he obtains his milk, and also requesting the city to inspect his dairy and dairy herd, or the dairy or dairy herd of the person from whom he obtains his milk, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the ordinance—a refusal of the applicant to request such inspection to result in his failure to obtain a license.

Upon the filing of such application the commissioner of health is to inspect the dairy and dairy herd of the applicant, or those of the person from whom he obtains his milk, and to cause an examination by the veterinarian of the department of health to be made of every animal producing milk for sale within the city, belonging to the applicant or the person from whom he obtains his milk, "and for the purpose of detecting tuberculosis or other contagious or infectious disease, the veterinarian is authorized in making such inspection to use what is known as the tuberculin test as a diagnostic agency for the detection of tuberculosis in such animal." The ordinance further provides for the tagging of such animal thus examined and inspected so as to afford a permanent record of the result as regards the presence or absence of an infectious or contagious disease; that when the applicant, or the person from whom he obtains his milk, shall have removed from his dairy herd all cows and animals which may be found to be affected with any contagious disease so that they are no longer used for the production of milk, for sale or consumption within the city, then the commissioner of health shall make a report to the city council concerning such applicant and the condition of the dairy and dairy herd from which he obtains his milk. After these reports are submitted, the city council is, after proper examination, to determine what applicants are entitled to a license to sell milk in the city. It then becomes the duty of the commissioner of health to issue licenses to those determined by the city council to be entitled thereto. The ordinance also provides that no person shall sell, deal in, or dispose of any milk within the city without first having obtained a license so to do in the manner above provided, and imposes a penalty for the violation of any of the provisions of the ordinance.

The defendant having been convicted of selling milk in the city without first having obtained a license as provided in the ordinance, appealed to this court.

1. The first and second objections urged against this ordinance are virtually one, and may be considered together. The objection is that the provisions of the ordinance are not within the limits prescribed for it by the statute for the reason that it is attempted to make its operation extraterritorial in that it provides for the inspection of dairies and dairy herds outside the city limits. There is no merit in this point. The manifest purpose of the statute under which this ordinance was passed was to enable the city council to adopt such reasonable police regulations as would prevent the sale of unwholesome milk within the city, and not merely to prevent the keeping of unhealthy dairy herds within the city limits. It is a matter of common knowledge that much of the milk sold in a city is produced in dairies situated outside the city limits. Any police regulations that did not provide means for insuring the wholesomeness of milk thus brought into the city for sale and consumption would furnish very inadequate protection to the lives and health of the citizens. It is also a matter of common knowledge as well as of proof in this case that the wholesomeness of milk cannot always be determined by an examination of the milk itself. To determine whether it does or does not contain the germs of any contagious or infectious disease it is necessary to inspect the animals which produce it. The inspection of dairies or dairy herds outside the city limits provided for by this ordinance applies only to those whose milk product it is proposed to sell in the city. The provisions of the ordinance in that regard go only so far as it is reasonably necessary to prevent the milk of diseased cows being sold within the city. This inspection is wholly voluntary on the part of the owner of the dairy or dairy herd. If he does not choose to submit to such inspection the result merely is that he or the one to whom he furnishes milk cannot obtain a license to sell milk within the city. The ordinance has no extraterritorial operation and there has been no attempt to give it any such effect. The only subject upon which it operates is the sale of milk within the city.

2. The objection is urged that the ordinance is oppressive and unreasonable in that it requires every dairy herd whose milk is desired to be sold within the city to be subject to the "tuberculin test" which it is claimed is uncertain in its results and deleterious to the health of animals. At the present stage of scientific research on this subject it may be a debatable question whether this test has been fully proved or how far it is as yet merely experimental. There is ample evidence in this case that it is now the generally accepted theory that the presence of consumption or tuberculosis in animals can be detected by this test, also that this is what is called a "germ disease" which may be contracted by eating the flesh or drinking the milk of a tuberculosis animal. Upon the evidence we could not say that this provision of the ordinance is oppressive or that it has not a reasonable tendency to prevent the sale of unwholesome milk within the city. There are some other objections urged against the reasonableness of the ordinance, but none of them are of sufficient merit to require special notice.

3. It is further urged that the ordinance is repugnant to Gen. Laws 1887, chap. 140, as amended by Laws 1889, chap. 247. The point of this objection is that the act referred to entrusts to the state dairy commissioner the matter of inspecting dairies and dairy herds and issuing licenses to sell milk in cities or towns of 2,000 inhabitants, while under the ordinance in question these powers, so far as they relate to dairies and dairy herds whose milk it is proposed to be sold in the city, are assumed to be exercised by the city council, whereas the act of 1895 provides that no ordinance shall conflict with any law of the state, and that nothing in that act shall affect or interfere with any of the powers and duties conferred on the state dairy commissioner by any law of the state.

It must be presumed that the legislature intended to do something when it enacted the law of 1895. But if counsel's contention is correct then the legislature in the first part of that act conferred certain powers upon the cities and then in the latter part of the same act took these powers all back.

It is clear that the legislature intended to confer on city councils the very powers which have been exercised by the enactment of this ordinance. Whether when a city has exercised these powers it is, as to the sale of milk in such city, a substitute for the license from the dairy commissioner provided for in the act of 1887 as amended in 1889 or whether it is merely supplemental and additional, is a question not involved in this case; for in either view the provisions of the ordinance under consideration are authorized by the act of 1895.

Order affirmed.

NEBRASKA SUPREME COURT.

City of HASTINGS, Pff. in Err.,

Jefferson H. FOXWORTHY.

(45 Neb. 676.)

*1. The provision of § 34, art. 3, chap. 14, Comp. Stat., that, in order to maintain an action against a city of the second class having more than 5,000 inhabitants, for injury or damage to person or property, the party complaining must file a statement in the office of the city clerk within six months from the date of the injury, giving the circumstances of such injury, and other information, is a reasonable exercise of legislative power, and the filing of such a statement is a condition precedent to maintaining an action for such injury, and compliance therewith must be alleged and proved.

*Headnotes by IRVING, C.

2. An appellate court, on a second appeal of a case, will not ordinarily re-examine questions of law presented by the first appeal; but, where the case was, on the first appeal, remanded generally for a new trial, and the same questions are presented on the second trial, the appellate court is not bound to follow opinions on questions of law presented on the first appeal, and may re-examine and reverse its rulings on such questions, and should do so when the opinion first expressed is manifestly incorrect.

3. Hiatt v. Brooks, 17 Neb. 83, modified.

4. Where a statute requires a certain thing to be done within a time specified as a condition precedent to maintaining an action, the disability of the plaintiff during a portion of the period allowed will not extend the NOTE.—Conclusiveness of prior decisions on subsequent appeals.

- a. Generally.
- b. Where the prior decision is erroneous.
- c. As applied to matters after remanding a case.
- d. As to evidence.
- e. As to party.
- f. As to matters necessarily involved.
- g. As to matters of estoppel.
- h. As to matters of jurisdiction.
- i. As to defective appeals.
- j. As to cross-appeals.
- k. Where prior decision is not final.
- l. As to matters of pleading.
- m. As to injunctions and interlocutory orders.
- n. As to questions which might have been made on prior appeal.
- o. As to excessive verdicts.
- p. Change of court.
- q. As to effect of dicta.
- r. Where the questions are different.
- s. As to ambiguous decisions.
- t. As to limited decisions.
- u. As to decisions by a divided court.
- v. Statute and Constitution changing the rule.
- w. Rule in intermediate courts.

The case of HASTINGS V. FOXWORTHY holds that a decision upon a prior appeal is not conclusive upon a subsequent appeal where the prior decision reversed a judgment of the district court sustaining a demurrer to an answer, and by implication held that the action was brought within the proper time, where subsequently the same court held in another case, under a similar charter, that such an action was barred by limitation, and that so much of the opinion in the FOXWORTHY CASE as held that the action was not barred was a dictum. The court reviews all the former decisions of Nebraska which appear to state that the law of the case is conclusive, and holds that the fact that the prior decision has been overruled in another case makes the question a new one. The rule that a prior decision is not conclusive, if erroneous, is now adopted in Nebraska. The court further holds that when the case was remanded generally for a new trial, the prior decision, if erroneous, is not conclusive on the second trial.

a. Generally.

It is so generally accepted that the prior decision is conclusive on the same question on a subsequent appeal that a great many cases adopt this rule without any discussion, and it may be said to be the law of the case in a great many of the states.

34 L. R. A.

This is termed the "law of the case," and is more binding than the rule of stare decisis. The application of this principle is more apparent where the prior decision is admitted to be erroneous and yet followed. But on this proposition there are some exceptions and quite a number of dicta to the contrary, and it may now be said that the binding force of the prior decision, if erroneous, is not conclusive, not only in Nebraska, but also in Texas, Utah, and Missouri. Some decisions in Connecticut, New York, and Ohio indicate that such states would make exceptions in a proper case. See subd. b, "Where the prior decision is erroneous."

So, the decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive upon the second appeal, where the question presented was the same. Bryan v. Weems, 25 Ala. 186; Stien v. Ashby, 30 Ala. 363; Goodman v. Walker, Id. 482, 68 Am. Dec. 134; Huffman v. State, 30 Ala. 532; Pearson v. Darrington, 32 Ala. 227; Pickens v. Oliver, Id. 623; Thomason v. Dill, 34 Ala. 177; Bryant v. Boothe, 35 Ala. 229; Ritter v. Stevenson, 11 Cal. 27; Crowell v. Gilmore, 17 Cal. 194; Phelan v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 40; Jaffe v. Skae, 48 Cal. 540; Donner v. Palmer, 51 Cal. 623; Yates v. Smith, 40 Cal. 662; Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485; Lick v. Diaz, 44 Cal. 479; Dilla v. Bohall, 62 Cal. 610; Paulson v. Numan, 64 Cal. 290; Johnston v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 75 Cal. 124; Re Cook's Estate, 83 Cal. 415; Brusie v. Gates, 96 Cal. 263; Emerie v. Alvarado, 90 Cal. 444; People, Bryant v. Holladay, 93 Cal. 241; Kahn v. San Francisco City & County Supers. (Cal.) 25 Pac. 403; Gould v. Adams, 108 Cal. 365; Routt v. Greenwood Cemetery Land Co. 18 Colo. 122; Arnold v. Woodward (Colo.) 44 Pac. 507; Kanasa P. R. Co. v. Bayles, 19 Colo. 343; Wilson v. Fridenburg, 19 Fla. 461; Doyle v. Wade, 23 Fla. 94; Lewis v. Hill, 87 Ga. 466; Shelton v. Ellis, 73 Ga. 138; Dean v. Feely, 89 Ga. 804, 66 Ga. 273; Savannah Bank & T. Co. v. Hartridge, 75 Ga. 149; Young v. Harrison, 21 Ga. 584; Palmer v. Utah & N. R. Co. 2 Idaho 350; McFarland v. Washburn, 28 Ill. App. 355; Houston v. Boltz, 33 Ill. App. 449; Allemania F. Ins. Co. v. Peck, Id. 548; Chicago Drop Forge & F. Co. v. Van Dam, 50 Ill. App. 470; Peoria & P. U. R. Co. v. United States Rolling Stock Co. 36 Ill. App. 552; Whitney v. Bohlen, 56 Ill. App. 237; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Cicero, 157 Ill. 89; Kising v. Carr, 79 Ill. 596; Diversey v. Johnson, 93 Ill. 547; Clayes v. White, 83 Ill. 540; Keiser v. Cox, 16 Ill. App. 631; Flower v. Brumbach, 30 Ill. App. 294; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Stites, 28 Ill. App. 430; Desplaines v. Poyer, 22 Ill. App. 574, Affirmed in 123 Ill. 343; Gardiner v. Bunn, 24 Ill. App. 627; Taylor v. Frew, 113 Ill. 359; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. People, 72 Ill. 82; Mo- time of performance, provided a reasonable time remain within the period, after the disability is removed.

(June 22, 1885.)

ERROR to the District Court for Kearney County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries caused by falling upon a sidewalk which was alleged to have become defective through defendant's negligence. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. A. H. Bowen and Tibbets, Morey, & Ferris, for plaintiff in error, in opposition to petition for rehearing:

The decision on the question as to the rule of res judicata or law of the case may be divided into two classes. One class holds that all points become res judicata which are before the court for decision, no matter whether or not they are expressly considered and decided. The other class holds that only those questions become res judicata which are expressly raised and distinctly considered and decided.

Reason, justice, and good sense require that no points shall become res judicata unless they have been actually considered and adjudicated, and it is evident that this is the view entertained by this court in its consideration and application of this rule.

Hiatt v. Brooks, 17 Neb. 38; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hull, 24 Neb. 742; O'Donohue v. Hendrix, 18 Neb. 257; Meyer v. Shamp, 26 Neb. 729.

The following authorities are clear and strong in support of this view.

Gwin v. Waggoner, 116 Mo. 148; Portland Trust Co. v. Coulter, 38 Or. 181; Re Meeker's Estate v. Swift, 45 Mo. App. 186; Smith v. Bogenschultz, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 307; Chicago, S. F. & C. R. Co. v. Swan, 120 Mo. 80.

Kinley v. Smith, 29 Ill. App. 106; Whitesides v. Cook, 43 Ill. App. 183; Field v. Brokaw, 40 Ill. App. 871; Shimp v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co. 26 Ill. App. 254; Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Houser, 111 Ind. 266; Star Wagon Co. v. Swesy, 68 Iowa, 620; McClure v. Rabben, 138 Ind. 507; Clay Dist. Twp. v. Buchanan Independent Dist. 69 Iowa, 38; Cleveland, C. C. & I. R. Co. v. Wynant, 124 Ind. 681; Anderson v. Kramer, 98 Ind. 170; Oldershaw v. Knoles, 6 Ill. App. 325; Gilbert v. Bakes, 106 Ind. 558; Jones v. Castor, 98 Ind. 307; Dodge v. Gaylord, 53 Ind. 365; Willson v. Binford, 81 Ind. 588; Legrand v. Baker, 5 T. B. Mon. 214; Covington & C. Elev. R. Bridge Co. v. Com. 15 Ky. L. Rep. 740; Norton v. Huntoon, 48 Kan. 275; Brown v. Crow, Hardin (Ky.) 446; Moss v. Rowland, 3 Bush, 506; Ford v. Gregory, 10 B. Mon. 175; Sims v. Reed, 12 B. Mon. 51; Paland v. Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. 44 La. Ann. 1003; Gillaspie v. Scott, 32 La. Ann. 767; H. B. Claflin Co. v. Davis, 48 La. Ann. 1223; Cumberland Coal & I. Co. v. Sherman, 20 Md. 117; Emory v. Owings, 3 Md. 178; Worthington v. Hiss (Md.) 23 Atl. 196; Wheeler v. Meyer, 101 Mich. 465; Green v. McDonald, 13 Smedes & M. 445; Smith v. Elder, 14 Smedes & M. 100; Overall v. Ellis, 38 Mo. 209; Rice v. McFarland, 41 Mo. App. 489; Leighton v. Stuart, 19 Neb. 544; O'Donohue v. Hendrix, 17 Neb. 237; Coburn v. Watson (Neb.) 67 N. W. 171; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hull, 24 Neb. 742; Bell v. Lamprey, 58 N. H. 124; Hagerty v. Lee, 60 N. J. Eq. 464; McCracken v. Flanagan, 141 N. Y. 174; Saxton v. New York Elev. R. Co. 139 N. Y. 320; Re Callaghan's Estate, 58 N. Y. S. R. 899; Spears v. Willis, 59 N. Y. S. R. 885; Cassidy v. Atlantic Ave. R. Co. 33 N. Y. Supp. 1126; Meyers v. Stix, 59 N. Y. S. R. 286; Burns v. Yonkers, 34 N. Y. Supp. 1135; Malony v. Brady, 45 N. Y. S. R. 864; Metcalf v. Del Valle, 30 N. Y. Supp. 984; Taendstieksfabriks Aktiebolaget Vulcan v. Myers, 19 N. Y. Supp. 1000; Roosevelt Hospital v. New York Elev. R. Co. 18 N. Y. Supp. 940; Cassagne v. Marvin, 51 N. Y. S. R. 466; Mores v. Burnes, 23 N. Y. Supp. 1144; Holley v. Holley, 95 N. C. 229; Arnow v. Ferguson, 50 N. Y. S. R. 509; Crystal v. Troy & B. R. Co. 51 N. Y. S. R. 938; Lahay v. Kortright, 32 N. Y. S. R. 112; Ollwill v. Verdenhalven, 39 N. Y. S. R. 200; Salt Springs Nat. Bank v. Sloan, 39 N. Y. S. R. 771; Re Nelson's Will, 21 N. Y. Supp. 1123; Warden v. McKinnon, 99 N. C. 251; Budd v. Multnomah Street R. Co. 15 Or. 404; Strouse v. New York Elev. R. Co. 18 N. Y. Supp. 938; White v. Kyle, 1 Serg. & R. 515; Terry v. Wait, 56 N. Y. 91; Bryan v. Alexander, 111 N. C. 142; Kane v. Rippey, 22 Or. 299; Kibler v. Bridges, 5 S. C. N. B. 335; McCormick v. Wright, 79 Va. 524; Bank of the Valley v. Stribling, 7 Leigh, 28; Corbell v. Zeluff, 13 Gratt. 236; White v. Atkinson, 2 Call (Va.) 576; Benjamin v. Covert, 55 Wis. 157; Clark v. Keith, 34 L. R. A.

106 U. S. 465, 27 L. ed. 302; United States v. 422 Cases of Wine, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 547, 7 L. ed. 257; Thatcher v. Gottlieb, 59 Fed. Rep. 872, 19 U. S. App. 469.

So, the decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive upon the second appeal, where the state of facts was substantially the same. The prior decision so far as applicable is the law of the case. D. M. Osborne & Co. v. Stringham, 4 S. D. 593; Gamble v. Gates, 97 Mich. 465.

And where the court of appeals on a former decision held that there was no cause of action and there was no material change on a new trial. Sanger v. Merritt, 39 N. Y. S. R. 894.

And where the bill of exceptions presented no new question. Pingry v. Watkins, 17 Vt. 379.

And where the first decision held that plaintiff failed to make a case, and the second trial did not present any material difference. Sherwood v. Houtman, 34 N. Y. Supp. 1143.

And where the questions were the same, and such decision can only be reviewed by a petition for a rehearing. Brooklyn v. Orthwein, 140 Ill. 620; Bell v. Woodward, 47 N. H. 539; Wears v. Deering, 60 N. H. 55; Plaisted v. Holmes, 58 N. H. 619; Windsor v. Cobb, 74 Iowa, 709; McDonald v. McKinnon, 104 Mich. 428; Damon v. DeBar, 94 Mich. 564.

And where the same question was presented upon the second appeal. The power to grant a reargument should be sparingly exercised, and it was suggested that it should never be exercised unless the court on its own motion desired to have a reargument. Cassedy v. Bigelow, 27 N. J. Eq. 505.

And where the same question was presented upon the second appeal. The court said the prior decision would only be reviewed by motion for a rehearing, and such motion could not be made after a jury trial took place under the prior decision. Amoskeag Mfg. Co. v. Head, 59 N. H. 332.

Where the same question was presented on second appeal in an intermediate court. If there was error the remedy was by motion for re-argument by appeal from the general term to the court of appeals. Cooper v. Smith, 11 Jones & S. 9.

In such a case if errors were committed they should be rectified by the higher court of last resort. Stegman v. Hollingsworth, 39 N. Y. Supp. 1132.

Where the same question was presented on second appeal a judgment which had been affirmed might be reviewed under Ky. Civ. Code, § 518, providing for vacating a judgment upon newly-discovered evidence, and for such errors as could not be noticed upon the prior appeal. Maddox v. Williams, 37 Ky. 147.

And where the decision reversed a judgment and

The question of the validity of that portion of § 34, etc., requiring statement to be filed within six months was not distinctly presented and decided on previous hearings of this case, and is not res judicata.

It is only necessary to refer to the petitions in error filed in the former cases, and to the syllabi and opinions of the same, to show the following facts:

1. The question under consideration was not raised in the petitions in error.

2. It was not presented to the court in the briefs of counsel.

3. It was nowhere considered by the court.

4. It was nowhere decided by the court.

It therefore follows that the question is not res judicata.

Smith v. Bogenschulte, supra.

Where a petition does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, the point cannot be waived. Such a petition will not support a judgment, and its sufficiency can be called into question at any stage of the case, or at any time.

Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Kearney County, 17 Neb. 511; Burlington & M. R. Co. v. Crockett, Id. 572; O'Donohue v. Hendrix, 18 Neb. 255; Renfrew v. Willis, 33 Neb. 98; Farrar v. Triplett, 7 Neb. 237.

This court has held that it is no part of its duty to search the record for the purpose of ascertaining if there are errors in it, and that it will not consider and decide any questions excepting those presented in the petition in error and in the briefs for decision.

Minick v. Huff, 41 Neb. 516; Glaess v. Parcel, 40 Neb. 732.

Messrs. J. R. Webster, B. F. Smith, and J. L. McPheely, for defendant in error, in support of petition for rehearing:

A judgment, in the legal sense, can be nothing less nor more than a determination, by a remanded a case, and the facts were the same. Miller v. Jones, 29 Ala. 174.

And where the court of appeals on the first decision reversed the case because no cause of action was proved which justified a recovery, and on the second trial the facts were the same. Tripler v. New York, 44 N. Y. S. R. 585.

And where the first decision reversed a decree, and directed that amended and supplemental bills seeking to charge purchasers of corporate property should be dismissed. Goodwin v. McGehee, 15 Ala. 232.

The decision upon a prior appeal is conclusive upon the second appeal where the same question is presented again, as the court will not examine de novo questions which have been once passed upon. Unless other facts appear the former decision is conclusive. Beran v. Tradesman's Nat. Bank, 45 N. Y. S. R. 407.

And so where the facts were the same it made no difference whether the case had been affirmed on a prior trial or reversed. Davidson v. Dallas, 15 Cal. 75.

And where the judgment of the lower court was affirmed as to part and reversed as to part. Dilworth v. Curtis, 189 Ill. 508.

And where the decision of a former court was that there was error in the judgment, and the same was reversed and set aside, and the same question was made to the court, at a subsequent term, to which the cause was continued for the court to render such a judgment as the county court ought to have rendered. Slade v. Day, Brayton (Vt.) 72.

And where there was no material change of the record rendering the principles and points decided on the first appeal inapplicable. Malone v. Carroll, 33 Ala. 191.

And where the questions were the same. It was said that it was not allowable for this court to question the correctness of its prior rulings. Davis v. Curtis, 70 Iowa, 388.

And where the same question was settled, and a judgment of restitution given upon the reversal of an erroneous judgment. This was conclusive of the matters adjudicated by it. Breading v. Blocher, 29 Pa. 247.

And where the first decision settled a question in issue and reversed the case on another question to be tried below. The first question was res judicata. Hurck v. Erskine, 50 Mo. 118.

And so where the same question was presented a second time. The appellee should have relied on the prior decision as res judicata. Masterson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 58 Mo. App. 572.

And where the same question was settled on the prior appeal, and such decision was correct, and for 34 L. R. A.

the further reason that it had become res judicata. Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 247, 57 Am. Rep. 325.

And where the same question was settled, and having become stare decisis was no longer open to discussion. Flier v. Smith, 102 Mich. 93.

And where the prior decision was by the supreme court on a question reserved by the superior court upon a statement of facts, and the same question was again presented on a writ of error. Nichols v. Bridgeport, 27 Conn. 459.

And where the same question was settled, but was not conclusive as to new issues presented. Ulmer v. Ryan, 187 Pa. 309; Cherry v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 61 Mo. App. 305; Brown v. Somerville, 8 Md. 444; Metropolitan Bank v. Taylor, 62 Mo. 338; Bank of Old Dominion v. McVeigh, 29 Gratt. 544; Steele v. Thompson, 38 Mo. App. 312.

And where the same question was settled. Only such errors will be examined as are alleged to have occurred in the decision of questions which were peculiar to the second trial. Roberts v. Cooper, 61 U. S. 20 How. 467, 15 L. ed. 909.

And where the matters were the same. It was said that what was stated by way of illustration or argument was not binding. Richmond Street R. Co. v. Reed, 38 Ind. 9.

And where the prior decision sustained an indictment, and the question presented on the second appeal was settled on the previous appeal. Tucker v. People, 123 Ill. 583.

And where the case was appealed four times and the complaint had been amended seven times, and the prior decision held that a contract in writing could not be varied by a previous parol agreement, and that the failure to pay instalments to a contractor did not prevent him from fulfilling his contract, and this question was again presented on appeal. Cox v. McLaughlin, 63 Cal. 196.

And where the same question as to the rule of damages applicable to the case on the second trial was discussed on the former appeal. Blesch v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 48 Wis. 168.

And where the same question was presented regarding the measure of damages for a breach of covenant to insure, whatever might be the rule in other jurisdictions. National Mahalve Bank v. Hand, 39 Hun, 322.

And where the action was for an injunction against diverting water, and the former decision held that the plaintiff was estopped by consent although it was insisted that the consent was not pleaded as a defense. Churchill v. Baumann, 104 Cal. 369.

And where the effect of that decision was not avoided by any showing that a declaratory statement in the pre-emption act was not filed within competent court, of an issue of fact or of law between adversary parties over which it has jurisdiction, defining and establishing their rights.

The right to a retrial is itself the mere consequence, not the judgment. The judgment must have been, not that there was an error in the record, but some certain error giving the plaintiff in error or appellant the right to new trial, and such a judgment determines the rights of the parties and includes in it determination of every matter of fact or of law necessarily included in or necessary to reach the judgment that there was "error in the record," that the judgment was not what on the issue it should have been.

It follows necessarily that a judgment of reversal on a purely law issue does adjudge the law as that the pleadings are or are not sufficient to sustain the judgment below.

If the same subject-matter comes in question in a second action before an appellate court, it is bound by its own former decision.

Black, Judgm. § 527.

Black does not limit it to cases between the same parties or their privies, though such limitation is necessary.

Herman, Estoppel & Res Adjudicata, p. 117, § 115.

No case is intended to be cited below which was not at the former hearing "reversed generally for a trial de novo," and citation where reversed, if the case was reported and is found, is made.

United States: Roberts, v. Cooper, 61 U. S. 20 How. 481, 15 L. ed. 973, error, ejectment, reversed; Cooper v. Roberts, 59 U. S. 18 How. 182, 15 L. ed. 341, for new trial generally, Grier, J.: "We cannot be compelled on a second writ of error in the same case to review our own decision on the first." Chaffin v. Taylor, 116 U. S. 567, 29 L. ed.

three months after the township plat was returned to the land office. Megerle v. Ashe, 47 Cal. 632.

And where the action was one of ejectment, and it was contended that since the beginning of the action the party's title had been strengthened. To recover in ejectment the plaintiff must not only have a right of entry at the trial but also when the suit is brought. Kile v. Tubbs, 33 Cal. 332.

And where in deciding who were necessary parties to an action for partition, the prior decision held that the holder of a special location acquired the title of a tenant in common and stood in the place of his grantor in respect to the special location. Gates v. Salmon, 46 Cal. 351.

And where the same question was presented. It was said that as to whether a composition deed would be binding upon the plaintiff if carried out, no question remains to be considered as that was passed upon by the court upon the previous decision. Continental Nat. Bank v. Koehler, 17 N. Y. S. R. 23.

And where the prior decision construed a deed of trust. More v. Calkins, 95 Cal. 435.

And where the prior decision construed a will, and held that the executors had no power to sell real estate. Huse v. Den, 85 Cal. 390.

And where the prior decision held that a will was sufficient to pass the title of the land to the executors. Gaines v. Fender, 82 Mo. 497.

And where the prior decision construed a will and the disposition of personal property, the charge of existing debts, the power of the executor, and the existence of a trust. Bank of United States v. Beverly, 42 U. S. 1 How. 184, 11 L. ed. 75.

And where the same question was presented, although a material fact appearing in the record was not recited among other facts which were stated in the opinion, as this did not tend to show that such fact was not considered by the court. Mulford v. Estradillo, 32 Cal. 131.

And so where the same question was presented a second time. Such decision cannot be departed from so far as the questions of law or fact are concerned which were therein presented for review or decision. Palmer v. Murray, 8 Mont. 174.

And where the same question was settled. "No question, once considered and decided by this court, can be re-examined at any subsequent stage of the same case." Re Sanford Fork & T. Co. 160 U. S. 247, 40 L. ed. 414.

And where the law of the case was settled and an affidavit was subsequently filed in the court below by a party claiming a contrary effect of such decision. Pico v. Cuyas, 48 Cal. 639.

And where it was claimed that the judgment dis-rected to be entered failed to give the party what was justly his due. Argenti v. Sawyer, 32 Cal. 414.

And where the questions were the same. It was questioned whether or not the attempt to make a second appeal was not a contempt under Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 1209, subsec. 4, which provided that abuse of process or proceedings of the court by a party to an action was a contempt of the authority of the court. Heinlen v. Beams, 78 Cal. 240.

And so where the same questions were settled as to the statute of limitations. It was said that the effort to obtain a different decision upon the same question was not respectful to the court, and a misconception of professional duty. Cook v. Norton, 61 Ill. 285.

And so where the questions were the same. It cannot be shown upon second appeal that the supreme court did not determine the case on its merits, when it appears from the record of its judgment that it was so determined. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Peterson, 115 Ill. 597.

And where the prior decision was by the supreme court, and the same question on the second appeal was before the court of appeals, an intermediate court. Tittman v. Thornton, 53 Mo. App. 512; Blondeau v. Sheridan, 47 Mo. App. 460; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Snyder, 27 Ill. App. 476, 128 Ill. 655.

And where such appeal was to the supreme court, and the prior appeal was to the court of appeals, which did not reverse the case upon the merits, and therefore must have held the evidence was sufficient to authorize a recovery, and the facts were the same in both cases. Dye v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 59 N. Y. S. R. 583.

And where the prior decisions were successively made in an equity case to foreclose a mortgage. Akerly v. Vilas, 24 Wis. 165, 1 Am. Rep. 168.

And where the question was decided on an appeal from a verdict rendered on a feigned issue. Brown v. Clifford, 7 Lans. 44.

And where the facts were the same. It was said that it was so conclusive that the court would not feel warranted in departing from it in determining the rights of the parties. The law of the case was higher authority than the rule of stare decisis. Lee v. Stahl, 13 Colo. 174.

So where the same question was presented again. It was said that the rule established by the general term as to the discretion to be exercised by courts in determining such motions was carefully considered, and the rules then laid down were not merely dicta of the judge rendering the opinion, but utterances of the general term and rules to 727, 114 U. S. 309, 29 L. ed. 198; Clark v. Keith, 106 U. S. 465, 27 L. ed. 302, Reversed Keith v. Clark, 97 U. S. 466, 24 L. ed. 1075; United States v. 422 Casks of Wine, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 549, 7 L. ed. 268, Reversed The Sarah, 21 U. S. 8 Wheat. 394, 5 L. ed. 644; Wayne County Supers. v. Kenicott, 94 U. S. 498, 24 L. ed. 260, Reversed Kenicott v. Wayne County Supers. 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. ed. 322.

Alabama: Matthews v. Sands, 29 Ala. 136, Reversed Sands v. Matthews, 27 Ala. 399; Miller v. Jones, 29 Ala. 180, Reversed 28 Ala. 247; Roundtree v. Turner, 86 Ala. 555, Reversed Turner v. Roundtree, 80 Ala. 708.

Arkansas: Fortenberry v. Frazier, 5 Ark. 202, 39 Am. Dec. 378 (1848), Reversed Frazier v. Fortenberry, 4 Ark. 162; Rector v. Danley, 14 Ark. 307; Biscoe v. Tucker, 14 Ark. 523, Reversed 11 Ark. 145; Porter v. Doe, Hanley, 10 Ark. 191, Reversed Doe, Phillips, v. Porter, 3 Ark. 18, 62; Müller v. Barkeloo, 18

Ark. 293; Taliaferro v. Barnett, 47 Ark. 362, Reversed 37 Ark. 511.

California: Dewey v. Gray, 2 Cal. 377; Phelan v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 39; Reclamation Dist. No. 3 v. Goldman, 65 Cal. 635, Reversed 61 Cal. 205.

Colorado: Kansas P. R. Co. v. Bayles, 19 Colo. 350, Reversed Bayles v. Kansas P. R. Co. 13 Colo. 181, 5 L. R. A. 480, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 643; Routt v. Greenwood Cemetery Land Co. 18 Colo. 132, Reversed Greenwood Cemetery Land Co. v. Routt, 17 Colo. 156, 15 L. R. A. 369; Israel v. Arthur, 18 Colo. 159, Reversed Arthur v. Israel, 15 Colo. 147, 10 L. R. A. 693; Israel v. Arthur, 7 Colo. 5; Lee v. Stahl, 13 Colo. 174, Reversed 9 Colo. 208.

Connecticut: Smith v. Lewis, 26 Conn. 116, 24 Conn. 624, 63 Am. Dec. 180; Nichols v. Bridgeport, 27 Conn. 459, Reversed 23 Conn. 189, 60 Am. Dec. 636; Fowler v. Bishop, 32 Conn. 199, Reversed 31 Conn. 560; New Ha- govern such motions. (This is a memorandum decision and the motion was not defined.) Rutherford v. Madrid, 30 N. Y. Supp. 1134.

A second appeal from a judgment by the same party was a nullity where a prior appeal was regularly taken and then pending. Brown v. Plummer, 70 Cal. 387.

In Kingsbury v. Buckner, 134 U. S. 650, 33 L. ed. 1047, it was said that a decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive upon the second appeal where the same question was settled.

b. Where the prior decision is erroneous.

The cases in some of the states hold that a prior decision is conclusive upon a subsequent appeal where such prior decision is erroneous, some hold that it is conclusive even if it is erroneous, and some hold that it is conclusive whether it is right or wrong. This may be said to be the weight of authority, and these decisions are found in Alabama, Arkansas, California, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin, and the Federal courts. Some states have adopted the same rule, but have cases holding that an erroneous decision is not conclusive, as Missouri, Nebraska, Utah, and Texas, and in addition to the above, Connecticut, New York, and Ohio hold that it is conclusive unless it is wrong, as in HASTINGS V. FOXWORTHY.

So, the decision of a court upon a prior appeal was conclusive on a second appeal where such prior decision was erroneous because the record was incomplete. Nothing will be re-examined except proceedings subsequent to the mandate. Fortenberry v. Frazier, 5 Ark. 202.

In Rutherford v. Lafferty, 7 Ark. 402, the prior decision, which was erroneous, was held not to be conclusive, where the court on the prior appeal overlooked the true state of the record, and consequently arrived at an improper conclusion, and confounded the names of John and James in a receipt and were induced to decide against the law of the case; but this case was overruled in Porter v. Doe, Hanley, infra.

The decision on a former appeal was held conclusive on a second appeal where the question was made that the prior decision was erroneous. Porter v. Doe, Hanley, 10 Ark. 184.

The decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive upon a second appeal where the same question was presented, although the rule established on a prior appeal was erroneous. Hombs v. Corbin, 34 Mo. App. 308; Feurt v. Ambrose, Id. 380; McLendon v. McGlaun, 60 Ga. 244; Haynes v. Meeks, 20 Cal. 288.

And where the rule laid down was one of doubt- 34 L. R. A.

ful propriety, but had been settled by a long series of years. Yale v. Dederer, 68 N. Y. 335.

And where the court said: "We regret that this question is not open in the present case." Parker v. Pomeroy, 2 Wis. 112.

And where the court said: "We are bound by the decision then made, however much we may be inclined to a different view." Willis v. Smith, 72 Tex. 565.

And where the same question was involved. This was so even though the court was satisfied that its former decision was erroneous. Alexandria Sav. Inst. v. McVeigh, 84 Va. 41.

And where the court said: "We do not, and cannot, fully indorse the doctrine declared in the above quotation (instructions given) from our former opinion." Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Hixon, 110 Ind. 226.

And where the court said: "In disposing of this case we are not to be understood as approving of the correctness of the former holding." Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey, 39 Iowa, 13.

And where the members of the court on the second appeal did not concur in the former decision. Dougherty v. Horseheads, 39 N. Y. Supp. 447.

And where the court was of the opinion that if the case was new the court would overrule it. Dewey v. Gray, 2 Cal. 377.

And where the court said: "The latter portion of that decision is in abrogation of one of the plainest principles of law, and if this case was a new one I would not hesitate to overrule it." Davidson v. Dallas, 15 Cal. 75.

And where the writer of the last opinion believed the former decision to be erroneous. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Walker (Tex. Civ. App.) 23 S. W. 856; Brewer v. Ford, 59 Hun, 17; Loomis v. Cowen, 106 Ill. 600; Drake v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 70 Iowa, 59.

And where the prior decision was by the court of appeals, although the superior court at general term on the second appeal disapproved of that decision. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Compania Transatlantica Espanola, 4 Misc. 428.

And where the court said: "However much I might be inclined to differ from the opinion of this court which has been referred to . . . nevertheless that opinion is and must be the law of this case until it is reversed by a higher tribunal." Creighton v. Hershfield, 2 Mont. 160.

And where the judge who delivered the last opinion doubted the rule of law on the prior decision. Thomas v. Doub, 1 Md. 252.

And where the court said they were not exactly satisfied with the reasoning of the judge in that case. Venard v. Green, 4 Utah, 456.

ven & N. Co. v. State, 44 Conn. 391; State v. New Haven & N. Co. 43 Conn. 351.

Florida: Wilson v. Fridenberg, 21 Fla. 339, 19 Fla. 461; Fridenburg v. Wilson, 20 Fla. 359; Doyle v. Wade, 23 Fla. 94, Reversed Wade v. Doyle, 17 Fla. 522.

Georgia: Central R. Co. v. Coggin, 73 Ga. 695, Reversed Coggin v. Central R. Co. 62 Ga. 685, 35 Am. Rep. 132; Dean v. Feely, 69 Ga. 804, 66 Ga. 273, Reversed O'Byrne v. Feely, 61 Ga. 85; Shelton v. Ellis, 73 Ga. 188, 70 Ga. 800; Saulsbury v. Iverson, 78 Ga. 783, Reversed Iverson v. Saulsbury, 68 Ga. 790; Savannah Bank & T. Co. v. Hartbridge, 75 Ga. 151, Reversed 73 Ga. 223; Lewis v. Hill, 87 Ga. 466, 80 Ga. 402; Phillips v. O'Neal, 87 Ga. 731, as O'Neal v. Phillips, 83 Ga. 556, and Phillips v. O'Neal, 85 Ga. 142.

Idaho: Palmer v. Utah N. R. Co. 2 Idaho, 350, Reversed Id. 290.

Illinois: Green v. Springfield, 130 Ill. 520, Reversed Springfield v. Green, 120 Ill. 269; Reed v. West, 70 Ill. 479, Reversed West v. Reed, 55 Ill. 242; Smyth v. Neff, 123 Ill. 310, Reversed Neff v. Smyth, 111 Ill. 100; Taylor v. Frew, 113 Ill. 359, Reversed Frew v. Taylor, 106 Ill. 159; Johnson v. Von Kettler, 84 Ill. 317, Reversed Von Kettler v. Johnson, 57 Ill. 109, Johnson v. Von Kettler, 66 Ill. 63; Tucker v. People, 122 Ill. 595, Reversed 117 Ill. 88.

Indiana: Hobson v. Doe, 4 Blackf. 489 (1838), Reversed 2 Blackf. 303; Armstrong v. Harshman, 93 Ind. 217; Harshman v. Armstrong, 43 Ind. 126, Reversed Armstrong v. Harshman, 61 Ind. 52, 28 Am. Rep. 665; Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Houser, 111 Ind. 368, 89 Ind. 258; Pittsburgh, O. & St. L. R. Co. v. Hixon, 110 Ind. 226, Reversed 79 Ind. 111; Tipton County Comrs. v. Indianapolis, P. & O. R. Co. 89 Ind. 101, Reversed Indianapolis, P. & O. R. Co. v. Tipton County Comrs. 70 Ind. 385; Forgeron v. Smith, 104 Ind. 247,

And where the court said: "I am not prepared to commit myself to the correctness of this doctrine, as applied to the facts of this case." Johnson v. Northwestern Teleph. Exch. Co. 54 Minn. 37.

And where it was expressly adjudged on the prior appeal that equity had jurisdiction over the matters in controversy, and that the bill was a creditor's bill, and on the second appeal the court said: "If it were an open question we should not perhaps feel inclined to pronounce the bill as filed a creditor's bill. . . . It is sufficient for this cause, however, that it was so held when the case was in this court on the former appeal." Williams v. Newman (Va.) 26 S. E. 19.

And where the supreme court on the second appeal unanimously disapproved of the decision on the first appeal, and the first decision had since been overruled, Saulsbury v. Iverson, 73 Ga. 785.

And where the court said: "We do not hold it to be the law of other cases." Newberry v. Trowbridge, 13 Mich. 278.

And where it was insisted that the Supreme Court of the United States since the first decision had held differently from a ruling made on one of the points. Conroy v. Vulcan Iron Works, 75 Mo. 661.

And where, since the prior decision, the supreme court in another case involving similar facts had decided differently. Although the decisions of the supreme court were binding upon the appellate court as authority, the prior decision was held to be res judicata. Ogle v. Turpin, 8 Ill. App. 453.

And where, since the prior decision, the supreme court has held in other cases a contrary doctrine, but the prior decision was the law of the case between the parties in that action. Tipton County Comrs. v. Indianapolis, P. & C. R. Co. 89 Ind. 101; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Pickel, 3 Ind. App. 332; Brown v. Marion Nat. Bank, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 138; Thomson's Appeal v. Albert, 15 Md. 333.

And where the former appeal affirmed the judgment, although the decision of the prior appeal was erroneous. If the judgment had been reversed on the prior appeal, the rulings on the prior appeal might be examined if presented in the proper shape. State, Hay, v. Harper, 56 Mo. App. 611.

The court of appeals on an appeal refused to notice that a decree which was used in evidence in the trial court had been reversed since the decree, although it was held to be a bar in the case below. The court of appeals could only decide the case as presented by the record. Cates v. Loftus, 4 T. B. Mon. 443.

The decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive upon the second appeal, where on the second trial a motion was made to correct the computation of the amount found due by the supreme court. Lombard v. Gregory, 33 Iowa, 431.

Some cases hold that the prior decision is conclusive even if erroneous.

So, the decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive on the second appeal where the same question was involved, even if it was clear that the prior decision was a mistake. Stuart v. Preston, 39 Va. 325.

And where the same questions were settled, even if the decision was erroneous. The only mode of reviewing the same is by a petition for a rehearing. Ward v. Johnson, 5 Ill. App. 30; McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Gray, 114 Ind. 340; Morgan County Comrs. v. Pritchett, 35 Ind. 68; Heffner v. Brownell, 75 Iowa, 341; Davenport v. Kleinschmidt, 8 Mont. 487; Taliaferro v. Barnett, 47 Ark. 332; Hough v. Harvey, 84 Ill. 303; Johnson v. Von Kettler, Id. 315; Gunter v. Laffan, 7 Cal. 538; Vogel v. Little Rock, 55 Ark. 603.

And where the same question was settled, it was said that even though the prior decision may have been overruled there is no ground for altering the decision in any case where the decision was made before it was overruled. Herrick v. Belknap's Estate, 27 Vt. 609; Hibbits v. Jack, 97 Ind. 570, 49 Am. Rep. 473.

The decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive upon the second appeal where the prior decision directed a decree to be entered. Although the appellate court might have erred in its decree, it had no power to correct the error after the term had expired in which the decision was rendered. Bradford v. Patterson, 1 A. K. Marsh. 347.

And where the same question was presented, however erroneous it might be; but as to new parties in a different controversy it was not conclusive. Frazier v. Frazier, 77 Va. 733.

And where the first decision reversed a decree, and the former appellee prosecuted a writ of error to reverse the same decree. It was conclusive if the prior decision was ever so erroneous. Rice v. Wheatly, 9 Dana, 271.

And where the questions presented were the same. The court had no power to review its former judgment except upon the petition for a rehearing, and if the court misapprehended the facts in the former record, it was too late to urge the same. Reed v. West, 70 Ill. 479.

And where it was contended that on the second appeal the court had misapprehended the facts upon the prior appeal. Simplot v. Dubuque, 56 Iowa, 639.

And where the court said that no court can reverse or annul its own final decree or judgment for errors of fact or law after the term, unless for Reversed Smith v. Ferguson, 90 Ind. 229; Kress v. State, Wagoner, 65 Ind. 106, Reversed Larr v. State, Wagoner, 45 Ind. 884; Gerber v. Friday, 87 Ind. 866, Reversed Gerber v. Sharp, 73 Ind. 533; Dodge v. Gaylord, 53 Ind. 865, Reversed Gaylord v. Dodge, 81 Ind. 41; Bartholomew County Comrs. v. Jameson, 86 Ind. 154; Jameson v. Bartholomew County Comrs. 64 Ind. 524; Test v. Larsh, 76 Ind. 452, Reversed Larsh v. Test, 48 Ind. 180; Richmond Street R. Co. v. Reed, 88 Ind. 9; Reed v. Richmond Street R. Co. 50 Ind. 842.

Iowa: Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. Co. 55 Iowa, 94, Reversed 39 Iowa, 507, and 44 Iowa, 535; Babcock v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 72 Iowa, 197, Reversed 63 Iowa, 594; Heffner v. Brownell, 75 Iowa, 341, Reversed 70 Iowa, 591.

Kansas: Crockett v. Gray, 81 Kan. 846, Reversed Gray v. Crockett, 80 Kan. 188; Headley v. Challiss, 15 Kan. 603, Reversed Challiss v. Headley, 9 Kan. 684.

Kentucky: Bradford v. Patterson, 1 A. K. Marsh. 346 (1819), Reversed 4 Bibb, 584; Smith v. Brannin, 79 Ky. 119; Williams v. Rogers, 14 Bush, 776; Davis v. McCorkle, Id. 746; Kennedy v. Meredith, 4 T. B. Mon. 402, Reversed Meredith v. Kennedy, Litt. Sel. Cas. 516; Kennedy v. Meredith, 3 Bibb, 465; Nelson v. Clay, 7 J. J. Marsh. 138, 23 Am. Dec. 387 (1834), Reversed Clay v. Nelson, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 155; Sims v. Reed, 12 B. Mon. 52; Meredith v. Larks, Sneed (Ky.) 189 (1802); Ford v. Gregory, 10 B. Mon. 175, Reversed Gregory v. Ford, 5 B. Mon. 471; Legrand v. Baker, 6 T. B. Mon. 244, Reversed Baker v. Legrand, Litt. Sel. Cas. 258.

Louisiana: Tufts v. Casey, 16 La. Ann. 336, Reversed 15 La. Ann. 280; Boissac v. Dickson, 82 La. Ann. 1150, Reversed 31 La. Ann. 753; Gillaspie v. Scott, 33 La. Ann. 767.

Maine: Atkins v. Wyman, 45 Me. 400.

Maryland: Preston v. Leighton, 6 Md. 97, Reversed Leighton v. Preston, 9 Gill, 201; clerical mistakes. Ex parte Sibbald v. United States, 37 U. S. 12 Pet. 438, 9 L. ed. 1167.

Some cases hold that the prior decision is conclusive whether right or wrong.

So, the decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive upon the second appeal where the question was the same, whether right or wrong. Gerber v. Friday, 87 Ind. 866; Meyer v. Shamp, 26 Neb. 729; McKinney v. Harral, 38 Mo. App. 337; Central Warehouse Co. v. Sargeant, 40 Ill. App. 438; Brewer v. National Union Bldg. Assn. 64 Ill. App. 161; Babcock v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 72 Iowa, 197; Central Branch Union P. R. Co. v. Shoup, 28 Kan. 394, 43 Am. Rep. 163; Holleran v. Meisel, 91 Va. 148; Wilkes v. Davies, 9 Wash. 112, 23 L. R. A. 108; Wright v. Sperry, 26 Wis. 617; Cole v. Clarke, 3 Wis. 323; Du Pont v. Davis, 36 Wis. 638; McLeod v. Bertschy, 24 Wis. 244; Noonan v. Orton, 27 Wis. 310; Montgomery v. Gilmer, 38 Ala. 116, 70 Am. Dec. 562.

And where the first ruling was not essential to the prior decision and became a part of the law of the case, whether intrinsically correct or not. Table Mountain Tunnel Co. v. Stranahan, 21 Cal. 543.

And where the lower court followed such decision, and this rule applied without regard to whether the prior decision was right or wrong. Burke v. Matthews, 37 Tex. 73.

And where the same question was presented as to the construction of a contract, and this rule applied whether the prior decision was right or wrong. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Hoyt, 44 Ill. App. 48.

And where the first decision was on a motion to dismiss an appeal. The ruling in that decision, whether erroneous or not, was the law of the case. Walker v. Heller, 104 Ind. 327.

And where the prior decision sustained a complaint on demurrer. The prior decision is the law of the case whether right or wrong. Linton Coal & M. Co. v. Persons (Ind.) 43 N. E. 651.

And where the same question was presented; the court saying: "In thus yielding to the former decisions we do not approve them as precedents, nor do we disapprove them, we simply yield to them as former judgments, and decline to enter upon a discussion of the general question." Howe v. Fleming, 123 Ind. 262.

And where the questions presented were the same, whatever might be the views of the court on that question, at the time of the second appeal. Test v. Larsh, 76 Ind. 452.

And where the court on the last appeal said that the conclusions then reached were correct. In any 34 L. R. A.

case it must be the law applicable to further proceedings in the same case. Perry v. Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. 44 Ark. 383.

And where the facts were the same; whatever doubt the court might entertain on the second appeal as to the rule laid down in the former decision. Bector v. Danley, 14 Ark. 304; Ridgway v. Bacon, 63 N. Y. S. R. 874.

And where the same question was involved, even if there should be doubt as to the soundness of the prior decision. Brandon v. Fritz, 94 Pa. 88.

And where the question was admitted to be of difficult and doubtful solution. An opinion of the appellate court determining the case upon two distinct grounds was regarded as a decision upon both grounds, and not as a dictum on either. Corn v. Rosenthal, 3 Misc. 71.

And where the same question was presented whatever views the different members of the court entertained as to the soundness of the former decision. Stacy v. Vermont C. R. Co. 22 Vt. 551; Adams County v. Burlington & M. R. Co. 55 Iowa, 94; Southwest Lead & Z. Co. v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 41 Mo. App. 406.

And where the prior decision was approved by the court of appeals. It would not be re-examined, even if its correctness was doubtful. Rose v. Hawley, 53 N. Y. S. R. 403.

And where it was said that it would make no difference whether the prior decision was correct or not, it could not be modified or changed. Central R. Co. v. Coggin, 73 Ga. 666; Ryan v. Martin, 18 Wis. 673; Powell v. Dayton, 8 & G. R. R. Co. 14 Or. 22.

And where the judgment was reversed, and the appellate court held that the complaint was sufficient. It was said that this would be the rule whatever might be the views of the court upon the second appeal. Lucas v. San Francisco, 23 Cal. 591.

And where the same question was involved on demurrer to a complaint. It was said that this was the rule whether right or wrong. Brimm v. Jones (Utah) 45 Pac. 46.

And where the questions were the same, and this was said to be the rule whether the prior decision was correct or not, in holding the complaint stated a cause of action and therefore settling the question as to whether the proper party was plaintiff. Reclamation Dist. No. 3 v. Goldman, 65 Cal. 636.

And where the questions were the same, and this was said to be the rule, whatever opinion might be subsequently entertained of the original question involved in the action in which the decision was rendered. Sharpstein v. Freidlander, 63 Cal. 73.

Brown v. Somerville, 8 Md. 454, Reversed Somerville v. Brown, 5 Gill, 899.

Massachusetts: Booth v. Com. 7 Met. 286; Hunter v. Farran, 127 Mass. 485, 84 Am. Rep. 428; Pratt v. Boston Heel & L. Co. 184 Mass. 800; Negus v. Stimpson, 99 Mass. 395; Kent v. Whitney, 9 Allen, 65, 85 Am. Dec. 739; Amerherst Bank v. Root, 2 Met. 542; Joyner v. Great Barrington, 118 Mass. 465; Bardwell v. Conway Mut. F. Ins. Co. Id. 469.

Michigan: Henry v. Quackenbush, 48 Mich. 417, Reversed Quackenbush v. Henry, 42 Mich. 75; Great Western R. Co. v. Hawkins, 18 Mich. 481, Reversed Hawkins v. Great Western R. Co. 17 Mich. 57, 97 Am. Dec. 179; Bassett v. Shepardson, 57 Mich. 428, Reversed 52 Mich. 8; Hickox v. Chicago & C. S. R. Co. 94 Mich. 286, Reversed 78 Mich. 615; Damon v. DeBar, 94 Mich. 594, Reversed 88 Mich. 262; Newberry v. Trowbridge, 18 Mich. 278, Reversed 4 Mich. 891; Mynning v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. 67 Mich. 677, Reversed 59 Mich. 257, and 64 Mich. 98; Gamble v. Gates, 97 Mich. 465, Reversed 92 Mich. 510.

Minnesota: Caldwell v. Bruggerman, 8 Minn. 286; Tilley v. Wolvorton, 54 Minn. 75, Reversed 46 Minn. 256, and 50 Minn. 419.

Mississippi: Smith v. Elder, 14 Smedes & M. 100, Reversed 7 Smedes & M. 507; Bridgeforth v. Gray, 39 Miss. 186, Reversed Gray v. Bridgeforth, 33 Miss. 312; Green v. McDonald, 12 Smedes & M. 445, Reversed McDonald v. Green, 9 Smedes & M. 138, Reversed Green v. Finucane, 6 How. (Miss.) 542.

Missouri: Overall v. Ellis, 38 Mo. 209, Reversed 82 Mo. 322; Metropolitan Bank v. Taylor, 62 Mo. 340, Reversed 53 Mo. 444; Hombes v. Corbin, 24 Mo. App. 394, Reversed 20 Mo. App. 497; Feurt v. Ambrose, 34 Mo. App. 360, Reversed Feurt v. Brown, 23 Mo. App. 332.

Montana: Daniels v. Andes Ins. Co. 2 Mont. 502, Reversed Id. 78; Creighton v. Hershfield, 2 Mont. 169, Reversed 1 Mont. 639; Kelley v. Cable Co. 8 Mont. 440, Reversed 7 Mont. 70;

And where it was said that this was the rule, whether the former decision was correct or not. Page v. Fowler, 37 Cal. 100; Polack v. McGrath, 38 Cal. 666; Heinlen v. Martin, 59 Cal. 181; Lillie v. Trentman, 180 Ind. 16; Nickless v. Pearson, 126 Ind. 477.

And where it was said to be the rule even if "we doubted the correctness of the ruling when applied to other cases." Hawley v. Smith, 45 Ind. 183.

And where the facts were the same, as the supreme court had no appellate jurisdiction over its own judgments and could not review or modify them after the case passed from its control. This rule applies whether the prior decision was right or wrong, and was as conclusive in a case of reversal as where a particular judgment was directed to be entered, and applied to an action of ejectment where the evidence was the same. Leese v. Clark, 20 Cal. 388.

In Lawrence v. Ballou, 37 Cal. 518, it was said that a decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive upon the second appeal, and this whether right or wrong. This only applies to a decision of a court of last resort.

Some cases hold that the prior decision is conclusive unless it is wrong.

So, the decision of the supreme court on a question reserved by the superior court upon a statement of facts was conclusive on the supreme court where the same question was again presented on a writ of error. But as to whether or not there might be circumstances which would authorize a re-examination of the prior questions was not decided. Smith v. Lewis, 26 Conn. 116.

So, the decision on a prior appeal was conclusive on a second appeal where the same question was presented, unless some general principle of law had been manifestly decided incorrectly the first time, or injustice to the rights of the parties would be done by adhering to the first opinion. Chambers v. Smith, 30 Mo. 156.

And where the same question was presented. But it was said in Missouri that there are some exceptions to this general rule. Keith v. Keith, 97 Mo. 223.

And where it was said that there were exceptions to the general rule, but this case was not within the exceptions. Ibid.; Belch v. Miller, 37 Mo. App. 623.

And where it was said that courts of last resort occasionally find it proper and just to overrule, and thus correct their former declaration of legal principles. It sometimes is a matter of congratulation that justice can be finally done in that manner. 34 L. R. A.

ner, in the same cause on a later appeal when necessary. Rutledge v. Missouri P. R. Co. 123 Mo. 121.

And where the same question was involved. It was said: "We have, of course, power—considered as mere power—to recall that judgment, if of opinion that it was erroneous; and appellate courts have sometimes, on a second appeal, taken a different view of the law from that announced on the former appeal. But we remain of the opinion then expressed, and do not think it necessary to repeat our reasons for so holding." Little v. McAdams, 38 Mo. App. 187.

And where such decision was correct. It was said that a prior decision will not be re-examined, or the ruling then made reversed, unless manifestly incorrect. Fuller v. Cunningham (Neb.) 67 N. W. 878.

In Fuller v. Cunningham, supra, the case of HASTINGS v. FOXWORTHY was approved as to the doctrine that a decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive unless manifestly incorrect.

The decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive upon the second appeal where the same question was presented. It was said that if there was any reason to suppose that the merits of the question had not been fully considered, or that any fact had been misunderstood or any principle or any authority bearing upon the validity of the contract in question had been overlooked, it might justify a review of the question. Justice v. Lang, 62 N. Y. 323.

And where it was said that the decision should not be reversed unless there had been some plain mistake, as in overlooking some statutory provision, or some controlling decision of that court. Eaton v. Alger, 47 N. Y. 345.

And where it was said that a prior judgment was binding unless there was a plain error committed by the court in declaring or applying the rule of law applicable to the case, or unless the point determined was not involved in the case before it, or unless there were new facts which subvert the ground of the former judgment and change the character or measure of relief to which the party was entitled. Worrall v. Munn, 53 N. Y. 185.

And where it was said this rule should not be departed from except in extreme cases founded upon some change in the law of the land either by legislation or by courts of last resort, or when the court is satisfied that an erroneous conclusion has been declared. Brennan v. New York, 1 Hun. 815.

And where both appeals were to the appellate division of the general term. But the court

Palmer v. Murray, 8 Mont. 174, Reversed 6 Mont. 125.

Nevada: Trench v. Strong, 4 Nev. 92, Reversed Sparrow v. Strong, 2 Nev. 362; Clarke v. Lyon County, 8 Nev. 181, Reversed 7 Nev. 75.

New Hampshire: Weare v. Deering, 60 N. H. 56, Reversed 58 N. H. 206; Plaisted v. Holmes, Id. 619, Reversed Id. 293; Stanton v. Thompson, 49 N. H. 275; Bell v. Woodward, 47 N. H. 542, Reversed 46 N. H. 315; Amoskeag Mfg. Co. v. Head, 59 N. H. 832, 56 N. H. 386; Bell v. Lamprey, 58 N. H. 124, Reversed 57 N. H. 168.

New Jersey: Cassedy v. Bigelow, 27 N. J. Eq. 505, Reversed Bigelow v. Cassedy, 26 N. J. Eq. 557.

New Mexico: Rupe v. New Mexico Lumber Assn. 3 N. M. 555, Reversed Id. 893; Aubry v. Nangle, 1 N. M. 115.

New York: Yale v. Dederer, 68 N. Y. 835, Reversed 18 N. Y. 265, 72 Am. Dec. 505, 22

N. Y. 450, 78 Am. Dec. 216; Bangs v. Strong, 4 N. Y. 315, 10 Paige, 16, 7 Hill, 250, 42 Am. Dec. 64; Oakley v. Aspinwall, 13 N. Y. 500, Reversed 4 N. Y. 514; Corn v. Rosenthal, 3 Misc. 72, Reversed 1 Misc. 168.

North Carolina: Gordon v. Collett, 107 N. C. 362, and 104 N. C. 881, Reversed 102 N. C. 582.

Ohio: Bans v. Wick, 6 Ohio St. 13, 19 Ohio, 328; Pollock v. Cohen, 32 Ohio St. 519.

Oregon: Powell v. Dayton, S. & G. R. Co. 14 Or. 22, Reversed 13 Or. 446; Applegate v. Dowell, 17 Or. 299, Reversed 15 Or. 513.

South Carolina: Kibler v. Bridges, 5 S. C. N. S. 335, Reversed 3 S. C. N. S. 45; Bradley v. Rodelerperger, 17 S. C. 11, Reversed 8 S. C. N. S. 227; Manufacturing Co. v. Price, 6 S. C. N. S. 278, Reversed 4 S. C. N. S. 838; Warren v. Raymond, 17 S. C. 163, Reversed 12 S. C. 9.

South Dakota: Plymouth County Bank v. Gilman, 3 S. D. 170, Reversed 6 Dak. 304.

Tennessee: McNairy v. Nashville, 2 Baxt.

mid: "If the court of appeals has, since the decision of the general term, announced a different rule in a case presenting like facts, or if, under the former system, an appeal to the court of appeals might be taken, where none can now be taken from the judgment of the appellate division, possibly the decision of the general term ought no more to preclude our examination of the case than if it had been pronounced in some other case." Patterson v. Binghamton, 39 N. Y. Supp. 408.

And where such decision affected no general public interest nor established any doctrine in hostility to the previous law as declared by the court, and if there was any error it was in the application of admitted principles to the circumstances of the case. Cluff v. Day, 141 N. Y. 580.

And where a petition had been held to state a cause of action unless the decision was shown to be clearly erroneous. Pennsylvania Co. v. Platt, 47 Ohio St. 366.

And where the same question was presented, the rule in Texas being that the former decision is conclusive unless erroneous. Kempner v. Huddleston (Tex.) 37 S. W. 1006; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Faber, 77 Tex. 153.

And where the record did not show any difference from the prior case. It was said that appellate tribunals may sometimes render decisions so obviously wrong as that other courts of lower rank will be justified in disregarding them upon trials of the same case. Robertson v. Coates, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 672.

And where the trial court ignored such decision and was in contempt by such action. But it was said that it was not intended to intimate that a party was precluded from relief in all cases against an erroneous judgment because of its affirmance by the supreme court. Kendall v. Mather, 48 Tex. 565.

And where the plaintiff in error did not show that there was some difference in the record between the two cases, or that it was an exceptional case. Frankland v. Cassaday, 62 Tex. 418.

And where the first decision was made on a reference to the commissioners of appeal, although in Texas the rule making the former decision the law of the case is not inflexible but has its exceptions, but should not be departed from save for urgent reasons. Burns v. Ledbetter, 56 Tex. 283.

And where there was nothing in the record to break the full force of the decision made on former appeal. Galveston County v. Galveston Gas Co. 72 Tex. 509.

The following cases have held that the prior decision was not conclusive where it was wrong:

84 L. R. A.

The decision on a prior appeal was not conclusive on a second appeal where the first decision was erroneous and had subsequently been overruled in effect by later cases in the same court, as this was an exception to the general rule. Hamilton v. Marks, 63 Mo. 167.

And where the court was misled by the belief that the revenue law had been revised in 1879, which was not the fact. This case was an exception to the general rule. Bird v. Sellers, 122 Mo. 23.

And where the same question was involved and the prior decision was by the territorial supreme court and was erroneous. This was held on the ground that the court was not a court of last resort. Jungk v. Reed (Utah) 42 Pac. 292.

But see Silva v. Pickard (Utah) 47 Pac. 144, subd. w.

And where the supreme court of the United States had determined contrary to the ruling of such prior decision since it was made. Steele v. Boley, 7 Utah, 64; United States v. Elliott (Utah) 41 Pac. 720.

And where such decision overturned a long-established rule of property. Reeves v. Petty, 44 Tex. 249.

And where such prior decision had been overruled by other decisions before the second appeal. Meyers v. Dittmar, 47 Tex. 373.

And where the lower court instructed the jury in accordance with the prior decision, but such decision was erroneous. On the last appeal the court adopted the view of the dissenting judge on the prior appeal. Layton v. Hall, 25 Tex. 204.

In Shiels v. Wortman, 126 N. Y. 650, the court of appeals held that it had no jurisdiction to review the discretion of the supreme court in refusing an extra allowance where upon the prior appeal they had granted it, as they had the discretion to reach a different conclusion from the one which they had come to upon the prior appeal, or they had the discretion to conclude that the extra allowance granted was too large, and the discretion was not subject to revision.

See also Oshkosh Fire Dept. v. Tuttle, 50 Wis. 552, and Bomar v. Parker, 68 Tex. 436, subd. l; Hill v. Morris, 21 Mo. App. 256, subd. g; Noonan v. Bradley, 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 121, 20 L. ed. 279, subd. b; Stevenson v. Edwards, 96 Mo. 622, subd. i; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Hill, 7 Ind. App. 255, subd. r.

c. As applied to matters after remanding a case.

Saving the exceptions noted in the preceding subdivision, the general rule is that a prior decision is conclusive upon a subsequent appeal as applied to matters after remanding a case, where the prior 251; Bates v. Taylor, 87 Tenn. 820, 8 L. R. A. 316; Murdock v. Gaskill, 8 Baxt. 22.

Texas: Frankland v. Cassaday, 63 Tex. 418, Reversed Cassaday v. Frankland, 55 Tex. 452.

Utah: Venard v. Green, 4 Utah, 458, Reversed Id. 67.

Vermont: Ross v. Burlington Bank, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 49 (1825); Herrick v. Belknap's Estate, 27 Vt. 699; Sawyer v. Cross, 66 Vt. 616, Reversed 65 Vt. 158.

Virginia: New York L. Ins. Co. v. Clemmitt, 77 Va. 368, Reversed Clemmitt v. New York L. Ins. Co. 76 Va. 855; Bank of Virginia v. Craig, 6 Leigh, 899 (1835); Towner v. Lane, 9 Leigh, 277; Bank of Old Dominion v. McVeigh, 29 Gratt. 554, Reversed McVeigh v. Bank of Old Dominion, 26 Gratt. 852.

Washington: Wilkes v. Davies, 8 Wash. 112, 23 L. R. A. 108; Wilkes v. Hunt, 4 Wash. 100.

West Virginia: Henry v. Davis, 18 W. Va. 262, Reversed 7 W. Va. 715; Hall v. Bank of Virginia, 15 W. Va. 828; Board of Education v. Parsons, 24 W. Va. 552, Reversed 23 W. Va. 818.

Wisconsin: Parker v. Pomeroy, 2 Wis. 112; Luning v. State, 1 Chand. (Wis.) 266, Reversed 1 Chand. (Wis.) 178, 53 Am. Dec. 153; Ellis v. Northern P. R. Co. 80 Wis. 459, 77 Wis. 114; Noonan v. Orton, 27 Wis. 310, 4 Wis. 885; Du Pont v. Davis, 35 Wis. 638, Reversed 80 Wis. 170; Lathrop v. Knapp, 37 Wis. 807, 27 Wis. 214; Oshkosh Fire Dept. v. Tuttle, 50 Wis. 552, 48 Wis. 91.

Thirty-seven of the forty-eight supreme judicatories of the United States uphold the rule.

A fair construction of decisions of Maine, Massachusetts, Ohio, and Texas places them in the same category, though the cases are not so clear nor so strictly in point.

On the other hand, we have but one, Nebraska, at present, that refuses to recognize the rule.

Six more, Arizona, Delaware, North Da-decision is mandatory, or where the question is as to the application of the principles of the prior decision on the subsequent proceeding.

So, the decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive on the second appeal where the lower court followed the first decision. The only question open would be whether the mandate has been executed according to its true intent and meaning. Himely v. Rouse, 9 U. S. 5 Cranch, 314, 3 L. ed. 111; Eyler v. Hoover, 8 Md. 1.

And where the case was remanded with directions to make a specific modification of a decree, which did not require any change in the pleadings or evidence. Washburn & M. Mfg. Co. v. Chicago Galvanized Wire Fence Co. 119 Ill. 30; Stump v. Hornback, 109 Mo. 277; Stapp v. Owens, 45 Ill. App. 488; Mix v. People, 122 Ill. 641; Holley v. Holley, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 290; Brady v. Kelly, 64 Cal. 590.

And where the court of appeals remanded a case with specific directions, which were followed, and affirmed the case on the second appeal, and this was approved by the supreme court. Lackland v. Smith, 75 Mo. 307.

And where the trial court obeyed the mandate of the court of appeals. Covington v. Shinkle, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 558.

And where the decision on prior appeal was an order directing the court below to modify its judgment, and upon that question was final and conclusive. Argenti v. San Francisco, 30 Cal. 453.

And where the trial court followed the prior decision in its subsequent proceedings. Wilson v. Bates (Colo.) 40 Pac. 351; Wood v. Wheeler, 9 Tex. 127; Nelson v. Clay, 7 J. J. Marsh. 139, 23 Am. Dec. 397; T. T. Haydock Carriage Co. v. Pier, 82 Wis. 318; Sanders v. Peck, 131 Ill. 423; Mong v. Bell, 7 Gill, 246; Rowell v. Vershire, 63 Vt. 510; Burtraw v. Clark (Mich.) 65 N. W. 218; Hilsenbeck v. Guhring, 39 N. Y. S. R. 460; Meinhard v. Youngblood, 41 S. C. 812; Krantz v. Rio Grande W. R. Co. (Utah) 22 L. R. A. 828; Smith v. San Luis Obispo (Cal.) 84 Pac. 830; Mechanics' & T. Bank v. Seltz Bros. 155 Pa. 191; Burwell v. Burgwyn, 105 N. C. 507; Torrey v. Waters, 59 N. Y. S. R. 885; Rehm v. Weiss, 30 N. Y. Supp. 1134; Ripp v. Hale, 45 Neb. 567; Teichman Commission Co. v. American Bank, 35 Mo. App. 472; Rimel v. Hays, 22 Mo. App. 177; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Clemmitt, 77 Va. 366; Lee v. Corn, 56 N. Y. S. R. 902; United States v. 422 Casks of Wine, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 547, 7 L. ed. 367; Teley v. Boone, 115 N. C. 195; Beckwith v. New York, O. & W. R. Co. 36 N. Y. Supp. 1122; Hoes v. Hume, 38 N. Y. Supp. 1144; Van Houten v. Pye, 36 N. Y. Supp. 1134; Lacy v. Getman, 17 N. Y. S. R. 408; Isert v. Davis (Ky.) 87 S. W. 151; Lane v. Chi- cago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 35 Mo. App. 567; Hiatt v. Brooks, 17 Neb. 38; First Nat. Bank v. Badger Lumber Co. 60 Mo. App. 255; Ogburn v. Wilson, 96 N. C. 211; Thuringer v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 83 Hun, 33; McCampbell v. Cunard S. S. Co. 58 N. Y. S. R. 870; Adair County v. Ownby, 75 Mo. 232; Shroyer v. Nickell, 67 Mo. 589; Roan Mountain Iron & S. Co. v. Edwards, 111 N. C. 500; Collins v. Barnes, 130 Pa. 356; Manufacturing Co. v. Price, 6 S. C. N. S. 273; Johnston v. Jones, 66 U. S. 1 Black, 203, 17 L. ed. 117; Bradsher v. Cheek, 112 N. C. 638; Phillips v. O'Neal, 87 Ga. 727; Blazey v. McLean, 59 N. Y. S. R. 832; Lansburgh v. Walsh, 59 N. Y. S. R. 408; Carpenter v. United States L. Ins. Co. 174 Pa. 636; Nugent v. Atlas S. S. Co. 40 N. Y. S. R. 927; Dowell v. Guthrie, 116 Mo. 646; Hayden v. Grillo, 42 Mo. App. 3 Crawford v. Spencer, 41 Mo. App. 96.
34 L. R. A.

And where the first decision was by the court of appeals, and the trial was had in conformity with such decision. Rumsey v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 39 N. Y. S. R. 894.

And where the matters appealed from were only proceedings in conformity with the prior decree. Tufts v. Casey, 16 La. Ann. 336.

And where the trial court simply applied the law of the prior decision to the facts as they appeared. Applegate v. Dowell, 17 Or. 292.

And where the trial court construed the contract in controversy according to the rule established on the prior appeal. Hannay v. Zerban, 1 Misc. 829.

And where the trial court, in accordance with the former opinion, directed a verdict for the defendant. Apey v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. 104 Mich. 646.

And where the prior decision in effect held that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment, and the trial court subsequently refused to consider additional evidence introduced by the defendant. Garmoe v. Windle, 76 Iowa, 239.

And where the same question was presented, and supplemental proceedings to carry out the prior decision cannot be made the means of relitigating any issues determined by the first decree. Younkin v. Younkin, 44 Neb. 729.

And where the case was reversed and remanded for further hearing. As to all matters decided on a prior appeal the court was concluded. Boisse v. Dickinson, 22 La. Ann. 1150.

And where the trial court followed the prior decision on the trial of the case, and the doctrine of such decision has since been affirmed in another case by the court of appeals. Huber v. Grauer, 38 N. Y. Supp. 1145.

And where the trial court followed the rule laid kota, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Wyoming, so far as counsel are able to discover, have not discussed the question, and three of these are of so recent organization that their silence is not matter of remark.

The rule did not originate from misinterpretation of the case in Washington Bridge Co. v. Stewart, 44 U. S. 3 How. 413, 11 L. ed. 658, decided in 1845, as we find it in force in many states long before that, and in some as long as twenty-six years earlier.

The quære propounded in the opinion springs naturally in the error that when a cause in the appellate court is reversed for a new trial generally there is no judgment except that there was error in the proceedings antecedent to the judgment of the inferior court. This is in substance to say that the construction of the law by the appellate court is not binding on itself, nor on the parties, nor on the inferior court, till a final judgment of affirmance is reached. That in a reversed case the action and conclusion of the appellate court are conclusive on no one, and are advisory merely.

The office of an appellate court is obviously to correct error in the proceedings of inferior courts. But if its action determines nothing and is not a judgment conclusive on the parties, how is this office performed or this end attained? It then becomes, not a court to correct errors, but has merely the power to annul them for the time being. Yet the final judgment of an appellate court, in any matter before it, it is respectfully submitted must in the nature of things always be final of that matter.

A proceeding in error is not a step in the cause, the record of which is reviewed, but is a new and distinct suit which terminates on its judgment and the sending out of its mandate.

11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 812.

The judgment is therefore final, and on the sending out of the mandate the jurisdiction of the court is terminated.

down in such prior decision, and the facts presented in the question were substantially the same. St. Croix Lumber Co. v. Mitchell, 4 S. D. 487.

And where the trial court ruled on the admission of evidence as directed by the court of appeals in the prior appeal. Bedpath Bros. v. Lawrence, 48 Mo. App. 427.

And where the trial court followed the prior decision, and the evidence was the same in both cases. Waite v. Fræbie, 48 Minn. 420.

And where the ruling complained of was in accordance with the decision on former appeal. Adams v. Mayer, 36 N. Y. S. R. 83; Pirson v. Arkenburgh, 36 N. Y. S. R. 82.

And where the trial court below followed the rule laid down in the first appeal in regard to instructions. Koch v. Hebel, 40 Mo. App. 241; Costigan v. Michael Transp. Co. 38 Mo. App. 219; Nelson v. Wallace, 31 Mo. App. 397; Murphy v. Murphy, 28 Mo. App. 276; Kelley v. Cable Co. 8 Mont. 440.

And where the trial court made rulings on evidence and instructions in accordance with the prior decision. Huntton v. Lloyd, 8 Mont. 283.

And where the same question was settled, and the decree of the lower court was in accordance with the mandate. But notwithstanding this the court again discussed the same question. Hill v. National Bank, 97 U. S. 450, 24 L. ed. 1051.

In Hammond v. Inloes, 4 Md. 138, it was said that the decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive upon a second appeal where the lower court followed the prior decision in the trial of the case.

The decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive upon the second appeal, where the first decision was by the court of appeals, and the trial court followed such decision. Crosby v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 49 N. Y. S. R. L.

And where the same question was presented. Only proceedings subsequent to the mandate will be reviewed. Volk v. Bergman, 38 N. Y. Supp. 1150; Browder v. McArthur, 20 U. S. 7 Wheat. 53, 5 L. ed. 397; Stewart v. Salamon, 97 U. S. 361, 24 L. ed. 1045; Humphrey v. Baker, 103 U. S. 736, 26 L. ed. 456; Cook v. Burnley, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 659, 20 L. ed. 238; Roberts v. Cooper, 61 U. S. 20 How. 467, 15 L. ed. 969; Sizer v. Many, 57 U. S. 16 How. 98, 14 L. ed. 861; Wayne County Supers. v. Kennicott, 94 U. S. 498, 24 L. ed. 260; Boyce v. Grundy, 34 U. S. 9 Pet. 275, 9 L. ed. 127; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Anderson, 149 U. S. 237, 37 L. ed. 717; Hill v. Chicago & E. R. Co. 140 U. S. 52, 35 L. ed. 331; Everett v. Gorea, 92 Wis. 527.

And where it was ruled that a claim for damages would have been established if excluded evidence had been received, and on retrial such evidence was adduced. Langdon v. New York, 138 N. Y. 628.

And where the referee had disregarded the decision of the general term. The trial court should obey the decision of the appellate court upon the new trial. Re Van Slooten v. Wheeler, 80 N. Y. S. R. 873.

And where the trial court had held contrary to such decision. It was said it will be presumed the attention of the lower court was not called to the prior decision. Gordon v. Collett, 107 N. C. 362.

And where the question was settled on the prior appeal. The lower court had no power, after the court of appeals had rendered judgment against an administrator, to decide that he was not liable because prior thereto he had settled his accounts and had been discharged. Henderson v. Winchester, 31 Miss. 290.

And where the trial court on the second trial committed error in reinvestigating the same question. Arick's Succession, 23 La. Ann. 611.

And where the first decision on the merits of the case held that the bill did not state a cause of action, and the trial court allowed the plaintiff to dismiss the bill without prejudice, "when it should have dismissed the bill." Wadhams v. Gay, 53 Ill. 250.

And where such decision required the lower court to render judgment against a party, and the court erroneously allowed him to retry the case, the rulings on the retrial will be examined. Butler v. Barnea, 61 Conn. 399.

And where the prior decision authorized a recovery upon the common counts, and the lower court granted a nonsuit contrary to such decision. Buis v. Norton, 4 Cal. 359.

And where the trial court did not follow such prior decision, and there was no amendment authorizing a departure. Rupe v. New Mexico Lumber Asso. 3 N. M. 555.

In Martin v. Hunter, 14 U. S. 1 Wheat. 304, 4 L. ed. 97, it was held that a former judgment on appeal was conclusive on the appellate court. But as this case was on a writ of error from the refusal of the lower court to obey the mandate, the question was reconsidered, and then the judgment of the lower court rendered on the mandate was reversed.

A judgment for plaintiff on the second trial will be affirmed where the defects preventing recovery upon a former trial and appeal have been supplied. Constant v. University of Rochester, 17 N. Y. Supp. 363.

In Aspen Min. & S. Co. v. Billings, 150 U. S. 31, 39

The reason of the rule is shown by the concurring decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States and of the states to rest on the rule of res judicata.

Irvine, C., filed the following opinion:

This was an action by Foxworthy against the city of Hastings to recover for personal injuries by him sustained through falling upon a sidewalk where it was alleged the city had permitted ice and snow to accumulate and remain. The case has acquired a long history. In its early course the district court overruled a demurrer to one count of the answer, and, a judgment of dismissal having been entered, the plaintiff brought the case to this court, where the judgment of the district court was reversed. Foxworthy v. Hastings, 23 Neb. 772. The case was remanded to the district court. A trial was had, resulting in a verdict for the defendant, and the case was again brought to this court, and the judgment reversed for error in the instructions, 25 Neb. 133. A second trial having resulted in another verdict for the defendant, Foxworthy again brought the case here, where it was for the third time reversed, this time for the insufficiency of the evidence. 31 Neb. 825. After the cause had been the last time remanded, a change of venue was taken to Kearney county, where the case has been again tried, this trial resulting in a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff for $5,000. The city now brings the case here for review. Of the errors assigned we shall notice only two, which raise the same question. These are that the court erred in overruling the objection of the defendant to the introduction of any evidence, on the ground that the petition does not state a cause of action; the other, that the verdict was not sustained by sufficient evidence.

The city of Hastings has been, ever since the events complained of, a city of the second

L. ed. 983, and in Re Pike, 76 Fed. Rep. 400, it was said that an appeal cannot be taken from a decree entered by the court below in accordance with the mandate of the appellate court.

In Texas & P. R. Co. v. Anderson, 149 U. S. 237, 37 L. ed. 717, it was held that the circuit court of appeals cannot review by writ of error a judgment of the circuit court made in compliance with the mandate of the United States Supreme Court.

In Biecoe v. Tucker, 14 Ark. 523, it was said that on a second appeal no question can be returned to the supreme court in a chancery appeal, where final decree is directed by the supreme court, except such as may rarely arise out of proceedings that are had subsequent to the mandate.

An order which merely carries out the decision of the circuit court and the mandate of the supreme court is not appealable. State v. Merriman, 34 S. C. 577.

d. As to evidence.

A prior decision is conclusive upon a subsequent appeal where the same questions are presented in regard to the same evidence, or to similar rulings on evidence.

So, the decision upon a prior appeal was conclusive upon the second appeal, where no material change was made in the evidence. Higgins v. v. Crouse, 55 N. Y. S. R. 94; Stanton v. French, 91 Cal. 274; Anderson v. Dickinson, 84 N. Y. Supp. 510; Larkin v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 91 Iowa, 654; Todd v. Union Dime Sav. Inst. 128 N. Y. 636; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. National S. S. Co. 43 N. Y. S. R. 361; West v. Douglas, 145 Ill. 164; Poorman v. Mills, 43 Cal. 325; Russell v. Harris, 44 Cal. 439; Souder v. Jeffries, 107 Ind. 552; Gernau v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. 23 N. Y. Supp. 1143; Jones v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 86 N. Y. Supp. 1127; Nassau Bank v. Campbell, 74 Hun, 618; Clerklee v. Mundell, 4 Harr. & J. 497; Preston v. Leighton, 6 Md. 97.

And where the question in regard to evidence was the same. Washington Gaslight Co. v. Eckloff, 23 Wash. L. Rep. 546.

And where the question was as to the weight of the evidence, and as it was substantially the same on both appeals. Bevis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 30 Mo. App. 364.

And where the question was as to the sufficiency of plaintiff's evidence to carry the case to the jury, and this was substantially involved in the second appeal. Leeser v. Boekhoff, 33 Mo. App. 445.

And where the judgment was reversed on prior appeal holding that upon the conceded facts plaintiff was bound to recover, and the evidence on the second appeal was the same. State, Schouhorst, v. Henning, 55 Mo. App. 579.

34 L. R. A.

And where on the prior appeal from a motion by plaintiff for a new trial it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment, and there was no change in the evidence on second trial. King v. La Grange, 61 Cal. 221.

And where a new trial was granted on the first appeal because the verdict was not sustained by the evidence, and there was no material change in the evidence on the second appeal. Roberts v. Boston & M. R. Co. 83 Me. 260.

And where on the first appeal it was decided that contributory negligence barred a recovery, and the evidence on the second trial was the same. Mynning v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. 67 Mich. 677.

And where the evidence on the second trial was changed from inferential to direct proof, and the court of appeals held on the first appeal that the plaintiff could not recover on the evidence. Fowler v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 13 N. Y. S. R. 622.

And where the former decision reversed a judgment which directed a dismissal of the complaint and granted a new trial, and a second trial was had on the same evidence. Price v. Holman, 41 N. Y. S. R. 589.

And where the action was in ejectment, and after affirmance a new trial was taken under the statute, and the evidence was the same in both cases. Miller v. Pence, 131 Ill. 122.

And where the first decision was that plaintiff did not establish any cause of action, and the change in the evidence did not entitle the plaintiff to go to the jury on the second trial. Breck v. Ringier, 56 N. Y. S. R. 881; McClaren v. Indianapolis & V. R. Co. 83 Ind. 324.

And where the decision upon the prior appeal was by the court of appeals, and the facts proved on the new trial were not materially different. White v. Wood, 21 N. Y. Supp. 1124.

And where the new evidence on the second trial was only cumulative. Hickman v. Link, 116 Mo. 123.

And where the same question was presented on a ruling on the admission of evidence. Hambleton v. Tenant, 4 Harr. & J. 440.

e. As to party.

A decision upon a prior appeal is conclusive upon a subsequent appeal where the same question has been settled on the prior appeal, although the subsequent appeal is made by a different party in the same action.

So, the decision on a former appeal was conclusive upon a second appeal where the new parties, wife and children, were represented by a trustee in the first case, and the prior decision was favorable to another new party, the assignee in bankruptcy.

class, having more than 5,000 inhabitants; and § 84, chap. 14, art. 2, Comp. Stat., providing for the government of such cities, is as follows: "All claims against the city must be presented in writing with a full account of the items verified by the oath of the claimant or his agent that the same is correct, reasonable, and just, and no claim (or demand) shall be audited or allowed unless presented and verified as provided for in this section; provided, no costs shall be recovered against such city in any action brought against it for any unliquidated claim, including claims for personal injuries sustained by reason of the negligence of such city, which has not been presented to the city council to be audited; nor upon claims allowed in part, unless the recovery shall be for a greater sum than the amount allowed, with the interest thereon; provided, further, that all actions against such city for injury or damage to person or property hereafter sustained by reason of the negligence of such city must be brought within six months from the date of sustaining the same; and to maintain such action it shall be necessary that the party file in the office of the city clerk, within six months from the date of the injury or damage complained of, a statement giving full name and the time, place, nature, and circumstances of the injury or damage complained of, and the name or names of the witness or witnesses thereto." The case, when first presented to this court, called for a consideration of this section. The defendant had pleaded that the action was not brought within six months from the time when the plaintiff had sustained his injury. It was to this plea that the plaintiff demurred. The court held (23 Neb. 772) that that portion of the section we have quoted, requiring that actions shall be brought within six months, was invalid, and that the general statute of limitations applied. The city's con-

Such new parties cannot question the former decision. Rugely v. Robinson, 19 Ala. 405.

